Notwithstanding the general abhorrence and contempt with which the Mormons are regarded by all other religious sects, they adhere pertinaciously to their claim to be the true church; and are in no degree daunted or discouraged by the universal hostility which is manifested toward them. Their pretensions, and the prominent place which they have obtained in the history of religion, false and true, in the United States, render it proper that we should include them in this series.

Joseph Smith, the founder of this remarkable community, was born in Sharon, Vermont, in December, 1805. In his youth his parents removed to Palmyra, New York, and he commenced his public career in the vicinity of that place. He never enjoyed the benefit of much education; to "read, write and cipher" was the extent of his scholastic attainments. He pretended that in September, 1823, he was favored with a divine vision, in which he saw a light, brighter than the noonday sun, and that an angel from heaven stood before him in person, who informed him that he was chosen by Christ to proclaim a new religion, an improvement upon the old Christianity; that the end of the world, the latter day glory, was approaching, of which he (Smith) was appointed to be the herald and the forerunner. He was also informed that certain golden plates, containing a new revelation, and a record of the history of the Aborigines of this continent, were buried at a certain place under ground; and he was commissioned to obtain, read and interpret them, and proclaim their contents to the world.

It is pretended that these plates contained the Book of Mormon, which has since become well known. Smith began to give himself out, after this, as a teacher sent from God. His immediate relations and friends were those to whom he first preached; and after some time and labor, he succeeded in converting five of them to his creed. The first regular organization of a Mormon church took place in April, 1830, in the town of Manchester, New York. The translation of the contents of the golden plates, which were written in an unknown and mysterious language, Smith professed to accomplish by means of the "Urim and Thummim," the keys of light and knowledge which were miraculously imparted to him. The opponents of the Mormons, however, assert that the Book of Mormon is nothing more than a religious history, or romance, written by a person named Solomon Spaulding, who was a graduate of Dartmouth College and became a clergyman, who afterward relinquished the profession and entered into commercial pursuits. Having removed to Ohio, he conceived the idea of writing such a work, and spent three years in the execution of it. Two of the principal personages in the story are Mormon and Moroni, and from the former of these the book is named. In 1812 Spaulding brought the manuscript to Pittsburg, and offered it to a bookseller named Patterson, for the purpose of publication. Before the matter could be arranged, Spaulding died, and the work remained in the possession of Patterson, who paid no further attention to it. After his death, in 1836, the manuscript fell into the hands of one Sidney Rigdon, by whose means it came under the inspection of Joseph Smith. From it Smith conceived the idea of founding a new sect, on the basis of the new revelation which this book was supposed to contain.

The Book of Mormon is an imaginary narrative of the early history of the American Indians, who, the writer endeavors to show, are the descendants of the ten lost tribes of the Jews. It gives a detailed account of their supposed journey from Jerusalem, both by land and sea, till their arrival in America, under the guidance of Nephi and Lehi. The identity of these two works was proved by the assertions under oath of several respectable persons who had heard Spaulding read portions of his manuscript, and who readily discovered that a perfect sameness and resemblance pervaded them. Yet the book answered the purposes of Smith admirably; for it was written in an antique style, and was filled with Oriental allusions, and was singularly adapted to answer the preposterous end to which the Prophet subsequently appropriated it.

The great object which Smith professed to have in view in the establishment of his new sect was to prepare the way for the second coming of Christ to judgment, to usher in the millennium, and to gather around him all those who, by belonging to his community, should be in a state of preparing to receive Christ, and thus become heirs of Heaven. His earnestness and zeal soon gathered around him a considerable number of adherents; and the first conference of all the "saints" was held in June, 1830, at Fayette, N. Y. The palpable absurdity and falsehood of the whole concern soon surrounded Smith and his associates with many and bitter enemies, and they found it necessary to remove. They first emigrated to Kirtland, Ohio; but here their sojourn was short. After a few weeks they proceeded further west, and halted in Jackson county, Missouri. Here Smith resolved to found the "New Jerusalem." The surrounding country was beautiful, game and fish of all kinds were abundant, and everything seemed propitious for the purposes of the new prophet. Moreover, the Almighty had informed Smith, by a direct "revelation," that this spot was the one which was agreeable to Him as the future home of the saints, and predestined for that purpose. A site for the temple was laid out and dedicated. Subsequently a printing press was obtained, and paper commenced, called the Evening and Morning Star. At this time Smith's followers amounted to several hundreds. But soon the new sect was again surrounded and assailed by persecution; serious charges were made against their morals; the people around them rose in a mob; public indignation meetings were held; some of the Mormon leaders were taken, tarred and feathered; and at last the whole community were expelled from the county. The greater portion of them took refuge in the neighboring county of Clay, where for a time they obtained a precarious resting place.

The Mormons remained in this locality about four years, at the end of which time their enemies became so determined and resolute in their persecutions that a new flight became necessary to their safety. On one occasion they were attacked by an armed band of several hundred persons at a place known as "Hawn's Mill," when twenty persons were killed and wounded. Threats were made to exterminate the whole community, and it became necessary for them again to remove. Then it was that these persecuted fanatics selected the place which they afterward termed Nauvoo, Illinois, as their headquarters. The "saints" numbered at this period about ten thousand persons, including women and children; and soon afterward they increased to fifteen thousand by the addition of immigrants from the Eastern States and England. At Nauvoo they immediately commenced to lay out and build a regular town, to erect a temple, and provide other edifices suitable to their future plans and purposes. They had purchased the land on which the new town was erected; and as none but Mormons sought a residence among the inhabitants of the place, the whole community was of one mind, and the Mormon leaders possessed not only supreme religious influence, but all the secular and political power.

The temple, which was erected at Nauvoo, was an extraordinary building. The foundations were laid in April, 1841, Joseph Smith officiating on the occasion. It was built of polished limestone, being a hundred and thirty-eight feet in length, and eighty-eight in breadth. It was surmounted by a spire a hundred and seventy feet high. In the course of several years the Mormons erected two thousand houses, public schools and buildings; had established a paper known as the Times and Seasons, and had sent forth a large number of missionaries and elders to Europe and other distant countries to make converts. The success of some of these emissaries was extraordinary. Orson Hyde and Heber C. Kimball converted and baptized two thousand persons in England and Scotland during the course of a single year; though all their converts were among the lowest and most ignorant classes of the community.

Nauvoo and the Mormons thus continued to grow at a rapid rate; but with prosperity came its usual concomitants in such cases—spiritual pride and internal dissensions. It was about this period that Sidney Rigdon, one of the twelve apostles, first proposed and asserted the doctrine of the plurality of wives as being a part of the true Mormon creed. It is but justice to Joe Smith to say, that he was opposed to this innovation, and that it was not till after his death that it became a fully recognized and admitted principle and practice of the Mormon community. Rigdon was subsequently expelled from the church; but he had gained a large number of followers to his views, and a dangerous schism followed his exit. But the chief trouble of the Mormons at Nauvoo arose from the fact that, led on by Smith and his confederates, that they assumed an independent jurisdiction in Nauvoo, refusing to acknowledge the authority of the State of Illinois within their limits; and a law was passed by the municipal authority in Nauvoo, severely punishing any stranger who, within the limits of the city, should use any disrespectful language toward the prophet or his religion. So great had the arrogance of these fanatics become, that in 1843 Smith was publicly nominated and proposed by them as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

Various acts of injustice and tyranny gradually incensed the community in Illinois against the Mormons, which ultimately led to furious hostilities; and to the death of Smith and several of his leading associates. They were arrested and confined at Carthage on the charge of destroying the office of a newspaper named the Expositor, which had been commenced at Nauvoo by an anti-Mormon; and also on the charge of treason against the authority of the State of Illinois. While confined on this charge, an infuriated mob attacked the jail; fire-arms were used; and Smith, in attempting to escape through a window, was struck by many balls, and fell to the ground a corpse. Thus ended the life and personal career of one of the most extraordinary men of the age, who, without learning or culture, or real ability of any kind, but by the mere force of boundless craft and impudence, succeeded in establishing a sect which has obtained no obscure place in the history of the present century, and which bids fair to exist for several generations to come.

It was after the death of Smith that Brigham Young, the present leader of the Mormons, first assumed a prominent place in their community. He succeeded in being chosen to the Presidency of the sect, in the defunct prophet's place; and he has managed to retain his supremacy ever since. He resembles his predecessor in many important respects—in his want of education; his impudence, his craft and cunning, and his ability to control the opinions and actions of his co-religionists. But the death of Smith did not appease the vengeance of the enemies of the Mormons. New persecutions were commenced, which resulted finally in an attack on Nauvoo, and the expulsion of the Mormons from Illinois in January, 1846. They now resolved to seek a home beyond the Rocky Mountains. They had heard of the desirable features of a tract in the distant and unoccupied territory of Utah, named the Great Salt Lake Valley, and thither they determined to travel. Four thousand persons constituted the company, who, under the guidance of Brigham Young, commenced and completed this long and laborious journey. In July, 1847, they reached Great Salt Lake Valley, and began to build the town which they still inhabit.

The career of the Mormons since their removal to Utah is so familiar to the public that it is unnecessary for us to dwell upon it here. We will conclude with a brief statement of their doctrines. They believe in the Trinity, entertaining on this point the orthodox Christian theory. They deny that men will be punished in any way for Adam's sin, or that they fell in consequence of Adam's transgression. They believe that all mankind may be saved by Christ's atonement, and by the use of the sacraments and ordinances of the Mormon church. These ordinances they hold to be Faith, Repentance, Baptism by Immersion, Laying on of Hands, and the Lord's Supper. They believe that the true church should be organized like the apostolic church, with apostles, prophets, elders, teachers, evangelists, &c., who should possess, like them, the power to work miracles, to heal the sick, &c. They hold that the Scriptures are inspired, and that the Book of Mormon is equally so, and possessed of an authority and sanctity similar to that of the Bible; that Israel will be literally "gathered in;" that Christ will reign in person a thousand years on the earth; that His headquarters will be with the Mormon saints, wherever they may be at the time of his advent; and that when he comes there will be a new heaven and a new earth. In addition to these points, they hold to the literal resurrection of the body, a literal judgment; and the reigning of the saints with Christ over the whole earth.

But the most remarkable feature of the Mormon creed is their "spiritual wife" doctrine. This theory is based on the idea that the future kingdom of the saints is to consist solely of their own posterity, and hence the more children a "saint" has, the more heirs of glory are created; and that women may become heirs of heaven also, by becoming "sealed" to a saint, and entering paradise with him. This spiritual relation, however, always involves the usual incidents which accompany ordinary marriage, and is in fact nothing but a subterfuge to excuse and justify the monstrous sensual excesses of polygamous life, in which they indulge. Some of the saints are said to have as many as twenty, others thirty, and others even forty wives; and the having of more than one wife is the generally prevalent custom among the inhabitants of Salt Lake City. It is probable that the whole Mormon community now dwelling in Utah territory, may amount to forty thousand persons; and the sum total of the sect throughout the world cannot, by the most liberal estimate, exceed a hundred thousand.

FEMALE POLYGAMY.—Female polygamy, or a plurality of husbands, is authorized by law in Ceylon; and this is not the result of female Mormonism or free love, or any new light of that sort. It is an old Nair custom, having prevailed among the Singhalese under the sanction of law, from time immemorial almost. The full latitude of Mormon plurality of wives, however, is not by common practice given to the female polygamy of Ceylon. In general, the Singhalese women make a close family matter of it, a woman marrying all the brothers of a family, more or less. In this respect the Ceylon polygamy corresponds with that of some of our North American Indian tribes, where the men take to themselves all the sisters of a family as their wives. As the Indians do no other work than that of hunting, and depend wholly upon the labor of their wives for whatever subsistence they derive from their agricultural crops, there is an inducement for them to multiply partners in toil. And so among the Indians it is a common maxim: "The more wives the more corn." How is it with the East India women, we do not know; but if the same rage for dress prevail among them as with our ladies, it is possible that they may be governed by the same principles, and that the maxim with them is: the more husbands the more pin-money. This species of polygamy in Ceylon is chiefly confined, we believe, to one district of that island, Candy, and perhaps to the Singhalese portion of the population. We observe from late Bombay papers that the Ceylon Legislative council has undertaken a reform in the matter, and declared that hereafter every woman shall be satisfied with one husband or in other words, that no two or three or four men shall at the same time have one and the same wife.—Boston Courier.

To the Traveling Public. STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

ON and after the 9th day of May, 1850, we the undersigned will commence a Daily line of stages from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. We have now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers, therefore we feel warranted in saying that we can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

We will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at our new Stable, in Salt Lake City, at the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day. Our New Carriages and Buggies, now on the way from California, will be here in a few weeks, when we will be able to accommodate the public with the finest turn out in Utah Territory.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

We will run an Express, in connection with our stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by us except the Post-office packages, on each letter 25 cents. All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All packages weighing under 40 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each. All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipts for 17 out agents at each end of the route. A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. WILLIAMS & JACKMAN, Proprietors. FRANK D. GILBERT, Agent at Salt Lake City. J. W. McFADDEN, Agent at Camp Floyd.

CLIPPINGS.

Julius—I feel as if I would like to have my name handed down to posterity.

Sam—De hangman will hand you down from the gallows into de hands ob de desecrationist, if you don't alter your ways, nigger.

Julius—Oh, no Sam, I feel I shall die a noble death!

Sam—What! on de battle field?

Julius—No, dat's all played out now. Sam, I want to lay down on de hearth and mix my ashes wid de grate.

Punch says—"To find out whom a child loves make it a present, and notice to whom it is most eager to show that present, exultingly. To find out who a woman hates, do exactly the same thing."

VERY GOOD.—Rev. Thomas Whittemore tells a story of his having attended church recently to hear an eminent divine, and the subject of the morning's discourse was, "Ye are children of the devil." He attended the same church in the afternoon, when the text was, "Children, obey your parents."

A correspondent lately called upon a Virginia Editor to give the Postmaster hell. The editor replied that the Devil would do that in due season, and that he had no intention of taking the work out of his hands.

A fellow, found guilty of burglary before Justice Day, in Ireland, observed that his fate was singular, as he lost by Day what he got by night.

The horse "warranted to stand without tying," which a man bought the other day, is offered for sale by the purchaser, with the additional guaranty that "he will not move without whipping."

Donna says that a woman knows nothing of magnanimity. If she invites a friend to dinner it is not to display her hospitality, but "those silver forks" which "Cousin Isaac" gave her yesterday.

A LADY at her marriage requested the clergyman to give out to be sung by the choir the hymn commencing: "This is the way I long have sought, And mourned because I found it not."

Miss D—says that the first time a man squeezed her dress she felt as if she was in the land where rainbows came from. How poetic a little hugging makes people!

TOM BROWNE says, "a woman may learn one useful doctrine from the game of backgammon, which is, not to take up her man till she's sure of him."

"POON! POON!" said a wife to her ex-irring husband, as he strove to utter a few parting words, "don't stop to talk, but go on with your dying."

A MARRIED monster said that he lately dreamed that he had an angel by his side, and upon waking up, found it was nobody but his wife.

Mr. and Mrs. BREWER, of Wayne county, Kentucky, have twenty-two children. Theirs is, perhaps, the most extensive Brewery in the West.

A DEALER in ready made linen advertises his shirts and chemises under the mellifluous appellation of "Male and Female Envelopes."

THE Boston Gazette reports that a lady of his acquaintance says her conscience is so clear you can see right through it.

WHAT is the difference between a sailor and a soldier? One tans his ropes, the other pitches his tent.

In regard to late suppers, cause and effect may be stated in a single word—attenuated—(at ten you ate it.)

SMALL NEWSBOY to Horrified Dandy. "Won't you scratch my head Mister, my hands is so cold I can't?"

A YANKEE doctor has got up a remedy for hard times. It consists of ten hours labor well worked in.

A WINE-DEALER of Cincinnati announces, as a recommendation of his Madeira, that he uses no cockroaches.

"WHAT's the use," asked an idle fellow, "of a man's working himself to death to get a living?"

PUNCH says that Rarey, the horse-tamer, is "The Philosopher of the stable mind."

When your lady-love sends you to "Pa," you may go farther and fare worse. Ecopists find the world ugly because they see only themselves in it.

WINTER AND SPRING.—A marriage was recently celebrated between a bridegroom of some sixty and a bride of sweet sixteen.

A FORTUNE OUT OF HOOPS.—A New York correspondent of a Charleston paper says the fashion of hoops introduced by Douglas and Sherwood, has paid that firm $100,000 nett profit, and their business is on the increase.

SPURGEON NOT COMING.—The Liverpool Times, of February 19th, announces that Rev. C. H. Spurgeon has abandoned his contemplated trip to America, certainly for the present year.

Two white men, Clayton and Coleman, convicted of negro stealing, were hung at Barnville, S. C., on the 25th ult. There were about 2,000 persons present at the execution.

The growing wheat crop of Illinois is said to have greatly improved under recent favorable weather.

The ocean of love is not always a Pacific Ocean.

Hot weather is very trying to fat folks.

The Farmhouse House Re-opened.

ELIJAH ABLE has rented the premises favorably known as the "Farmhouse" at 24 South Street, 12th Ward, about three blocks east of Radford, Cabot & Co.'s Store, where he designs keeping a First-Class

BOARDING HOUSE,
Board and Lodging, per week,	$11 00
" " " " " " " " " "	9 00
" " " " " " " " " "	2 00
" " " " " " " " " "	75
Supper, Lodging and Breakfast	1 50
Good stabling and corral on the premises.
Pay in advance.	25 2-m

NEW GOODS AT WHOLESALE.

LOUD, HOSMER & CO., OF SAN FRANCISCO,

ARE now receiving and opening one of the largest and well selected

STOCK OF GOODS

over brought to this city. Their selections were made by one well acquainted with the wants of this market, and they are offering inducements to dealers to make their purchases from them, that cannot fail to be satisfactory. Their stock consists in part of

FALL RIVER, MERRIMACK AND COCHICO PRINTS, DRILLINGS, SHEETINGS, DEMINS, KENTUCKY JEANS, COTTON YARN, COTTON BATTING, DE LAINES, ALPACCA, &c. &c.

TEAS, TOBACCO AND CIGARS of the best quality, all of which will be sold at the lowest market rates.

LOUD, HOSMER & CO. Salt Lake City, April 25, 1859. 25-1m

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH, MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,

He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES, including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS.

25-4f

NOTICE. H. F. MORRELL, Postmaster of Great Salt Lake City, is the authorized agent in this City, for the SAN FRANCISCO EVENING BULLETIN, and will receive subscriptions for the Daily, Weekly or Tri-Weekly Bulletin. Copies may be procured at the Post Office. 24-1f

NEW GOODS, MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,

HAVE just received a well selected assortment of goods, consisting of Domestic, Foreign, and Imported, Dried Peaches, Dried Apples, &c., which will be sold at the lowest cash rates. 25-3

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over the route from St. Louis, induce us to offer goods at such low prices, as will actually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints
Bleached " Blue Demins
" shirtings " drills
Brown do White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do
Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos
Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread
" napkins Curtain damasks
" table cloths Satinets & cashmeres
Crash, Toweling and Cottonades and pant
doylies stuffs
Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil
White linen bosom shirts cloths
Colored calico do Apron check
Grey flannel do Heavy duck (all Red do do mathes)
Blue do do &c., &c., &c.
Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered Setts
silk collars & sleeves
Plain all wool delaines " window curtains
Fancy do " edgings and in-
Alexander's kid gloves " sections
Bay state long shawls " linen handkerfs
Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric
Delaines in dress Hem stitched do do patterns Silk do do
White cambric muslin " cravats and ties
Jacksons Suspenders
Swiss Dress trimmings
Mail and Navy do Buck gloves and Plaid jaconet muslins gauntlets
Plaid cashmere for children
Silk and cashmere gloves
Lace mitts and gloves
Dress lawns and barges
Plain colored silk ribbons
Bonnet do do
Velvet do do
Combs brushes and " Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufacturers styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garret Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 25-1f

Pike's Peak! Pike's Peak!!

PERSONS about to emigrate to the gold mines, or to the States, are hereby informed that they can purchase good horses or mules at reasonable prices from Charles Moore, at the Hot Spring Brewery—point of Mountain south of G. S. L. City.

April 7th, 1859. 24-1f

D. W. BAYLES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch materials and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stebbins, at the Store of Livingston, Kinkead & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge for repairs.

G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859. 10-1f

New Goods! New Goods!!

MESSRS. RADFORD, CABOT & CO., HAVE just received direct from California, a large assortment of

DRY GOODS, &c. &c., consisting of

BROWN DOMESTIC, BLUE DRILLING, PRINTS OF ALL KINDS, LAWNS, PLAIDS, ALPACAS, FLANNELS, MUSLIN DE LAINE, THREAD, NEEDLES, PINS, RIBBONS, Dress Trimmings, &c. &c. Dye stuffs of all kinds, all of which we will sell at lowest cash prices. 24-1f

SIO REWARD.

STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (12-1-1 Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, brand 111 on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return. 10-1f RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

NOTICE. RADFORD, CABOT & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC., At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1f

WANTED: A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 2-1f

LAGER BEER.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

X. X. ALB. PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals. OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals $1 00
Supper, breakfast and lodging 2 00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50
" " " " " " " " " " 1 00
and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery. MCGO, HURR & CO. Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND,—Proprietor.

Prices of Board. Board and Lodging per week, $12 50
Board, (without Lodging) 10 00
Board, per day, 2 50
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 2 00
Single meal, 1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain, 2 00
Payments to be made in advance. 15-3m

U. S. Mail Line From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City. NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking passengers, on any conditions whatever. J. M. HOCKADAY & CO. Feb. 14, 1859. By P. K. Dalton, Agent.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco, Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco, Powder, Shot, Playing Cards, Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky, Dark do do Bourbon do do New York do do Rectified do do Gin, Post Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard, Mixed Pickles, Durham do Assorted do Assorted Jams, do Gherkins, do Jellies, Piccolilli, do Syrups, Pickled Onions, do Cordials, Tomato Catsup, Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup, do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup, do Pears, Cayenne Pepper, Assorted West India Cellery Seed, Preserves, Spanish Olives, Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce, Peach do Assorted Sauce, Apple do do Nat. Preserves, Plum do Capers Capotties, Raspberry do Natural Pres'd Pines, Gooseberry do Roast Turkey, Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken, Raspberry Brandy, String Beans, Fresh Lobster, Green Peas, Pickled do do Corn, Fresh Clams, do Assorted Herbs, Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats, Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved Peaches, Pickled do Nat'l Preserved Straw-berries, Worcestershire Sauce, Natural Preserved Damsons, Stoughton Bitters, Mushrooms, Fresh Salmon, Asparagus, French Pickles, Tarragon Vinegar, Hostetter Bitters, Fields' Oysters, Boker's do Cove do Le Drard's do Pine Apple Cheese, Royal Windsor do Olive Oil, Maraschino, do Assorted Candles, Curacao, Raisins, Absynthi, Almonds, Scotch Ale, English Walnuts, London Porter, Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts, Golden Grape Cognac, Figs, Old Virginia Peach Dates, Brandy, Prunes, Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans, Crackers, Family Supplies, Cracknells, Morning Call, E. D. Cheese, Indian Queen Maderia, also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps, Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware, Ladies Shoes, Notions, Woolen Gloves, Hosiery, do Mitts, Buck Gloves, do Scarfs, do Mitts, Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets, All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce. G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858. 61f

WANTED: A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 2-1f

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same low rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KIRKHEAD, & CO. Th. course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train as was expected. 1-1f L. K. & CO.

LAW NOTICE.

ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. A. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him. Office with Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City. 17-1f

LIQUORS?

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell our best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion. MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. 15-1f

L. & A. CARR, WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS, AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS.

No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetics, grammars, geography, philosophy, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES. Their stock

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER.

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY, Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice. 14-1f

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL, AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY. CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best, the most comfortable, and best situated at parties. P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of poultry produce. 12-1f

NEW GOODS. JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market. 1-1f GILBERT & GERRISH.

FOR SALE, LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Hoco, Bur & Co. RADFORD, CABOT & CO. 10-1f

FOR SALE, ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley. CHARLES MCGO. Hot Spring Brewery. 10-1f

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. OFFICE—One door North of Post Office, Great Salt Lake City. 1-1f

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW. Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-1f

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW. Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Brown's Store. 2-1f

WAGONS. A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by 1-1f GILBERT & GERRISH.

EMPIRE SALOON. THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., &c., chased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESOME refreshment is especially called. 2-1f JOHN M. WALLACE.

WORK CATTLE. 100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-1f

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO., Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS, and outitting goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figures, for cash or Country produce. 1-1f

COW STRAYED. ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope the around her horns, brown small, was giving milk but think she was branded. Attached on the horns, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis B. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and be well rewarded.

TO HIS OUR CO. ment a are per vate le that ge accoun highly To His

THIS CO. ful; no here in enle priyle time of cordia of frie All i ptoce turned as tha have

KIRK ANDERSON THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1859.

NUMBER 28.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $6, invariably in advance.

A Maiden's Confession.

BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

He whispered that he loved me—
But I said not yes nor no;
For my limbs began to tremble,
And my cheeks were in a glow.
Then I left him bending o'er me,
And my lips were softly pressed—
As red rose leaves fall together,
When they fold themselves to rest.

Then he left me, very slowly,
As a shadow disappears—
To the tumult of my blushes,
To the heaven of my tears.
He paused and looked behind him—
Had he heard my broken sighs?
Did he mark me shrink and tremble
In the glory of his eyes?

Not he glided from my vision;
And I heard his footsteps fall,
Like the treading down of music,
Through the vestibule and hall.
Then my heart rose, full and richly
Like a goblet brimming o'er
With the fabulous old nectar,
That sweet Venus drank of yore!

For the Valley Tan.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
April 29th, 1859.

Mormon Motto—"Mind your own business."

"There has much been said and sung" about this golden rule, and any rational being must acknowledge its utility. In all classes, and in all climes, this motto, if adhered to, will afford protection against innumerable difficulties. This motto is indelibly stamped on everything pertaining to Mormonism. But before I proceed further, let me ask myself if I am adhering to the motto? We will see. Let any person study the history of our country, and the men who established our country and our country's laws. Their motto, in fact their whole lives were devoted to that one leading principle of liberty. That liberty was not intended for one class any more than another, for one community any more than another, or for one state any more than another. It was a universal boon, granted to all. But that boon has its own laws as regards how far, or when, or where that liberty is called in question. Its blessings can best be described by those, who having left a country where liberty was unknown, and have tasted its genial influences in America. But although we know how numerous are the blessings of liberty, yet we know also, to ensure happiness, we must mind our own business. But when Gentiles live in Utah, the liberty they there enjoy acts upon them in some peculiar way (at least it does on me), and I often think on the Mormon motto. But it won't do, some peculiar impulse whispers, "You ain't seen the Elephant, and this is the only opportunity, and positively the last time he will be exhibited to thy visual organs in Utah." Now, it is well known to every one that an American is allowed to go a little further beyond the appointed limits of the motto than any other person, except a down east, and he is allowed to go a little further. And why is it? Because he is endowed with the facility of minding his own business, and is always ready to accommodate a few of the neighbors in minding theirs, i.e., if they want him to. But if they don't, why he just—well, he minds theirs any how. Now, a Yankee must never be a Mormon, or if he does he must sell his birthright, or if he don't sell his birthright he will be kindly invited to take a tour to the Tejee islands or some other hospitable country, and of course whilst he is there, he might as well instruct the natives in some of the leading truths of Mormonism, and if it is agreeable, why bring a few of them to Zion; for after they have digested the first, and leading truths, why, the other more peculiar points, such as tithing, &c., is easily digested, and after a while they are considered sound in the faith, and turned out on the range, with this kindly admonition, "Mind your own business."

I have often thought of an expression that I heard a gentleman from the Jad-erland make, who was leaving Zion to go to America. He was speaking on American liberty as practised in Zion. He said, I tell you von ding vot I dinks, dish liberty ish not what he's cracked up to be. Now I think he is right, but a friend of mine who was present, gravely remarked that his (Hans's) head was as clear as a dobie.

But enough, it has been proved beyond the possibility of a doubt, that liberty never existed in Utah, in the way that our forefathers who fought and bled for that liberty, intended it should. And in the absence of our liberty, it becomes every gentile in Utah, to provide himself with a yankee birthright, but for your own sake don't let anybody know it, for the most crime that was ever known in Utah, was to (know a thing or two,) after having secured your birthright, answer no questions, and I wouldn't advise you to ask many, i. e. on Church affairs.

There are a great many of the saints who are allowed by order of the higher authorities, to use their birthrights, as far as finding out who is weak, or strong, in the faith, or who is for leaving the country, and such like interesting points. Some of these may run under the name of apostates, others will say they never cared a damn about Mormonism, and by these means, the victim may let out his opinions and intentions. He may not be sent to the Fejee's, but if he is on a journey, its probable that he will have a competent escort, for a piece of the road, and likely they will accompany him to his destination.

The best, the safest, and the only reliable answer I know, when it concerns Mormonism in Utah, is, "Mind your own business."

OTIRO.

A Cat-and-Dog Life.

The people of Utah—or, rather, the politicians who have effected a lodgment there—are applying to have their Territory admitted as a State, and, as we admire impudence and brass, we hope Congress will hold another extra session and admit the persecuted Saints without delay. With his pushing disposition, Brigham would achieve the Presidential chair within a very brief period, and the people of the United States would find themselves performing parts in a novel burlesque version of "Paradise Regained." If they are serious in their propositions, it is, however, somewhat singular that the Mormons embrace every opportunity of defying and annoying the government's appointed officers. The judges, when proceeding to distant parts of the Territory to hold their courts, are obliged to surround themselves with whole regiments of troops, and the punishment of a Mormon for any offence is resented as an unwarrantable interference, justifying the assassination of any one connected with the prosecution. Our Government committed a sad error in deciding that the people of Utah had been guilty of no treasonable acts. They are traitors at heart, and would discard the authority of the United States tomorrow, if they were sufficiently strong to make the venture.—Golden Era, Cal.

Army Intelligence.

The following assignments of medical officers have been directed by the War Department:

Surgeon J. J. B. Wright, now on duty at Baton Rouge barracks, La., to proceed to Fort Leavenworth for duty at that post.

Surgeon M. Mills, now on duty at Fort Leavenworth, to proceed to Salt Lake City, Utah.

Surgeon J. Simpson, now awaiting orders, will proceed to Fort Hamilton for temporary duty at that post.

Assistant Surgeon J. H. Bailey, now on duty at Fort Hamilton, will proceed to Jefferson barracks, Mo.

Assistant Surgeon L. H. Holden, to duty at Baton Rouge barracks, La.

Captain W. L. Cabell, Quartermaster's Department, is directed to report for duty at Fort Arbuckle.

Leave of absence for six months has been granted to Capt. Smith, 1st dragoons, and Lieut. Stewart, 1st cavalry.

The following field officers have been detailed for the recruiting service for the ensuing two years from the 30th of June next:

Major T. H. Holmes, Eighth Infantry, to relieve Major A. Cady at Fort Columbus, N. Y.

Major G. Burbank, First Infantry, to relieve Col. R. C. Buchanan, Fourth Infantry, at Newport barracks, Ky.

Major L. P. Graham, Second Dragoons, to relieve G. B. Crittenden, Mounted Rifles, at Carlisle barracks, Pa.

The above officers, on being relieved, are directed to report at the headquarters of the army.

Lieutenant F. T. Bryan, Topographical Engineers, has been charged with the duty of examining a site for a proposed bridge over the Big Black river, on the military road between Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley.

The War Department has issued orders directing a thorough and careful reconnaissance to be made by the topographical engineers of the country between the San Antonio and El Paso road, and the Rio Grande and Pecos rivers. This expedition will start from San Antonio, Texas, and will be escorted by two companies of infantry and a mounted force. Camels will be used for the transportation of provision, &c., in place of wagons.

The military posts known as Camp Walbach and Platte Bridge have been abandoned, and the troops withdrawn to Fort Laramie, Nebraska.

The San Antonio (Texas) Herald states that Capt. Lee, U. S. A., in command at Fort Quitman, a new post established recently by order of Gen. Twiggs, near where the road from San Antonio touches the Rio Grande, has nearly completed the erection of good and comfortable quarters for the troops. This is the most important military post on the whole line from San Antonio to California, it being located at a place where the Indians in their stealing excursions cross the Rio Grande, in going to and returning from Mexico.

Capt. Cullum, U. S. Military Engineers, has been assigned to the charge of the completion of Fort Schuyler and construction of the new works opposite to it, at Willott's Point, L. I., designed to close to an enemy the sound, or eastern entrance to New York Harbor. His present duties embrace the charge of the construction of the fortifications for the defence of New Bedford, Mass., of Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., and of Forts Trumbull and Griswold, New London, Conn.; the completion of lighthouse operations at Charleston, S. C., and continuing the direction of the important and successful improvement of Maffit's Channel, leading into that harbor.

THE UNITED STATES NAVY.—OF WHAT IT CONSISTS.—According to the Naval Register for 1859, our navy consists of 86 vessels, of which 10 are liners, 10 frigates, 21 sloops-of-war, 3 brigs, 1 schooner, 8 propellers 1st class, 6 do. 2d class, 9 do. 3d class, 2 propeller tenders, 3 side wheel steamers, 1st class, 1 do. 2d. class, 3 do. 3d class, 1 side-wheel tender, 3 store ships, 5 receiving ships. The officers of the navy are 81 captains on the active list, 36 on the retired list, 116 commanders on active and 17 on reserved list, 368 lieutenants on active list, and 36 on reserved list, 60 surgeons, 64 pursers, 24 chaplains, 12 masters in the line of promotion on the active list, 1 on the reserved list, 10 not in the line of promotion on the reserved list, 2 passed midshipmen on reserved list, 1 midshipman on active duty, 12 professors of mathematics, 47 graduates of the Naval Academy, 187 acting midshipmen at Annapolis Academy, 1 second master, 40 boatswains, 44 gunners, 48 carpenters, 41 sailmakers. The marine corps is officered by 1 colonel, 1 lieutenant colonel, 4 staff officers, 4 majors, 14 captains, 20 first and 19 second lieutenants. The engineer corps consists of 21 chief, 33 first assistant, 23 second assistant, and 63 third assistant engineers. In the office of the Secretary there are employed twelve clerks and two messengers at a salary of $29,000, including that of the Secretary; in that of the yard and docks one chief, with eight clerks, at an annual salary of $14,940; in the Bureau of Construction, one chief with twelve clerks, at a salary of $11,740; in the Bureau of Ordnance, one chief and six clerks, at a salary of $11,740; in the Bureau of Medicine, one surgeon and four clerks, at a salary of $8,940. Besides the above, there are in the employ of the department eleven navy agents, nine naval constructors, and eleven coal, hemp and timber agents. During the year 1858 fifty-eight officers resigned, thirty died and fourteen were dismissed.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—The following is the programme of the expedition against the Indians of northern Texas:

Brevet Major Earl Van Dorn, 2d cavalry, with his depot of provisions at camp Rudzinski, on Otter creek, Choctaw nation, guarded by Capt. Barton's company, "F," 1st infantry, Lieut. Reynolds commanding, is to use the cavalry portion of his command in scouting all that portion of country on the headwaters of the Canadian, Washita, and Red rivers, as far as the 103rd degree of west longitude, and to the south as far as the line of the Memphis overland mail route to California.

Major Van Dorn's command will be constituted as follows:

Companies A, B, C, F, G, and H, 2d cavalry, and company F, 1st infantry.

Brevet Major Earl Van Dorn, capt. 2d cavalry, commanding. Surgeon James Simons, medical department. Assistant Surgeon Wm. H. Babcock, medical department. Acting Assistant Surgeon J. H. De Waldig, Captain Edmund K. Smith, 2d cavalry. Captain James Oakes, 2d cavalry. Captain

William R. Bradfute, 2d cavalry. Captain Nathan G. Evans, 2d cavalry. Captain Richard W. Johnson, 2d cavalry. Captain Seth M. Barton, 1st infantry. First Lieut. Kenner Gerrard, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. Walter H. Jenifer, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. William B. Royall, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. Robert Nelson Eagle, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. Samuel H. Reynolds, 1st infantry. First Lieut. George B. Crosby, 2d cavalry. Second Lieut. James B. Withereil, 2d cavalry. Second Lieut. Charles W. Phifer, 2d cavalry. Second Lieut. James F. Harrison, 2d cavalry. Second Lieut. A. Parker Porter, 2d cavalry. Second Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee, 2d Cavalry. Second Lieut. Manning M. Kimmel, 2d Cavalry.

Captain Albert G. Brackett, 2d Cavalry, will about the 15th proximo, establish a depot in the vicinity of the Horse Head crossings of the Pecos, and will scout during the summer the country along the Comanche trail, from the Rio Grande to the Llano Estacado. His command will be constituted as follows: Companies E and I, 2d cavalry, and company D, 1st infantry.

Captain George Stoneman, 2d cavalry, Captain Albert G. Brackett 2d cavalry, commanding. Assistant Surgeon Charles T. Alexander, medical department. Bvt. 2d Lieut. Wm. H. Echols, topographical engineers. Captain Daniel Huston, jr., 1st infantry. First Lieut. Joseph H. McArthur, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. Charles W. Field, 2d cavalry. First Lieut. Samuel B. Holabird, 1st infantry. Second Lieut. Henry C. Woods 1st infantry. Second Lieut. Wesley Owens, 2d cavalry.

The following officers recently relieved from the recruiting service, are ordered to join their respective regiments: Brevet Captain T. Seymour, first artillery; Lieut. J. A. D'Lagnel, second artillery; Lieut. A. Merchant, second artillery; and Lieut. G. W. Carr, ninth infantry.

Leave of absence has been granted to the following officers: Maj. H. Brewerton, corps of engineers, for one year; Capt. G. H. Evans, second cavalry, for eight months; and Lieut. J. P. Major, second cavalry, for four months.

THE FORTS BENTON AND WALLA-WALLA MILITARY ROAD.—First Lieutenant John Mullan, Second Artillery, United States Army, with his forces of assistants, arrived in New York early on Saturday morning, from Baltimore, and put up at the Astor House. It will be recollected that the last Congress made a liberal appropriation for the continuance of the wagon road from Fort Benton to Fort Walla-Walla, which was begun last spring under the direction of Lieut. Mullan, but the work had to be suspended in consequence of the Indian difficulties in Oregon and Washington Territories. Lieut. Mullan will leave New York for Oregon, per California steamer of 5th April, and be accompanied by the following named gentlemen, recently appointed by the Secretary of War: Messrs. A. M. Engel and S. H. Kolecki, topographers; C. Howard, civil engineer; B. L. Wesner, astronomer; Dr. Jas. A. Mullan, physician and geologist; G. C. Taliaferro and John A. Smith, general assistants; C. Spangler, wagon master. Arriving in Oregon, Lieut. Mullan will organize and equip an efficient party ready to take the field at as early a day as practicable.—New York Post.

A Chinaman went into a fancy dry goods store and asked for some Consistency. He had heard Consistency was a jewel, and he wanted a specimen.

Camp Floyd, U. T., May 4, 1859. 25-21

NOTICE TO PROPRIETORS OF
"BROWN CITY COMPANY."

Parties interested in the "Brown City Company", are hereby notified that all delinquents for non payments of proper assessments, will not hereafter be recognized as members of the company, or entitled to any benefit therefrom unless payment for back dues be made within ten days.

ENDING GRIEF A LA MODE. — Charley—"That's right, Tom, gratify your appetite. Choke down your feelings with oysters, and only think of the gal when you're choking with red pepper and vinegar. They're all alike, Tom—all alike!" Tom—"Don't you think some verses would touch her, Charley—a beautiful poem?" Charley—"Oh, hang your verses, Tom. If you want to enjoy life, drop poetry and the gals altogether, and jine a fire company."

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by our agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly soli-

NEW GOODS
AT WHOLESALE.

TEAS, TORACCO AND CIGARS of the best quality, all of which will be sold at the

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRUGS, CHEMICALS,

TOILETTE ARTICLES,
including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of
PERFUMERIES

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE
PLAINS.

FRANCISCO EVENING BULLETIN, and will receive subscriptions for the Daily, Weekly or Tri-Weekly Bulletins. Copies may be procured at the Post Office.
21-U

WE respectfully invite the attention
of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory,
and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Dry Goods & Staple Dry Goods

are constantly receiving by every Clipper, ship and Steamer, a full assortment of
Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints
Bleached do Blue Jeans
" shirtings " drills

White linen bosom shirts cloths
Colored calico do Apron check
Grey flannel do Heavy duck (all Red do do matts)

Day state long shawls	"	linen handkerfs
Stella and merino do	Platn linen cambric	"
Delaines in drees	Hem stitched do do patterns	Silk	do

Combs brushes and cutlery Yanked notions &c. &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures styles and qualities imported from Europe, together

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS,
WOULD respectfully inform the public

HAVE just received direct from California, a large assortment of DRY GOODS, &c, &c.,

Dress Trimmings, &c. &c.
Dye stuffs of all kinds; all of which we will sell at lowest cash prices.
24-17

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN
GOODS, ETC.,
At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt City, U. T.
- 3-17

Y. X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Ford.

Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.
SALT LAKE HOUSE.
JAMES TOWNSEND—Proprietor.

NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden

Sugar,	Spirit,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards,
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Cane,	&c. &c.

Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup, do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears, Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Cellery Seed,
Preserves, Spanish Olives

Sliced Meat, do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower, Peaches,
Pickled do Nat'l Preserved Straw-
Worcestershire Sauce berries

Scotch Ale, Almonds,
 London Porter, English Walnuts,
 Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,
 Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,
 Old Virginia Peach Water.

do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or on approved terms.

A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply in form rates. It may be an object for those travelling south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.
2-11 GILBERT & GERRISH.

Office with Dr. Forney, Superintendent of affairs, G. S. L. City.
17-17

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,
No. 49 Main Street.

BLANK BOOKS,
PRINTING
AND WRITING
PAPER

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best the

Co. 10—1f

FOR SALE,
ONE Thousand head of Superior

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW.

THE BAR is now furnished with large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attracted those desiring WHOLESOME refreshments is exposed.

most complete stock of goods in their line that has been brought to this Territory, which they offer at low figure, for Cash or Country produce.

not certain. Please bring her to Curtis R. Bell ward, G. S. 12, City, opposite the School House well rewarded.

11

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1859.

NUMBER 29.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8; invariably in advance.

For the Valley Tan.

The Orphan's Lament.

'Tis not because my lot is low
The tear-drop dims my eye;
'Tis not for wealth, nor pomp or power,
My heart has learned to sigh.
All pleasures fled with years long past,
To sorrow now I'm wed;
For all who loved me here on earth,
Are slumbering with the dead.

Alone, alone, I am alone;
No brother, sister, dear,
This solitude—this weary life
With their bright smiles to cheer.
No loving hand on earth there is
To bind my aching head;
For all who loved me here below
Are slumbering with the dead.

I've wandered over many a land,
Trudged many a weary mile,
And never in my wanderings
Met with love's sunny smile;
From hearts that beat with love for me,
The vital spark has fled;
They moulder in the silent tomb,
Beside their kindred dead.

Then think not 'tis because I'm poor,
That I thus sadly mourn;
'Tis for the friends who left this world,
Left me here all alone.
The grass grows green, the flowers bloom
Upon each silent bed
Of those I loved in life so well,
And mourn their loss now dead.

My father, mother, brothers too,
My sister fair and kind,
Dropped one by one in death's cold arms,
But live still in my mind.
My tears will never cease to flow,
Till life away has fled,
Then lay me down in death's cold sleep,
Beside my kindred dead.

And there I'll rest in sweet repose,
No one to mourn or weep;
When I am gone, no stone will mark
The spot wherein I sleep.
But worldly cares can't enter there,
Can't penetrate the sod;
Death has no terrors for me more,
My trust is placed on God.

R. C. W.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
May 10, 1859.

[From the Washington Constitution.]

Highly Interesting Letter.

In the absence of official information from our Commissioner, Mr. Bowlin, of the settlement of our difficulties with Paraguay, we are permitted to publish extracts from a private letter received by the President from that gentleman last evening, which gives an account of this happy result. The letter is highly interesting:

PARAGUAY COMMISSION,
Asuncion, February 11, 1859.

To His Excellency JAMES BUCHANAN,
President of the United States:

SIR:—I have the honor to inform you that this Commission has been eminently successful, not merely in settling all our differences here in a peaceful and friendly manner, but in enlarging the sphere of our commercial privileges in these waters, and extending the time of the treaty, and in such way as to enlist cordial sympathies, and strengthen the bonds of friendship for the future.

All this you would find in my dispatches, protocols, and the treaties themselves, returned by me to the State Department; but as that would impose a laborious research, I have thought proper to give you the important points through the brief medium of a private letter.

When I arrived on these waters things looked gloomy enough.

When we reached Montevideo all seemed distant and reserved—indeed unkind. I determined to dissolve that icy reserve, and give them a better impression of us, as I knew every sentiment here was rapidly carried inland throughout the country. The Commodore and myself, after three days of delay, succeeded in procuring an interview with the President of Uruguay. It was stately and formal, until I convinced him that our purpose was neither war, desolation, nor conquest. He then threw off his reserve, and shaking my hand warmly, expressed great delight at hearing such sentiments from me. I observed, in the crowd of officials around us, that the Secretary for Foreign Affairs was not there. I therefore, on the same evening called privately upon him at his house, and had a long interview with him, which resulted in completely disarming his hostile feeling. At the beginning he told me frankly he was the friend of President Lopez; at the conclusion he avowed himself our friend, and with my permission, he would immediately advise his friend Lopez of our lofty and elevated sentiments and desire for peace.

When I reached Parana, the capital of the Argentine Confederation, I met General Urquiza, the President, and had a long interview with him, the tenor of which is preserved by my Secretary, Mr. Ward, and sent to the State Department. General Urquiza, who is every inch a bolder, and who in that interview, by his chivalrous frankness, had won rapidly upon my confidence, tendered me his mediation, which, of course, I was to decline, as I informed him, for two reasons—first, because my instructions had not anticipated such an event; and second, because two out of the three points of difference were points of honor, and of a nation, no more than an individual, could arbitrate its honor. But I assured him that, whilst I was compelled to decline his mediation as the bearer of the olive branch, and knowing the views of the Administration, and its anxiety for an amicable but honorable adjustment of these unhappy difficulties, I should feel grateful to him for any kind offices he might employ in carrying out these peaceful views. As I closed these remarks, the General, with a kind of electric spontaneity, sprang from his seat, and striking his breast fiercely with his hand, said: I am a soldier, but a man of peace; and, as a friend of peace, and a friend of your Government, I accept your invitation, and will meet you at Asuncion.

I reached here on the 24th. January, and General Urquiza had anticipated me several days. Within an hour after our arrival, and before I left the vessel, Senor Avaral, the Brazilian Minister, called upon me and offered his mediation on behalf of his Emperor. I declined it for the reasons above and invited his friendly offices in like manner, assuring him of our desire for peace and friendship, if we could have them with honor. He warmly accepted my invitation for his friendly offices.

Our Consul called directly after, and I came ashore with him. Everything looked cold and distant. The people seemed not to know how to behave towards me, and gazed at me as they would upon some evil thing cast amongst them. The very first thing I did on shore, as my position was doubtful, was to address a note to Senor Vasquez, Secretary of State, &c., informing him of my presence in Asuncion, and desiring him to fix a time to see me, that we might arrange an interview with the President. He promptly replied, and we met next morning. We had a pleasant interview, and fixed the time for the President's reception for the next day after.

Soon after my arrival, I learned from Gen. Urquiza that I would be cordially and kindly received by the President. This information induced me to abandon the address I had prepared, briefly reviewing all the points of difference and maintaining our position, and I hastily prepared another of mere courtesy and kindness, leaving the contest on the points for the future. At the reception I was accompanied by Commodore Shubrick, his suite, and all the officers of the Fulton, in full uniform, making a fine appearance. The President was magnificently dressed, with his suite of officers in uniform, and received me kindly and courteously, with his chapeau-bras, glittering with gems and lace, under his arm. Indeed, the reception was all that could be desired. I did not let him exceed me in courtesies. I mention these things because there has been constant trouble here about forms and receptions.

Directly after the interview I learned through Gen. Urquiza that my speech and manner had had a wonderful effect in softening down the President, and that he was so charmed with the whole proceedings that everything would be for me open to a free and frank intercourse. Upon this hypothesis, it was arranged that I should proceed alone in my negotiations, but that I would let no hitch conclude them without giving him (the General) an opportunity to reconcile such differences.

My interviews then with the President commenced daily, and sometimes twice a day, and were always cordial, frank, free and harmonizing. We became better friends at every meeting, but could not agree upon all points. Finally, it was proposed that our next meeting should be held in presence of General Urquiza, Gen. Guido his minister, and Sr. Amara. I promptly accepted. When we met, no one but Gen. Urquiza and his private Secretary were present. We commenced the discussion of the points of difference one by one, and, as we settled them, they were reduced to writing. We then drew up an agreement, which was signed by the President and myself. This was the crowning glory of the whole affair; and in the general joy over it, Gen. Urquiza embraced President Lopez.

By the settlement we make a new treaty, with changes liberalizing it; a convention to settle the company's claim; ten thousand dollars to the family of the sailor killed on the Water-Witch; receive a satisfactory letter of regrets and apology for this affair and the treatment of the government agents, with full permission to explore the rivers.

This negotiation is looked upon here as an immense triumph in diplomacy, as only a few months ago Lopez refused to renew the treaty with England. He has not only renewed ours, and enlarged its sphere, but what is worth more than all for our interests is, that he has done it in a very friendly spirit. When we closed our meeting, agreeing upon the points, he made me a little speech, which, my modesty would not permit me to record. He testified my sympathies when he spoke of Paraguay standing alone; and he thanked by foreign ministers, who created the difficulties, by withholding from him the respect due to his position; and he cheerfully and warmly gave me credit for treating him in all our intercourse with the most delicate respect and esteem, and said he would pay some portion of the debt of gratitude he felt to me for it by informing you of it in an autograph letter.

From the people here I gave met with nothing yet but kindness, particularly after it was known that my first interview with the President was so agreeable. They were much alarmed at our expedition, and this news seemed to lift a burden from their hearts. They are a simple, inoffensive people, governed, I should judge, with a despotic rule, under which they seem to flourish. They are a lively-spirited people, and remarkably neat and clean for an Indian mixed race. The market place in the morning is a beautiful spectacle, to see nearly a thousand women, all dressed in pure white clean dresses, and all barefooted. To wear shoes here is a high mark of aristocracy. You can see, every hour in the day nearly, handsome women (except the tawny color), with bright eyes and rich suits of black hair, with Swiss muslin dresses flounced from the waist down, walking in bare feet through the streets. The soil is very sandy, and they pretend they cannot walk well in shoes.

The ideas of great wealth which have been made to flourish so conspicuously in the accounts we have had of them, vanish into air at the touch of truth. I see here nothing but unmistakable evidences of a poor but happy, laughter-loving people, made to assume a better appearance than their neighbors from the strong hand that rules them. Their government is of the cheapest character imaginable, and the revenue to support it is mainly derived from monopolies on articles of produce, somewhat peculiar to the country. Their revenues from customs must be small, as they are certainly neither a producing nor very consuming people. This revenue is chiefly spent on an army and fortifications. As the President is the fountain and source of all power, he is also the recipient and the disburser of all revenue, which, in the eyes of a simple people, confounding the individual with the State, makes up the account of that fabulous wealth about which so much has been said.

This is a small State, claiming some six hundred thousand inhabitants, and having scarcely four hundred thousand; and they are nearly all Indians of the Guarani race, civilized under the rigid rule of the Jesuits. They are not an industrious race, in our sense of that word; they are only comparatively industrious in contrast with their neighbors, who are perfectly indolent and unambitious beyond the necessities of life from day to day. Such a population is not likely to make a very rich State. Their country is no doubt very productive in articles of a peculiar and valuable character, such as Yerby or Paraguayan tea, and many medicinal plants and gums, and peculiar woods of the forest; but beyond that I know of nothing they produce superior to ourselves in quality, and nothing to compare to us in quantity, with an equal population. They can produce sugar cheap, as the plant lasts for many years, and they have a beautiful staple of cotton, but they raise neither beyond a mere supply of their necessities.

The real secret of Paraguay's apparent prosperity in contrast with her neighbors (for it would not do to contrast her with a progressive people) lies in the fact of her exemption from revolutions. For this exemption she is indebted to the bloody rule of Dict. Francia, who left few ambitious aspirants, behind him to contend for empire.

This republic contains about 80,000 square miles—a little larger than one of our larger states. It is almost surrounded by water, like an island, and the rivers deep and navigable. In soil and climate it is one of the most charming spots in the great valley of the La Plata—a valley equal in size to the great valley of the Mississippi. It lies in this valley, geographically, just as Missouri does in the valley of the Mississippi, only a warmer climate, as is general in this country. The time must come when these vast plains of the La Plata must cease to be mere grazing grounds for innumerable herds of wild cattle, and in turn become the seat of a mighty empire.

These rivers certainly have no rivals one the globe. The main trunk is a fresh running stream, with a distinct current, where it is fifty miles wide and neither bank in view; and this branch, one thousand two hundred miles from the sea, except on the bars, is from twenty to sixty feet deep, and is but on of the three principal branches.

I have extended this letter too long, and must close by congratulating you upon this glorious consummation of a troublesome measure of your Administration.

I have the honor to be, with high consideration, your excellency's very obedient servant,

JAMES B. BOLWIN.

The Sickles Affair.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 23.—In the Sickles trial the following are the instructions to the jury proposed to be submitted for the prosecution: If the jury believe from the whole evidence in this case that the prisoner killed Phillip Barton Key by discharging a pistol or pistols loaded with gunpowder and ball, therefore giving him a mortal wound or wounds, and that such killing was the wilful and intentional act of the prisoner, and was induced by the belief that the said deceased had seduced his (the prisoner's) wife, and some day or days for any period definite or indefinite prior to the day of such killing had had adulterous intercourse with the said wife, and that the prisoner was not provoked to such killing by any assault or offer of violence then and there made by the deceased upon or against him, then such wilful and intentional killing, if found by the jury upon all the facts and circumstances given in the evidence, is murder; but if such killing cannot be found to have been wilful and intentional in the sense of this instruction, if it shall have been proven to the satisfaction of the jury upon the whole evidence that the prisoner was in fact insane at the time of such killing.

A painful scene occurred at the time of adjournment. Mr. Hart, who has been unremittent in acts of kindness to Sickles since the melancholy occurrence, and who has been constantly by his side, comforting and sustaining him, was forced to leave for New York this p. m. On leave taking, both exhibited deep emotion, Sickles almost fainting in the dock.

An act of reconciliation between the counsel took place in Court about the same time. Mr. Stanton came to Mr. Ould, and made an apology for any harsh remarks he had made use of in the progress of the case. Mr. Ould frankly accepted the apology, and expressed his pleasure at the restoration of amicable relations.

There is a good deal of scandal current about town, affecting the character and reputation of others besides the principal actors in this drama. It would be improper, however, to give them publicity. It is also currently rumored that the jury made up their minds a week ago. This may account for the remarkable weakness manifested by the prosecution in their rebutting testimony, and also for the unanimous disposition to dispense with the summing up speeches.

A lady being about to marry a small man, was told that he was a very bad fellow. "Well," says she, "if he's bad, there's one comfort—there is very little of him."

TROOPS SERVING ON THE ARKANSAS FRONTIER.—At Fort Smith, Arkansas—Company A, First Cavalry—Capt. W. N. R. Beall; First Lieut. J. N. Perkins, and Second Lieut. R. H. Reddick. Company B—Capt. D. B. Sackett, commanding post; First Lieutenant P. Stockton, and Second Lieut. O. H. Fish; Capt. A. Montgomery, Assistant Quartermaster; Major A. W. Gaines, Paymaster.

Fort Washita, C. N.—Company C—Capt. T. J. Wood, commanding post; First Lieut. A. Iverson and Second Lieut. J. R. Church; Company I—Capt. E. A. Carr; First Lieut. J. B. McIntire, and Second Lieut. E. Ingraham.

Fort Arbuckle, C. N.—Major W. H. Emory, commanding post. Company D—Capt. James McIntosh; First Lieut. D. S. Stanley and Second Lieut. E. W. Crittenden. Company First Cavalry—Capt. S. D. Sturgis; First Lieut. E. F. Wheaton and Second Lieut. E. W. Crittenden. Company E, First Infantry—Captain W. E. Prince; First Lieut. J. E. Powell and Second Lieut. R. H. Offley. Capt. W. L. Campbell, Assistant Quartermaster.

THE MOTHER.—There is something in sickness that breaks down the pride of manhood; that softens the heart, and brings it back to the feelings of infancy. Who that has languished, even in advanced life, in sickness and despondency; who that has pined on a weary bed, in the neglect and loneliness of a foreign land, but has thought on the mother "that looked on his childhood," that smoothed his pillow and administered his helplessness? Oh! there is an enduring tenderness in the love of a mother to a son, that transcends all other affections of the heart. It is neither to be ebbed by selfishness, nor daunted by danger, nor weakened by worthlessness, nor stifled by ingratitude. She will sacrifice every comfort to his convenience; she will surrender every pleasure to his enjoyment; she will glory in his fame, and exult in his prosperity;—and if misfortune overtake him, he will be dearer to her from misfortune; and if disgrace settle upon his name, she will still love and cherish him in spite of his disgrace; and if all the world besides cast him off, she will be all the world to him.

DREAMS.—Some persons "hoot" at dreams, but there is a deep significance in them, rightly interpreted, e. g. To dream of cabbage is a sign that you haven't paid your tailor's bill. To dream of mosquitoes biting you is a sign that your creditors are about to present their bills to you. If you dream of empty pockets it is pretty likely you are to become an editor. To dream of an inclination to commit suicide, betokens your marriage to a scolding woman. To dream of feeling exceedingly thirsty, is a hint that you take too many "snifters."

A PIKE'S PEAKER'S OUTFIT.—A gentleman who has traveled all the way, assures us that the following is all that is necessary to secure safe arrival at the new Eldorado, Pike's Peak:

100 lbs. of flour, 2 bbls. of whisky, 80 lbs of bacon, 49 gallons of whisky, 1 bbl. of crackers, 55 gallons of whisky, 3 bbls of pickles, 3 bbl of whisky, 12 quart mugs.

A little more whisky may be necessary, but the other articles will hold out if the mah is not a tremendous eater.

A Quaker lately popped the question to a fair Quakeress, thus:
"Hum—yea, and verily. Penelope, the spirit urgeth and moveth me wonderfully, to beseech thee to cleave unto me, flesh of my flesh, and bone of my bone!"

"Hum—truly, truly, Obadiah, thou has wisely said, and inasmuch as it is not good to be alone, I will sojourn with thee!"

At the Free Black settlement in Africa, a police ordinance was lately issued, by which it is forbidden that any should publicly worship alligators, thunder, or other reptiles, or they shall be subjected to a penalty not exceeding ten shillings.

The following toast was given at a public dinner in St. Louis, some years since, on the anniversary of one of our Mexican victories:—

OUR ARMY.—THE VOLUNTEERS AND REGULARS.—With Shields for defence, Butler for supplies, a Pillow for repose and a Marshal for parade, may not lack Wool for comfort, Worth in battle or a Garland for victory, never crying Quailman to the foe, but laying their Twiggs on the enemy's back, paying promptly their Scott or charge, as the Taylor always knows how.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, MAY 17, 1859.

The office of the VALLEY TAN has been transferred to the hands of the Hon. JOHN HARTNETT. Considerations of a personal and private character have induced me to take this step. The paper will be continued under his auspices, and as soon as facilities and arrangements can be perfected, it will be enlarged.

KIRK ANDERSON.

A Retrospect and Valedictory.

It will be seen by this number that we part with the Valley Tan, a little nursing in the mountains, and probably endeared to us on account of its very infancy and weakness. In leaving, a little retrospect of the present and past condition of Utah, would probably not be inappropriate.

Should the question be asked, does peace exist in Utah, it should be a sufficient affirmative to place between the United States troops and the Mormons, and that there are not two visible opposing forces in the field; then there is "Peace in Utah." We have, however, no parallel in our history to the anomalous condition of affairs now existing here. All christendom has looked earnestly on, from the commencement to see the end of the troubles in this distant territory, and events which have recently transpired will quicken the interest which the Mormon question has every where excited.

The record of the proceedings connected with Judge Cradlebaugh's late court at Provo has been made up, and is now before the Cabinet at Washington.

The distinct and unavoidable issue is now presented to the American people, whether crime is to be smothered up in Utah and allowed to go unpunished, or whether, as is the case every where else, an independent judiciary is to be sustained in its earnest and laborious efforts to vindicate the majesty of the law.

While the question thus stands, we hear the notes of preparation on the part of the Mormons, setting their squadrons in the field, should their insolent and extraordinary pretensions not be regarded in whatever judicial action is to come. The Governor in the proclamation published last week, informs us that "the peace and good order of the territory" is about to be "jeopardized" by "persons associated together in a military capacity," throughout the populous portion of the territory. We referred last week to the circumstances which elicited this document and which we characterized as "a condition of affairs treasonable in its animus and insulting to every loyal American citizen."

We have a word or two more to say about this proclamation. We repeat what we said before, that its result will be just nothing whatever. We are in the habit of dealing with facts as they are and not as in our judgment they ought to be. From the language of the proclamation who could tell what persons were meant by it? It could not be the handful of christians who are here. Of course it does not refer to the army or any of its detachments. It meant the Mormons. It meant disloyal people, long residents of this Territory, and it ought to have said so. Mr. Buchanan, in his proclamation so designated them. It ought to have been placed in the hands of the "Marshal for the Territory," appointed under the authority of the United States. Both of the federal judges have concurred in the judgment, that the attempt to create a territorial marshal and thrust him upon the federal authorities, is an attempt at legislative usurpation, violative of the terms of the organic act. Yet the Governor assumes to himself to review their decisions and to recognize his commissioner, JOHN KAY, as invested with the authority of a marshal of the Territory.

Every body knows that the recent effort of Judge Cradlebaugh, at Provo, to bring to justice the murderers of the Mountain Meadow massacre, the Parrishes and Potter, and others has caused all Mormonism to howl in its dark and secret recesses; and every expedient has been employed in resisting his efforts to protect society against organized assassins.

Where are now the Presidents of Stakes, Bishops, Teachers and territorial officers who have fled to the mountains in fear of just punishment for their crimes? These are high authorities in the Church, against whom a chain of circumstances has been elicited by testimony, showing a confederacy in crime. All of us know that the Mormon church is a secret oath-bound organization, as united in aggression as it is compact in defence. All of us have a belief amounting almost to knowledge that if Brigham Young were to direct the surrender of Snow, Johnson, Earl and the whole list of fugitives from justice to-day it could be effected to-morrow. All of us know that the testimony taken implicate these men in crimes which make humanity shudder. All of us conclude, therefore, that when the lawful process of the judge is running for the arrest of these murderers, the whole Mormon church is acting as an accessory after the fact to conceal them and prevent their arrest, if necessary, by force. But enough of this. Whilst we have no unkind word personally for Governor Cumming, we feel ourselves bound by our duty to our readers and the public, to express our unqualified condemnation of this official act.

Now, the issue which has lately been presented cannot be shirked. It is child's play to talk about military despotism and all that, in the face of present circumstances. General Johnston, as a man and a general, has in his character nothing of that sort. In conformity with his instructions, and acting upon that discretion with which they clothe him, he has seen proper to furnish his aid and countenance to the administration of criminal law in Utah. Without that material aid, all recent efforts could have ended in utter failure. With it, painful howsoever it may be to contemplate, a dark catalogue of crime has been revealed, the good fruits of which may be the punishment of the offenders, and the protection in future of the law-abiding portion of these people against a recurrence of similar feasts of blood.

In the exposition of these enormities we have lent the aid of our little journal, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that we have placed a wedge in the rotten cut which some more vigorous arm hereafter may open.

It may not be inappropriate here to refer to matters more particularly concerning ourself. We had scarcely commenced our publication before the Utah Legislature declared the Valley Tan a "libelous and scurrilous sheet,"—if we have misquoted it is because we have been unable to obtain a copy of the resolutions; such, however, was the language of their speakers upon the occasion. This was an official act, and although the resolutions were subsequently repealed, it shows, and we so stated it at the time, the feeling that existed upon the part of a co-ordinate branch of the Government. We challenged then as we do now, anything pertaining to libel and scandal, unless the republication of the filthy and beastly harangues of their apostolic leaders might be considered libelous, etc.—in which case we plead guilty.

The judgment, however, pronounced upon us by a Mormon Senate we most graciously accept, and only trust that it will appear upon their records, expunge and all; for, should it not so appear, it would only save us the trouble of referring to it by recollection, while their journals in its absence would be false; and if false in one instance, the integrity of the whole might well be doubted.

Our offence, however, consisted in the establishment of a free press, and here is the rub; and we can assure them that a press must and will exist here; and so far as we are concerned, the shaft has fallen harmless at our feet, but like the boomerang of India it may recoil with force upon those who hurled it.

We can say that our personal relations with "this people" have been of a friendly kind, and we have no animosity against them. We have warred against the corruptions and crimes that have existed here, against the Church which has protected it, constituting as it does a power whose dignity overshadows all other authority. We have taken our last "tag," we have no apologies to offer, no retraction to make.

The last Eastern Mail came rolling in to the city only about 17 days out from St. Joseph, and this time we have every reason to believe will hereafter be greatly improved upon.

Mr. Lincoln, head carpenter at Camp Floyd, had a hard time in getting to this city, in the way of break downs and smashes generally. He authorizes us to state that he would like to take a contract to fence the whole road up, as that certainly would be a protection to the traveller. In all seriousness however, something should be done by the authorities towards improving the road for several miles below the city, as it is almost impassable.

Large parties are leaving this city almost every day for Pike's Peak. The reports from that region certainly indicate the presence of the precious metal; but whether after all it will pay is, we think, very questionable.

INDIAN DEPREDACTIONS.—We learn that the Indians are getting to be very troublesome. A few days since they succeeded in running off some 20 or 30 head of Government stock, and Lieut. Jackson is now out in pursuit of them. North of this they have been committing depredations, and we have heard of several instances of cattle and horses having been taken.

The big blow of Saturday and Sunday unroofed one of two houses in this city; in the northern settlements we understand the damage is very considerable.

PERSONAL.—Among those who left yesterday for the auriferous regions was Major Brookie. We hope the Major will make his pile.

Great Temperance Reform.

It is with pleasure that we record that we understand that a grand temperance movement has taken place at the Camp. The supremacy of this great cardinal virtue has been consummated without the efforts of Oratorical Goughs or other itinerant lecturers. It seems to be a general move in that direction and covers the entire Camp. For fear, however, we might mislead our friends in relation to this "revival," we will simply call attention to the following little document which probably has something to do with it. It certainly, considering the subject upon which it treats is a very tight little paper:

HEAD QUARTERS,
CAMP FLOYD, U. T., May 15, 1859.
SPECIAL ORDERS,
No. 120.

I. Pursuant to General Orders No. 7, from the War Department, dated April 11th, ultimo, sutlers will forthwith remove from the post all "ardent spirits or other intoxicating drinks" kept at their establishments for sale, they reporting in writing to the commanding officer of their regiment or corps when this order has been complied with; which report will be forwarded to these Head Quarters.—The sutlers for the Quartermaster's employees and for the employees of the Government contractors will make their report to this office.

2. The particular attention of sutlers is called to paragraph 2nd of the General Order above referred to.

By order Bvt. Col. C. F. Smith,
CLARENCE E. BENNETT,
2nd Lieut. and Adj. 10th Inf'y.
Post Adjutant.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
G. S. L. CITY, 16th May 1859.

Mr. Editor:—Please publish the annexed extract from an official communication received by me from General A. S. Johnston, commanding the Department of Utah, in reply to my requisition for troops to protect persons and property on the Northern route to California; and persons who contemplate leaving the Territory:

A. CUMMING.
HEAD QUARTERS,
Department of Utah,
May 10th, 1859.

Sir:—If persons desirous of emigrating from this Territory would assemble at a given time and place, with their families, trains, stock, &c., complete protection, by a special escort could be given them; and should I be notified by any considerable number, of such intention, I will furnish the force for their protection. (Signed.)

With great respect, your obedient servant,
A. S. JOHNSTON,
Colonel 2d Cavalry, and Brevet Brig'r
Gen'l U. S. A., Commanding.
To His Excellency,
A. Cumming, Gov. Utah Ter.

Attention, Emigrants!

Having through His Excellency Governor Cumming, asked of Gen. Johnston a military escort to conduct us beyond the lines of danger, on our road to California, and the same being readily granted, we respectfully solicit all who wish to avail themselves of this security, and can be ready for an early start, to convene at the California House, of Uncle Billy Rogers in this city, on Saturday, the 21st, at 11 a.m., to decide upon a date for starting and place for gathering. Come one, come all!

EMIGRANTS.
The Mountain Meadow Orphans are now in this city under charge of Dr. Forney and excite the sympathy of all who see them.—We publish below two interesting letters in relation to them, and in conformity with instructions, Dr. Forney will send on the children which he has gathered and whose infancy has been baptized in blood an orphanage that never from its brutality can claim kindred or kind except what charities the world affords them. More in its kindness, has extended to most of them an oblivion of that terrible massacre. They will leave in about ten days, Mr. Russell of the firm of Russell, Majors & Waddell, having kindly tendered a free transportation. They have been kindly treated and Dr. Forney has clad and made it a matter of personal duty in which the best feelings of his nature have been enlisted.

We commend these babes to the active sympathy of our friends in the States.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.,
March 19, 1859.

Sir:—The Indian Department are commissioned to collect and return home, a number of children now in Utah, whose parents were massacred some years since, while emigrating west. I have agreed to furnish the Department two wagons and covers, twelve yoke of cattle, yokes and chains, with which to transport them to the States.

You will therefore turn them over to Superintendent Forney, or such person as the Department may request, taking a receipt for the safe delivery of the property at Leavenworth in like condition as received.

Should Mr. Forney, or other person authorized request it, you will place the two teams under the conduct of some one of our returning caravans, and explain to the conductor, that with us, it is a matter of great importance, that all attention and care be paid to the children, and those who may be in charge of them, if ladies, they should command the highest respect. You will give such directions that if anything is required on the road to the States, it will be furnished at our stations, or by our outward-bound trains if the same can be spared without retarding the train.

We esteem this an act of humanity and know that you will do all in your power to forward the wishes of the Department.

Very Respectfully,
W. H. RUSSELL,
For Russell, Major & Waddell.
Dr. Hobbs, General Agent, Utah.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Office Indian Affairs,
March 31, 1859.

Sir:—Referring to the letter from this office to you of the 3rd instant, wherein you were informed that Michael Delany, Esq., had been detailed to proceed to Salt Lake for the purpose of taking the children, who survived the massacre of the emigrant train in 1857, to Fort Smith in Arkansas, I have now to inform you that a change has been made in that arrangement.

You will perceive from the enclosed letter from William H. Russell, on behalf of Russell, Majors and Waddell, to Dr. J. Hobbs, the general agent of that company, that he has agreed to furnish for the purpose of transporting these children from Salt Lake to Leavenworth, free of charge, two covered wagons, and twelve yoke of cattle with the necessary gear, to be placed under the charge of one of the conductors of their caravans, who is directed to use especial care and diligence in the premises.

I have therefore to direct that you will collect the children at the city of Salt Lake, as early as possible, for the purpose indicated. You will provide a suitable number of females, not exceeding four, if such can be found desirous of returning to the States, whose business it will be to give these little ones all needful supervision and attention upon the road. You will also provide them with blankets and such other material comforts as in your judgment will be requisite for the entire party.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
CHARLES E. MEX,
Acting Commissioner.
Jacob Forney, Esq.,
Superintendent, &c.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Causes of American Distress.

At the time of the late American failures, the following paragraph appeared in one of the New York daily journals:—

"The present evils which afflict the country are the joint productions of all parties and all classes. They have been produced by over-banking, over-trading, over-spending, over dashing, and a great many more overs; but he says that there has not been enough of over-ploughing; which alone is the foundation of society and the cornerstone of civilization."

But just listen to him, whoever he is:—"In such a country as this, with millions of acres of fine rich land, and plenty of room to move in, we cannot over-plough; and, by a very natural consequence, we cannot over-marry, unless a man is mad enough to take two wives, and in that case the crime always carries its own punishment with it."

I wonder if the writer of the above ever lived in the Rocky Mountains, and I wonder if he knows a thing or two? If he don't, just allow me to tell him that there ain't so many millions of acres to plough in this country, and then, when he talks of over-marrying, pshaw! two wives! Why, two wives, ain't deuce high in this country, and there ain't any punishment either; and if he made such an expression in this city, he would immediately be pronounced a "gut."

OTHER.

For the Valley Tan.
Spiritualism.

God is a spirit, and his officers are chiefly spiritual beings; their organization and his form of government we shall call Spiritualism; all that we know is the order which he adopted for the salvation of mortal man, and tradition left us the names of angels, archangels, thrones, dominations, principalities, protestates, virtues, cherubims, and seraphims.

These terms have all of them different significations, they signify different offices to be executed by these different code of officers. These officers are generally divided into three hierarchies, and each hierarchy is again sub-divided into three companies.

The first hierarchy contains of seraphims, cherubims and thronites. The derivation of the word seraphim, implies fervent love and zeal to the most high God, the seraphims mostly delight to be incessantly at all times in contemplation of the Most High.

The cherubims denotes the fullness of absolute knowledge, or rather the infusion of wisdom, these chiefly desire to admire the grace and goodness of God.

The name of thronites displays the glorious seat of Jehovah, and they mostly praise his equity and justice.

The second ternion or triplicity of hierarchy, are dominations, virtues and protestates.

The dominations are those who have the calling and disposition of the officers of angels.

The virtues are those that have to execute the high and holy will of God.

The protestates are those that are called to their assistance, and potentially to withstand all opposing powers, &c.

The third order of hierarchy are the principalities, archangels and angels.

The principalities have charge over the princes, presidents and kings, &c., of this world, to curb, or to enlarge their powers and actions, and they are those that work miracles, &c.

The archangels are the ambassadors who declare great matters to good men and angels.

The angels are those who have mostly to do with men on earth, to be attendants on them, to guide, to govern, and to officiate with them.

Now it is plain, that the first and chief hierarchy has reference to the contemplation of God's divine attributes and providence, and prescribing what should be done by others.

The office of the second ternion or hierarchy, is to disperse God's concurring influence and will unto the guidance of the world, and sometimes to perform great and mighty actions, &c.

The third triplicity descends to have care of things below, to assist good men, and to withstand those who shall oppose the rules of divine laws, and make their actions subservient to God's will.

Now these nine companies or quorums may be arranged and concatenated in the following manner.

First, because love agrees most with divine nature, and has influence with, and birth from God himself; therefore, the first place is assigned to the seraphims.

Secondly, because from love all knowledge doth arise, (for no one can be accounted wise who does not love God,) then the second place is given to the cherubims.

Thirdly, because from love and wisdom nothing can proceed but what is good and just, so the third place is assigned to the thronites; so the seraphims incline to love, cherubims to wisdom, and thronites to judgment.

Fourthly, as to judgment, all dominions must submit; the fourth place is therefore given to the dominations.

Fifthly, as to dominion there must be a force, or virtue to maintain that dominion, then the virtues have the fifth place assigned to them.

Sixthly, and because this virtue cannot long exist without a power strong enough to resist the molestation of all powers that will attempt to trouble this dominion or virtue, so the protestates has the sixth place assigned them, and thus the dominations, virtues and protestates compose the second hierarchy.

Seventhly, further, since nothing prevails from power or might where there is no light illuminating this instructed intellect, as the "pates."

Eighthly, "lation," so the place given Ninthly, whose indu men below in inferior, and econo archy.

Now, as viz: angels chiefly and earth, we these office communica You

CHURCH

The fall elved fro published ment of al I. Inst

parture fr paragraph sutlers to l teating dri from misa requested ings again act of Cor regulation It is, there bition (e'e no excepti subjects th regulation Indian cou act of Cor lating into II. No on credit monthly p the writte mande; c post or at to a comp the month

Three d the sutler company officer, as meanin c ten and s charges h for collect the account ment and in the ear from the will be re dispute th in the cas will be re affidavit e thorized t fiction v proved, at the payt provided any pay t martial, s dler's acc of the goi All pec men, whi —as of t been reme —after b entered o on the fle charge; as be retain after ddd for the g paid to th and audit master g

III. U will bea such as troops; a such stat quired fe troops; b ing them By ord

GENERAL

No The at directed 1. The gimental be deduc several Reg will, wit to be gu the "ju thescof compati officers o e be deduc and artillery missione will be serving a

2. All men at th reported without in the d listed me ment to 3. Par gulationg ung mlt guardian

Such consent continues in force permitted to disturb the friendship and bring the peace of two great and civilized nations.

Left alone for a few years amongst their see these sheep baying against that imperishable pillar of a nation's pride.—Cincinnati Daily Enquirer, April 3.

ely for the means of making themselves troublesome.

H. F. OLARKIN,
Capt. & C. S., U. S. Army.
Camp Floyd, U. T., May 4, 1860. 28-61

1

THE VALLEY TANT.

JOHN HARTNETT, Proprietor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1859.

NUMBER 30.

BY THE LAST EASTERN MAIL.

We Extract the following items of news from the New York Tribune of April 30.

UTAH.—Advices from Utah, received at Louis, represent Gov. Cumming and Gen. Johnston in command of the troops stationed in that Territory, as not able to agree as to the extent of their respective powers, and Judge Cradlebaugh is highly indignant at the refusal of the grand jury which attended his Court to find bills of indictment, which he strongly urged upon them in relation to certain alleged murders which had occurred previously to his coming to the Territory. That the high dignitaries of the Territory—Executive, Military and Judicial—may come into collision is what might be expected, but that it will go any further than hard words, or that it is going to bring on a collision between the troops and the Mormons is more than we believe. We have heard that same story too often before to put much credit in it. As to the grand jury refusing to find any bills, that is one of the privileges which grand juries assume from time to time, and is by no means peculiar to the Mormons. The report is that the judge, when he went to Provo to hold his court, took with him or sent for a detachment of troops. The excuse he gave for it was, that there was no jail at Provo, and that he wanted the troops to act as keepers for certain prisoners whom he had caused to be arrested, and whom he wished the grand jury to indict. The Mormons, on the other hand, regarding this sending for troops as an attempt to overawe them, and it was a natural movement, under such circumstances, which might have occurred elsewhere than in Utah, for the grand jury to throw out the bills.

Accounts from various private sources on the Mormon side represent the condition of affairs in Utah as materially different to what has been previously reported. It is positively stated that there is even a symptom of a hostile demonstration; that persons are subpoenaed as witnesses, and then arrested and placed in charge of the troops for safe keeping; that the Sheriff of Utah County had notified Judge Cradlebaugh that he was prepared to take charge of all prisoners accused of crime, saying at the same time that he had a secure jail and would increase his bond to any extent that the Judge required; the Grand Jury were just prepared to make a presentment when they were discharged, and that they had protested against the action of the Court. It is also asserted that Gov. Cumming, Secretary Hartnett, Prosecuting Attorney Wilson and Dr. Eorney are opposed to and at the course pursued by Sinclair and Cradlebaugh.

The Deseret News has published a memorial from the people to Gov. Cumming, attempting to prove the illegality of Judge Cradlebaugh holding Court at Provo. It also severely criticises the Judge's course, and accuses him of setting himself up against the civil authorities of the Territory in employing the troops to execute the orders of the Court, without a valid reason, thus clearly a total disregard of the latest expressed policy of the Administration concerning Utah. It also charges him with a settled purpose to force a collision between the people of the Territory and the troops.

The Mormons seem to regard President Buchanan's proclamation as exempting parties from arrest for all past offences.

[By telegraph.]

St. Louis, April 27, 1859.

Advices from Leavenworth confirm previous statements of a secret movement at Pike's Peak for a decent upon Mexico. Agents of this movement are at Leavenworth, and other points, urging forward the migration to the gold region, in order to have at Pike's Peak sufficient material for their purpose. The leaders base their hopes on anticipated developments in the gold country, and the probable dissatisfaction of great numbers with their prospects at the mines. The plan of the leaders is not yet fully developed, but it embraces, it is said, first a descent upon Sonora, and afterward, probably, upon Durango and Chihuahua. Ten thousand emigrants have already left different points, on the Missouri for Pike's Peak.

EUROPE.

By the City of Washington at this port and Circassian at Halifax, we have news from Europe to the 18th inst. The news continues threatening. The negotiations for the Congress were progressing slowly. Austria positively refuses to take part therein without previous simultaneous disarming. Paris letters regard peace as hopeless. The movements of the French troops had assumed most threatening proportions, and preparations otherwise continue. The Patrie, nevertheless, asserts that France has not armed. Austria's propositions in regard to the Congress, are said to be unacceptable to France, which is not prepared to take the field for a month or six weeks. Napoleon, consequently, seeks delay. Ministers are to make a statement on European affairs to the English Parliament on the 18th. Parliament was to be dissolved about the 21st. Lord Canning is raised to an Earldom. Judge Haliburton has been knighted. Commissioner Reed had arrived in London from China. The asked for Russian loan had reached London. The papers throw cold water on it. The Spanish Congress had impeached ex-Minister Calvo.

A great war is impending over the Continent, is no longer doubted. The march of Austrian battalions to Italy and the preparation of arms and munitions by France are accelerated. There has been a further and serious decline in French stocks. We believe Piedmont is in imminent danger of a crushing invasion from Lombardy—that Austria will but act with ordinary prudence in thus averting the blow which else is sure to fall. An army of 200,000 Austrians, resolutely led, might drive the Piedmontese forces over the Alps in a week, investing Alessandria and capturing Turin and Genoa before the French could interpose in force. The seat of war thus transferred to the Alps and Savoy, with Piedmont practically extinguished. Louis Napoleon and Cavour would find the entertainment quite other than that to which they are self-invited. True, Austria is not famed for quickness of apprehension or of movement; were her Emperor a Napoleon I, he would manifestly thus confront the imminent peril. Italy behind a great and triumphant Austrian army is not formidable; with the French on the Mincio or Adige and the Austrians on the defensive, it may be quite otherwise.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION ON THE MISSISSIPPI.—The steamboat St. Nicholas, on her way from St. Louis to New Orleans, burst her boilers on Sunday last, near Island Sixty. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The loss of life among the passengers, as far as ascertained, amounts to 49, namely: 26 cabin passengers, including 9 ladies, and 23 deck passengers. The St. Nicholas is partially insured at St. Louis. All the boilers exploded at the same moment; they were old, but thought to be safe, of course. Loss $25,000.—New York Tribune, April 30.

CALIFORNIA.—By the United States Mail steamship St. Louis, which arrived at this port on Monday, we have San Francisco dates to the 5th inst. The St. Louis brought $1,700,000 in treasure.

Gen. Wm. Walker, the filibuster, had arrived at San Francisco, under a feigned name, but in his natural character as "a second-class passenger."

[From the N. Y. Herald, April 29.]
Interesting from Washington.

[Our Special Washington Despatch.]

WASHINGTON, April 28, 1859.

To-day Mr. Mata, the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the constitutional government of the Mexican republic, presented his letter of credence to the President, and accompanied its delivery by the following remarks:

ADDRESS OF MINISTER MATA.

MR. PRESIDENT—I have the honor to place in the hands of your Excellency the letter which accredits me as the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Mexican republic to the government of the United States, and of conveying to you at the same time the sentiments of friendship and high regard which the constitutional government, as well as the people of Mexico, entertain for your Excellency and for the citizens of this great republic. The first, and certainly the most gratifying of my duties, in the act of presenting myself to your Excellency in my official character, is to assure you of the sincere desire with which I shall endeavor to draw into closer unity the relations of your Excellency's government and those of the government of my country, and the desire by which I am actuated of contributing to the extent of my ability to the development of the interests of both countries, as also by the hope which I cherish that the two republics, already united by common principles and like interests, will become daily more so, until they shall have held up to the world the glorious evidences of two nations connected by bonds of perfect brotherhood. It is peculiarly gratifying to me, Mr. President, to have it in my power to be able to present to your Excellency on this occasion the well deserved tribute of affection and respect for your person, and to give expression to the fervent wishes which I entertain for the advancing march of the people of the United States, under your Excellency's wise administration, in the pathways of freedom, civilization and progress, in which they have so nobly entered.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

The President replied as follows:

MR. MINISTER—I am happy to welcome you, and to receive your letter of credence as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Mexican republic to the United States. The American government and people have regarded with deep interest the civil war which has existed in Mexico since January, 1858, between the supporters and opponents of the constitution of February, 1857. Although our warmest sympathies have from the beginning been enlisted in favor of the cause of constitutional liberty, yet in obedience to our established policy we refrained from recognizing the government of President Juarez as the representative of that cause until we had received reliable information that it had been espoused by at least sixteen of the twenty-one Mexican States, with an almost certain prospect that it would eventually triumph. It is a propitious omen for the future of Mexico that a military revolution at the capital against the present constitution has not been followed, as on former occasions, by a submission of the whole country. On the contrary, the people have manifested a firm and persistent purpose to sustain President Juarez, upon whom the executive authority devolved, under the constitution, in January, 1858, after the flight of Comonfort and the seizure of dictatorial power by Zuloaga. In declaring to you, sir, that I entertain the warmest wishes for the welfare of Mexico, under a stable government, capable of maintaining liberty and law, I know I am but echoing the sentiments of the American people. We are neighbors, and we ought to be friends, and it is the interest of both to establish the most liberal commercial relations with each other. You shall ever find me ready and willing to act upon these principles, and to favor whatever system of policy may be best calculated to promote the prosperity of the two republics.

The Nicaraguan Minister had a long interview to-day with the President in regard to the new treaty now under consideration. The President informed him that he had not determined what course he should pursue, and that the next arrival from Nicaragua would probably settle the matter.

The State Department has received despatches from Utah, confirmatory of the news received by telegraph from St. Louis, that there is a conflict between the federal and judicial officers. The administration here will sustain Governor Cumming throughout in his endeavors to preserve order, for they have unlimited confidence in his administrative ability. Judge Cradlebaugh's conduct is disapproved, and he will be immediately recalled.

Mr. Johnson to-day informed the President that he would accept the Havre Consulate, and he will leave in a few days for his post.

John Cochrane, of New York, is here, attending to professional business. Governor Seymour arrived to-day, and is stopping at Willard's.

THE GENERAL NEWSPAPER DESPATCH.

WASHINGTON, April 28, 1859.

No despatches have been received from Minister Lamar by either of the last two arrivals from Nicaragua. This remissness on his part is a serious disappointment to the government.

Freshet in the Potomac River.

SERIOUS DAMAGE TO THE CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL.

BALTIMORE, April 28, 1859.

The Potomac river continues very high, and is thought to be yet rising. The worst fears have been realized as regards the effect of the freshet upon the Chesapeake and Ohio canal. The freshet received to-day represents that the large dam No. 4 is seriously washed away near the Maryland shore; that No. 5 is also somewhat injured, and that there is also a heavy slide at the mouth of the canal tunnel. The most favorable accounts say that at least a month will be required for repairs. The full extent of the injury, however, will not appear until the river subsides. The canal men hope that the reports of the damage are exaggerated, though the prospect for the renewal of boating seems gloomy enough. The coal men will probably be obliged to resort to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in bringing the coal to tidewater. Under this expectation the railroad officers declare their readiness to double the trade with the present facilities at their command, which would be about 800,000 tons per annum.

Laborers' Strike and Riot at St. Louis.

St. Louis, April 28, 1859.

A strike among the laborers in some of the brickyards, which has been in progress for several days, assumed a riotous character yesterday, and a considerable amount of property was destroyed. The police were called out, and after a slight skirmish, resulting in the wounding of several laborers and two policemen, the rioters were dispersed. This morning the men assembled again in large force, and assumed such a threatening attitude that the Mayor gave orders to the military to preserve the peace.

St. Louis, April 28, p.m.

The movement among the strikers this morning was much exaggerated. There was no hostile demonstration, and the military were withdrawn. The excitement still continues, however, very great.

MASSACRE BY THE INDIANS IN TEXAS.

By the overland mail at St. Louis, we learn that a company of United States troops were at the Clear Fork on the Brazos, in pursuit of Indians, a party of whom, about 50 miles further west, had violated and murdered a young girl within sight of her home, and had also massacred a whole family of nine persons in the same neighborhood.

The Centerville Herald, published at Centerville, Sun County, Texas, gives an account of a desperate fight between Capt. Ford's company of rangers, numbering 47 men, and 800 Indians, on the northern frontier of the State. The Indians surrounded the rangers, and Capt. Ford and four of his men only were able to cut their way through them and escape; the rest were killed.

Prospective troubles with the Mormons.

[Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.]

G. S. L. CITY, April 2, 1859.

There is great excitement existing in this territory, and things are in a worse condition, even, than they ever have been before or after the advent of the army. In plain words, and to give you some idea of affairs here, the feeling has reached the culminating point, and we are on the very eve of open hostilities. This has been brought about by the firm and manly stand of the two Judges of the U. S. District Court, Sinclair and Cradlebaugh, who, in their endeavors to ferret out the numerous murders that have been committed, have excited the apprehensions of the Mormons, who have done all in their power to prevent it. The reason for this is obvious; a full investigation might implicate some of the leading men in the church, or, at all events, show that these dreadful outrages were committed by the authority of the church. Mormon grand juries have failed to present indictments for these bloody deeds, although their attention was especially called to them by the Judges, and even when they did find a bill for an offence of an inferior grade, Mormon juries would acquit.

The great theatre of strife and which has radiated throughout the whole Territory, is at Provo, about forty miles distant from this city, where Judge Cradlebaugh is trying to hold court; I say trying, for although he has been sitting nearly a month, nothing has been done. The Bishops, and many of the people, have fled their consciences, probably suggesting the propriety of such a course. Judge Cradlebaugh, seeing the manifestations when he opened his court, made a requisition upon General Johnston for a company of troops to guard prisoners and protect the lives of witnesses which had been threatened. To this requisition, General Johnston promptly responded, and they have been there ever since. The safeguard to the court, witnesses and prisoners has aroused the indignation of all Mormonism and they talk "big."

An appeal was made to Gov. Cumming, under the impression that he could have them removed; and forthwith a solemn protest is issued, a copy of which I sent you by the last mail, protesting against the presence of the troops. The Governor had been down to Provo a few days since, and while there wrote a letter to Gen. Johnston, requesting him to withdraw the troops or remove them to a greater distance from the city. Gen. Johnston declined to interfere in the matter, and stated that the troops were then under a requisition from Judge Cradlebaugh, and were subject to his orders. This was a "stunner." As the excitement increased, and threats of the militia and people rising to expel the troops, Gen. Johnston sent up nine additional companies on his own hook, in case of an outbreak, to protect the company which was there, by order of the Court, and they camped six miles distant. Within the last few days, however, things have assumed such an attitude that it was deemed prudent to remove them three miles nearer. Should there be a collision look out for "tall timber."

The next item of interest is, that there is not only a difference between Gen. Johnston and Gov. Cumming, in relation to their respective powers, but there is an open division and rupture between the Executive and the Judiciary. This is the state of affairs at present, and you may well imagine it is not very agreeable. Judge Cradlebaugh is now sitting merely as a committing Magistrate, and will, next week, go to the camp, where he will continue his investigations. It is to be hoped that his labors may be crowned at least, with some degree of success.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Tuesday, May 24, 1859.

The office of the VALLEY TAN has been transferred to the hands of the Hon. JOHN HARTNETT. Considerations of a personal and private character have induced me to take this step. The paper will be continued under his auspices, and as soon as facilities and arrangements can be perfected, it will be enlarged.

KIRK ANDERSON.

To-day the "VALLEY TAN" makes its appearance under a different proprietorship, as may be seen by the above Card of Mr. KIRK ANDERSON, he being on the eve of departing for the States.

This is a position not desirable to the present proprietor, for many reasons; nor is it his intention to continue the directorship of this paper any longer than he can help; but whilst under his control will contain only expressions, independent, fair and honorable. At present, time forbids our saying more; but if we continue our position much longer we will be better understood.

This issue contains many articles relating to this Territory, which we insert, that all may see what has been said and done. The report of last Sunday's sermons is such as we have good reason for believing correctly, and we suppose they were spoken, in order, to spread the light abroad. The language is as was related to us—not our own.

THE SIXTEEN CHILDREN remaining of the massacre at Mountain Meadows, in September, 1857, are still in our city under the immediate care and supervision of Superintendent Korney, who, we perceive, is busily engaged in getting them clothing and other needful appliances for the long journey over the plains. The unusual lateness of the season and the large quantities of snow which has fallen the past winter, has swollen all the streams to such a degree that traveling with trains is almost out of the question—This, and exceeding bad roads, render it doubtful, and indeed impossible to start the children as soon as anticipated. We are authorized to say that, as soon as it is deemed practicable, the children will be started. Until they leave, they will remain under the care of Mr. Korney, who by the by is towards them a very kind protector.

PERSONAL.—We were pleased to meet, a few days ago, our old friend Benj. Holliday of M.; he looks like the same person we often saw before.

A reliable party has just come in (Thursday, 5 p.m.) over the Big Mountain, who report that they left Echo Canyon yesterday morning. There are some ten trains, each ten wagons, laden with grain; their destination Camp Floyd. It will be impassable for them to go through Echo Canyon, and will be obliged to pass over the Big Mountain.

This party left here some three weeks since, were appointed and equipped, en route for Pike's Peak; but having gone far enough to be assured that it was a humbug, sold out to parting in want on their way to this city, and returned.

The streams running into this valley from the surrounding mountains, are at present more swollen than at any period for many years. The State Road is impassable for some distance south of this city; and North Temple street, down which a canal had been dug to carry off the surplus water of City Creek into the Jordan River, is a perfect flood, and there is great danger of much damage being done to the northern portion of the city. Other portions are being flooded by streams from the East. An unusual amount of snow has fallen the past winter, and the flood is occasioned by the melting of the snows on the Wasatch Range, no rain of any amount having fallen for some time.

We also learn that Ogden City is in great danger of being entirely swept away by the flood in Ogden River. A number of men have been at work incessantly for the past ten days making dykes and ditches to try to turn the stream to save the place.

On Wednesday last, 18th inst., this city was visited by one of those sudden and violent storms of thunder, wind and rain, to which mountainous countries are subject. One short, loud, sudden clap of thunder made itself felt over a portion of the city, and the lightning struck two young men who were plowing a garden in the south-west part of the 6th Ward. One of them was killed instantly; the other was senseless for some minutes. The usual remedies were resorted to immediately, and he recovered.

Pe-teet-neo, chief of a band of Utah Indians, is here on a visit. He says that the Sho-a-guth-kü, Tash-pah, Bannocks, Snakes and Sho-sho-nee Indians, are assembling at the head waters of the Malad River, with their lodges, squaws and children. They say they intend visiting this city in a short time.

CONNECTION.—It is proper to state that the letter from Hon. C. E. Mix, Com. Ind. Affairs, to Sup't Forney, published in the "Valley Tan" of last week, was only a portion of the same, and should have been so stated at the time.

A correspondent of the Situ California, writing from Colorado River, April 10th, 1859, states that the Colorado expedition, under Col. Hoffman, arrived at the Monument Mountains, one hundred and twenty miles north of Fort Yuma, on the Colorado river, this morning.

We notice in some of our California exchanges that the Valley Tan has not been regularly received by them. We can not account for this, as they have been sent regularly every week from our office. We think that there must be some "cabbaging" done somewhere between this city and the place of their destination.

We publish the following correspondence, not for the reason of any great importance attached to Mr. Ferguson's suror—but as so much has been said on the subject, it is well enough that all Utah, and the rest of mankind, might know what has transpired.

Mr. Ferguson, in his letter of May 10, makes the expression; "that looking on the visit of Sec'y Hartnett and Marshal Dotson as a simple extension of courtesy," that he was surprised to have a third party introduced. We were one of the parties who visited, by request of His Excellency, the Utah Armory, a right surely belonging to him, and can be properly conveyed to another party. We, being one of that party, are also much surprised that Mr. Ferguson should have made the publication which has gone to the public. He certainly, at that meeting, made no expression which could lead his visitors to understand that he objected to the course pursued by them in the investigation of a matter strictly, at that time, official. Yet it matters not. If he did not like being cross-questioned, it was his reason; and people may say the reason was, there was some truth in the report which led the Governor to pursue the course he did; and to show that there was reason for introducing a third party that we might be possessed of all the facts, we append the following certificate from that third party:

"I hereby certify that I saw two cannons cached and guarded by three or four men on the bench north of this city, and about half a mile west of City Creek Canyon. This information was communicated by me to U. S. Marshal Dotson."

JOSEPH R. LOGUE.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, G. S. L. City, U. T., May 9th, 1859.

To James Ferguson, Adjutant Genl., Navajo Legion, U. T.

Sir:—At my request the Secretary for Utah, accompanied by Marshal Peter Dotson, will visit the Territorial Arsenal this evening.

You will please accompany these gentlemen and furnish any facility for an examination of the arms deposited there, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Dotson has politely offered his carriage to convey the party.

You will please communicate the hour at which it will be agreeable to you to be at the Secretary's office. Respectfully,

A. CUMMING.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, G. S. L. City, May 9, 1859.

His Excellency A. Cumming, Governor of Utah Territory.

Sir:—I am in receipt of your letter of current date.

As it is your request, I will accompany the Territorial Secretary and U. S. Marshal to the Arsenal, and will await their pleasure, as to time and convenience.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
JAMES FERGUSON,
Adj't General, N. L.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, G. S. L. City, U. T., May 10, 1859.

His Excellency A. Cumming, Governor of Utah Territory.

Sir:—Agreeable to your request, conveyed in your letter of yesterday, I visited the Territorial Arsenal in company with the Hon. John Hartnett, Secretary of Utah, and Mr. Dotson, U. S. Marshal for the Territory.

Looking upon the matter as the simple extension of a courtesy to those two gentlemen, I was somewhat surprised at the introduction, unceremoniously, of a third party into the building by Mr. Dotson. And still more surprised was I at being subjected to a cross-examination by Mr. Dotson on a subject which had already been fully embraced in an official correspondence between your Excellency and myself.

I am not aware of the existence of any statute authorizing the interference of any Federal or other officer in the Territory

(apart from the legitimately commissioned officers of the militia) with either the public arms of the Territory or the private arms of the peaceable citizens, your Excellency as Commander in Chief alone excepted.

Mr. Dotson assured me he would make his reports to what quarter he did not say. On the subject of the Territorial arsenal or public arms any report from him would of necessity, be extra official. The strangeness of the proceedings during the visit to the Arsenal induces me to report thus to your Excellency.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES FERGUSON,
Adjutant General.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, U. T., G. S. L. City, May 11th, 1859.

His Excellency A. Cumming, Governor of Utah Territory.

Sir:—A 12 pounder Mountain Howitzer was received from the Ordnance Department of the United States in the fall of 1851 on account of the quota of arms due the Territory of Utah. A receipt for the same was returned to the Department by Governor Young, who was then the Executive of the Territory, and the gun turned over to the Ordnance Department of the Navajo Legion. As I before stated, this piece of ordnance comprises all the public arms in the Territory. It is now in the Territorial arsenal and in the same condition as when received, and is there held subject to your order as Commander in Chief. I would respectfully suggest to your Excellency that it would be proper that the former Executive should have your receipt for the Howitzer, as the Department at Washington now holds his receipt for it; and he wishes to have it turned over to you, as the property of the Territory.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES FERGUSON,
Adj't Genl. N. L., Mil. U. T.

EDITOR OF THE VALLEY TAN:

Sir:—I had occasion last evening (Wednesday, 25th inst.,) to go some four miles south of this city. On my way back this morning about sunrise, the country was covered with a thick white frost; and in some of the irrigating ditches I gathered ice about the thickness of a five cent piece. I could not perceive, however, that the corn or potatoes had been injured by the frost.

The country through which I passed is low bottom land, and liable to late frosts, and more so this season on account of the overflowing of the mountain streams, keeping the earth saturated, and consequently cold and backward.

The crops generally are several weeks

CINCINNATUS.

We hear that on Sunday morning, May 21st, 1859, at the Tabernacle, Orson Pratt delivered a discourse. Set out with an exceedingly lengthy apology for the seeming presumption in an humble individual like himself attempting to enlighten or instruct such an intellectual congregation, but with the assistance of Divine Providence, he would proceed with his remarks. He spoke of the coming of Christ to reign over his "kingdom on earth;" gave a graphic description of the gathering of the "Latter Day Saints" on that occasion, and the great joy which they would experience; how happily they would live under the new administration—indeed, he appropriated the entire kingdom to the use and benefit of the Mormons, not leaving one quarter section unoccupied. He portrayed the awful doom which will come upon the ungodly (us Gentiles), magnifying the trials of wrath that are to be poured out upon them into quite respectably sized bottles. He also made a labored defence of the doctrine of a "Plurality of Wives." Said the Mormons were charged with the crime of Polygamy; asked who said it was a crime? (aside, from a gentleman occupying an orchestra seat or stage box, "My grandmammy!") "Yes, your grandmammy, for I defy the world to place a finger on a word or a line contained in the scriptures which pronounces it a crime!" But, oh, says one, "Custom makes it a crime!" "Custom!" he did not care for custom; the Patriarchs of old took as many as they wanted; and so would the Latter Day Saints; was not going to limit himself and his brethren to one each, just because the Romans did; they, so he said, being the first to "put on the limits." He referred to a prophecy in Isaiah relative to the coming of the Lord, and painted a glowing picture,—scene, on earth, just prior to the removal of the masculine saints from the old kingdom to the new; each male saint was represented, as having seven distressed females clinging to the extremities of his coat, weeping, and insisting upon retaining their holds, that they might, through his righteousness, be saved—professing to be able and willing to supply their own wearing apparel, rations and other necessary outfit, without putting him to the least expense or inconvenience on their account. The speaker said that this prophecy, which is yet to be fulfilled, is a full endorsement of the doctrine,—and the people said amen!

He compared the state of society in this Territory, where men have wives without number, with that of New York, where each man is allowed but one wife, but many mistresses; while all is peace, purity and holiness in the one place, prostitution and all manner of corruption reigns in the other. He congratulated the Legislators of this Territory upon the wisdom they displayed in not making it illegal, tapered his remarks down to a blessing, and vacated the stand for their "Beloved President," who had been lolling on a sofa in the pulpit, during the entire discourse.

The President then arose, smiled, looked cunning, surveyed the congregation, and said, "I'm here again!"—"I ain't dead yet!"—"I haven't gone yet, but am h-e-r-e, doing as I always have done, that is, the best I can!"—"It's all right;"—"just lay low; look out for black ducks" (with a twist of the head, and motions of the hands more difficult of comprehension than the Deseret Alphabet.) "These trials we are passing through are nothing!"—"it'll be all right" (sing song tone—gestured with the hands a la mode turning Jack from the bottom).

Exhorted the people to be firm, and put their trust in God; faith was what they wanted—possess that, and the Lord would fight their battles for them, though not literally, as some of the brethren once thought in Missouri. It seems that during their troubles in that State, Joseph prophesied that the Lord would send his angels and overthrow their enemies. One day some two hundred of them found thirty-five hundred of the enemy drawn up to give them battle, whereupon some of the brethren, having Joseph's prophecy in mind, began to look around for the promised celestial reinforcement, (specimens of low comedy acting by "the Beloved"—congregation delighted;) but not seeing any signs of their approach, slipped off their coats, put them on wrong side out, and run over to the enemy. Rather intimated that he did not want a y more such faith as that; seemed to be of the opinion that he and the few that remained could have wiped out the thirty five hundred, had the fight taken place (imaginary rifle shooting, which, should it ever be realized, will make fearful havoc in the ranks of the opposition). He referred to the apostates—called those who aided them in leaving the going, as he would be so much annoyed by their importunities for assistance to return—(He must have forgotten that bro. Pratt, in his discourse, was glad they were leaving!) He told the brethren, God bless their souls, that they were all the time prating about living the celestial law, when they didn't know what celestial law was—that it has never been revealed to them, or only detached portions of it, just to try them: that if it were revealed in its fulness, it would be beyond their comprehension—that finite beings could not understand it. He particularly exhorted the Saints to stop swearing (Saints swear!)—illustrated an idea by relating a story which was as full of "God damns" as he claims to be of morality. Said the Mormons can beat the world at anything, whether at meanness (amen) stealing (ditto!), robbing, plundering (entorel), or any other given vice or virtue; that the meanness of all mean men was a mean Mormon.

He touched upon several other subjects, and said many things which are not now remembered. After blessing them all, he turned to the congregation in rather a contemptuous manner, and took his seat, having spoken about a half an hour.

We copy the following from the California Bulletin, being from its correspondent in this city:

Gov. CUMMING—WHO SYMPATHIZES WITH HIM.—Nothing more has been heard from Gov. Cumming since he issued his protest, nor has he taken any further action publicly. His course is universally condemned here. I know not of a single man outside of the Mormon church in this Territory, who coincides with him or approves of his position, except Secretary Hartnett, and as I am informed, Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs. These latter gentlemen have always upheld the Governor in every step he has taken.

This correspondent says he does not know of any one but the Secretary and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, who support Gov. Cumming. This certainly is not the fault of either of these gentlemen, or of his Excellency. It was not, in reason to expect these persons to supply the correspondent with information; and if they (the Superintendent of Indian Affairs and Secretary of State) did uphold Gov. Cumming, and proper objections can be made, let them be set forth. We allude to this article more particularly on account of its being, in appearance, one of those kind of actions done in the dark.

CAMP FLOYD, May 22, 1859.

MR. EDITOR:—Having read in your issue of the 3rd of May, the statistics of the armies in Europe at the present time, which some five millions of men, I could not but think of the remark so much in vogue amongst the citizens of some countries; more so in this Great Republic than elsewhere; it is this: "Once a soldier, more a man."

However true or applicable the expression may be in some countries, it is not the case in all. Of the five millions of men at present enrolled in the armies of Europe, would be hard to make exceptions, owing to their long servitude and small pay, and speak of the systems which they uphold. Switzerland, perhaps, is the only country in Europe where the soldiers are looked upon with anything like respect; but let me state the application of it to ourselves.

The army of the United States numbers present between thirteen and fourteen thousand men, composed of nearly all the nations of Europe. We are, however, more fortunate than our brethren in Europe in several respects; in the matter of pay we are decidedly; we have also the consolation of knowing that the government under which we serve is the best in the world; and if we are not looked upon with the favor and respect of the people of the United States, the fault must be with ourselves; it certainly is not on account of those who have worn our uniforms, and carried the national standard before us. There is no army in the world that has a brighter or more glorious retrospect of the past to look back on—no army that holds a more useful and more honorable position in the cause of liberty and progress of the human race, at present scattered over a frontier of thousands of miles, than the pioneers and protectors of freedom. What do we, in our five years enlistment, march as many thousands of miles, and build a new post every year; are we not still the nuclei of civilization? while the tide of oppressed brethren in Europe rolls on towards freedom and independence unchallenged? These are some of the considerations which a private soldier in the army can look to for the privations which he endures, and the contempt with which he may think he is looked upon. Every private soldier should remember that he is much better situated now than were the glorious founders and wintered with the immortal Washington at Valley Forge endured every privation that war can inflict; we should remember that we march under the same banner and for the same cause; and on of respect to the illustrious heroes of '76, should conduct ourselves in a manner that would show that, though we cannot win the me of the heroes of the past, we still have veneration for their memory and their cause. So much for the past and present. Now to the future.

There is only one or two more remarks that I will make at present: the one a relation to the courage of our army. The physical courage of the army is proverbial, but there is also another sort of courage necessary to make a good soldier; I mean moral courage; there are not a few of us who cannot face the enemy without getting defeated, and often, if not laid hors du combat, taken prisoners of war. This enemy is not the "Valley Tan," of which you are general. Now, we must try and resist this foe; he is our worst and only enemy I have seen in the army yet. So, hoping that the rank and file will remember that the price of a drink will buy them a copy of your paper, and have the good sense and moral courage to choose between the friend and enemy,

I remain, yours truly,
A PRIVATE SOLDIER.

MEXICO.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, April 20, 1859.

The steamer Tennessee, which arrived here to-day, brings advices from Vera Cruz to the 22d and from the City of Mexico to the 19th of April. The news is of great interest, and indicates a very decided change in the aspect of affairs in Mexico. Gen. Miramon had succeeded in forcing the lines of the Liberal Generals Ampudia and Llave at Orizaba, and hastened forward to the capital, which city he reached on the 11th, with a diminished army. The victorious General had already commenced the work of slaughter, and was murdering peaceable foreigners indiscriminately. He had also issued a formal protest against the recognition of the Juarez Government. The ex-natur of Mr. Black, the American Consul-General, had been withdrawn, and he had been banished from the country.

Mazatlan had been captured by Peruvian. The English were threatening that and the other Mexican Pacific ports, and demanding payment of claims against them.

At Vera Cruz, too, matters are approaching a crisis. The British Minister had insisted on the full payment of all the claims of his countrymen, and had instructed the Commander of the English fleet at Vera Cruz to demand $1,500,000 from the Government.

House in bombard Juarez the Span Tribune.

CIVIL.

The received to the 2d Utah collision States created by wards ru General the head most und not fall feelings brought States J force the Judge Cl ing his General cation v the 10th tain Hel Efforts murders some of the place

This who assu threaten officer in the cond ordered a madron Light Ba Paul, to ernor Cu issued a protest.

He also, re. ustin his comp. Provo, as to assum the Mori careful of tary fore

To these repl der no of them. Provo, as to assum the Mori careful of tary fore

In the through surrectio It would other civ ming's p demanstr rife. Th me t w tween Cu inoperati Gentiles, victed, of ac uil From t ever. Tl cal with the great ther for t

The pres failed to sonable c sioners, a cillate th to threat governme trample d order. A tion, they individual of this col

The eff simply be of grappl man, he t will most sor. We bold mea policy is character, ties, iustel and subdu rule of his

We prag Utah and amounts t millions of ernment bi or influence pdition w The peace his organs few more of supplies in materia war. His policy is Inconci Had the this Utah constructio right solt have been that enterp elapsed unt decamp fr Illinois. T their distnt and his pi exodus, the dren of the In Egypt t tions of the

We hold trines of D test. In t means the e and polyga makes the reeking vil true soldier; re is uired of popular than the his the rule of t which imbr House in that city, and in case of refusal, to bombard the city. Juarez had withdrawn the exequatur of the Spanish Consul at Vera Cruz.—N. Y. Tribune.

Civil War Impending in Utah.

The last mail from Salt Lake City, (received here on the 25th, and bringing dates to the 24), represents the state of affairs in Utah Territory as ominous of an immediate collision between the Saints and the United States troops. The difficulties are complicated by an open disagreement, verging towards rupture, between Gov. Cumming and General Johnston. This discord between the heads of the civil and military power, is most unfortunate at such a juncture, and can not fail to stimulate the seditious and hostile feelings of the Mormons. The crisis was brought on by an effort made by the United States Justice of the Third District to enforce the laws and bring criminals to justice. Judge Cradlebaugh having decided on holding his court in Provo, made application to General Johnston for a guard, which application was complied with. A company of the 10th Infantry, under command of Captain Heth, was detached for the service. Efforts were then made to bring certain murderers to trial. The Marshal arrested some of the accused, including the Bishop of the place.

This proceeding excited the Mormons, who assumed an attitude of hostility, and threatened to rescue the prisoners. The officer in command of the company reported the condition of affairs to the General, who ordered eight companies of Infantry, a squadron of dragoons, and a section of the Light Battery, under the command of Major Paul, to the vicinity of Provo. When Governor Cumming was informed of all this, he issued a proclamation, embodying a "solemn protest" against the "military movement." He also addressed a letter to Gen. Johnston, requesting him to order Captain Heth and his company to encamp outside the walls of Provo, and Captain Paul and his command to assume such a position as would relieve the Mormons of all apprehension. After careful observation, he declares that a military force is necessary in that vicinity. To these requests or instructions Gen. Johnston replies, at length, remarking he is under no obligations whatever to conform to them. The troops, therefore, remain in Provo and its vicinity; and the dimvirate are mutually incensed against each other.

In the meantime, agitation was spreading throughout the Mormon settlements; and insurrection and strife were hourly anticipated. It would seem that the U. S. Judges and the other civil authorities dissented from Cumming's policy, and prompted the military demonstrations. Discord and anarchy were rife. The authority of the Federal Government was paralyzed by the dissensions between Cumming and Johnston; the law was impotent; and the Mormon murderers of Gentiles, even if arrested, could not be convicted, for trial by jury was but a ceremony of acittal.

From these facts it will be seen that the Mormon problem is as far from solution as ever. The condition of Utah now is identical with the condition in which it was when the great military expedition was sent thither for the purpose of establishing the reign of law. A year ago is to be done yet. The presence of an army at Camp Floyd has failed to intimidate that fanatical and treasonable community. The Peace Commissioners, and the Amnesty have failed to conciliate them. They are equally insensible to threats and kindness. They spurn all government but their own theocracy and trample on all laws but the canons of that order. Abnormal in feeling and organization, they can never be harmonized either individually or collectively with the people of this country.

The effect of Mr. Buchanan's policy has simply been to postpone the crisis. Instead of grappling with the difficulty like a statesman, he temporized and paltered with it and will most probably transmit it to his successor. We have no hope that he will adopt bold measures now. The key-note of his policy is to be found in his weakness of character. To glide over or evade difficulties, instead of grappling with them boldly and sublimely, has been the governing rule of his action.

We presume the cost of the expedition to Utah and its maintenance up to this time amounts to not less than fifteen or twenty millions of dollars. In return for it the government has not even secured moral force or influence. The cost of the Paraguay expedition will not be less than five millions. The peaceful victories of Mr. Buchanan, as his organs call them, are dear luxuries. A few more of them would dry up the source of supplies. Their peculiarity is, that even in material outlay they are as expensive as war. His domestic as well as his foreign policy is equally extravagant in cost, and inconclusive in results.

Had the money which has been wasted on this Utah expedition been employed in the construction of the Pacific Railroad, the right solution of the Mormon difficulty would have been found. After the completion of that enterprise, but a short time would have elapsed until the saints would be obliged to decamp from Utah as from Missouri and Illinois. Their isolation it is which prevents their disintegration. Should Brigham Young and his priesthood be forced into another exodus, there are thousands of infirm children of the faith who would rather remain in Egypt than endure the perils and privations of the wilderness.

We hold that the popular sovereignty doctrine of Douglas are exploded by the Utah trials. In that territory popular sovereignty means the sovereignty of fanaticism, treason and polygamy. There popular sovereignty makes the laws which declares Danites reeking with bloodshed not murderers, but true soldiers of the Church. Nothing more is urged to demonstrate the charlatanism of popular sovereignty as a political dogma than the history of Utah. It culminates in the rule of the caliph, and an ideal of society which imbrues both sexes.—St. Louis Dem.

The Sickles Trial.

VERDICT OF ACQUITTAL.

The trial of Daniel E. Sickles, for the murder of Philip Barton Key, was ended on Tuesday by the acquittal of the prisoner. The testimony on both sides was closed on Saturday, and counsel summed up on Monday and Tuesday. On Tuesday the Judge charged the Jury, instructing them on the several points raised by the counsel, and with a strong leaning toward the prisoner. At a little before 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the Jury retired, and remained out a little more than an hour. When they returned, the usual formalities of confronting the Jury and the prisoner, and putting the ordinary questions, were gone through with, the verdict of Not Guilty was then pronounced. It was greeted by an outburst of applause from Mr. Sickles's friends both in and out of court. In the midst of the uproar, the stenographer's voice of Mr. Stanton was heard addressing the court in these words: "I move that Mr. Sickles be discharged from custody."

Marshal Seldon—Come to order, gentlemen; come to order. This is a place where there should be no noise.

No one paid any attention to the Marshal.

Mr. Stanton—(bolling over with excitement)—In the name of Mr. Sickles, and of his counsel, I desire to return thanks to the Jury.

Judge Crawford (who appeared to be the only person in court not excited)—Mr. Stanton, wait till the verdict is recorded.

Mr. Stanton—Of course, your Honor, you must excuse excitement on this occasion.

Clerk to the Jury—Your record is, gentlemen, that you find Daniel E. Sickles "Not Guilty."

The Jury nodded affirmatively.

Clerk—And so say you all.

Another affirmative nod from the Jury.

Mr. Stanton—I now move that Mr. Sickles be discharged from custody.

Judge Crawford—The court so orders.

Mr. Stanton (turning around)—Now go it.

Judge—No noise. The prohibition, however, was unheeded, and Mr. Sickles was then led out of court and taken to the house of a friend, amid a good deal of tumult.—N. Y. Tribune.

Letter from Corrientes.

THE AMERICAN TROOPS ON SHORE.

The First Encounter between the American Troops and the Paraguayans.

The Alla California of April 30, says:—A friend furnishes us the following extract from a private letter, written by an American in Corrientes, Feb. 25, and sent to this city via Mendoza and Valparaiso:

"A detachment of our troops, intended for land service, were disembarked at the village of Vermejo, on the 23d, about ten miles below the junction of the Parana with the Paraguay. This chiefly consisted of light dragoons and mounted riflemen, with the luggage adapted to that department of the service. These were to cross the country and form a junction with the steamers at the mouth of the Parana. The detachment was intercepting foraging parties of warlike gauchos who had been seen hovering in the neighborhood.

"On the 25th, at 12 M., we had received final orders, and commenced our march across the pampa until the short twilight settled in to darkness, when we received orders to encamp, and had commenced preparations for our first essay in Paraguayan field fare, when our scouts brought in the exciting news that a large detachment of Paraguayans were bivouacked a few miles distant, and from their movements, were evidently meditating a night attack.

"As we feared the treachery of native scouts of Spanish origin, Indians were employed instead, but they were always accompanied by some of our soldiers. Supposing that the meditated attack would not take place until the drowsy hours of morning, our commander gave orders that we should prepare to anticipate their attack, and surprise them during the earlier hours of the night. After having dispatched our first rations of jerked pampa beef, we allowed our fires to burn low, as though we intended to sleep early and take advantage of the early hours to renew our march. At eleven, concluding that we were no longer watched, we broke camp, and the three parties intended to attack them in front, and either flank filed separately out, but keeping within ear-shot, they proceeded silently until about half past twelve, when the gaucho encampment broke upon their view.

"The tents of the enemy were arranged in a circle, within which were picketed what appeared to be an innumerable herd of horses, but from the distance, and rising mist of the plain, it was impossible to tell whether they were accounted or not. Although they apparently outnumbered us, by some hundreds, our commander resolved upon an immediate attack; and after a spirited whispered exhortation, the word "forward" was given. We proceeded silently until within pistol shot, and then, with a shout, the charge was sounded; simultaneously we discharged our pieces, which was answered by the terrified screams of a hundred female voices, as we rushed to the encounter, and lo! we found ourselves in the midst of bellowing cattle, which we had mistaken for horses, in the distance, and our opponents were some four-score naked senoras herdswomen, who were rapidly striking their diminutive tents, which was accomplished in rather a novel manner, which cannot fail to be interesting to their more civilized sex in other countries. Upon discovering the character of our opponents, we burst into a hearty laugh; this recovering them from their surprise, they each dodged beneath the skirts of their tents, and a head and shoulders appearing in the opening of the tent pole, it was displaced, but instead of being struck it became a fixture about the waist. And upon closer examination, we found that what we had supposed to be tents were nothing less than hooped skirts, which had been imported by some enterprising Yankee, serving the gauchos senoras as apparel during the day and tents at night. This, our first encounter with the enemy, was valiantly achieved and afterwards gallantly maintained, as our foes of the skirts must admit."

THE AUTHOR OF SWEET HOME.—The following from a newspaper of 1853, gives some interesting incidents in the life of the author of "Sweet Home."

"As I sit in my garret here, in Washington, watching the course of great men and the destiny of party, I often meet with strange contradictions in this eventful life.

"The most remarkable was that of J. Howard Payne, the author of 'Sweet Home.' I knew him intimately. He occupied the room under me for some time, and his conversation was so captivating that I often spent whole days in his apartment. He was an applicant for office at the time—Consul at Tunis—from which he had been removed. What a sad thing it was to see the poet subjected to all the humiliation of office-seeking! Of an evening he would walk the streets. On such occasions he would give me a history of his wanderings, his trials and all cares incident to his sensitive nature and poverty.

"How often," said he, once, "I have been in the heart of Paris, Berlin, and London, or some other city, and heard persons sing, or hand-organ playing, Home, Sweet Home, without having a shilling to buy the next meal, or a place to lay my head. The world has literally sung my song until every heart is familiar with its melodies. Yet I have been a wanderer from my boyhood. My country has turned me ruthlessly from office, and in my old age I have to submit to humiliation for my bread."

"Thus he would complain of his hapless lot. His only wish was to die in a foreign land, to be buried by strangers, and sleep in obscurity. Poor Payne! his wish was realized. He died at Tunis. His remains were brought to this country, and a monument erected to him by the homeless, with this inscription:

"Here lies J. Howard Payne, author of 'Sweet Home.' A wanderer in life, whose songs were sung in every tongue and found an echo in every heart, never had a home. He died in a foreign land."

THE TURN OF LIFE.—From the age of forty to that of sixty, a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered as in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to the attacks of disease; and experience has given him the soundness of almost infallibility. His mind is resolute, firm and equal; all his functions are in the highest order. He assumes the mastery over business, builds up a competence on the foundation he has formed in early manhood, and passes through a period of life attended by many gratifications. Having gone a year or two past sixty, he arrives at a critical period in the road of existence; the river of death flows before him, and he remains at a standstill. But at that point the river is a viaduct, called "the Turn of Life," which, if crossed in safety, leads to the "Valley of Old Age," beyond which is a "Way" to effect its passage. The bridge is, however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden whether it bends or breaks. Gout, apoplexy, and other bad characters, are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveler, and thrust him from the path; but let him grip up his loins, and provide himself with a fitting staff, and he may trudge on in safety, with perfect composure. To quit a metaphor, the turn of life is a turn into prolonged walk or into the grave. The system and power having reached their utmost expansion, now begin either to close like flowers at sunset, or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant—a single fatal excitement—may force it beyond its strength, whilst a careful supply of props, and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in beauty and in vigor until night has entirely set.

LATER FROM ARIZONA.—The San Francisco Weekly Bulletin of April 30, says, the Overland mail which arrived on the 29th, brought the Arizonian of April 7th, from which are condensed the following items:

Preparations are being made to run a weekly stage from Guaymas to Tucson. It will be necessary for the stage to travel always with an armed guard of three or four men.

A Mexican and an American were recently killed by Apaches, on the road to Hermosillo, in Sonora. The names of both were unknown, although the American was lately from California, and passed through Tubac on his way to Sonora.

It is rumored that instead of Colonel Fautleroy, Col. Loomis, 5th Infantry, will be placed in command of this Department, as his regiment is now on the way to Arizona.

Capt. Van Bokkelen is not expected to return to Fort Buchanan. Lieut. Cook, 8th Infantry, will discharge the duties of Quartermaster and A. A. C. Subsistence. A general Court Martial, for the trial of military offenders, is now in session at Fort Fillmore. Captain Ewell, being detailed to attend left Fort Buchanan on the 6th April, to be absent fifteen or twenty days.

STILL LATER.—We have received copies of the Arizonian to April 15th.—That paper gives a deplorable picture of the present condition of Sonora. The civil war carried on between the factions of Grandara and Pesqueira, and the forays of the Apache Indians, are carrying consternation into every hamlet. Business is paralyzed and the country impoverished and prostrated by civil war.

The editor has seen at the office of the Sonora Exploring and Mining Company, in Tabac, a bar of fine silver, which is to be forwarded to New York by the Overland Mail. Its value is $1,144 84. The bar is consigned to Wm. T. Coleman & Co.

The body of either an American or German was found murdered and robbed on the Magdalena road. He is supposed to have been a deserter from the U. S. Army.

ARMY MATTERS.—Gen. Scott has submitted to the Secretary of War numerous important recommendations, which will doubtless be adopted. The orders for the spring campaign have not been completed. The General thinks the present force in Utah can be reduced with advantage. If the Indians on the Pacific continue troublesome, the troops withdrawn from Utah will be despatched there. Gen. Johnston who is commanding in Utah, some time since asked to be relieved. The request will not be granted at present.—San Francisco Bulletin.

TREASURE FOR SALT LAKE.—A company of Dragoons (Maj. Carleton) from Fort Tejon, left here yesterday as escort of treasure which came down on the Senator in charge of Maj. Prince, the Paymaster of the Utah Army, and bound for Salt Lake to pay off troops. It is said that there is half a million in Maj. Prince's Colsa. Two companies from Camp Floyd, Utah, are coming to meet this escort at Mountain Meadows.

I heard of a singular incident yesterday. Mr. John Raines, of the Rancho del Chino, received a letter from Salt Lake, which on reading, he found to be from one of the soldiers there, written to a man by the name of Ruins here, a deserter. The writer said that the soldiers there were eight or ten months in arrears of pay—but as soon as they were paid off, they were all going to desert.

BOUND FOR THE KINGDOM.—We are informed that a company of some forty Mormons or Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are fitting themselves out in this city to return to their kindred and friends in the valleys of the mountains in Utah Territory. It is a peculiar characteristic of this people that dangers and difficulties seem to unite them the more closely together, and now that the clouds are lowering above their brethren in Utah, they are gathering their worldly effects together and preparing to start off to share their fate regardless of the consequences.—Alla California.

LETTERS BY THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The Overland Mail which left this city yesterday at 12 o'clock, carried 752 "through" letters, and 77 "way" letters. Total 859. The mail of Friday carried away 1427 letters.—Ibid.

Capt. Ephraim Pendleton, master of the bark Sarah Parks, had been arrested for cruelty to his sailors. One of them had died at sea under the terrible punishment inflicted by the captain, and others, on their arrival, were almost at the point of death from starvation. So great was the excitement against the captain, that an attempt was made by the mob to take him from the officers, and had it been successful he would undoubtedly have been hanged. Captain Pendleton is from Bath, Me.

The Nicaraguan Government has decreed a general amnesty to all political offenders.

The general assembly of the New School Presbyterian Church in the United States will meet in Washington, Delaware, on the 19th of May.

The city government of New Orleans has passed an ordinance providing for the sale of the right of way for twenty years, to establish street railroads in that city.

Bishop Otey at last dates was lying very ill at his residence near Memphis. Jumpertz, the condemned Chicago murderer, who packed the body of his victim in a barrel and sent it to New York, has another chance for his life, a supersedeas having been granted in his case by the Supreme Court.

FROM HONEY LAKE.

Through the kindness of a gentleman recently from Honey Lake Valley, we have been furnished with the proceedings of a mass meeting held in that valley on the 4th of April last.

MASS MEETING.

Pursuant to a call, a meeting of the citizens of Honey Lake Valley, and vicinity was held at the house of Dr. Slater, in said valley, on Monday, April 4th.

On motion of J. Williams, Dr. Slater was called to the Chair, and on motion of J. H. Neale, J. Williams appointed Secretary.

The Chair stated that the object of the meeting was to take measures to secure the extension of civil law over our community.

After discussing whether our local laws would answer for the future, a decidedly negative feeling appeared manifest.

On motion of J. H. Neale, the meeting proceeded to ballot upon the three propositions before the meeting, whether to apply to Utah for law, or California, or remain under our local organization.

The Chair appointed Wm. Hill and Lewis Stark Judges of the election.

They declared the election in favor of Utah—33 for Utah, 2 for California, and 7 for Honey Lake Laws.

A petition was presented and signed by all present to his Excellency, A. Cumming, Governor of Utah Territory, to organize a county, embracing Honey Lake, Willow Creek and Long Valleys, as also a portion of the Territory between Honey Lake Valley and the Humboldt River, and to appoint a Judge over the same, and Dr. John A. Slater was nominated and elected as a suitable man for Judge.

After the transaction of some local business the meeting then adjourned.

J. A. SLATER, Pres't.

J. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

Honey Lake Valley, April 4th, 1859.

—Territorial Enterprise.

ARRIVAL OF COL. HOFFMAN AT THE MONAHÉ VILLAGES.—The St. Louis Overland mail of 4th April arrived here this morning, and brought intelligence to Gen. Clarke from Col. Hoffman. The latter had reached Beale's Crossing, but whether he had yet had a fight with the Indians is not known at head quarters. Gen. Clarke expects to receive further dispatches by direct express within the next twenty-four hours.—San Francisco Bulletin.

BISHOP'S PARTY.—The last news from Bishop left him on his way up the river to Aubrey's crossings, fifty miles above Beale's, where it is reported that he has crossed; but this last needs confirmation. It is said the Indians had ceased annoying him, and that they were turning their attention towards Col. Hoffman. I think Bishop must have given them a taste of the Americano, that was very salutary. He is not a man to fool with them.—Ibid.

EFFECTS OF FASTING.—A poor man, known to be in extreme distress, describes the effects of fasting for three days as follows: "The first day, 'taint so very bad if you have a bit of taccia; the second it's horrid—it is such gnawing; the third day 'taint so bad again; you feels sinkish like, and very faintish."

Married.

At American F. R., Utah county, on the 27th inst., by Bishop L. R. Harrington, Mr. JOSEPH SNOW, Indian Interpreter, G. S. L. CHY, and Miss FRANCES P. WALKER, of Provo.

May peace and joy, with no dull trials, Go with them, hand in hand, thro' life's A.

SEALED Proposals will be received at the Office of the Assistant Commissioner of Subsidies at Fort Bridger, U. T., until the 10th day of June next, for the delivery of 150 tons of iron for the use of the Commissary Department, as follows:

50 Tons of good merchantable hay to be delivered at Fort Bridger, and 100 Tons of like hay to be delivered at Smith's Fork (six miles from Fort Bridger).

In each case the hay to be stacked in racks, and in such manner as to be accessible to the stock, and to be enclosed by stock, and to be so stacked or stacked as to be secure from the weather. The hay put to be fed within five miles of the post, or on such grounds as may be reserved for the riding of Government stock.

The work to be completed by the 31st October next. The undersigned reserves to himself the right to reject all bids which may be considered unsatisfactory. Proposals to be addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Proposal for Hay."

S. S. CARRROLL, 2nd Lt. 10th Inf., A. A. C. S.

Office of A. A. C. S., Fort Bridger, U. T., April, 1859.

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. FOLEY.

FULTON IRON WORKS,

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

Pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, and

Work, and Civil Machinery, Tobacco and Land

Rever and Brass and Iron, a large and complete

Circular Saw Mills of the Free and Childs Patents

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

JOHN HARTNETT, Proprietor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1859.

NUMBR 31.

The Reason Why.

Do you wish to know the reason
Why your neighbor often calls
On the dashing Widow Wallace,
And attends her to the balls?
Why his carriage is seen stopping
At some noted clothing store,
And the Widow goes a shopping
Where she never went before?
If you wish it, I will tell you—
Let me whisper to you sly—
If they esteem it proper,
It is not your business why.

Do you wish to know why Peter
Has forsaken friends and home,
And left his native country
In a distant land to roam?
Why Polly seems so lonely
Since the day that Peter left,
And of all friends, she the only
Should appear to be bereft?
If you wish it, I will tell you—
Let me whisper to you sly—
If they have reasons for it,
It is not your business why.

Would you like to know the secrets
Of your neighbor's house and life?
How he lives, or how he does not,
And just how he treats his wife?
How he spends his time of leisure,
Whether sorrowful or gay,
And where he goes for pleasure,
To the concert, or the play?
If you wish it, I will tell you—
Let me whisper to you sly—
If your neighbor is but civil,
It is not your business why.

In short, instead of prying
Into other folk's affairs,
If you do your own but justice,
You will have no time for theirs.
Be attentive to such matters
As concern yourself alone;
And whoever fortune flatters,
Let your business be your own.
One word by way of hint—
Let me whisper to you sly—
If you wish to be respected,
You must cease to be a spy.

The Decay of Mormonism.

A rumor is in circulation that great numbers of the Mormons, having become dissatisfied with the practical workings of the system, are preparing to take advantage of the protection secured them by the presence of the army, and decamp from Salt Lake City. Referring to the disaffection existing among the Mormons, a correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Great Salt Lake City, says:

"The Church is making strenuous efforts to throw its arms around its wavering members and draw them once more to its bosom, in that fatal embrace with which it has so long and fearfully bound them. Its apostles, elders, bishops and teachers are busy bolstering up the faltering faith of their followers by preaching primary principles, non-intercourse with Gentiles, and exhorting them to renew their covenants. The Tabernacle, closed since the move last spring, has been reopened and service resumed. Pratt, Taylor, Hyde, and others of the distingue, have held forth respectively the claims of the Book of Mormon, the principles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and a castigation upon the Gentile portion of the community. Yes, notwithstanding their efforts, apostasy is fast spreading through the folds of the Church, and stalking boldly to the very firesides of its leaders, causing their own children to rise up and renounce them and their dogmas, and vow to leave the land, let come what will."

We know not how far the above statement may be relied on, but we are disposed to think there is much truth in it. It has ever been a matter of astonishment to us that so many could be deluded by the transparent deceptions of Mormonism. A cheat and a swindle from its inception, and so known to be by the leaders of the sect, who have used it for the advancement of their ambition, avarice, and sensual pleasures, it has always been to us surprising that in this enlightened age men could be found ignorant and credulous enough to be duped by it.

Mohammedanism was established at an era when the world was wrapped in moral darkness; and it is an acknowledged fact that, under the blaze of light shed by modern civilization, Mohammedanism is fast passing away. And yet Mohammedanism was far more exalted and less immoral in its tenets than Mormonism. A delusion, it yet appealed to religious fanaticism, to the chivalry, to the heroism, of mankind, to make the success of the deception complete. With little knowledge of divine revelation, the followers of the Crescent were not difficult to convince of the authenticity of the Koran, which did not purport to conflict with the revealed will of God, as contained in the Bible, and which possessed many passages replete with beautiful morality, and profound human wisdom. Recognizing polygamy, Mohammedanism could not be on that account repugnant to a people to whom the system was already a familiar one. But as we have said, Mohammedanism does not flourish in the nineteenth century. The day is dawning in the East. Even there, with the mists of ages hanging round it, the Crescent is paling before the rising sun. In the pursuit of their own selfish ends, England, France, and Russia have contributed to the dissipation of civil and religious error. The flash from their muskets was the first ray of light that penetrated the moral darkness of the East, and its sudden glare has revealed to the benighted followers of Islam the bondage in which they are enthralled.

If Mohammedanism pales before the light of civilization, how is it possible that Mormonism can go on augmenting the number of its followers? If the mosque totters and trembles before the batteries of truth, how shall the temple of the Latter Day Saints stand? If in the moral twilight of the East the Moslem begins to throw off the religious despotism that has for ages shackled him, how is it possible that a religious despotism, still more blighting and far more degrading, shall continue to flourish in the noontide of light and day? We may well believe that the days of Mormonism are numbered. We can imagine that we see the hand-writing on the wall: mene, mene, tekel, upharis!

Were not the fact of its existence staring us in the face, we might well ask, how is it possible that Mormonism could exist for a day—could ever have existed under the circumstances surrounding it? Though it may prove difficult to account for so extraordinary a phenomenon, if, indeed, it can be accounted for at all, it is easy to see that unless some extraordinary change occurs in the moral atmosphere of the age, Mormonism must perish. The tabernacles may be opened, Pratt, Taylor, Hyde, and the arch-deceiver, Brigham Young, himself, may preach up the Book of Mormon, and inveigh against the Gentiles till they grow hoarse, and missionaries may be sent out over the world to recruit, but all will not, we are convinced, perpetuate so abominable and odious a heresy as Mormonism.—Lex. (Mo.) Expressor.

Truthful and Eloquent Extract.

The following extract from a speech of a leading statesman, is full of truth and eloquence:

"Democratic principle is moulded into the very being of this country. The proportions of that country's gigantic stature are formed out of the material of Democratic thought and fashioned by Democratic hands. Where on the statute-book can a law be found of finance or revenue, settling the internal policy of our country, and acquiesced in by our countrymen of all parties, that has not been placed on the statute-book by Democratic votes, and stereotyped on the hearts of the people by Democratic argument? The iron hand of Jackson struck the blow that severed the money of the people from the mammoth bank; and the Democracy followed up the blow by dissolving its connection with the lesser monopolies that had grasped the spoil. Democratic argument and votes have approximated the tariff, after protracted struggles, to the revenue standard; and the principle at this late day is too strongly fixed in the affections of the masses to be abandoned to temporary policy, or surrendered to greedy appetite for spoils. No less identified with the growth of our empire is the name and fame of the Democratic party. Associated with them are a thousand memories, interweaving them with every garland of her past progress and glory. The Mississippi, so long as it pours its flood of waters to the Gulf, shall mingle with the hum of its immense commerce the name of Jefferson, the father of Democracy. Every breath of wind that stirs the magnolia groves of Florida, brings from the land of flowers fresh fragrance to the memory of Monroe, another of the patriot sages of Democracy. The immense cotton and sugar fields of Texas, and the golden sands of California, all attest the past triumphs of the Democratic policy, and point with unerring finger to Cuba, destined soon to be added, with her tropical fruits and tobacco and sugars, to swell the practical triumphs of Democratic rule. Talk about the destruction of such a party, because there are quarrels in our ranks! Sir, the Democracy always have quarreled, and they always will quarrel, among themselves. But these quarrels are but summer thunder—clouds destined soon to pass away and leave the atmosphere purer than before; but bubbles on the surface of the stream, necessary to let off the noxious gas beneath. The great current rolls on, and must roll on forever; at least while the constitution, strictly construed, needs defenders, and the rights of the States friends and champions. Those who argue from present destructions the destruction of the Democratic party have failed to read, or read with little profit, their country's history. They miscalculate the inherent strength of its principles, and fail to appreciate the confidence its past career inspires. Look at it in 1840, discomfited and overwhelmed North and South. See again in 1844, triumphant again. Behold it in 1854, weakened and distracted; yet in 1856 we see it again victorious. Though the elections of 1858 have been disastrous to its prospects, they are scarcely worse than those of 1854; and who shall say that 1860 will not usher in another victory as brilliant as that of 1860?"

John Marshall writes a Youth.

A correspondent of the New York Century gives a pleasant account of the early days of John Marshall, who became the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The following picture of the young man is given:

In the spring of 1776, a number of the Virginia troops who had participated in the battle of Great Bridge, tarried, on their journey home, at the good old town of York. Among them was a young man of twenty, who became a great favorite with the gentlemen and ladies of the borough. He was tall, slender, with sparkling black eyes, and lips which wore an habitual smile. In his walk, his bearing, his simple and winning gestures, were observable that characteristic called "thorough-bred."

In costume he was far from presenting a very imposing appearance. His dress was plain, and somewhat the worst for wear; his slouch hat was actually shabby—he plainly paid not the least attention to his personal adornment. He had another suit which he sometimes wore no doubt to the terror of his nervous young lady friends. This consisted chiefly of a rude cap, decorated with the tail of a buck—a leathern belt sustaining a tomahawk and couteau de chasse, and a green hunting shirt, with the words "Liberty or Death" in large white letters on the bosom. It was the uniform of the "Culpepper Minute Men," in which corps the youth held the post of lieutenant.

Tarrying thus, in the fine spring days, at Yorktown, he became a regular visitor at the houses of the old gentry who at that time made the borough an attractive spot, illustrating it with all the charms of former manners and refined festivities. Among other friends whom the young lieutenant made, was Mr. Jaquelin Ambler, Collector of Customs for the port, and afterward Treasurer of the new commonwealth, when his incorruptible integrity secured for him the noble name of 'The Aristides of Virginia.' With the whole household of the worthy Col. Ambler, the youth soon became what was then called "a great toast," but especially did he manage to find his way to the heart of a little damsel only fourteen years of age—Miss Mary Willis Ambler by name. He read poetry to the ladies in his sweet voice filled with melody and pathos, waited upon them with the grand, simple gallantry and knightly elegance of the old regime, and endeared himself to one and all by his kindness and dignity.

DEATH OF THE KENTUCKY GIANT.—James D. Porter, the "Kentucky Giant," died at Portland, near Louisville, last Sunday night, in the fiftieth year of his age. The Courier says of him:

His extraordinary height, being about seven feet nine inches, ranked him as the tallest man in the world. He seemed to labor under the consciousness that he was an object of universal curiosity, and shunned rather than sought the public gaze. He was modest and retiring—the very soul of honor and honesty. His social feelings were elevated and refined, his affections strong and marked. He was a gentleman of intelligence, and wielded a considerable influence among his neighbors and friends. He has resided here since early manhood. In his early life he was warmly attached to the political fortunes of Mr. Clay, was a Whig of the old school, and never forgot his associations with that party. He always gloried in his Whig name and principles, and clung to them to the last.

A TARTAR.—Once only it is on record that our bishop caught a tartar in the person of a certain rector, much addicted to riding after hounds. A very different person was this to the curate above spoken of, a man with a premeditated fifteen hundred a year, and "own brother" (an expression he borrowed from his favorite volume, "Ruff's Guide to the Turf") to the squire of his parish. His lordship, therefore, rode over to the rectory, unaccompanied by even an examining chaplain or a groom, and dropped in upon Mr. Chifney, one morning, quite in a friendly way. "Speaking as one man to another," said he, "and not as your bishop, I give you my frank opinion that there is no real harm in fox-hunting whatever—rather the reverse; still my friend, there are weaker brethren, and this habit of yours is a stumbling-block to them, I do assure you."

You see it is not as if you were a mere road rider, Mr. Chifney, (when hunting may be considered accidental,) but I hear that you go, so to speak, slap across the country." "My lord," was the reply, "I thank you." Speaking as one man to another, and not to my spiritual superior, (since you are kind enough to put it on that ground) I find no fault with ball going—rather the reverse; but there are weaker brethren. Now, your attendance at the Duchess's in London the other night, I have heard commented upon by many, and always with reprobation." "Pardon me," interrupted the bishop, "I was in hief Orace's house, but not at the ball; my—ah—my position necessitates a certain acquiescence in the innocent amusements of our aristocracy while in London, but not in the polka; far from it. No, Mr. Chifney, no, I assure you I was never within three rooms of the dancers." "Nay, my lord," replied the reverend sportsman, with a laugh, "but that is just my case; for tho' I never miss a day, when I can help it, in riding to hounds, and take my time, as you were good enough to observe, as straight as most men, yet weighing, saddle and all, near twenty stone, I have not been these ten years within three fields of the fox."

"MY LORD" IN AN AWKWARD DILEMMA.—An awkward affair, which once occurred to one of the judges on the Western circuit, has been the subject of much mirth. It appears that the pious judicial, having finished his labors, and having cast off his forensic wig at his lodgings, had retired into the next room to wait for his brother judge, whom he was about to accompany to some of the local aristocracy to dinner. The female servant of the house had entered the bed-chamber by a side door, and not knowing the judge was in the next room, in a frolic, arrayed herself in the judge's wig. Just at the moment when the fair Mopsy was admiring herself in the looking-glass, the judge unexpectedly entered the room, and the poor Mopsy, catching a sight of the stern countenance looking over her shoulder in the glass, was so alarmed that she fainted, and would have fallen to the ground if the learned judge, impelled by humanity, had not caught her in his arms. At this critical moment his brother judge arrived, and opening the dressing room door with a view to seeing if he was ready, discovered his learned brother with the fainting maid in his arms. Not wishing to interrupt the parties, he quickly attempted to withdraw, when his brother judge vociferated, "For heaven's sake stop and hear this matter explained." "Never mind, my dear brother, the matter explains itself," and he left his learned brother to recover the fainting maid as best he could.—The Bench and the Bar.

The Paris correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce states that "when Louis Napoleon first entered the Tuilleries as Emperor he found three clocks, one of which, when it struck, said 'Moscow'—another 'Schonbrunn'—and the third 'Waterloo.' Ever since Sebastopol was taken the first clock has ceased to strike. But just now 'Schonbrunn' is ringing furiously, while 'Waterloo' only, as yet, tinkles faintly in the distance.

EXPERIMENTS ON DIGESTION.—Dr. Harley, in a communication to the British Association, has stated that, contrary to an opinion lately published by M. Bernard, the distinguished French physiologist, he had found that the human saliva contains both sulphacyanide of potassium and iron. The latter substance, however, can only be detected after the organic matters contained in the secretion are destroyed by burning.—Dr. Harley has ascertained that a person of nine stone secreted between one and ten pounds of saliva in twenty-four hours. The gastric juice, he says, does not destroy the power possessed by the saliva of transforming starch into sugar; consequently, the digestion of amylaceous food is continued in the stomach. The gastric juice has the property of changing cane into grape sugar. In regard to the cause of the gastric juice not digesting the living stomach, experiments show that it is not the epithelium lining the organ which prevents its being digested, but the layer of tick mucus which covers its walls. When the latter substance is absent, the gastric juice attacks the walls of the living stomach, and digests them, causing perforation and death. As regards the bile, it takes an active part in rendering the fatty portions of food capable of being absorbed into the system.

John C. Heenan, the Benesio Boy, now the fistic champion of America, sent out by a recent steamer, a challenge to Tom Sayers, the champion bruiser of England, to fight him. Tom replies by the Europa that if his three coming fights with Bill Benjamin, "The Unknown," and Bob Brettle are decided in his favor, thus leaving him still the champion, he will be most happy to fight Heenan for £200, and bet him £500 or £1,000 that he wins the fight. The winner of the battle would also be entitled to the champion's belt. As the affair is decided in favor of Sayers, there are but two other gentlemen to be attended to before Mr. Heenan's claim to the personal attentions of the English champion will be taken in active consideration.

QUICKLY DONE IF NOT WELL.—East Thursday night a pleasant-looking young lady arrived here by the Eastern train, which that night was delayed beyond the usual time. She had an excellent appetite for a good supper at the new Pennsylvania House. But at the supper table she was joined by a young man who had arrived that evening in the Western train. The two became sociable on short acquaintance. That night she asked the landlord what kind of a character the young man bore. He answered that he only knew him as a clever, straight-forward young fellow.—Well, not to prolong so brief a story, the two had never met until at the supper table—were married early next morning. Whether the particular rapidity of this enterprise was owing to the energy of our Western young man, or to that of the Eastern feminine, we do not know, but we wish them a happy time.—Davenport Gaz.

STARTING SEEDS EARLY.—Rev. Daniel Emerson, Summit Co., O., writes that he has been successful in giving garden seeds an early start, in the following manner: Having selected the quantity needed, each sort is tied by itself in a cloth, the name being plainly written on a slip of paper, and inclosed with the seed. The packages are then buried about two inches deep in the ground, for a week or two. When ready for planting they are taken from the bags and used. They will be found to have swelled, perhaps sprouted, and ready to grow. If the ground should be quite dry, it is best to water the drills after dropping the seeds, and then cover with dry earth. Mr. E. says that by this plan he has never failed to raise plants from every seed planted, though when put out they were often sprouted. If each seed is placed where it is wanted to grow, it will save the labor of thinning, though many prefer to thin their rows, leaving the most prominent plants to grow.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, June 8, 1859.

By accident this paper shows different dates on the two sides of the paper.

We repeat what was stated in our last issue; that extracts from our exchanges are inserted for the purpose of submitting them to our readers, that they may see what has been said about each and every party in the territory, but not with the intention of conveying an expression of ourselves, as to whether they were right or wrong. This would be too delicate a matter for us to do in our present official position.

At the time of assuming the proprietorship of the "Valley Tan," we did not expect to have our name at its head more than for the first issue, and that only for the purpose of continuing a paper which would contain articles different from those of the other journal of this city—we mean, different so far as not upholding the doctrines of the Mormon church—but failing to accomplish our wishes, this number has to appear, as did the last. The next issue must appear in some other party's name, and will come in regular time, if our arrangements can be perfected.

Mr. Anderson, who leaves in a few days for the States, takes with him our best wishes. We have known him for many years, in many occupations of life, and have ever found him a true gentleman and a warm friend, and we heartily wish him much success. He can use his talents to a better advantage, and in a more agreeable manner in another place: we cannot blame him for the steps he has taken.

We find in the New York Herald of May 7th, a communication from its Utah correspondent, a very lengthy article, reflecting severely on Gov. Cumming and other officers of this Territory. Leaving to be inferred that he and others designed to frustrate, if not defeat, the ends of justice in the matter then being brought before the U. S. District Court. This, to make the mildest possible remark, is a mistake. The correspondent, in his own article proves this; for says he, "four men were arrested and retained as prisoners." And of that four, it is well known to everybody here, and will not be denied by either the Hon. Judge Cradlebaugh and Marshal Dotson, that two of them were arrested through the instrumentality of the more at press.

We will not for the present continue any further comment on the article referred to, for the reason that it does not become us, holding the position we do, to either laudate or reflect on officers of the federal government, but would simply remark, that did letter writers confine themselves more strictly to the truth in their writings, there would be less difficulty apprehended by persons abroad, as to the amicable relationship in this Territory between the civil and military officers.

Three trains are now coming over the big mountain (20 miles distant) one; that of Russell & Waddell, and the others Livingston, Kinkead & Co., and Miller, Russell & Co.

Their arrival may impart some life to this part of America, and it is to be hoped it will, for dullness reigns here now.

We are informed that a military force will leave Camp Floyd on the 12th inst., for the Humboldt; which will furnish an escort to any emigrants by the northern road to California, who may choose to avail themselves of its protection.

We hear that a contract to furnish flour for the use of the army of Utah has been let at the rate of $28 per hundred.

This is rather a large figure for the article—at least it would seem so, since the contract has been twice sub-let, and in one case at less than the fourth of the original contract price.

Chief Justice Eckel, and the newly appointed Indian Agent, and our old friend Jack Radford were at Fort Kearney on the 15th ult., en route for this city.

We imagine we hear capt. Jack laugh already.

The Postmaster General has made a decision on the bids for the California mail service, but declines to furnish information concerning them for the distant press.

The Washington National says that "Brigham Young has offered to sell out the Mormon interests in Utah for a reasonable sum, and to remove in a specified time. The matter, which has been kept very secret, is likely to be arranged.

We are not informed as who the purchaser is to be, but would surmise Wm. Russell, as he appears to have a great affection for Utah trade.

A portion of Col. Sanders' Company have arrived here, and will depart in a few days for Soda Springs, there to join the engineer corps. Mr. Campbell, who spent the winter with us, will also go in the company.

To show the ideas existing abroad we insert the following from the New York Herald. We have not yet seen the fight, nor do we apprehend any difficulty between the gentlemen mentioned. True, they may have different instructions and their own individual views of carrying out said instructions; yet, this would not necessarily cause these gentlemen to entertain that degree of opposition, which is conveyed in this extract: "Instructions to Gov. Cumming and Gen. Johnston will be despatched to Utah on Monday by a special bearer. Advice just received mentions that a better state of feeling exists there, and the probabilities are that all the difficulties will soon terminate."

We also make another extract from the same paper, which touches the same subject. Of course we cannot vouch for the correctness of the information and only give it as we find it—

"The State and War Departments to-day made up their instructions for Utah. General Johnston will hereafter await the orders of the Governor before calling out the troops to act as a posse comitatus to assist the civil authorities in the enforcement of the laws."

The Eastern mail arrived here on the 6th inst., being twenty four hours in advance of schedule time, and brought dates from St. Louis up to the 13th ult. The important news imported to us through this mail, is that Fort Leavenworth has been abandoned and the military equipage has been transferred to Fort Riley, in the same Territory, and that some one of Messrs. J. M. Hockaday & Co's firm has sold out his interest in said company to Messrs. Jones & Russell.

The following dispatch we find in the Missouri Republican of May 13, in relation to the sale:

SPECIAL DISPATCH.

LEAVENWORTH, May 12.

Jones & Russell have purchased the controlling interest in the Utah Mail contract, and it is understood that they will transport the mail over a portion of the New Overland route, which will materially hasten the time.

We insert the following only that it may be seen what Mormons are doing abroad. We think that the Elders are in one respect like some other people—speak the loudest when they are far away from those of whom they speak:

[From the N. Y. Herald.]

The Mormons in the City.
Gathering of the Faithful—Tall Preaching—Emigration to Utah, from the Eastern and Middle States.

Last Sunday the Mormons of this and surrounding cities, together with a large number of the brethren and sisters, from different parts of this State, and from other States, met at Columbian Hall, Williamsburg, and had one of their glorifications—preaching, singing, testimonies and business. The occasion of this particular gathering was a preparatory step towards the year's emigration to Utah.

The "Saints" met in the afternoon, at three o'clock, and kept up their exercises for about two hours and a half, went home afterwards to tea, and returned at seven o'clock, when they commenced and had three hours more of the same order.

The meeting of the afternoon was pretty much like an old fashioned Methodist meeting in its primitive days. All the brothers and sisters couldn't find time to speak in the two hours and a half—with the usual marginal allowance for the distribution of the sacrament, singing hymns and praying; but those obliged to retain their seats while Brother Jones or Sister Smith spoke, sent out a hearty Amen, expressive of their pent up feeling of satisfaction. There was little diversity in the testimonies of the faithful, either in point of language or in allusion to individual experience. All seemed contented with "the privilege of bearing testimony" to the mission of Joseph Smith as a "prophet and revelator," and to that of Brigham Young as none the less a "prophet and revelator to this last dispensation." There was quite a number rejoicing in the prospect of going directly to Utah "to share in the joys and in the sorrows of the children of Zion;" and as many of the speakers "were grieved that they were still destitute of the dollars to take them westward." With comforting words from the person presiding, "that there was a good time coming," the congregation sang—

O Zion, when I think on thee,
I long for pinions like a dove,
And mourn to think that I should be
So distant from the land I love.

The afternoon's service closed with a benediction.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

The hall was densely crowded at the hour appointed for meeting. The principal elders had been engaged in "council" during the afternoon meeting, and their appearance in the evening altered the face of things. There was a general shaking of hands as they passed through the hall to the platform, and everybody seemed expecting something. After the usual singing and prayer, Presiding Elder Lark introduced the speaker of the evening, Elder Brown, who had some business to lay before the Saints. He was about to emigrate with the Saints to Utah, and the greater portion of the priesthood around him were also preparing for the West. He entered into a lengthy detail of the labors of the brethren, and finished up his introductory with a series of resolutions to sustain the "presiding officers in their callings." Shaking himself from business, he entered into the signs of the times. The papers had been teeming with exciting news from Utah, and he deemed it his duty to make the Saints acquainted with the true state of affairs in that Territory. He was scathing in his denunciation of the Judges, Cradlebaugh and Sinclair. He wanted to see the true American whose bosom was animated with that love of freedom that glowed in the bosoms of Washington, Jefferson, Adams, Hancock and the long string of illustrious sires, who could calmly and deliberately regard the course of the Utah Judges, and bid them God speed. The patriots of American freedom were men who feared God and honored humanity, and would never have suffered men of the stamp of the Utah Judges to disgrace the bench. The speaker appealed to the feelings of the audience, and pictured before them the travels of the Mormons westward; their diligence and labors in cultivating that barren valley of the Great Salt Lake, their unceasing toil "to make the desert blossom like the rose," and "the solitary place to echo with the songs of rejoicing;" then, to see them treated as they had been by the parent government. He believed in the good intentions of the chief executive of the nation. He had been led into the Utah war by sutlers, contractors, perjured judges and apostates, but as soon as he had learned of the true state of affairs, through the Commissioners, he had striven to do the Mormons something like justice. The difficulty settled, and the army quartered at Camp Floyd, the new Judges, who were living the greater portion of their time with the army, had pledged themselves to the enemies of the Mormons to bring about a collision. He had documents in his hand which showed the course of those men, and had every particular respecting the present excitement, and he for one was satisfied that such men never would have been tolerated a week on any bench in New York city. It was a highly instructive lesson to the inhabitants of the Old World—the republic of the people more despotic than France or even Austria. The speaker went on in this style for some length of time, and wound up by bearing testimony that Mormonism still lived, and was bound to prosper and fulfill the purposes of the Lord, and no power could retard its progress—to which the disciples shouted amen.

Some of the brothers from the other States bore testimony to the speaker's statements being true, rejoiced in "the great work," and were full of hope of a change for the better in Utah. The last speaker devoted his time to instructions to the Saints about to emigrate, giving them the first lesson on leaving home. The congregation sang—

When shall we all meet again?
and prayer closed the last great meeting of the Saints.

THE EMIGRATION.

On Monday morning, while other citizens were traversing the streets with their household goods and gods, in the expectation of a change for the better from house to house, the Mormons were mingled up with the general hubbub, trudging through the crowd to the depot of the Great Western and Michigan Central Railroad. A few small parties had already taken up their line of march for the frontiers, principally, however, young, unencumbered men, who were employed as teamsters to take out the heavy "church" trains of machinery, merchandise, &c.; but the bulk of the emigration, the men and women of families, those going through with their own teams, did not start until Monday last.

Before the departure of the New World, on which they had taken passage to Albany, some hundreds of friends and strangers were around them, some apparently deeply interested, others "looking on." There were some very affecting scenes in parting. Parents who had rejoiced in the meetings at the prospect of their children going "to Zion" to "gather with God's people," found the parting bitter enough. A struggle with feelings, a momentary victory, a smile, blessing, and tears again. It was a strange sight. This singular people, at a time when the dark clouds of war threaten again the place of their rendezvous, leave their new homes with confidence and set out on a journey of some three thousand miles to a place necessarily destitute of nearly every comfort of life. Sympathizing friends who did not belong to their society, and who thought the religion a delusion, were not wanting in their efforts to dissuade them from taking so fearful and fanatical a step, representing to them the dangers that lay before them and the hardships and deprivation to which they would have to submit. But to all of which they replied, firmly and unhesitatingly, that they knew the course they were taking was right and approved by Heaven, and as for difficulties and hardships, they expected to have them to contend with, and with the union to their souls that "behind a frowning Providence he hides a smiling face," they gave the parting shake of the hand, and as the boat started they shouted, "Three cheers for Utah," in which the outside friends on the dock joined heartily.

From what we learned there were close on a hundred men and women in the company, with a goodly number of little responsibilities. They were from Massachusetts, Connecticut, this State and Long Island. A company from New Jersey had started some weeks before. The company on Monday was to be joined at Albany by another company from Boston, Salem, Lawrence and Lowell. The same day a company started from Philadelphia to meet them at Suspension Bridge. From there they would travel by rail to St. Joseph, thence up to Florence, Nebraska, their starting place. At Florence they would be fitted out for the Plains, start some time this month, and arrive, they hope, in Utah in August.

BY TELEGRAPH.

P. M. AND S. L. LINE.

PLACERVILLE, May 11, 1859, 9 o'clock, p. m.

The Southern Overland mail arrived at San Jose to-day, with dates from St. Louis to April 18th.

The renewed Fillibuster movement on Cuba is affirmed and believed by the Eastern press. Belief is based on the departure of certain vessels for that island with men and munitions of war, nothing confirmatory from Cuba yet.

There is a probability that the Nicaragua route will be opened, and kept so.

The P. O. Department is having blank forms printed to issue to contractors, to be filled as acknowledgments of indebtedness by the Department, and intended to prove as a basis for loans until Congress relieves the Department of its indebtedness.

The Nicaragua Senate has rejected the Belly contract.

CALIFORNIA.

Weather pleasant, and crops of all kinds in a flourishing condition. Mining is generally successful. New diggings have been discovered at "Brookliss Station," near the Genoa road, 20 miles east of Placerville, which promise well.

The banks of San Francisco and Sacramento have decided to receive foreign coins at only U. S. Mint valuation.

Mr. George F. Jones, of Placerville, has been appointed sole agent of the western end of the Central Overland Mail Route.

Mr. J. B. Crandall, a veteran stage man, has been appointed road agent of the western end of the road.

Five men are reported killed at Klamath Lake by Indians.

Three trains of emigrants, consisting of about thirty five persons in all, left Placerville via the Central Overland route for the Eastern States.

LATER.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12, 1859, 4 o'clock, p. m.

There is a great deal of debased coin in circulation here. Your business men would do well to look out for it. Our merchants have decided to take all foreign coins hereafter at their real value only. Fifteen thousand silver dollars were coined yesterday at the mint.

The Chamber of Commerce have elected Alfred Dibble President for the ensuing year.

There was a heavy frost in Alameda county yesterday, which is something remarkable at this season of the year.

The news from Japan informs us that the ambassadors appointed by the Emperor to visit Washington, will make this city their first point of debarcation on American soil.

YREKA, May 12, 1859.

The names of the five men reported yesterday as having been murdered by the Indians near Klamath Lake are as follows: Eli Ledford, Samuel Bobost, James Crow, S. F. Conger, and J. Brown.

PLACERVILLE, May 12, 1859, 5 o'clock p. m.

A train of 6 wagons, 23 men, several women and children, and a large number of animals passed through here to-day en route for the Eastern States. They were from Shasta Valley.

The Eastern mail from Salt Lake arrived at one o'clock this p. m.

It is reported that Capt. Pope is closing up his artesian well operations on the staked plains of New Mexico, and that he has never been able to raise water to within 180 feet of the surface. His apparatus is offered for sale at auction. This is the result of experiments conducted for five years for the Government at great expense, and with the determination to make it out, if possible, that the proposed Southern Pacific Rail Road on the 32d parallel is feasible. It is now evident that a road cannot be built on that route; and if we are to have the road at all, it must be upon some one of the northern routes.

A large meeting was held last night at the Lyceum, in San Francisco, to hear Congressman McKibben's record. He denied the report furtively circulated by office-holders here that Douglas had written to this State that he had made peace with the Administration. Mr. McKibben denied the fact and called upon them not to publish such letters. At the close, McKibben was immensely applauded.

The Bridge across the South fork of the American River, at Brookliss' Station, has been put under contract, and will be pushed forward to completion at an early day.

GREEN RIVER, May 23, 1859.

EDITOR VALLEY TAN:—

DEAR SIR—On the 20th inst., a difficulty occurred between Mr. Slade, (the agent for

J. M. Hockaday & Co.,) and some of the men in one of the trains belonging to that company. In the affray, one Andrew Ferrin, was killed. From the best information I can get Mr. Slade was justifiable in shooting him. The train was one that Mr. Slade brought out last fall as far as Laramie, and was fully authorized to take charge of it when it reached his division of the road; and on the day of the fatal accident, Mr. Slade meeting the train, found that some of the men had broken into boxes containing liquors, and having helped themselves abundantly, were prepared to resist anything.

Trains loaded with goods are passing here daily.

Yours, WM. ASHTON.

General Orders No. 9.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Washington, April 22, 1859.

At the General Court Martial which convened at Fort Randall, Nebraska Territory, pursuant to "Special Orders," No. 84, of Department of the West, and of which Brig. Major Henry W. Wessels, captain of Second Infantry is President, were assigned and tried First Lieutenant Caleb Smith, Second Infantry, on the following charge and specifications, viz:

CHARGE.
Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

Specification 1.—In this: That First Lieut. Caleb Smith, 2d Regiment of Infantry, while in temporary command of a battalion consisting of Companies A and H, 2d Infantry, and a detachment of recruits en route to Fort Randall, Nebraska Territory, did take or seize by the coat First Sergeant Daniel Sloane, of company H, 2d Infantry, and did push, strike, or shake the said Sergeant Sloane while on duty with his company, and while in execution of an order of his company commander Second Lieutenant William F. Lee, 2d Infantry, then and there present. This at a point in Minnesota Territory, near Bonhomme Island, Missouri river, on or about the twenty-first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

Specification 2.—In this: That First Lieut. Caleb Smith, 2d Regiment of Infantry, while in temporary command of a battalion consisting of companies A and H, 2d Infantry, and a detachment of recruits en route to Fort Randall, Nebraska Territory, did, in presence of his company take, or seize, by the coat Second Lieutenant W. F. Lee, 2d Infantry, while the said Lieut. Lee was on duty in command of company H, 2d Infantry, of said battalion, did endeavor by violence, to remove the aforesaid Lieutenant W. F. Lee, from his position, as commander of said company H. This at a point in Minnesota Territory, near Bonhomme Island, Missouri river, on or about the 21st July, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

Specification 3.—In this: That First Lieut. Caleb Smith, 2d Regiment of Infantry, while in temporary command of a battalion consisting of companies A and H, 2d Regiment of Infantry, and a detachment of recruits en route to Fort Randall, Nebraska Territory, did draw, produce, or display a pistol, and when asked by Second Lieutenant W. F. Lee, 2d Infantry, if said pistol was drawn upon him, did reply, "Yes," or words to that effect. This while the said Second Lieutenant W. F. Lee was on duty, in command of aforesaid company H, 2d Infantry. All this at a point in Minnesota Territory, near Bonhomme Island, Missouri river, on or about the twenty-first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

To which charge and specifications the accused pleaded, "Not Guilty."

FINDINGS AND SENTENCE OF THE COURT.

The Court, after mature deliberation upon the testimony adduced, finds the accused "Guilty" of the charge and specifications preferred against him, and does, therefore, sentence him, the said First Lieut. Caleb Smith, of the Second Regiment of Infantry, "To be dismissed the service."

In conformity with the 65th Article of War, the proceedings of the General Court Martial in the foregoing case have been transmitted to the Secretary of War, and by him laid before the President of the United States. The following are the orders thereon:

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 13, 1859.

The proceedings of the Court in the case of Lieut. Caleb Smith, having been submitted to the President, he has seen cause, while he confirms them, to remit the sentence. The reasons for this clemency have reference to the provocation of disrespect and insubordination which the prisoner yielded to; but they do not, in any manner, justify his resort to violent demonstrations to maintain an authority, exercised without discretion, when a dignity of command that might have been expected in the lowest grade of office was amply sufficient for the occasion. Lieutenant Smith retains his commission, and it will be well if the lesson he has received shall stimulate him to a more efficient and elevated practice of the authority which it confers.

JOHN B. FLOYD,

Secretary of War.

The General Court Martial of which Brig. Major H. W. Wessels is President, is hereby dissolved.

By order of the Secretary of War.

S. COOPER, Adj't Genl.

NOVEL MARRIAGE.—A Frenchman named Jean Gelot Hinatson, aged fifty years, and Frances Isemann, a native of Germany, aged fifty likewise, were yesterday joined in the holy bands of wedlock at the office of Justice Herckenrath. The beauty of the joke is that the old bachelor cannot speak a word of German, and the old maid cannot speak a word of French.

A RICH SCENE.—In the Canadian House of Assembly, last week, they had quite a spirited debate on the bill to prohibit the use of hoops and crinoline, introduced by Aiken. We publish a few of the most brilliant passages.

Mr. Drummond was an ardent admirer of hoops from his childhood. He was born with a love of hoops. When he was a child of tender growth, he used to trundle his hoop, all unconscious of the fate that was in store for him. Later in life he had swallowed a ring, which resulted in a hoop-in-cough; and even now the sight of an empty hog-head brought tears into his eyes.

Mr. Brown complained that it was impossible now to choose a wife, since her defects were so hid by hoops, and enveloped in crinoline, that the naked—

Speaker—order.

Mr. Brown—Mr. Speaker—

Speaker—The honorable gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Brown—But, Mr. Speaker, the naked—

Speaker—Hold your tongue sir.

Mr. Brown—The naked—

Speaker—Upon my soul, Mr. Brown, cork up, or I'll have you arrested.

Mr. Brown—Permit me to explain, Mr. Speaker.

Speaker—When I said naked—

Speaker—(yelling)—Clear the gallery of ladies, Mr. Sergeant.

Mr. Brown—In the name of the seventeen graces and the fifteen muses, Mr. Speaker—dearly beloved Smith—let me apologise, then. I only meant to say that hoops and crinoline had reached to such a rotundity, that it was impossible to arrive at the naked—

Speaker—(frantically)—Death and blue devils! Stop, or I'll brain you with the mace. Consider the impropriety of—

Mr. Brown—(wildly) Truth! truth! truth!—naked truth, was what I was going to say.

Mr. Dunbar Ross understood his honorable friend to say that people cannot pass along the streets without being assaulted by highwaymen. Now, surely the honorable member from Lake Ontario could not but be aware that the character of every member in the House was affected by such a dam—

Mr. Talbot objected to such unparliamentary language.

Mr. Ross protested against interruption. He was going to say by such a dam—

Mr. J. Cameron—The honorable member should not swear in that dreadful manner.

Mr. Ross—Wasn't doing anything of the kind; but would be tempted to do so, if not allowed to finish his sentence—but such a dam—(order, order) a dam—(confusion) he would repeat it—by such a dam—(tremendous uproar.)

Mr. Wright stood up and moved, amidst the wildest confusion, that Mr. Ross be expelled from the House for such awful language.

Mr. Ross (black in the face) exclaimed that damaging statements was all he meant to say when he was interrupted by the fool—

Mr. Talbot—Who's a fool?

Mr. Cameron—Who's an ass?

Mr. Ross (wildly)—Foolish assertion of profanity.

SCHOOL SCENE.—Green spectacle pedagogue, enthroned on a three-legged stool, with a sceptre of birch grasped, exclaims—

"Big boys, come up and parse. The pig squeaks. Now tell me, what is the?"

"The, sir, is a preposterous article."

"Why do you call it a preposterous article?"

"Because it stands before pig; I would not stand before one for a shilling."

"Next boy parse pig."

"Pig is a common noun."

"Why is it common?"

"Because it's so common that you can't see nothing else in the streets."

"What is squeaks?"

"A proper noun."

"Why is it proper, Ezekiel?"

"Because it makes a proper loud noise, and disturbs all the neighbors."

"That's O K. Now you can go and carry on with the girls."

Ike Partington took a notion lately to become a limb of the law. "Never Ike," said his mother, "I'd sooner see you gasping like a corpse on the mountains brow than have anybody say to me that my son was a Common Councilman."

Why is the letter F, like death? Because it makes "all," full.

ONLY ONE O'CLOCK.—Mr. Bowers coming home late one night from "meeting," was met at the door by his wife. "Pretty time of night, Mr. Bowers, for you to come home, pretty time, three o'clock in the morning; you are a respectable man in the community, and the father of a family."

"Tisn't three—it's only one, I heard it strike. Council always sits till one o'clock."

"My scull! Mr. Bowers, you're drunk—as true as I'm alive you're drunk. It's three in the morning."

"I say Mrs. Bowers, it's only one. I heard it strike one as I came 'round the corner, two or three times."

The lady who used such exertions to marry young Van Ness, during his incarceration in the Mohawk street Jail, notwithstanding the fact that her betrothed had just received a sentence of five years and upwards in the State Prison, followed him to Auburn, and, after repeated solicitations, was permitted to see, and embrace her affianced "lover." She declares she will wait until the five years are out, and marry her darling in spite of sheriffs and keepers. —N. Y. Tribune.

Punch truly says that in the shadow of a small waist may be seen a large doctor's bill and the outside of a coffin.

NEW GOODS JUST RECEIVED WILLIAM NIXON,

East Temple St., between the Deseret Reading Rooms and saloon and John Willis' Bakery.

HAS just received a choice lot of assorted Merchandise, to which he wishes to call the attention of his old friends and the public generally consisting in part of

TOBACCOS.
Lewis's No. 1 and 2, Grape Vine, Buffalo Chips, Comber in Chief, Strawberry, and other choice Brands.

GROCERIES.
Tea, Coffee, Sugar, Rice, Candy, Nutmegs, Liquors, Cigars, Boston Soap, Mustard, Pepper, Indigo, Cotton Yarn, Madder, All kinds of Spices.

With a choice lot of Fancy bottled and case fruits, oysters, sardines, lobsters, London gin and other liquors, yeast powder, soda, saleratus, cream of tartar, and other useful articles in that line. ALSO—Calicoes, de laines, bleached and brown linen sheeting, linen table covers, blue and brown drills, bed-tickings, alpacas, lawns, ginghams, laces, edgings, bonnet and taffeta ribbons, velvet trimmings, and a large variety of all kinds of small wares and notions.

Together with Mens and boys calf and kip boots and shoes; a choice lot of gent's gaiters, women and childrens calf, kip and fancy shoes, boots and gaiters; mens and boys hats and caps and

Ready Made Clothing.

WANTED.—wheat, flour, butter, eggs, and all other kinds of produce, in exchange for which the highest market price will be paid.

WANTED.—1000 to 5000 buck, antelope, mountain sheep and elk skins.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY.—Some good pine lumber, also 10,000 shaved shingles for which a good price will be paid if delivered soon.

W. Nixon, thankful for past favors will endeavor to merit a continuance of the same by selling good goods at fair prices for

READY PAY ONLY IN CASH OR PRODUCE.

He would also call the attention of Farmers residing South and in Cedar Valley, to his large and well assorted stock of General Merchandise at CAMP FLOYD, north side of the creek, where they can always depend upon finding a good variety of everything in his line, in exchange for Cash, Beef-Cattle, and every kind of Produce.

Information Wanted.

WILLIAM A. ADEN, who left St. Louis, Spring '87, and was last heard from in July of that year, in the South Pass, saying that he expected to spend the ensuing winter in Provo, and proceed to California in the spring of '88. Any information of his whereabouts, or probable fate will be thankfully received, and expense of the same paid by his brother, FELEN F. ADEN, at Tennent & Co's 101 Main street, St. Louis.

A Daguerreotype can be seen at the office of the "Valley Tan," in Salt Lake City. 28-1m

To the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

ON and after the 9th day of May, 1889, we the undersigned will commence a Daily line of stages from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m.

We have now four coaches of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore we feel warranted in saying that we can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

We will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at our new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.

Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

Our New Carriages and Buggies, now on the way from California, will be here in a few weeks, when we will be able to accommodate the public with the finest turn out in Utah Territory.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

We will run an Express, in connection with our stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received, or carried by us, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

All packages weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by our agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

WILLIAMS & JACKMAN,

Proprietors;

FRANK D. GILBERT,

Agent at Salt Lake City;

J. W. McFADDEN,

Agent at Camp Floyd.

NOTICE.

BE IT KNOWN TO ALL PERSONS that CHAS. S. L. CITY, a resident at Camp Floyd, sends forth on this 10th day of May, 1889, this challenge, to any person in the Territory of Utah, That 1400 will load and fire TWO SIX SHOOTERS, (Army or Navy size) on horseback, and at a gallop, in LESS TIME than any other man in Utah.

The revolvers to be loaded with cartridges, similar to those used by U. S. Dragoons.

On this I am willing and ready at any time to stake any sum of money from $50 00 to $200 00.

For further information, apply at Messrs. Livingston, Kinkaid, & Co., Camp Floyd.

28-4t

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!!

PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1889.

ALEX. LEITCH,

MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE

STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS,

PURE RE-AGENTS, and

PHARMACEUTICAL

PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,

selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,

including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES,

ELEGANT EXTRACTS,

POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for

Congress and other Mineral Waters,

of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE

PLAINS.

28-4t

Pike's Peak! Pike's Peak!!

PERSONS about to emigrate to the gold mines, or to the States, are hereby informed that they can purchase good horses or mules at reasonable prices, from Charles Mogo, at the Hot Springs Brewery—point of Mountain south of G. S. L. City.

28-4t

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS.

BY THE PRICE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCABILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this point.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting

Bleached do

Brown do

Hickory stripes

Plaid linsey woolsey

Kentucky jeans

Bed ticking

Delaines & cashmeres

Linen diapers & towels

" napkins

" table cloths

Crash, Towing and

doylies

Ginghams and lawns

White linen bosom shirts

Colored calico

Grey flannel

Red do

Blue do

Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

BK and fancy dress Embroidered Selfs

Plain all wool delaines

Fancy do

Alexander's kid gloves

Bay state long shawls

Stella and merino do

Delaines in dress

patterns

White cambric muslin

Jackonets

Swiss

Mull and Namsoks

Plaid jaconet muslins

Silk and cashmere gloves

Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and bareges

Plain colored silk ribbons

Bonnet

Velvet

Combs brushes and

cutlery

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufacturers styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCABILL & CO.,

Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsteds Company's Goods.

28-4t

LAW NOTICE.

ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business entrusted to him.

Office with Dr. Farnham, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City.

17-4t

LAGER BEER.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

K. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, we have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1 00

Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2 00

For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50

" " " hay and grain, " 1 00

and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.

MOGO, BURR & CO.

Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

28-4t

The Farnham House Reopened.

ELIJAH ABLE has rented the premises favorably known as the "Farnham House," 24 South street, 12th Ward, about three blocks east of Radford, Cabot & Co.'s Store, where he designs keeping a First Class and solicits the patronage of the public.

BOARDING HOUSE,

TERMS:

Board and Lodging, per week, $11 00

" " " without Lodging, " 9 00

" " " per day, " 2 00

" " " meal, " 75

Supper, Lodging and Breakfast, " 1 50

Good oil and candles on the premises.

Paym at required in advance.

28-2m

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1859.

NUMBER 32.

MIDGES.

BY OWEN MERRITH.

She is talking æsthetics, the dear clever creature! Upon Man, and his functions, she speaks with a smile. Her ideas are divine upon Art, upon Nature, The Sublime, the Heroic, and Mr. Carlyle.

No more am I found worthy to join in the talk, now; So I follow with my surreptitious cigar; While she leads our poetical friend up the walk, now, Who quotes Wordsworth and praises her "Thoughts on a star."

Meanwhile, there is dancing in yonder green bower, A swarm of young midges. They dance high and low. 'Tis a sweet little species that lives but one hour, And the eldest was born half an hour ago.

One impulsive young midge I hear ardently pouring, In the ears of a shy little wanton in gauze, His eternal devotion; his ceaseless adoring, Which shall last till the Universe breaks from its laws.

His passion is not, he declares, the mere fever Of a rapturous moment. It knows no control: It will burn in his breast through existence forever, Immutably fixed in the depths of the soul.

She wavers: she flutters—male midges are fickle: Dare she trust him her future?—she asks with a sigh: He implores—and a tear is beginning to trickle: She is weak; they embrace, and—the love is pass by.

While they pass me, down here on a rose-leaf has lighted A pale midge, his feelers all drooping and torn; His existence is withered; its future is blighted; His hopes are betrayed; and his breast is forlorn.

"By the midge his heart trusted, his heart is deceived now; In the virtue of midges no more he believes; From love in its falsehood, once wildly believed, now He will bury his desolate life in the leaves.

His friends would console him—the noblest and sagest Of midges have held that a midge lives again; In Eternity, say they, the strife, thou now warest With sorrow, shall cease—but their words are in vain!

Can Eternity bring back the seconds now wasted In hopeless desire? or restore to his breast The belief he has lost, with the bliss he once tasted, Embracing the midge that his being loved best?

His friends would console him—life yet is before him; Many hundred long seconds he still has to live; In the state yet a mighty career spreads before him; Let him seek in the great world of action to strive!

There is Fame! there's Ambition! and, grander than either, There is Freedom!—the progress and march of the race!— But to Freedom his breast beats no longer, and neither Ambition nor action her loss can replace.

If the time had been spent in acquiring æsthetics I have wandered in learning this language of midges, There might, for my friend in her peripatetics, Have been now two asses to help o'er the bridges.

As it is,—I'll report her the whole conversation, It would have been longer; but, somehow or other, (In the midst of that misanthrope's long lamentation,) A midge in my right eye became a young mother.

Since my friend is so clever, I'll ask her to tell me Why the least living thing (a mere midge in the egg!) Can make a man's tears flow, as now it be-tell me—

O you dear clever woman, explain it, I beg!

FROM EUROPE.

The arrival of various steamers, the last of which was the Canada from Liverpool on the 7th instant, has put us in possession of intelligence from the seat of war in Italy to the 6th instant. Up to that time, no battle had taken place, though there is a rumor of an unimportant engagement at the bridge-head of Buffalora, which the Austrians are said to have carried by the bayonet; a small engagement is also reported at Trassana to, where the Austrians were repulsed in an attempt to cross the Po. The movements of the Austrians are certainly more dilatory than was to have been expected. It seems that they did not enter Sardinia until the 29th ult., although the reply of the Piedmontese Government to their ultimatum was received by Count Gyulai on the evening of the 28th. Here was a loss of two days, and for what reason does not appear. And then after being seven days on Sardinian soil, they had only advanced thirty-five miles. The delay in the attack upon the Piedmontese forces is attributed to the fact that the roads on the Austrian line of march have been broken up and the bridges destroyed, but this does not fully account for it.

With regard to the alleged alliance between France and Russia, the British Government have received assurances that nothing of the sort has been negotiated, and both Mr. Disraeli and Sir John Pakington, in speeches at the hustings, have positively declared that there is no title of truth in the report. All that has been done, says Mr. Disraeli, is that Russia has agreed, in case of a war, to place an army of observation on the Prussian frontier; and this, he says, is no more than England is going to do in sending a fleet into the Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, all Italy is in a ferment. The Government of Tuscany is carried on by a Piedmontese Commissioner, who will be aided by the subordinate local authorities. The Grand Duchess of Parma has imitated the example of the Tuscan Grand-Duke, and her dominions are also, for the present, similarly attached to Piedmont. The King of Naples is not dead yet, but when he departs we shall no doubt see there a popular rising in behalf of Prince Murat. On the other hand, we hear that the Prussian army is to be completely mobilized, which looks like anything but German neutrality. The question is now not so much what Powers will be in the war, as what Powers will be able to keep out.

From France we have Napoleon's formal declaration of war, in which he announces his intention to place himself at the head of the army. The object of the war, he says, is "to restore Italy to herself, not to impose on her a change of masters; not to foment disorder, nor to disturb the power of the Holy Father."—N. Y. Weekly Tribune.

(Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.)

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1859.

There seems to be no portion of the real operations of the General Government so little understood and appreciated, as those appertaining to the Topographical Bureau of the War Department—now under the charge and supervision of Col. John J. Abert and Capt. Andrew A. Humphreys. It is under the direction of this office that all the important surveys and explorations of our vast Western Territories have been made—ascertaining not only the character of the numerous rivers in reference to navigation, but also furnishing the topography of the country through which they flow, together with a vast amount of scientific information covering meteorology, mineralogy and natural history. The late brilliant and successful expedition of Lieut. Ives up the Colorado of the West, and thence homeward across the interior of the country, has been productive of great public good, and has won for that gallant young officer, a proud name in the service of his country.

I am informed at the Topographical Bureau, that at this time they have no exploring parties in the field, but will shortly have two. The first is designed for the survey and exploration of the San Juan river of New Mexico, and to discover, if possible, a route between Santa Fe and Utah, in the vicinity of San Juan. The following will be the personnel of the expedition.

Capt. J. N. Macomb, Topographical Engineers, Chief.

Dr. J. S. Newberry (Geologist to the Colorado Expedition under Lieut. Ives), Physician and Geologist.

Charles H. Dimmock, of Baltimore, Topographer.

Louis Dorsey, of Washington, Francis P. Fisher, of New York, James A. Vail, of Virginia, Assistants.

This party will rendezvous at Independence on the 16th inst., and start immediately for Santa Fe to join Capt. Macomb, who is now the Topographical officer for the Department of New Mexico. It is anticipated the expedition will complete its labors and return by the 1st of December next.

The operations of the second party will be more extensive—including a survey and exploration of the Yellowstone and Missouri rivers, in continuation of the labors of the late Expedition under Lieut. Warren, and requiring about eighteen months to complete the contemplated work. This party will consist of:

Capt. W. F. Reynolds, Topographical Engineers, Chief.

Lieut. H. E. Maynadier, (5th Infantry) Assistant Topographical Engineer.

A. V. Hayden, (late of Lieut. Warren's Expedition) Naturalist.

J. H. Snowden, Jas. D. Hutton, Topographers.

Henry C. Fillebrown, Antone Schomborn, Meteorologists.

These gentlemen will be accompanied by a military escort of thirty men, and they are now under orders and will soon be in the field at work.

FRIGHTFUL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Heroism of a Brakeman.—On Thursday morning last, as the mail train on the Terre Haute and Alton Railroad was coming westward, about eighteen miles this side of Terre Haute, the engineer of the train on the look out ahead, suddenly discovered that a large culvert, which the cars were rapidly approaching, had been badly washed away by the hard rains and floods of the preceding night. He immediately reversed the engine, and with the conductor, baggage-man, fireman, and several brakemen, jumped from the train for safety. The passengers, numbering about sixty, knew nothing of the impending danger, and remained in their seats. But there was one hero on the train in the person of the brakeman of the hindmost car. Though warned like the others, he stood manfully to his post, and with superhuman strength, tightened the brake with such force upon the wheels of his car, as to cause their revolution to cease altogether. This clog upon the train, acting in concert with the reversed motion of the engine, brought the passenger cars to a stand still, just on the brink of a frightful precipice into which had tumbled the locomotive and tender. Had the cars gone down, the loss of life would have been appalling. The brakeman's name we could not learn. He was overwhelmed with the gratitude of the passengers, whose lives he had saved, and we understand is about to receive some handsome reward from the Railroad for his noble and heroic conduct.—St. Louis Democrat.

DISCONTINUANCE OF MAIL ROUTES.

—Washington, May 22, 1859.—The territorial routes between Neosho, Mo. and Albuquerque, in New Mexico, and between Kansas, Mo. and Stockton, in California, which were let by contract last year, have been discontinued, to take effect from the 1st of July next. The failure of Congress to make the usual appropriations for the Post Office Department, the interruptions of the mails, mostly from the presence of hostile Indians along the lines, and the consequent reduction of mail matter to a comparatively insignificant amount, are the reasons alleged for the discontinuance of this overland service.

THE MISSISSIPPI.—This stream is getting much too big for its banks, and matters on the levee begin to look somewhat as though we were threatened with another flood. Many cellars on Front street are already filled with water, and the merchants have taken the precaution to remove their goods above the first floors. The railroad tracks on the other side are in danger of being submerged, and the whole American Bottom inundated. The tributary streams above are full, and are sending vast volumes of water into the Mississippi hourly. The river here was still rising last evening.—Mo. Rep. May 20.

LYNCH LAW IN THE GOLD MINES.—Judge Lynch, it appears, rules at Pike's Peak. A correspondent of the Leavenworth Times, writing from Denver City, says that a German named John Stuffle was hung on the 8th of April for the murder of his father-in-law, Antoine Beingraff. It is supposed that Stuffle and Philip Beingraff, son of the old man, murdered the father for his money. Stuffle was tried, being prosecuted by Henry Allen, Esq., and defended by Gen. Larimer, found guilty, allowed half an hour to prepare for death, then placed standing in a wagon, under a tree to which the rope was attached, and the wagon driven from beneath him. Stuffle made a speech full of raving and blasphemy. It was thought that Beingraff would be hung the next day. The family had emigrated from Louisville, Ky.

MORE NATIONAL DEBT FOR ENGLAND.—It has been stated that the expense of the nearly extinguished Indian insurrection would be about £23,000,000 sterling to the British-Indian Government. We now learn, from official sources, that the British Government expenditure for the Russian war, including the Sardinian loan, which is guaranteed by the British Government, may be set down at $70,849,859.—National Intelligencer.

CALIFORNIA AND UTAH CAMEL ASSOCIATION.—John E. Ager, E. G. Bryant, J. J. Cooper, Q. A. Clements, Wm. R. Tennent, C. L. Sholes, James Kane, Samuel W. Langton and E. M. Gates filed, yesterday, in the office of the Secretary of State a certificate of their association under the above name, the object being the introduction and employment of the camel on the Pacific coast. The capital stock is $12,000, in shares of $100 each—the duration of the company to be twenty years. The trustees of the company are John E. Ager, E. G. Bryant and John J. Cooper. The principal office will be at Downieville, Sierra county. It is to be hoped that the enterprise will prove successful.—Sac. Union.

NEW ORLEANS, May 17.—Accounts from Austin, Texas, state that Capt. Bayler, with fifty men, had killed fifteen Indians, and then fled. A party of dragoons and Indians were pursuing them. There was a great excitement among the Indians on the Lower Reserve, and they had left their farms for Capt. Ross' encampment.

CAUTION TO SORGO GROWERS.—The Independence (Iowa) Guardian gives an account of the destruction of seven head of cattle, belonging to J. G. Freeman, from eating the refuse of Chinese Sugar Cane, after it had been compressed in the mill. The outer coating of the stalks are of a very vitærous character; when thus broken up and taken into the stomach, it operates like broken glass, cutting, and in some cases penetrating through the coats of that organ, producing violent inflammation. A post-mortem examination in this case revealed this as the cause of death. This important fact should be known to every farmer, as it may be the means of preventing a serious destruction of their stock. Besides this danger, there is nothing to be gained by feeding the bagasso. Even that of the tropical cane is considered quite worthless for everything but fuel.—New York Tribune.

ELEPHANTS BATHING.—Beyond the dhoby, in cleaner water by comparison, a bevy of elephants are enjoying their morning bath. And they do enjoy it indeed! See how they roll away like so many porpoises, right under the flood, and leave the mahouts shouting and grouping with their feet, for the unstable black islands which after a time rise up above the surface. Look at the great jets they blow up over their backs, and listen to the deep breath of pleasure or the shrill flourish of delight with which they lie down on the sand, while their attendants knead them all over. The great creatures are so sagacious, so sensitive to kindness, that even in their wild state I cannot feel any sympathy for those who delight in killing them and call it "sport." But these elephants, fond as I am of them, are, it must be admitted, dangerous playmates. In our camp there were no less than nine "koonies," or "murderers"—beasts which have killed their mahouts, or other attendants. One huge criminal, with a speckled forehead and proboscis, is guilty of the murder of no less than three unfortunate natives. The magnificent mild monster, which belonged to Sir Hugh Wheeler, was carried off by the Nana, and was delivered up to us by the Rajah of Furruckabad, died a few days ago, immediately after carrying some officers to church. He was a fine courageous creature, and his trunk and forehead bore marks of the claws of more than one tiger which had charged him and then been trampled to pulp by his ponderous feet. His "weakness" was fine French rolls, which he swallowed as an alderman would take Cockle's pills; and the twinkle of his eye, as he gulped the loaf down, and gave a gentle sigh out of his proboscis, proclaimed the Sybarite. I used to take great delectation in observing the creatures at the bath in the river which flows by our camp. They came down in file, tramping gaily in anticipations of the treat, and floundering into the waters of the Goomtee, like so many portly "Bruxelers" enjoying the pea-soup of Ostend. Each takes a long, deep drink, putting his proboscis into the water, and then discharging the contents of it, when filled by suction, into his cavernous maw. Having thus filled up a wrinkle or two in his side, he deposits himself bodily in the stream, so that one side lies out of the water and the tip of his proboscis is kept above the surface for the air. On this exposed island the mahouts labor diligently, washing the beast and rubbing him with hard brushes, cleaning his ears, kneading and shampooing him, while the pachyderm emits little squeaks of satisfaction. When one side is done, the elephant turns on the other, and he is very angry indeed if he does not get his full share of manipulation.

[William Russell.]

AN AGED WARRIOR.—Old Tarmah-hah (one eye), the well known Indian chief and warrior, was in Wabashaw, Minn., last week. He is supposed to have been born about the year 1755, according to the Wabashaw Herald, which would make him 104 years of age. He was a chief, says that paper, of one of Red Wing's bands of Sioux, and in the war of 1812 fought nobly and gallantly with the Americans against the British. He was also on the side of the Americans in the Black Hawk war, and has rendered the whites valuable services at other times. The Herald gives a copy of the commission given him by Gov. Clark, of Missouri, in 1816. Old Tarmahhah takes great pride in showing this commission, and also demands a cushpop for a sight of it. The marks of extreme old age are visible in his countenance. He is childish and imbecile, and is but a wreck of the once mighty warrior.

Taylor, of New York, who bought brass filings for $3,000, under the impression that it was stolen gold dust, and then commenced suit against the swindlers, has been turned out of court on the ground that contemplating dishonesty himself he had no right to ask the protection of the court.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, June 22, 1859.

With this number Mr. Thomas Adams takes control of "The Valley Tan." It will be under his sole direction. I have full confidence that he will conduct it with ability, and independently. How far he will use the pen will soon be seen, I hope always where it belongs.

JOHN HARTNETT.

Having arrived here recently, and finding the Editor of the Valley Tan, Kirk Anderson, Esq., on the eve of departing for the States, we have been induced by the solicitations of friends to take charge of the paper, for a season, believing that a journal ought to be published here independent of the influences, of necessity, existing in a community who recognize one man as the exponent of their views, and whose word is law in regard to their acts, and who have a paper issued here devoted to their interests, in order that both sides of the questions arising (it being a general rule that there are two sides to all questions) should be placed fully before the public, who take a deep interest in the affairs transpiring in this Territory, and who ought not to be misled by misrepresentations or garbled statements of occurrences by prejudiced correspondents.

We shall endeavor to give the current news of the day, making extracts from our exchanges for the purpose of letting our readers see the drift of public opinion in the States, making such comments on these as may seem proper, and expressing our opinion in regard to anything brought under our notice here, nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice, upholding what we may deem right, and denouncing all schemes or acts militating against the laws of our country and humanity.

Owing to the limited time allowed, we are not able to express ourselves as fully as we would wish; but trust that the main object will be understood as well as though folios were written; that is, to have an opposition paper.

Personal.

The Rev. Mr. Vaux, Chaplain at Fort Laramie, arrived here last Saturday, and will sojourn with us some days, when he will proceed to Camp Floyd to make a pair kappi.

The reverend gentleman, at the request of some friends, delivered a sermon in the Tabernacle, which building had been tendered him by Ex-Gov. Young. This was probably the first sermon ever, to our knowledge, delivered in Salt Lake outside of the Mormon faith, and it was ably delivered and reflected much credit on the author.

A. Humphreys, Esq., of Indiana, who has been lately appointed Indian Agent for Utah; Mr. Fitzhugh, sutler at Fort Laramie; Chief Justice Eckles, Capt. Radford, and Dr. Bryner, are among the latest arrivals here. Nothing yet has been seen of Horde Greely, who report says is on the way to this place. The last heard of him was that he was some where in Kansas preaching Black Republicanism. He need not come out here for a like purpose, for there are only about a dozen here; and at the rate that darkies have been killing one another, it will be but a short time till all are exterminated.

The Legislature of California has passed a bill cutting off six large counties from the southern part of that State to be erected into a new territory, to be named the Territory of the Colorado. The subject met very little, if any, opposition or discussion.

The Eastern Mail arrived here on Monday morning, one day in advance of schedule time, with the latest dates from the States. The news is important, and we extract as much as our columns will admit of, which we submit to our readers.

Attention is called to the advertisements of Col. Crossman, Q. M., and Capt. Turnley, A. Q. M., and which appear in this issue; as also to that of Mr. B. J. Perkins, who will act as auctioneer for all parties requiring his services.

A difficulty occurred May 18th, at the Marysville Ferry on the Big Blue, between the ferryman and some returning gold hunters, in which two of the emigrants were killed, and one severely wounded.

We take this item from the "Western Metropolitan," Kansas City, of May 21:

"A letter from Camp Floyd states that quite a number of United States soldiers have joined the Mormon church for the sake of Mormon crinoline."

The Territorial Enterprise places Dr. Forney, Sup't Indian Affairs, in a new firm, styled "Brigham Young, Forney & Co." We were not before advised of this, though we frequently come across the Dr., nor are we advised as to who constitute the other portion of the company. Our friends in Carson Valley obtain news in advance of time, and it must be by revelation.

We extract the following from a letter written by Mr. G. O. Chase to Kirk Anderson, Esq., dated Atchison, May 17, 1859:

"Horace Greely arrived here on Sunday last, and left on Monday morning with his friends, for Oasawatimie, to attend the Republican Convention to be held there to-day. On Monday next he will leave this city for Salt Lake.

There was a frightful hurricane on the prairies west of here on Sunday morning last. A dozen or more wagons in the Salt Lake train were blown over, one man was killed, and several were severely injured."

We insert the following extracts from the correspondence from G. S. L. City to the N. Y. Weekly Herald (date of April 23), merely to show what different views of the same affairs are taken by different persons, and what difficulty the people of the States labor under in coming to a right conclusion, having two such statements before them, from the same place and under the same date.

Having been absent at the time of the occurrences noticed, and having heard more over that action has been had and a decision announced by the Cabinet at Washington in regard to the principal cause of disagreement, we feel disinclined to make any comments.

In regard, however, to a paragraph italicized, that Gov. Cumming "notified Genl. D. B. Wells to hold the militia in readiness to act on orders;" and that, "By two o'clock on Monday morning five thousand men were under arms;" we must say that it is news to us here, on the spot, and we do not believe that there was even the slightest foundation given for such a piece of bogus news.

On the other hand, however, we have been well informed of an act which, if it had been previously performed, would have given some ground for the above accusation: we allude to a demonstration made by some Mormons, headed by D. H. Wells last week.

It appears that Capt. Anderson, 2nd Dragoons, on his route to Camp Floyd, camped in what he supposed to be an abandoned field, was denied the right to remain, and required to move "late in the evening."

The Capt. considered that his camp was being disturbed by the person claiming ownership, and therefore ordered his immediate arrest.

Requests were soon made to His Excellency Gov. Cumming, and to Judge Sinclair by the friends of the person arrested, and the Judge promptly responded to what he considered right in the premises, and placed in the hands of U. S. Marshal Dotson a proper writ for the release of the party imprisoned, and the Marshal executed the writ without difficulty; but before this was perfected, a number of persons were seen on horseback, some armed, moving to and fro, from the Secretary's Office, where the papers were being executed, evidently showing a threatening aspect.

They stated to Mr. Hartnett "that they were determined to see the prisoner released," inferring a resort to force if necessary. Mr. H. desired that they would not assemble at the door of his office, and were likewise requested, and finally ordered off by the Governor: his orders were complied with.

This was a movement on the part of Gen. Wells, assembling an armed "posse," before it was discovered to be necessary by the proper authorities, which cannot be approved of, and should be reprehended before it becomes an established precedent.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., April 23rd 1859.

In my last letter I informed you of the threat of Judge Sinclair that he would hold court in this city during May, with three-fourths of the army now at Camp Floyd quartered in Union square, ready to carry out his orders. The apprehension of a collision which that threat inspired measurably died away in the bosoms of the people generally, and the youthful Judge was beginning to get credit for idle bragadocio, and his tongue was regarded as having only divulged what was in his heart to do, if he only could get the chance; but alas! the day after the departure of the last mail from here, rumors of his intentions were in circulation at Camp Floyd, which leaves us no reason to doubt that his threat was no idle boast but is in reality the fixed determination of his heart, to lead to a collision between the citizens and troops. Of this Governor Cumming is apparently fully convinced, as also the other officials outside of the judicial clique. By the departure of the next mail plans will be better developed, if not even then carried into execution, or at least attempted; and should you then hear of the eagerly sought for collision having taken place, it can be witnessed that we have not sought it, but that it is the deep laid scheme of sultans, degraded judges and disappointed officers of our great republican army, for the sake of perishable gold, gratification of personal revenge, and the empty glory for swords to be crimsoned with the blood of fellow citizens, who so love the liberty bequeathed to them by illustrious sires that they will fight for its maintenance, though their homes should be made desolate and their wives and children left without protectors in the land of freemen's inheritance.

An express from Camp Floyd arrived here on Sunday night with the intelligence that two regiments were coming to the city to make arrests, and it was expected that they would have orders for forced marches, to come in upon us unawares. Immediately on Gov. Cumming being made acquainted with the report and circumstances, which leave no room to doubt of the plans of the Judges, he notified Gen. D. B. Wells to hold the militia in readiness to act on orders. By two o'clock on Monday morning five thousand men were under arms. Had the United States troops attempted to enter the city the struggle must have commenced, for the Governor is determined to carry out his instructions. What has deferred their arrival here we know not; but now that this plan is known, a watchful eye is kept on the camp, and the shedding of blood seems inevitable. We have confidence in the overruling care of our Heavenly Father, and whatever does take place it will eventually turn out for good.

Major — told me yesterday that General Johnston was resolved to carry out his orders, and he affirms that they are to use the military on the requisition of the Judges, and not on the requisition of the Governor only. I have just learned that five hundred soldiers were on the march to San Pete settlement to arrest persons there whom the Judges are seeking after. The judicial military inquisitorial farce played at Provo satisfied everybody that it is not violated justice that seeks redress, but the madness of men drunken with whisky and vengeance, that seek safety in blood. There is not an official in any settlement outside of this city but what expects to be handed as were those at Provo, and the only safety they have from judicial vengeance—not personal, but vengeance against the community—is in flight to the mountains. In the south, where weather has been excellent for early agricultural operations this spring, the fields have been left uncultivated, and the seed that should be fructifying in the soil is still lying in the barn—the end of which must be famine—for unless the Governor has power to restrain the judges from calling the military to act as a posse comitatus, no man of any influence will trust himself at home. We fear no judge of the United States. The Supreme Judge of all we fear, and in His fear we live, and earthly tribunals have no terror for us; but the insolence of men like Cradlebaugh and Sinclair, and the despotism of their military aids, drive the iron to our souls. The very latest news now in circulation in the city is that the judges have hired the Indians to scout the mountains in search of the persons that the Marshal and military have been unable to discover at home. What next? Shall a price be offered the red men of the forest for the scalps of our citizens? Oh, my God! what shall we be driven to? My heart sickens at the outrages to which we have been subjected, and I dread the future. Nothing shall be done on our part to hasten hostilities; but if impossible to avoid them, the responsibility is theirs.

Governor Cumming has no disposition, nor has this community any, to screen any man or men from the punishment due any crime or misdemeanor they may be accused of; but he will not suffer military terrorism to reign in the territory over which he is Governor, and we are to a man ready to sustain him. We appeal to the American nation, and ask any man whose soul is not absorbed with the acquisition of perishable pelf only, what can we do more than we have done to preserve peace, and what course is open to us but to defend our rights as citizens of the Union? Our religious faith has nothing to do with the matters now in question that is our own. We force none to accept it, and we know that the faith of no man is at his own disposal. We are what we are, and so are all others what they are, and circumstances made them so. Our present difficulties are worthy of the attention of every man who loves his country and the glorious constitution bequeathed to us by honorable, honest and just men. Are we to be incessantly bored to death with such men representing the parent government? The subjects of despotic Russia are freer men and women than we are. We live in terror, and know not what a day may bring forth. Whoever is free to-day cannot boast of enjoying liberty on the morrow. An apostate, to satiate his spleen for some private or family grievance, denounces somebody, or at least darkly hints that this man or the other has done something, and that another man may possibly know something against him; that little has been sufficient, time and again, to cause both the accused and the hoped-for witness to be arrested and kept in the military jail. The Governor says that the military jail is illegal. He has not been inquired of for a posse comitatus of the citizens of the country, as the spirit of the law and its own term signifies, but those honorable high minded, virtuous judges leap that which should be a barrier to their wanton outrages, and call for bayonets and the attendance at court at the beat of the drum.

Allowing that somebody has blundered in not rescinding the authority of General Harney, in 1857, on which General Johnston now acts in 1859—is the fact less certain that the men who should dispense justice, and who should treat their fellow citizens as equals, are burning with zeal to do wrong? What possible respect can this community entertain for men who take refuge for their wickedness in the plunder of another associate for the government of the nation? Instead of laboring with the civil government to remove causes of complaint from those who have regarded themselves as oppressed and unjustly dealt with in the past, they treat the chief executive with contempt, and burn with zeal to distinguish their reign of terror by consigning to the gallows some victim of their hate.

Everything that they could possibly do to make themselves hated they have done, and for the consequences of their acts the government who sent them is responsible. If they are not removed trouble must come; for the personal contempt which they have managed to create against themselves is sure to end in some conjured up contempt of court, apprehensions of somebody, and the train of circumstances which freemen, conscious of their integrity, are not likely to submit to.

HOW GOVERNOR CUMMING IS REGARDED—THE JUDGE SUSPECTED OF SCHEMING MISCHIEF. (Extract of a private letter.)

G. S. L. CITY, April 16, 1859.

The court was adjourned sine die on the 4th inst., and the Judge's remarks at the time of adjournment were replete with rancor, illegal and unwarrantable accusations, and evident disappointment in not being able to criminate Brigham Young. He left no means untried to get cause against the President. He could not disguise his anxiety and determination to arrest him; but innocence and truth in that respect have triumphed as yet although efforts were made to implicate some eminent ecclesiastical officials. The Judge is at Camp Floyd; what he is doing I am not aware. He is, however, concocting some mischief upon the inhabitants of this Territory. What that mischief is we cannot tell, but we feel confident that all attempts to trample on our rights and to injure the innocent will fall on himself. Although the court is adjourned, and no business was on hand to warrant him to continue it, yet his deputy marshals are prowling about the country, like the "seeking whom they may devour." On Wednesday night, the 6th inst., they went into Springville, expecting to arrest several persons. But when men see the very constitution disrespected by loyal officers, every mean and illegal measure entered into to rob them of their liberty, and witnesses arrested to deprive the accused of testimony in his favor, they are careful not to place themselves in the tender mercies of the wicked.

We fully expect the Judge has retired to camp to consult with others to prepare a reply to the Governor's proclamation. The Judge, army officers generally, and sutlers are much displeased with the Governor's straightforward and honorable course. Indeed it was currently reported that they threatened to arrest the Governor if he was not careful; but I think that were such a thing attempted (though it is scarcely possible to conceive such a measure), the whole army would fail to succeed, for the people are loyal enough to sustain the executive, and would, I think, resist. Gov. Cumming's course is straightforward, manly and patriotic. He is rather in a peculiar position. On the one hand the Mormons look to him to sustain them and defend them from the inroads of judicial prejudice, and he is willing to do his duty to them and "defend the right;" and on the other hand the interested itinerant settlers, denigrating themselves Gentiles, want him to "pitch into" the Mormons, and feel very angry when he thwarts their nefarious designs. Nevertheless, he neither courts the Mormons' favor, nor dreads the scowl of their enemies. He takes his own course, and seeks in making it to promote the wishes of the administration at Washington.

The Judge Strong on Hanging.

The affidavit of Aurelius Miner, counselor at law, sworn to before Justice Smith, April 4, 1859, attests that he heard Judge Cradlebaugh, in a public sitting room at Provo, say "that he would hang Kanosh if he could, without judge or jury, and that he would hang him whether he was guilty as one of the perpetrators of the Mountain Meadow massacre or not." And in speaking of the Mormons accused of participating in the same affair, he further said, "if he could get one of them convicted he would hang him so quickly that he could not possibly have time to procure a pardon from the Governor, unless the pardon was made out in advance."

The catalogue of crime in Utah is still on the increase. The confession of Durfee, one of the prisoners secured under Judge Cradlebaugh's efficient exertions, discloses new features and participants, lifting the veil from off the "holy of holies" till we see blood upon the would be pure fountain that would send forth pure waters of itself impure; the Trinity of Zion concealing doctrine, "strong doctrine," and issuing orders that when carried out produce death. Verily, of such is not, cannot be the kingdom of God, but rather that of the devil.

Last week a youth, tired and travel worn, trembling with fear and hoping for favor, entered the lines of the camp and sought the proper officers and prayed protection, stating that he had fled from Tooele valley, whither he had been restrained for months past, under threats of death if he left or revealed the murders of his father or brother, to him so well and sadly known. Encouraged by the decided stand of the United States Judges for right, and their late efforts to bring criminals to justice, he made good his escape, and arrived in Camp Floyd to tell his painful tale and seek redress. A posse was despatched to find the remains of his relatives and their slayers, and in corroboration of his story they found the bones of father and brother where he directed, and secured the murderers or a portion of them. Thus each week, yea almost each day, brings to light some new and damnable feature of this despotic fanaticism. We might cite other instances, which we have from those who know them, but dare not at present, lest the ends of just exposition (for we despair of just punishment) be frustrated. Parties who have suffered and have sorrowed under this yoke are flocking to the military and judicial authorities to disclose their wrongs and seek protection and redress. Yet the church organ pretends ignorance of these outrages, proclaims peace and prosperity, loyalty and good will to men, questions the actions of the officials, casts inuendoes upon the Gentile sojourners, accuses correspondents of falsehood and misrepresentation, and, as is meet for such a tool and instrument, accuses the testimony in the late investigations of subornation, the disclosures of being hatched up by unjust Judges and by "contractors" for the purpose of speculation and the detention of the army here, to the annoyance of quiet, peaceable and loyal citizens, and issues its stereotyped cry of "religious persecution." But we suppose the editor imbibes the "strong doctrine" in such large draughts, that he considers the bloody, murderous, soul-thrilling facts which stare the whole church and Territory, and must look the whole nation and the world in the face, as mere sacrifices to appease an offended deity. If such a palliative, such barbarous superstition, consoles his hardened heart and heated imagination, with those of his co-peers in crime and fanaticism, are they sufficient to palsify the strong arm of the law? to defeat the ends and arms of justice? to screen a horde of murderer under the plea of "religious tolerance," and thus prostitute that sacred instrument, the constitution? Or should it suffice to gull our administration and rulers, to lull a christian nation into a fatal repose? God forbid!

A few days since a deserter from the United States Army, who has been at work for Brigham Young for some ten months past, whilst "on a drunk" became penitent; went to the United States Marshal and confessed his crime, was put under guard, and returned to the army. This is but one of hundreds of instances of Mormon aid and succor to deserters. They deem it a special privilege to help the deserter on his way, as it weakens the force of the army in their mad.

(Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.)

WASHINGTON, May 24.

There was an extraordinary session of the Cabinet to-day, called to consult on business connected with the State Department. It is understood that they passed upon the form of despatches to our Ministers abroad, to the Courts to which they are respectively accredited, setting forth the neutral position of our Government in view of the pending hostilities in Europe.

The Philadelphia Post Office question continues to excite much comment, and it is now thought that John Robbins, jr., will succeed Mr. Westcott.

The President has appointed Col. Stanbaugh, of Pennsylvania, Surveyor General of Utah.

WASHINGTON, May 24.

The War Department has ordered armed escorts to protect the trains with army supplies from the apprehended attacks of returning emigrants from Pike's Peak, information having been received of the necessity for such protection.

WASHINGTON, May 25.

No further action, it is said, is considered necessary in consequence of the last reported accounts from Utah, as instructions recently forwarded to the Federal officers are calculated to prevent further conflict of jurisdiction among them, and will soon reach that Territory.

We extract the following from the Washington correspondence of the Missouri Republican of May 18.

I learn that very serious charges have been preferred at the War Department against Capt. Vanvliet, of the Quartermaster's Office, who had the expenditure of near two millions of dollars in the purchase of mules for the late Utah Expedition. These charges are filed by some of the parties who sold the mules to the government, and they specify various and sundry instances of bribery and corruption. It will be remembered that the contractors were dissatisfied with the prices allowed them by Capt. Vanvliet, and appealed to Secretary Floyd. It was agreed that a court of three officers of distinction and experience should investigate and decide the point in dispute. This court, after hearing all the evidence, decided that the contractors should receive twenty dollars additional for each mule sold to the government. This award was reduced, by the advice of Quartermaster General Jesup, to ten dollars a head, and the amount thus fixed, paid by the Secretary of War. The claimants were still dissatisfied and contended for the full award allowed by the court of officers, when an agreed case was made up and submitted to the United States Court of Claims for an opinion as to the legal obligation of the government to pay the full amount.

It is these constants, I understand, who have preferred charges against Capt. V., a copy of which have been furnished him. He responds that so soon as he can hear from certain individuals, he will be ready with his defence, and although a court martial will be convened to investigate the charges, the friends of Capt. Vanvliet feel every confidence in his entire innocence. The temptation to fraud and speculation was indeed great, for two millions of dollars was an enormous sum to be expended by a single officer—yet if there was any officer in the public service entirely above temptation, that officer is believed to have been the accused.

Important Army Movements.

Through the kindness of Captain Van Vleet, the gentlemanly and efficient Quartermaster at Fort Leavenworth, we are enabled to lay before our readers the following information in relation to the movements of the army.

From the headquarters of the army an order has been received which puts 671 recruits en route for points at the places designated:

235 for Camp Floyd, Utah; 162 for Fort Kearney, N. T.; 248 for Fort Laramie, N. T.; 130 for Fort Union, N. M.; 28 for Fort Smith, Ark.; 18 for Fort Washita, C. N.; 17 for Fort Arbuckle, C. N.; 39 for Fort Riley, K. T.

The recruits for Utah will arrive at Fort Leavenworth on the 30th of May; for Fort Kearney and Fort Laramie on the 5th of June, and for New Mexico on the 10th of July.

The following officers, ordered to the Department of Utah, are required to report at Fort Leavenworth on the 30th inst.:

Bt. Lt. Charles A. May, Bt. Major Henry H. Sibly, Col. Henry Wilson, Col. Edmund R. Alexander, Bt. Lt. Col. Wm. Chapman, Capt. C. Grover, Capt. M. R. Stevenson, 1st Lt. John Buford, 1st Lt. Charles E. Norris, 2d Lt. Lucius L. Rich.

The following officers, ordered to the Department of the Platte, are required to report at Fort Leavenworth on the 5th of June:

Bt. Major John C. Pemberton, Capt. John P. McCowan, Capt. John A. Brown, 1st Lt. Owen T. Solomon, 1st Lt. Stephen D. Lee, 2d Lt. Chas. H. Morgan.

The following officers, ordered to the Department of New Mexico, are required to report at Fort Leavenworth on the 10th of July:

Major Caleb C. Sibley, Bt. Lt. Col. Daniel T. Chandler, Capt. Wm. B. Johns, Bt. Major Wm. T. H. Brooks, 1st Lt. Andrew Jackson, 1st Lt. Thomas K. Jackson, 2d Lt. Rich. V. Bonneau, 2d Lt. Royal T. Frank.

Surgeon Wm. S. King is relieved from duty in the Department of Texas, and ordered to report to Fort Leavenworth.

Col. J. Bankhead Magruder's battery is to march from Newport, R. I., and take post at Fort Leavenworth, where an artillery school of practice is soon to be established.

The 4th regiment of artillery, now in the Department of the Platte, is to proceed and take posts in Utah, Minnesota, and at Fort Randall. The 2d regiment of infantry will be stationed in the Departments of the Platte.

A military party for the exploration of the Yellow Stone river will start from Leavenworth about the 1st proximo, under the command of Capt. Reynolds, of the Topographical Engineers. The party will probably be occupied on this duty about eighteen months.

PIKE'S PEAKERS RETURNING—900 Wagon on the Road Home.—A letter from Fort Kearney, dated May 8th, to the St. Joseph Journal states that the disappointed emigrants to Pike's Peak are returning home in droves. Nine hundred wagons passed the Fort—the week previous to that in which the letter was written. The returning emigrants are in an extremely destitute condition, and are selling their wagons, horses and outfits for almost nothing.

RUMORED DIFFICULTY AT THE CHERRY CREEK MINES—Two Towns Burned.—A report reached St. Joseph, last Thursday, as we learn from the Gazette, that a serious difficulty at the Cherry Creek mines had occurred between the inhabitants of Auraria and Denver City, which resulted in the burning of both towns. Local rivalry was the origin of the matter. The report needs confirmation.

SOLDIERS COMING—On Wednesday 150 soldiers of the United States Army arrived in this city, en route for Fort Leavenworth; yesterday 135 more arrived; and to-day 150 more are expected. All of these have arrived on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. The first detachment were placed on the D. A. January, and are already on their way up the Missouri, and the others will follow as quickly as possible. They are to be employed on the plains in the protection of Government property.—Mo. Rep. May 28.

France, and the exercise of the Right of Search.

The Missouri Republican of May 28, says—

It will be recollected that, according to a rumor from Washington, Count Sartiges had emphatically declared that the French Government would assert the right of search of American vessels.—As tending in the same direction, and lending countenance to the belief that the French Minister did not, perhaps, speak inconsiderately, we are pointed to the following statement by the London correspondent of the New York Commercial:

A report is current that France has notified to England that all suspicious English vessels will be searched by the French cruisers for articles contraband of war. It does not appear, however, that it rests on any authority. The practice would have to be put in force against American vessels, and the United States Government would, it is to be assumed, make objections.

But the declaration actually made by Sartiges is explained as follows in the Washington dispatch of the Times:

I have the highest authority for saying that the reported conversation of M. De Sartiges with the Hon. Mr. S. of N. York, and another gentleman well known in Washington, on the right of search, has been seriously misunderstood or mistaken. The conversation was positively informal, and the observation of M. De Sartiges were simply to this effect: that the war would doubtless open a wider field for American shipping in the Mediterranean, but that our shippers must be careful not to forget that the doctrine now established, and principally in consequence of the determination of France, that the neutral flag shall cover the goods, does not at all invalidate the necessary privilege of searching for articles contraband of war. Our vessels may carry all sorts of cargoes to the Adriatic, but they must not run the risk of concealing munitions of war.

These remarks were the merest matter of course, the really important bearing of the Turkish Minister's language being the intimation which it threw out of the now complete good understanding between the great maritime powers, on the general question of the right of search. In fact, M. De Sartiges's last diplomatic act at Washington, as I have reason to believe, was the conclusion of the negotiations which have resulted in an entire acquiescence by England, in the French and American views of this matter. France and the United States having occupied one ground upon the question. From the first, English journalists and orators have denied that England has abandoned anything in regard to her pretended right of search, but they have been misled by false notions of national vanity. England did claim the right to stop and search vessels on the high seas, in time of war, and on suspicions of piracy, as a right. Her pretension was, that if, in exercising this right she did injustice; that if after searching a ship, she found on board neither British sailors to be impressed, nor contraband goods, nor slaving accoutrements, she had yet done no wrong, and could be pressed for no reclamations. This pretension she maintained as long as she had the power to enforce it. She has yielded it now to the opposition of the great powers which more than divide with her the empire of the seas. Goods contraband of war, will, of course, as always, be liable to seizure by billigerent powers, but the search for them will be made at the risk of the party searching.

THE TICINO—Frequent references are made in our foreign dispatches to the Ticino—a small stream which marks the boundary line between Sardinia and the Lombardo Venetian Provinces, occupied by Austria. This small stream or river promises to become as famous in history as the "Rubicon," which Cæsar crossed when, returning from his conquest in Gaul, he decided upon marching with his army to Rome, in defiance of the orders of the Roman Senate.

The Ticino, or Tessin, rises in Switzerland, on the southern declivity of Mount St. Gothard, and flows southeasterly through the Lake Maggiore. Thence it runs a southerly direction, forming the boundary between Lombardy and Sardinia, until it joins the river Po, near Pavia. Its whole course is about 125 miles, and it is navigable from Lake Maggiore to the Po, which flows into the Gulf of Venice.

Duties of United States Marshals.

The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Wisconsin fugitive-slave case has at length been published. Though we have hitherto given the substance of that part of it regarding the powers of the Federal Courts and the duties of the Federal officers in cases arising under the Federal laws, we subjoin, for the better information of the public, a paragraph from the official copy of the opinion:

"Although it is the duty of the Marshal or other person holding him to make known by a proper return the authority under which he detains him, it is at the same time imperatively his duty to obey the process of the United States; to hold the prisoner in custody under it, and to refuse obedience to the mandate or process of any other Government. And consequently it is his duty not to take the prisoner, nor suffer him to be taken, before a State judge or court upon a habeas corpus issued under State authority. No State judge or court, after they are judicially informed that the party is imprisoned under the authority of the United States, has any right to interfere with him, or to require him to be brought before them. And if the authority of a State, in the form of judicial process or otherwise, should attempt to control the marshal or other authorized agent of the United States, in any respect, in the custody of his prisoner, it would be his duty to resist it, and call to his aid any force that may be necessary to maintain the authority of the law against illegal interference. No judicial process, whatever form it may assume, can have any lawful authority outside of the limits of the jurisdiction of the court or judge by whom it is issued; and an attempt to force it beyond these boundaries is nothing less than lawless violence."

HOW THE AMERICANS ARE SPOILING THE CARNIVAL AT ROME—Mr. Bigelow, of the New York Evening Post, writing from Rome, says—

But of late, and this year in particular, Rome has become so thronged with strangers from England and America, and their equipages in the carnival occupied so large a proportion of the Corso, that, as near as I can learn, the festival has undergone some changes which have rendered it not only less interesting in itself, but what is more to be deplored, less characteristic of the institutions of civilization in which it had its origin.—Formerly confectionery and flowers used to be thrown from one carriage to another, but for the most part in a complimentary spirit, and deriving piquancy from the fact that the parties were unknown to each other, and in this way were holding an allowable intercourse which on any other day would be regarded as too familiar.

But the Anglo Saxon race do not seem to have the faculty of enjoying this kind of sport legitimately. They take advantage of the privileged character of the day to annoy those they meet, and make them ridiculous. They throw confetti with violence; if they see a black hat in the street, or anything that will be discolored by their artillery, they will take the utmost pains to soil it as much as possible. I have even seen them go so far as to bend forward and deliberately throw a whole handful of confetti violently in the face of ladies casually crossing the street, and taking no part whatever in the sports of the occasion. Such ill-breeding is rarely, I don't know but that I may say never, traceable to the Italian. It is a feature which the forestieri have introduced here, I am told, and which will soon efface the last trace of one of the oldest and most interesting Roman institutions extant.

AMERICAN OFFICERS IN THE EUROPEAN WAR—The Paris correspondent of the New York Times writes:

Capt. Jerome Bonnaparte, who lately returned to France from a visit to his parents at Baltimore, has been placed in the most dangerous service in the army. He will command in the Chasseurs d'Afrique, a body of light cavalry, every man of which is mounted on an Arab stallion of great speed and endurance.—This body is divided up and thrown forward in advance of the army in scouting parties and is employed in all dangerous and rapid reconnaissances. The Captain, on arriving at Paris ten days ago, left immediately for Algiers, to join his company, from whence he will most probably land at Genoa, on Sardinian territory, which is to be on account of its proximity to Toulon and Marseilles, the future base of operations of the French Army.

I have been told that Major Kearney, of New York, has entered the staff of one of the French generals of division, as a volunteer. Major Kearney, it will be recollected, distinguished himself in the Mexican war, in which he commanded a volunteer cavalry company, raised and equipped entirely at his own expense.

We give this news of the Mormon population from our exchanges—

MORMON WIFE-STATISTICS—The Utah correspondent of the Chicago Tribune has taken notes of the social status of that territory. The results foot up as follows: 387 men with 8 or more wives; of these 13 have more than 19 wives; 730 men with 5 wives; 1,100 men with 4, and 2,400 with more than one wife. Recapitulation—4,617 men, with about 16,500 wives!

THE MORMONS—The population of Mormons in the United States and British dominions, in 1856, was not less than 68,700, of which 38,000 were resident in Utah; 5000 in New York State; 4000 in California; 5000 in Nova Scotia and the Canadas, and 9000 in South America. In Europe there were 39,000, of which 32,900 were in Great Britain and Ireland, 5000 in Scandinavia; 1000 in Germany and Switzerland, and in France and the rest of Europe 1000; in Australia and Polynesia 2400; in Africa 100, and on travel 2800. To these, if we add the different schismatic branches, including Strangites, Rigidonites and Wightites, the whole sect was not less than 126,000. In 1857, there appears to have been a decrease in the population of Utah—the number being only 31,022, of which 9000 were children, about 11,000 women, and 11,000 men capable of bearing arms.—Exchange.

CAMELS—The Mobile Tribune notices the arrival at that city of twenty-one camels from Texas. Eight of them have been engaged, and the remainder are for sale for plantation use. It is said one of them can easily carry two bales of cotton on its back, at the rate of twenty-five miles a day, over a road which would be impassable to an empty wagon drawn by a pair of mules. The cost of keeping them is very little, and in endurance, under labor and privation, no animal can excel them. They are also gentle in disposition.

VALUABLE INFORMATION—The width of the United States is 2,650 miles. Its length is 2,600 miles. Area of square miles, 2,936,107.

Coast lines of rivers and lakes, 45,204.

It has 32 States, of which 17 are free, and 15 slave States; and 7 Territories. Its population is 23,189,876, of which there are 13,349,740 free at the North, and in the South 6,221,518, and 3,204,313 slaves; there are also 427,305 free persons of color.

The area of square miles of the Saint Lawrence basin is 180,000.

Atlantic slope, basin of square miles, 410,000.

Pacific slope, basin of square miles, 600,000.

Mississippi Valley, basin of square miles, 1,200,000.

Texas slope, basin of square miles, 280,000.

Utah slope, basin of square miles, 280,000.

Area of the North in square miles, 61,899.

Area of the Territories in square miles, 1,500,925.

Number of miles of railroads, 22,000.

River and lake navigation, 19,720 miles.

THE ENTENTE CORDIALE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA—The Russian Gazette of St. Petersburg, of the 15th ult., contains an article on Cuba, which contends that the possession of the colony is indispensable to the security of the United States. The article, however, recommends the Americans to extend their influence in the island solely by means of their superior civilization, which it says have thus far been their best auxiliaries in making conquests. The Russians see that Cuba occupies the same position to us that Constantinople and Turkey does to them. It is gravitating toward us by the force of events and of natural causes. The cause of civilization and the best interests of humanity would be subserved by planting the Russian standard upon the walls of Constantinople and the Stars and Stripes over the Moro Castle. The happening of both events is certain, although they be delayed a few years.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY—By the arrival of the bark Mary F. Slade, from Puget Sound, we have received late files of the Puget Sound Herald, published at Steilacoom. We gather the following intelligence from the Herald:

We are pleased to learn that Capt. Jas. M. Hunt, U. S. Mail Contractor for the Puget Sound district, has been appointed to the command of the war steamer Massachusetts. She is placed under the orders of the Quartermaster, for the transportation of troops and supplies in Puget Sound.

Kifsap, a notorious Indian, after a confinement of some weeks at Fort Steilacoom, was finally brought to trial at Olympia, for the murder of white settlers on Green River.

A military court martial is now being held at Fort Steilacoom, for the trial of commissioned officers. The court is composed of Cols. Wright, Morris and Casey; Majors Alford, Barnes and Wyse; Capt. Jordan, Pickett, and English; Lieut. Hodges, Judge Advocate.

Lieut. J. M. Selden, of the revenue cutter Jefferson Davis, says the Pioneer and Democrat, having recently been promoted to a first Lieutenancy, has been transferred to the revenue cutter Joseph.

NOTICE!! LARGE SALE OF PUBLIC MULES, WAGONS AND HARNESS.

On THURSDAY, 14th JULY next,

WILL be Sold at Public Auction, at CAMP FLOYD, U. T., to the highest bidder, for specie or Government Funds, 2000 or more excellent draft and saddle Mules, with several hundred Army Wagons, together with harness for the same complete.

The Mules are all young, sound, thoroughly broken, and in good condition; and the Wagons and Harness complete repair, with all equipments, for immediate service.

The sale of this valuable property will commence on the day above mentioned, in lots of one or more, and will continue, from day to day, until all are sold.

G. H. CROSBY, Agent.

Camp Floyd, U. T., June 22, 1859.

B. JEFF PERKINS, AUCTIONEER.

IS prepared to make Sales of Real Estate, Horses, Mules, Cattle, Merchandise, &c.

Having a practical knowledge of the business, and a conscientious and general satisfaction, and would respectfully solicit the patronage of parties having stock, real estate, merchandise, &c., &c., to dispose of.

Sales Room next door west of Walker & Bro.

Fairfield, U. T., June 16, 1859.

NOTICE.

MANY HORSES AND MULES, the property of the United States, have strayed and are stolen from the different public herds during the past winter and winter in the Valley of Utah, and a satisfactory evidence having been furnished to the undersigned that some of those animals are, or have been in possession of citizens of Utah Territory.

This is to give notice, that I will pay a reasonable and proper reward in money, to whomsoever will deliver to me Strays or stolen public animals, evidence also being furnished to the undersigned that the immense herds of animals known as Church Herds, or as the property of the M. M. Church, have in them a great number of Government animals, with the U. S. brand defaced by being over-branded with a frying pan, or a smoothing iron. This is to give notice, to such individuals as have control of that stock, to deliver the same to me at this Depot.

P. T. TURNLEY, Agent, Q. M. Dept.

Camp Floyd, U. T., June 7th, 1859.

200 DOLLARS REWARD. STOLEN!

FROM the Canyon, south of Cedar Fort, and 4 miles north-west of Camp Floyd, in Cedar Valley, on the morning of the 4th inst., one small bay PONY, branded "J" on the left shoulder, and one small light bay mare MULE, branded "B" on left shoulder, and "U" on left hip; together with their saddles and bridles (the saddles government pattern.)

The above animals were stolen by two young men, who were passed going up the canyon (one of them had a light beard and was dressed in buckskin breeches, and were seen from the top of the mountain to go up to where the animals were picked up; they were afterwards tracked down to Cedar Fort, and their foot-prints found to have come from that place in the morning.

Another Mule, stolen at the same time and place, was recovered the same day, tied to the bushes at the mouth of the canyon near Cedar Fort.

$250 will be paid for the recovery of each of the animals and their equipments, and $50 each for the apprehension and delivery of the thieves at this Camp.

Camp Floyd, U. T., June 10th, 1859.

JAS. E. D. JESTER, (Successor to D. W. Baylies & Son,) WATCH-MAKER & JEWELER.

HAS on hand a well assorted stock of Materials, Glasses, Guard Chains, Keys, &c., and is ready to repair Watches, Clocks and Jewels, at short notice and in a workmanlike manner. He hopes by strict attention and superior work to merit a continuance of the old patronage, and a liberal share of the new.

All work warranted to give satisfaction. Office with T. S. Williams, in Salt Lake House, one door north of the Post Office.

N. B. Particular attention paid to work from a distance, and from Camp Floyd. All jobs from the latter, received and returned by express free of risk and expense to the owners.

We take pleasure in commending to the public our successor, Mr. J. E. D. Jester, who has been in our employ during the past winter, as a superior and skillful workman, and one who will work for the satisfaction of our old friends and patrons, and we speak him a continuance of their favors.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON.

SPRING.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

Dip down upon the northern shore,
Oh sweet new year, delaying long;
Thou dost expectant nature wrong,
Delaying long; delay no more.

What says thee from the clouded noons,
Thy sweetness from its proper place?
Can trouble live with April days,
Or sadness in the summer moon?

Bring orchids, bring foxglove spire,
The little speedwell's darling blue;
Deep tulips dashed with fiery dew,
Laburdums, dropping wells of fire.

Oh thou, new year, delaying long,
Delayest the sorrow in my blood,
That longs to burst a frozen bud,
And flood a fresher threat with song.

Now fades the last long streak of snow,
Now burgeons every mazer of quick
About the flowering squares, and thick
By ashes roots the violets grow.

Now rings the woodland loud and long,
The distance takes a lovelier hue,
And drowned in yonder living blue,
The lark becomes a sightless song.

Now dance the lights on lawn and lea,
The flocks are whiter down the vale,
And milkier every milky sail
On winding stream or distant sea.

Where now the sea-mew pipes or drives
In yonder greenish gleam, and fly
The happy birds that change their sky
To build and brood, that lives their lives.

From land to land; and in my breast
Spring wakens too; and my regret
Becomes an April violet,
And buds and blossoms like the rest.

A WIFE'S INFLUENCE.—Judge O'Neal, in the Yorkville Enquirer, tells the following of Judge William Smith, of South Carolina:

"He had the blessing to win the love of one of the purest, mildest and best women, whose character has been ever present to the writer. He married Margaret Duff. In his worst days, she never upbraided him by word, look or gesture, but always met him as if he was one of the kindest and best of husbands. This course on her part humbled him, and made him weep like a child. This sentence, it is hoped, will be remembered, was the language of Judge Smith to the friend already named, and to those who knew the stern, unheeding public character of the judge, it will teach a lesson of how much a patient woman's love can accomplish. He was at last reformed by an instance of her patient love and devotion, as he himself told us:

"The evening before the return day of the Court of Common Pleas for York district, a client called with fifty writs to be put in suit. Mr. Smith was not in his office—he was on what is now fashionably called a spree, then a frolic—Mrs. Smith received the writs, and sat down in the office to the work of issuing the writs and the processes. She spent the night at work—Mr. Smith in riotous living."

"At daylight, on his way home from his carousals, he saw a light in his office, and stepped in; to his great surprise he saw his amiable wife, who had just completed what ought to have been his work, with her head on the table asleep. His entry awoke her. She told him what she had done, and showed him her night's work—fifty writs and processes. This bowed the strong man, he fell on his knees, implored her pardon, and then and there faithfully promised her never to drink another drop while he lived. 'This promise,' says my friend Col. Williams, 'he faithfully kept,' and, said the Judge to him, 'from that day, everything which I touched turned to gold.' 'His entire success in life,' says Col. Williams, 'he set down to his faithful observance of this noble promise.'

"No better eulogy could be pronounced on Mrs. Smith than has just been given in the words of her distinguished husband. The reformation of such a man as Wm. Smith is a chapter of glory which few women have been permitted to wear. To the people of South Carolina, and especially of York district, certainly no stronger argument in favor of temperance, total abstinence, need be given."

WITTY.—The Louisville Journal leads off with this brilliant coruscation:

"Fowls seem exceedingly grateful for the gift of cold water. They never swallow a drop of it without turning up their eyes to heaven."

Whereupon the editor of the Courier takes him off after this manner:

"Fowls seem exceedingly grateful for the gift of corn. They never pick up a grain of it without turning up their tails to heaven."

A MANIAC'S STORY.—The Leavenworth City Ledger reports the incoherent saying of a maniac whom the editor met recently in that city. What could be more touching than these disjointed sentences:

He lived, he said—no, he didn't live, he stayed—up the river, and was going home by the boat—his boat, he quietly remarked, he had just bought her for the mountains. "Look at these pants," he said solemnly, "who'd ye think made 'em?" "A tailor," we hazarded, as a reply. "No such thing, sir: no such thing—they grew on a tree in the Island of Tranquil Delights—found 'em there myself. What's the time? Ah I forgot, the times are out of joint—the machinery wants oiling, sir—with gold, aye, with gold—they won't run, sir, without. I had gold once, myself, but they took it all—they thought they had got it all, but I've some left yet—they can't find it though—it's down in the solid earth. They want me at home, do they? Where is home?—ah Mary is there—no she isn't either, they put her in the earth to guard the gold—but you'll tell nobody!"

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. FILLEY.

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Saws and Brays and Iron Castings of every description, Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

30-31

NEW GOODS

JUST RECEIVED

WILLIAM NIXON.

East Temple St., between the Desert Reading

Rooms and saloon and John Willis' Bakery.

HAS just received a choice lot of assorted Merchandise, to which he wishes to call the attention of his old Friends and the Public generally consisting in part of

TOBACCOES,

Lewis's No. 1 and 2, Grape Vine,

Buffalo Chips, Comber in Chief,

Strawberry, and other choice Brands.

GROCERIES.

Tea, Coffee, Sugar,

Rice, Candy, Nutmegs

Liquors, Cigars, Boston Soap

Mustard, Pepper, Indigo

Cotton Yarn, Madder, All kinds of Spices.

With a choice lot of Fancy bottled and case fruits

oysters, sardines, lobsters, London gin and other liquors,

yeast powder, soda, saleratus, cream of tartar, and other useful articles in that line.

Also—Callons, de lances, bleached and brown linen sheeting, linen table cover, blue and brown drills, bedding, alpaccas, lawns, ginghams, jeans, edgings, bonnets and taffeta ribbons, velvet trimmings, and a large variety of all kinds of small wares and notions.

Together with

Men's and boys' calf and kip boots and shoes; a choice

lot of gents' gaiters, women's and children's calf, kip and fancy shoes, boots and gaiters; men's and boys' hats and

caps and

Ready Made Clothing.

WANTED.—wheat, flour, butter, eggs, and all other kinds of produce, in exchange for which the highest market price will be paid.

WANTED.—1000 to 2000 buck, antelope, mountain

sheep and elk skins.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY.—Some good pine lumber,

also 10,000 shaved shingles for which a good price will be paid if delivered soon.

W. Nixon, thankful for past favors will endeavor to merit a continuance of the same by selling good goods

at fair prices for

READY PAY ONLY IN CASH OR PRODUCE.

He would also call the attention of Farmers residing

South and in Cedar Valley, to his large and well assorted stock of General Merchandise at CAMP FLOYD,

north side of the creek, where they can always depend upon him for a good variety of everything in his line, in exchange for Cash, Beef-Cattle, and every kind of Produce.

To the Traveling Public.STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS*NOTICE.

ON and after the 9th day of May,

1859, we the undersigned will commence a Daily line of stages from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and

from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a. m., and arriving at 2 p. m.

We have now four changes of horses on the road,

also good and comfortable coaches, and careful drivers;

therefore we feel warranted in saying, that we can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

We will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 1st, by the day, week, or month, at our new Stable, turn out in Utah Territory.

Our New Carriages and Buggies, now on the way from California, will be here in a few weeks, when we will be able to accommodate the public with the finest turn out in Utah Territory.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

We will run an Express, in connection with our stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No let-

NOTICE.

BE IT KNOWN TO ALL PERsons that "G." a resident at Camp Floyd, sends forth on this 10th day of May, 1859, this challenge, to any person in the Territory of Utah.

That "G." will load and fire two six shooters, (Army or Navy size) on horseback, and at a gallop, in LESS TIME than any other man in Utah.

The revolvers to be loaded with cartridges, similar to those used by U. S. Dragoons.

On this 1st day of June, at any time to stake any sum of money from $50 00 to $100 00.

For further information, apply at Messrs. Livingston, Kinkrad, & Co., Camp Floyd.

29-31

Information Wanted.

WILLIAM A. ADEN, who left St.

Louis, Spring '57, and was last heard from in July of that year, in the South Pass, saying that he expected to spend the ensuing winter in Fr. so, and proceed to California in the spring of '59. Any information of his whereabouts, or probable fate will be thankingly received, and expense of the same paid by his brother, FLENNY P. ADEN, at Tennent & Co.'s 101

Main street, St. Louis.

A Duvernoot can be seen at the office of the "Valley Tan," in Salt Lake City.

29-31

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!!

PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH,

MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE

STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS,

PURE RE-AGENTS, AND

PHARMACEUTICAL

PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and

of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large

Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

He would commend to the notice of his search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,

including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES,

ELEGANT EXTRACTS,

POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for

Congress and other Mineral Waters,

of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE

BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE

PLAINS.

26-27

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS.

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention

of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory,

and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods

in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and

Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade,

we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy

Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at Salt Lake.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and

Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting

Bleached do

"shirtings"

Brown do

Hickory stripes

Plaid linsey woolsey

Kentucky jeans

Bed ticking

Delaines and cashmeres

Linen diapers and towels

"nappies"

Crash. Toweling and

doilies

Ginghams and lawns

White linen bosom shirts

Colored calico

Grey flannel

Red do

Blue do

Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM

contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bk and fancy dress Embroidered Setts

silks

Plain all wool delaines

Fancy do

Alexander's kid gloves

Bay state long shawls

Stella and merino do

Delaines in dress

patterns

White cambric muslin

Jackonets

Swiss

Mull and Namsoks

Plaid jaconet muslins

Plaid cashmere for children

Silk and cashmere gloves

Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and bareges

Plain colored silk ribbons

Bonnet

Velvet

Combs brushes and

cutlery

Yankee notions &c.,

&c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the large and best assorted on this coast, and includes all the various manufactures and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.

Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 220

Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Farmer Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods.

25-26

LAGER BEER.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our

Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS,

we have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler in ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1 00

Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2 00</

THE VALLEY TANT.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1859.

NUMBER 33.

The Romance of Fanny Braddock.

The following is the romantic history of Fanny Braddock, sister of General Braddock, who was defeated near Fort Du-ques. The father of General Braddock was a man of competent fortune. On his death he left no less than six thousand pounds as a provision for his two daughters, and probably as much larger sum to his only son, Edward Braddock.

One of the daughters died early, and her sister, Fanny Braddock, became possessed of her share of the father's legacy. Goldsmith, in his life of Beau Nash, has told the romantic story of Fanny, under the name of "Miss Sylvia S." with his usual sweetness of narrative and gentle kindness of sympathy. She was descended, he says, from one of the best families in the kingdom, and was left a large fortune upon her sister's decease. Whatever the finest poet could conceive of wit, or the most celebrated painter imagine of beauty, were excelled in the person of this young lady. She was naturally gay, generous to a fault, good natured to the highest degree, affable in conversation; and some of her letters and other writings, as well in verse as prose, would have shone among those of the most celebrated wits of this or any other age, had they been published.

But these qualifications were marked by another, which lessened the value of them all. She was imprudent. "By which," says the kind philosopher, "I only mean she had no knowledge of the use of money." She had arrived at the age of nineteen, when the crowd of her lovers and the continued repetition of new flattery had taught her to think that she could never be forsaken, and never poor. "Young ladies are apt to expect," wisely moralizes Goldsmith, in a strain that reminds us of a passage in the "Vicar of Wakefield," "a certainty of success from a number of lovers; and yet I have seldom seen a girl courted by a hundred lovers that found a husband in any. Before the choice is fixed, she has either lost her reputation or her good sense; and the loss of either is sufficient to consign her to perpetual virginity."

Among the number of this young lady's lovers was a handsome, good-natured, easy kind fellow, of whose name we can learn nothing beyond its initial "S." He was "conditionally virtuous," but practically it appears quite the contrary, for he followed the dictates of "every newest passion." He loved Fanny Braddock, and Fanny Braddock loved him. The vices of the man (Goldsmith gently terms them "imprudences") soon ruined him, and he was thrown into prison for debt. Fanny Braddock, with the disinterestedness of a pure and loving woman, was resolutely bent on freeing him, and sacrificed her whole fortune in relieving her lover from his obligations to his creditors, and thus restored him to liberty. S—, instead of improving in friendship or affection, only studied to avoid a creditor he could never repay; for, "though small favors produce good will, great ones destroy friendship," says Goldsmith, who could utter maxims worthy of Solomon, while he lived as riotously as the Prodigal Son.

Poor Fanny, however, was ruined, in reputation as well as in fortune, by this profuse generosity to her ungrateful lover. Beau Nash, then meeting with her among some of his friends in London, prevailed upon her to go with him to Bath, where Beau, being paramount in power, might introduce her to the best company, and leave it to her merit to do the rest. People of distinction courted her acquaintance, and strove to divert her with the social enjoyments and fashionable frivolities of the place; but it was apparent that a settled melancholy had taken possession of her mind, and she moved among, but was not of the gay throng. With loss of love, loss of fortune, loss of friends, and the loss of health, she was finally induced, as a mere refuge from her own wretchedness, to yield to the invitation of a Dame Lindsey, who desired to secure so much beauty, as an additional temptation to those who resorted to her gambling rooms. Although she yielded to Dame Lindsey's invitation, Fanny Braddock is believed never to have been tainted with any other vice than that of presiding at the hazard table for the advantage of others.

She could not long, however, endure this disgrace, and preferred the humble condition of a housekeeper in a gentleman's family, to which her poverty now reduced her. Here she remained, always sad, but faithful to her duty. The gentleman with whom she lived now went up to London with his wife, leaving the children and the house to her care. On the day that he was expected to return, Fanny, after the discharge of her daily household duty, went into the dining-room and wrote these lines upon one of the window panes:

"O! Dear! then pleasing in of human woe! Thou curest for the th' greatest good below! But I will not thus by the sword, and the slave, And thy no calumny on thy be the brave."

Some visitors coming in, she entered them cheerfully, and, on their going out, she went to the library, where she had ordered supper. Here "she spent the remaining hours preceding bed-time in darning two of Mr. Wood's (the gentleman in whose family she lived) children on her knees. In retiring thence to her chamber, she went into the nursery to take leave of another child, as it lay sleeping in the cradle. Struck with the innocence of the little babe's looks, and the consciousness of her meditated guilt, she could not avoid bursting into tears, and hugging it to her arms. She then bade her old servants a "good night," for the first time she had ever done so, and went to bed as usual.

It is probable she soon quitted her bed. She then dressed herself in clean linen and white garments of every kind, like a bride-maid. Her gown she pinned over her breast just as a nurse pins the swaddling clothes of an infant. She then took a pink silk girdle, and lengthening it with another made of gold thread, she made a noose at one end, and tied three knots at a small distance from each other.

She now sat down to read that passage in Aristotle's "Orlando Furioso" where Olympia is abandoned by her bosom friend, and ruined. Having laid aside her book, she arose, took the girdle she had prepared, and throwing the end of the girdle over the closet door, attempted to hang herself. The girdle, however, broke with her weight, and she fell with such a noise that a workman, who was passing the night in the house, was awakened. He, nevertheless, thinking no more of it, turned over and fell asleep again. She now made another attempt, with a stronger girdle, made of silver thread, and succeeded. Her old maid, next morning, waited as usual the ringing of the bell, and protracted her patience hour after hour, till two o'clock in the afternoon, when the workmen, at length entering the room through the window, found their unfortunate mistress still hanging and quite cold.

Such is the history of Fanny Braddock, for the most part as related by Goldsmith. "Hundreds in high life," says he, "lamented her fate." Her brother, when he heard of it, remarked, "Poor Fanny! I always thought she would play till she would be forced to tuck herself up." Horace Walpole might well say, "Braddock is a very Iroquois in disposition."

Death of Dr. Lardner.

The latest news from Europe brings intelligence of the death of Dr. Dionysius Lardner, whose name is familiar to the public through his works, and who will be personally remembered by those who made his acquaintance during his visit to this country.

Dr. Lardner was born in Wexford, Ireland, on the 23d of February, 1790. An incident during his boyhood, which prevented him from indulging in the usual athletic sports of which youths are generally so fond, was the means of turning his attention to literary and scientific pursuits. On his recovery he entered Trinity College, Dublin, and graduated with honors. About this time he married Miss Cecilia Flood, an Irish heiress, from whom he was subsequently divorced. He took holy orders, and was for a short period chaplain to the college; but afterward devoting himself to scientific pursuits, he soon dropped the "Rev." prefix to his name. In 1827 he was elected professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in the London University, but did not retain the position, and for the next ten or twelve years devoted himself to the publication of the Cabinet Cyclopaedia, and to contributing to the various periodicals of the day.

In 1840 Dr. Lardner came to this country, and after visiting Philadelphia in 1841, delivered a series of popular lectures on scientific subjects at the old Clinton Hall, and subsequently at Niblo's in this city. These lectures were remarkably successful, and were redelivered in the principal towns of the United States. In 1845 Dr. Lardner returned to Europe; and has since resided at Paris.

As a scientific writer, Dr. Lardner was laborious and painstaking, and without offering any novel or original theories, was a successful expositor and compiler. He has published a number of works and articles on almost every department of science, including mathematics in its various branches, hydrostatics, pneumatics, mesmerism, astronomy, animal physics, &c. He has also written on the steam engine, though he is chiefly associated with the branch of mechanics by his repeated assertions that steam navigation could never be carried to such a point as to make it a paying speculation. It has been said that he deemed the crossing of the Atlantic by steam vessels utterly impracticable, and that when that mechanical triumph was achieved, he denied ever having said so. But it appears that he merely argued that, as a commercial speculation, trans-Atlantic navigation could not become successful.

The private and social life of Dr. Lardner does not bear investigation. When he came to this country he was obliged to leave England on account of his elopement with a Mrs. Heavyside, at whose husband's house he was visiting. He subsequently on the death of Captain Heavyside, married this lady.

The latest hobby of Dr. Lardner was the use of scientific instruments for the wholesale destruction of human life during the coming war. He advocated the introduction of destructive chemical agents in place of the rifle and cannon; but whatever plans he may have formed, or discoveries he may have made, it is now impossible to say. He died in his sixty-ninth year.—N. Y. Post.

A writer says: I have seen women so delicate they were afraid to ride, for fear of the horses, afraid to sail for fear of the boat upsetting, afraid to walk for fear of the dew or sun, but never one afraid to marry.

Fatal Duel in Mobile.

Mr. Vick Shot Dead in his tracks—Cause of the Difficulty.

[Correspondence of the Picayune.]

BATTLE HOUSE, MOBILE, May 17, 1859.

As announced to you already, by telegraph, two young gentlemen, Mr. Stith and Mr. Vick, came over to this city, to-day, from New Orleans to settle an "affair of honor," the result of which was the death of the latter. Their original destination was Pass Christian, but circumstances brought them here. They were attended by two seconds and a surgeon each.

The meeting took place at 11 o'clock, a. m., at the old race course, (Bascombe.) The weapons were common Mississippi Rifles, distance, forty paces. They fought on the inside of the course—some eighty yards from the enclosure, and under the open sun. Coolness and calmness marked each antagonist, as he walked to his position, and, indeed, until the tragical denouement. Mr. Vick won the choice of position; Mr. Stith won the "word."

All the preliminaries being arranged, and the weapons placed in the hands of the belligerents, the usual command was given.—Each gentleman answered, audibly, "ready." At the word "fire!" Mr. Vick brought his weapon down and discharged it. At "one," Mr. Stith fired, and his antagonist fell instantaneously dead! The ball took effect immediately under the left cheek and ranging upward, passed into the brain, where it lodged! The unfortunate victim fell, stiffened out, and was dead before his seconds reached him! What a change! A robust, manly form, vigorous and healthy!—a second and it lies a bleeding corpse! "There's honor for you."

ANOTHER DESTRUCTIVE WEAPON.—Large Orders from England for American Fire arms.

The large quantity of fire arms and gun making machinery already furnished to England from American workshops, proves to have been but the precursor of more extended orders. Hitherto our mechanics have restricted their efforts more particularly to the manufacture of small arms, in which their skill has been amply acknowledged; but now, we hear casually of a couple of monster rifled guns, which have been in course of preparation by the well known manufacturers of Chicopee, Mass.—the Ames Manufacturing Company—and the results of a preliminary trial are of an extraordinary character. One of these guns is intended for the U. S. Government; the other will be taken out in the Russian frigate "General Admiral" for presentation to the Czar of all the Russias. A few days since, Captain Chestakoff, the future commander of the new steamer, heard of the performance of the new gun, and, with characteristic zeal, at once determined to obtain a duplicate in behalf of his sovereign.

In several respects, the gun here referred to conforms to the description already given in the English papers of the celebrated "Armstrong" gun. It has a rifled bore, of a diameter capable of receiving a four pound ball; but the missile here employed is so elongated that the weight of metal is increased to thirteen pounds. The rear section, or base, is composed of lead, presenting a concave surface to the cartridge, with the view of its being forced into the grooves by the expansion of the powder behind it, thus preventing loss of explosive power by windage. A prominent object in the experiments made was, to ascertain the effect of increasing the number of grooves. The remarkable accuracy finally obtained is shown by the fact that three balls were thrown through the same perforation, with only a trifling variation, at the distance of half a mile. The target was placed on the slope of a hill while these experiments were in progress, with the supposition that the resistance offered by the target would prevent the ball going much beyond; but a messenger brought word that damage was being done two miles further off. Balls were then fired so that they struck into the earth a comparatively short distance from the target, and on being dug out were found shattered by the concussion.

We learn from Mr. E. V. Haughtwout, (agent for the Ames Manufacturing Company) that orders were brought out by the last steamer from England, for the immediate construction of large quantities of machinery for the manufacture of the most approved American fire-arms, and that the same have been put in hand for execution, both at Chicopee and other large works, offering the needed facilities. The agents of the British government bearing these orders, also bring a large instalment of sterling gold, and are unrestricted as to the amount of work to be done. The American machinery already in England is worked up to its fullest capacity, turning out several thousand guns per month, under the direction of workmen from the shops at Chicopee.

We understand that a public trial of the new rifled cannon will soon be made at Governor's Island, under military supervision—probably during the present week.

The U. S. Government armories, both at Springfield and Harper's Ferry, are manufacturing the rifled musket for the U. S. army. This weapon in destructiveness will compare well with the Minie rifle, or any thing else in use. About 13,000 of these muskets will be made at Springfield in the course of the present year; at both places, something like 20,000.—N. Y. Journal Commerce.

Our Military Establishment.

Reduction of our Army Expenditure—Consolidation of Military Posts.

SPECIAL ORDERS, NO. 25.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJ. GEN.'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Feb. 10, 1859.

A Board of Officers, to consist of Lieutenant Colonel J. W. Ripley, Ordnance Department; Major R. S. Garnett, Ninth Infantry; Brevet Major A. B. Eaton, Captain Subsidence Department; Brevet Lieutenant Colonel W. Chapman, Captain Fifth Infantry; Captain R. B. Marcy, Fifth Infantry; Captain L. C. Easton, Quartermaster's Department; Brevet Major W. A. Nichols, Captain Adjutant General's Department; Captain B. E. Bee, Tenth Infantry; Captain J. H. Dickerson, Quartermaster's Department, will assemble in this city at eleven o'clock, a. m., on Wednesday, February 16, 1859, or as soon thereafter as practicable, to consider:

1. How, and to what extent, can the transportation of the army be reduced, and the cost of transportation be brought down?

2. To what extent can the animals in the service of the Quartermaster's Department be reduced in number consistently with the wants of the army, and how can these required be supported most economically?

3. What is the best mode of purchasing horses for the mounted service?

4. How can the expenses of the army in every branch, at posts and in the field, be reduced?

5. What is the best and most economical plan for quarters and barracks, either permanent or temporary, at new posts?

6. What plan should be adopted for the disposal of posts no longer needed for military purposes?

The Board will report in detail their opinion upon the several subjects of inquiry above mentioned.

The junior member will record the proceedings of the Board.

By order of the Secretary of War.

S. COOPER, Adjutant General.

Colonel Ripley.

New York, May 25.

The steamship Moses Taylor, from Aspinwall, has arrived with California dates to the 5th inst., and $2,000,000 in gold.

The steamer Asia is signaled below, with Liverpool dates to the 24th instant, two days later than already received.

The steamship Moses Taylor brings nearly two millions in gold. She left Aspinwall on the 18th inst. The principal consignees of the gold at the American Exchange Bank, $227,000; Wells, Fargo & Co., $400,000; Duncan, Sherman & Co., $125,000; Scholle Bros, $117,000; Freeman & Co., $45,000, and W. F. Coleman, $80,000.

The news from San Francisco has been anticipated by New Orleans.

An escort left Fort Tejon on the 23d ultimo with half a million in money to pay the troops in Utah. It is said that the soldiers in that Territory are nearly a year in arrear of their pay, and it has leaked through a letter from one to a comrade in Los Angeles, that as soon as they are paid off they are all going to desert.

Mr. Holden (Douglas Democrat) has been elected Mayor of Stockton.

Advices from Panama state that M. Belly has obtained from the Nicaraguan government a concession of the transit route. He proposes, until his canal is finished, to take passengers and goods across the old route.—The grant, however, has yet to be confirmed by the Congress.

The United States frigate Merrimac left Panama on the 7th instant for Callao.

The advices from Nicaragua indicate that Belly's Transit Grant has not been ratified by Congress.

The advices from Central America are not particularly important.

The advices from Callao are to April 27th, and from Valparaiso to the 15th. The news is unimportant.

The blockade of Guayaquil still continues. In Chili, Gen. Galleo still held Copiapo and Coquimbo, but the Government was concentrating its troops against him.

Disturbances had occurred in other parts of the country, but Santiago and Valparaiso remained quiet.

ROMANCE OF AN OLD GENTLEMAN.—The Albany Morning Times publishes a singular story about a very worthy old gentleman whose offence, it appears, consists in becoming a little romantic in his old age.

The fact is, the old gentleman, a widower worth $500,000 made love to his servant girl.—Young lady reciprocated. Old gent. proposed marriage. Young lady accepted proposals, and the marriage arrangements reached the ears of the old gentleman's family.—Family, in arms, threaten a revolution.—Family insist that old gent. is insane and should be sent to the Asylum. Old gent. becomes alarmed, and to avoid the contingency of a straight jacket, informs young lady that "it can't be did." Young lady hears the announcement and calls upon a lawyer—lawyer brushes back his forehead and exclaims—"heartless monster," and commences a suit against the old gentleman for breach of promise of marriage, laying damages at $25,000. Old gentleman discovering that young lady has the best of him, summons a lawyer and effects a compromise by giving the young lady a check on Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank for $2,500. A young lady, perfectly recovered, calls it a good job, thanks the old gentleman and goes on her way rejoicing.

At a charitable sale held in Paris at the Hotel Lambert, by the Princess Cartoriska, in favor of the distressed Poles, Madame George Sand held a stall and displayed a quantity of small articles in linen and embroidered muslin. Baron Jas. de Rothschild happened to pass, the fair saleswoman addressed him with the usual request to purchase something. "You have nothing that I can do anything with." But stay, an idea strikes me. Give me your autograph, will you? Madame Sand took a sheet of paper and wrote the following words: "Received from Baron James de Rothschild the sum of 1000 francs, for the benefit of the distressed Poles. George Sand." M. de Rothschild read it, thanked her, and presenting a note for the sum mentioned, passed on with the autograph, highly gratified.

EFFECTS OF LIME.—A gentleman in the neighborhood of Baltimore had in his garden some old apple trees which produced no fruit. Two winters ago he took some lime, which he steeped in water, and with a brush washed the old trees all over. The result was the destruction of all the insects; the old bark fell off and was replaced by new, and the trees bore an excellent crop. Most of them have now acquired such renewed vigor that all appearance of age has disappeared.

INTERESTING TO HAIR DYERS.—At a meeting of the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine, a paper was read on the poisonous and often fatal effects of hair dyes. It was shown from many instances, that the lead and nitrate of silver, of which these dyes are chiefly composed, enter into the system through the skin. A man who had used hair dyes for eight years got the blue line on the gums and the blue face, which results from the use of these powerful poisons.

A correspondent, writing of Belly's visit to Nicaragua, says: "The people here are dirty, the women have no virtue, the climate is delightful, and water and sugar are cheaper than anywhere else in the world; then, too, it is a country where bombast and grandiloquence are appreciated; it is the daily conversation of the people. In short, just the place for Belly and his sort."

"Our glorious mounting bird" maintains that it is just the place for free niggers. The niggers, on the other hand, think that Double little might flourish in "a country where bombast and grandiloquence are appreciated."

DEATH OF BARON HUMBOLDT.—A dispatch from Berlin, received just before the departure of the last steamer in from England, announces the death of the distinguished traveler, naturalist and philosopher, Baron Humboldt. No particulars are given as to the time and manner of his demise, but the information that such is the case is reliable. Baron Humboldt had at numerous times declared that he would not live out the year, and professed to have had presentiments of his death, upon which his belief was based.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Times says:

All applications coming from strangers to be admitted into the French service as officers have been and will be refused. Major Kearney, of the United States, has entered the staff of Gen. Morris, commander of a division of the cavalry of the Imperial Guard, but it is only as a volunteer and as a friend. He has no official title there. The Major, I understand, desired the protection of the American Government, but in what form I am not able to say. This, however, was refused him by Mr. Maron, on the ground that it might be regarded as an intermeddling in a war in which the United States had no concern. It is, nevertheless, true that England and other States have sent neutral Military Commissioners to remain in and follow each of the belligerent camps. Neither are foreigners admitted into the ranks of officers in the army of Sardinia, as commanders or as medical men. Students of the School of Medicine in Paris are admitted into the French army and navy, as assistants, and the same may be true, perhaps, of Sardinia, but several American doctors have already applied, both to France and Sardinia, and thus far been refused. It has also been announced that not a single newspaper correspondent will be permitted to enter the allied camps.

CARE OF RECENTLY TRANSPLANTED TREES.—Have you purchased and paid a high price for favorite trees the past Spring or Fall?—And do you feel anxious to see them grow into beauty and usefulness? If so heed our advice. If you had not carefully prepared the ground before planting, spade deeply for the distance of a number of feet around each tree, and then spread a thick mulching of partly decayed manure, tan-bark, saw-dust, or litter of some sort, to prevent the ground from baking, by the hot sun, and to keep it moist so that the roots may permeate in every direction. If you will do this you will find that your trees will make a remarkable growth, and that you will be rewarded for your labor. This advice will apply to all kinds of trees, whether evergreen or deciduous. To shrubs and plants of any kind it is equally applicable.—Valley Farmer.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, June 29, 1859.

The Eastern Mail arrived on Monday, two days in advance of schedule time. Our dates from the States are up to June 4th and the latest dates from Europe are per steamer America, Liverpool, May 21st. Up to May 18th, the position of affairs in Italy had not materially altered since our last advice.—Louis Napoleon was still at Alexandria.—The Austrians were strengthening their positions, and collecting supplies, and are evidently waiting to be attacked.

Our extracts from the Eastern papers present a summary of the general news.

Eighteen little children from 2 to 8 years old, the survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre, left here on Tuesday for the States. The first arrangements contemplated their transportation to the States with ox teams; but Gen. Johnston kindly and promptly responded to a request from Dr. Forney, and has furnished for their better accommodation, three spring ambulances, and one baggage wagon, with teams of six mules each.

The change in the mode of transportation will, we think, contribute greatly to the comfort of the children, and those in charge of them. From the circumstances connected with their orphanage, they are peculiarly objects for sympathy; and we are pleased to see the efforts of Dr. Forney to make the road on which they travel, in search of relatives, or friends, as smooth as possible.

The will travel with, and are under the protection of Capt. R. Anderson, 2d dragoons, who is en route to Ft. Kearney with his command.

Mrs. Worley, Mrs. Nash, and two other ladies have been engaged as matrons to attend to the wants of the little ones, and three men also accompany the party as camp assistants.

The names of the children so far as can be learned, are as follows:—

John Calvin, Lewis, and Mary Sorel, (their father being held in remembrance as "Joe Sorel"); Ambrose Miram, and William Taggett; Frances Horn; Charles and Annie Francher; Betsey, and Jane Baker; Rebecca, Louisa, and Sarah Dunlap; Sophronia or Mary and Ephraim W. Huff; Angeline and Annie, (surname unknown); and a little boy of whom there is no account; the people with whom he was found, called him William. The children are supposed to have resided in the same neighborhood, and in Johnston county, Arkansas.

These children have been in charge of Dr. Forney since last fall, and we know that he has given his interested and personal supervision in order that they might be properly, and comfortably cared for.

We learn moreover, that Dr. Forney has obtained the guardianship of these children.

There was a large amount of property in the possession of the party massacred at the Mountain Meadows, and the children have now an agent here, who will undoubtedly use his best endeavors to recover the property of which they have been despoiled.

Terms for holding U. S. Courts.

UTAH TERRITORY, ss.:

At a meeting of the Justices of the Supreme Court of said Territory at Great Salt Lake City, in the county of Great Salt Lake, on Saturday, the eighteenth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty nine, the said Justices order and appoint the holding of the terms of the District Courts of the said Territory, until otherwise appointed, to be held annually at the times and places following, viz.:

That the District Court of the first Judicial District shall be holden at Nephi, in Juab County, on the fourth Monday in August of each year.

That the District Court of the Second Judicial District shall be holden on the first Monday in September, at Genoa, in Carson County, in each year.

That the District Court of the Third Judicial District shall be holden at Great Salt Lake City, in Great Salt Lake County, on the fourth Monday in July, in each year. And each of said District Courts may sit until the first Monday in November, if the business thereof shall require it.

D. R. ECKELS,
Chief Jus. of Sup. Court.
CHAS. E. SINCLAIR,
Asso. Jus. Sup. Court,
JNO. CRADLEBAUGH,
Asso. Jus. Sup. Court.

A merchant train of ninety Chicago mule wagons for C. A. Perry & Co. arrived last week. The average freight of the wagons was about twenty five hundred.

We have been informed that horse stealing is being practiced to a considerable extent in the vicinity of Camp Floyd; stealing one at a time has been rife for some time; but now the thieves have become sufficiently bold to run them off in bands. We trust that some of them will be caught, and be made an example of.

It would be well for persons buying horses, or mules, to be quite sure of a valid title.

Col. F. W. Lander was at Laramie on the 11th inst. Capt. R. H. Anderson, with two companies of U. S. 2d dragoons, left Camp Floyd on the 28th inst., for Fort Kearney; another company will also join his command at Fort Bridger.

We have received the report of the Remarks of Orson Hyde at the Tabernacle, on Sunday, June 28th; from want of space we will defer it until next week.

The waters north are still high. Bear River is six feet higher than it ever has been known by the ferryman. Major Lynde and command crossed last week; four of his mules, with their harness on, backed off the ferry-boat, and were drowned.

Although we did not intend to comment on the correspondence taken from the N. Y. Herald, published in the Valley Tan, our attention has been called to the portion reflecting on Judge Sinclair, and accusing him of threatening to quarter troops in this city to protect his court to be held in May, and we have been reliably informed that the accusation is groundless, and that Judge Sinclair did not even intend to hold court in May, as he was awaiting the arrival of Chief Justice Eckels; which fact of itself is all sufficient to refute such an allegation as has been made, and show what credit can be attached to the statements of the writer. If one portion of the testimony of a witness is invalidated, it is held that the testimony in general is worthless, so that writers should be careful in regard to all their statements.

In connection with this, in reference to the correspondence from this place, to the States, we are led to remark that, so far as we have seen, the tenor of the letters would affix the character of alarmists to the writers thereof; they make mountains of mole hills, and act on the principle of "penny-a-liners," who exaggerate every trivial item which comes to their ears, without reference to the credibility of its source, in order to give a fictitious interest to matters otherwise uninteresting. Far better would it be if they would make themselves perfectly sure of the correctness of every item, and then state it without imputing the worst motives, and without exhibiting quite so much bitterness.

[Communicated.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE VALLEY TAN:

The storm of excitement over gold discoveries in the regions of the Rocky Mountains, which raged so furiously a few weeks since, may now be considered as fairly subsided. The disastrous effects of that excitement are vivid to the minds of all. Particularly to those practically interested in those effects, the lesson is ineffaceable; and it is hoped, while it must ever stand out in "bold relief" before their view, a sad monument of the evils entailed by over-credulity, that a remembrance thereof will prove beneficial in the end, by being a living warning against hereafter attempting enterprises upon uncertain and untried grounds.

It may not be uninteresting nor unprofitable to the reader to refer back to the origin of the excitement, and speculate upon the influences which brought it about—the motives which led men to create and uphold, by dint of the most groundless falsehoods, and at the sacrifice of the happiness and prosperity of thousands of their fellow men, "baseless fabrics of a vision" in the light of reality. The fact that all that country extending from the icy regions of the north down to the silver-producing regions of the south, lying along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, which is of volcanic origin, is auriferous in its nature, has been known and spoken of by scientific men since the first topographical observations of the mountain regions of Nebraska and Kansas passed through the Patent office in the shape of a public report. At the time of these discoveries little or nothing was said relative thereto in the common conversation circles of the United States; because the discoverers themselves had treated the matter lightly. To those acquainted with the general physical history of the earth's surface, the existence of gold in innumerable parts thereof is nothing extraordinary; but its abundant existence at any point is indeed a wonder. Many heavy centuries passed away ere a California and an Australia were discovered; and over the greater portion of Siberia—a dominion covering as large an area as Nebraska and Kansas combined—gold mines are now being, and for two scores of years have been, worked, which but ill repay the capitalists engaged in them, and who possess the cheap facilities of peasant labor to prosecute the work; while in the Guinea mines of the African coast—where the finest gold yet discovered is produced—Californian and Australian fortunes are never made. The same may be said of the mines of North and South Carolina, now quite abandoned. But the brilliant successes of California and Australia had dazzled the eyes and bewildered the minds of the people to such an extent that they were unable to view the new-fledged Pike's Peak hobby with prudent coolness and caution—to consider it in the light of philosophy as emitted from the history of the past, and manifested in the proneness of human credulity to wildly rush to the first sound of excitement, like bees swarming to the rattling and clattering of "hollow sounds," as is exhibited in every day life around us. In short, the people were ripe, "cut and dried" for the "sell." Then the depressed condition in the business of the States at the opening of the humbug—making money hard to get hold of, and men uneasy in their situations, and anxious to better their conditions—gave a new impetus to the progress of the ruse, (for ruse it was, as will shortly appear.)

The origin of the whole affair, to the best of our information, which we believe to be authentic, was as follows: A few mountaineers in the locality of Cherry Creek gathered together a few scales of light gold, and exhibited them to a broken-down land speculator of eastern Nebraska. This gave new hopes to this collapsed Shylock to retrieve the fortune which he had lost in the late panic; which reduced to mere blanks what before had been extensive valuations in the unentered lands of the West. The first steps to be taken in the scheme must be to have some brother wire-pullers. A few scratches of the pen and postage-stamps effected this end. In the fall of 1858 from three to five hundred professional speculators collected upon the banks of Cherry Creek—men who had been accustomed in former days to carry purses which they could never see the bottoms of, and who had never struck a blow of manual labor towards making an honest livelihood—and began the inhuman plot. A little gold—enough to send specimens to the east—could be gotten hold of at the rate of perhaps twenty-five cents per day. Town lots were hurriedly staked off, and letter after letter crowded into the mail bags, destined for every part of the United States, containing glowing accounts of new discoveries, and additional fields for operation. Some of the heartless fiends hesitated not to allure their nearest friends into the destructive snare. Early this spring, while the ground was yet mantled with snow, the mighty column of expectant emigrants—containing thousands—began to move. Farms were mortgaged, and money borrowed for outfitting at cent. per cent.; families were left behind scantily provided for; young men left their distant homes with their baggage upon their backs, and their pockets filled with parched corn for their sole subsistence across the harrassing plains. The people were wild with excitement: their hopes were rendered brighter by all favorable rumors; and the few who were sincere enough to speak the truth were met with the sobriquet of croakers, and derided for want of energy and perseverance.

What the finality of all this is, our readers are cognizant of. A few have fallen victims of gaunt starvation; many have suffered for want of food; and thousands have so deeply encumbered themselves that years of toil will be required to place them in as prosperous circumstances as they were five months ago.

The curtain has now closed upon the scene; and we hope it may never be re-enacted. May the deceiver and the deceived receive their just dues—the former bear indelibly as did Cain of old the brand of infamy and disgrace; and the latter win and always know how to appreciate the sweet charms of a life of contentment—ever remembering that enough is embittered by increase, and that

"All that glitters is not gold."

OPPOSITION THE DEMOCRACY.—The opposition to the Democracy sail under a variety of names in different sections of the country. In Massachusetts they are Jeffersonian American Republicans; in Missouri, Free Democrats; in Virginia, Whigs; in Maryland, Know Nothings; in California, Broderick men; in Pennsylvania, the People's Party; and in Kentucky, Tennessee, and some of the other Southern States, where proper names have been all been used up on the niggers, they call themselves simply the opposition. Here is material for a fusion.

Letter from Salt Lake.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

G. S. L. CITY, May 18, 1859.

The "Valley Tan" to Change Principles.

A few minutes since, I received reliable information that Kirk Anderson's Valley Tan passes this week from under the control of the present proprietor into the hands of the Secretary of the Territory, and, if continued, will be the organ of the Executive, advocating his Mormon policy. It is said the present editor is forced to this step by the overbearing disposition of the Governor and Secretary, to the latter of whom he is under pecuniary obligations. Be this as it may, the statements of that paper in future must be received with caution, as, becoming Mormon, it must, under Mormon principles, economize truth. This change in proprietors and anticipated Somerset in principle, is much to be regretted. Of late the tone of the paper has indicated independence of Executive influence, and, by continued strong expressions of public opinion, would have materially aided to impel public officers and public men to act to the destruction of this strong-hold of crime, and punishment of criminals. This step is a retrogression, and a blow to the advancement of civilization in Utah.

The "Gentile" Press Silenced.

The Governor and Secretary of Utah seem determined to push their support of Brigham Young to the most extreme limit. Their last movement in the Mormon interest, of which we have intelligence, relates to the silencing of the Gentile press at Great Salt Lake City. Our correspondent from that city, in his last letter, alluded to the fact that Kirk Anderson had retired from the Valley Tan, and that the paper had passed into the hands of the Secretary of the Territory, Mr. Hartnett. The Secretary is a strong supporter of and believer in Gov. Cumming and his pro-Mormon policy; the editor was not. The latter upheld the U. S. Judges in their efforts to expose the numerous crimes committed in years past by men high in the Mormon community—crimes perpetrated in the name of religion. Although an intimate personal friend of the Governor's, he could not become his instrument in aiding to cover up these enormities; but was determined that the public should receive the whole truth through the columns of his journal.

This course necessarily displeased the Governor and Mr. Hartnett, who desired to be supported by the Valley Tan, through evil and good report, regardless of the facts or results. Failing to coax the editor into their plans and views, they tried coercion; and as Anderson was indebted to Hartnett, for money advanced to purchase his press, he finally concluded to retire in disgust. These facts we learn from a reliable private source. Cumming has evidently resolved to support Brigham at all hazards; and in this laudable work he appears to have an ardent backer in the White House at Washington. What more significant comment upon the conduct of these officials need we, than the fact that it cannot bear the scrutiny of an independent Press, even in the hands of their friend!

MR. ADAMS, EDITOR "VALLEY TAN."

The above articles I find in the "California Bulletin." In contradiction to which I will ask to have stated that the general tenor of both articles are untrue. The Gentile Press, as termed—"The Valley Tan"—was never suppressed or coerced by me or Gov. Cumming. I was the sole owner of the press and materials brought to this city, Mr. Anderson having its entire control. To make matters short I will answer in the only manner which an anonymous writer can be answered when he tells not the truth,—that he utters falsehoods—that he is a liar. The origin of transfer of the "Valley Tan" came through Mr. Anderson.

I fear, sir, to ask you to make these expressions; but having been misrepresented grossly, I affirm my name, and request an insertion.

I shall write to Mr. Anderson and request his certificate to an article of like nature to my communication.

Respectfully,
JOHN HARTNETT.

[From the National Intelligencer, June 2.]

AFFAIRS IN UTAH.

The official paper of yesterday contains the subjoined interesting letter of the Attorney General of the United States (under the instruction of the President) to the judges of the Territory of Utah. It will be seen that, in reference to the unfortunate collision which has occurred in that Territory between the Executive and Judicial authorities, the Administration sustains the course of the former:

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
May 17, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: The President has received your joint letter on the subject of the military force with which the court for the second district of Utah was attended during the term recently held at Provo city. He has carefully considered it, as well as all other advices relating to the same affair, and he has directed me to give you this answer.

The condition of things in Utah made it extremely desirable that the judges appointed for that Territory should confine themselves strictly within their own official sphere.—The Government had a district attorney who was charged with the duties of a public accuser, and a marshal who was responsible for the arrest and safe-keeping of criminals. For the judges there was nothing left except to hear patiently the causes brought before them, and to determine them impartially according to the evidence adduced on both sides. It did not seem either right or necessary to instruct you that these were to be the limits of your interference with the public affairs of the Territory, for the Executive never dictated to the judicial department. The President is responsible only for the appointment of proper men. You were selected from a very large number of other persons who were willing to be employed on the same service, and the choice was grounded solely on your high character for learning, sound judgment, and integrity. It was natural, therefore, that the President should look upon the proceedings at Provo with a sincere desire to find you in all things blameless.

It seems that on the 6th of March last Judge Cradlebaugh announced to the commanding officer of the military forces that on the 8th day of the same month he would begin a term of the district court at Provo, and required a military guard for certain prisoners, to the number of six or eight, who were then in custody, and would be triable at Provo. The requisition mentions it as a probable fact that "a large band of organized thieves" would be arrested, but the troops were asked for without reference to them.—Promptly responding to this call, the commanding General sent up a company of infantry who encamped at a company house, and soon afterwards ten more companies made their appearance in sight, and remained there during the whole term of the court. In the mean time, the Governor of the Territory, hearing of this military demonstration upon a town previously supposed to be altogether peaceful, appeared on the ground, made inquiries, and seeing no necessity for the troops, but believing, on the contrary, that their presence was calculated to do harm, he requested them to be removed. The request was wholly disregarded.

The Governor is the supreme executive of the Territory. He is responsible for the public peace. From the general law of the land, the nature of his office, and the instructions he received through the State Department, it ought to have been understood that he alone had power to issue a requisition for the movement of troops from one part of the Territory to another; that he alone could put the military forces of the Union and the people of the Territory into relations of general hostility with one another. The instructions given to the commanding general by the War Department are to the same effect. In that paper a "requisition" is not spoken of as a thing which any body except the Governor can make. It is true that in one clause the general is told that if the Governor, the judges, or the marshal shall find it necessary to ~~summons~~ directly a part of the troops to aid in the performance of his duty, he (the general) is to see the ~~summons~~ promptly obeyed. This was manifestly intended to furnish the means of repelling an opposition which might be too strong for the civil posse, and too sudden to admit of a formal requisition by the Governor upon the military commander. An officer finds himself resisted in the discharge of his duty, and he calls to his aid first the citizens, and, if they are not sufficient, the soldiers. This would be directly summoning a part of the troops.—A direct summons and a requisition are not convertible terms. The former signifies a mere verbal call upon either civilians or military men for force enough to put down a present opposition to a certain officer in the performance of a particular duty; and the call is to be always made by the officer who is himself opposed upon those persons who are with their own hands to furnish the aid. A requisition, on the other hand, is a solemn demand in writing made by the supreme civil magistrate upon the commander-in-chief of the military forces for the whole or a part of the army to be used in a specified service. In a Territory like Utah the person who exercises this last-mentioned power can make war and peace when he pleases, and holds in his hand the issues of life and death for thousands. Surely it was not intended to clothe each one of the judges, as well as the marshal and all his deputies, with this tremendous authority. Especially does this construction seem erroneous when we reflect that these different officers might make requisitions conflicting with one another, and all of them crossing the path of the Governor.

Besides, the matter upon which Judge Cradlebaugh's requisition bases itself was one with which the judge had no sort of official connexion. It was the duty of the marshal to see that the prisoners were safely kept and forthcoming at the proper time. For aught that appears the marshal wanted no troops to aid him, and had no desire to see himself and his civil posse displaced by a regiment of soldiers. He made no complaint of weakness and uttered no call for assistance. Under such circumstances it was a mistake of the judge to interfere with the business at all.

But, assuming the legal right of the judge to put the marshal's business into the hands of the army without the marshal's concurrence, and granting also that this might be done by means of a requisition, was there in this case any occasion for the exercise of such power? When we consider how essentially peaceable is the whole spirit of our judicial system and how exclusively it aims to operate by moral force, or, at most, by the arm of civil power; it can hardly be denied that the employment of military troops about the courts should be avoided as long as possible. Inter arma silent leges, says the maxim; and the converse of it ought to be equally true, that inter leges silent arma. The President has not found, either on the face of the requisition or in any other paper received by him, a statement of specific facts strong enough to make the presence of the troops seem necessary. Such necessity ought to have been perfectly plain before the measure was resorted to.

It is very probable that the Mormon inhabitants of Utah have been guilty of crimes for which they deserve the severest punishment. It is not intended by the Government to let any one escape against whom the proper proofs can be adduced. With that view the district attorney has been instructed to use all possible diligence in bringing criminals of every class and of all degrees to justice. We have the fullest confidence in the vigilance, fidelity, and ability of that officer. If you shall be of opinion that his duty is not performed with sufficient energy, you are at liberty to make a statement to that effect which will receive the prompt attention of the President.

It is very likely that public opinion in the Territory is frequently opposed to the conduct of parties who deserve punishment. It may be that extensive conspiracies are formed there to defeat justice. These are subjects upon which we, at this distance, can affirm or deny nothing. But, supposing your opinion upon them to be correct, every inhabitant of Utah must still be proceeded against in the regular, legal, and constitutional way. At all events the usual and established modes of dealing with public offenders must be exhausted before we adopt any others.

On the whole, the President is very decidedly of opinion—

1. That the Governor of the Territory alone has power to issue a requisition upon the commanding general for the whole or a part of the army.

2. That there was no apparent occasion for the presence of the troops at Provo.

3. That if a rescue of the prisoners in custody had been attempted it was the duty of the marshal and not of the judge to summon the force which might be necessary to prevent it.

4. That the troops ought not to have been sent to Provo without the concurrence of the Governor, nor kept there against his remonstrance.

5. That the disregard of these principles and rules of action has been in many ways extremely unfortunate.

I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,
Hon. J. CRADLEBAUGH, J. S. BLACK.
Hon. C. E. SINCLAIR,
Associate Justices Supreme Court, Utah.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

BY THE EASTERN MAIL.

[Special to the Missouri Republican.]

NEW YORK, June 2, 1 P. M.
The steamship America, of the Cunard line, has arrived at Halifax, having left Liverpool on the 21st of May.

The dates by this arrival are three to four days later than have been received by the steamers Hungarian, of the Quebec line, and the Harmonia and New York from Bremen and Southampton to New York direct.

The intelligence from the scene of hostilities in Italy present nothing very new, or that materially changes the face of affairs.

The Emperor of the French and King Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia remained at the head of the allied troops, and were actively employed, together with Marshal Canrobert, General Beldi Marmara and the leading officers under them, in promoting the efficiency of their forces.

The Austrians remained inactive as far as actual hostilities are concerned, and continued victualing their troops and posts by levying contributions on the towns of Lombardy and Piedmont in their possession.

The French and Sardinians, it was thought, would, ere long, assume the offensive, and proceed to meet the main Austrian corps d'armee of the forces under General Count Ciala.

WAR DEPARTMENT NEWS.—First Lieut. Fredwell Moore, 2d Infantry, has been appointed by the President to fill the vacancy in the Quartermaster's department occasioned by the death of Capt. Paige.—Weekly States Wash. City.

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1859.
Application has been made to the French government, in the event that Germany becomes involved in the present war in Europe, and the German ports are blockaded, to permit steamers carrying the mails of the United States to pass freely to and from Bremen and Hamburg, in the same manner as we permitted the English mail steamers to enter and depart from Vera Cruz during our war with Mexico.

The Liverpool Post publishes, on what it calls reliable information, that the passage of the Ticino by the French troops will be the signal for an European alliance against France and for the Austrian troops to march on Paris.

The bulletins from the seat of war are unimportant.

All the channels to the Venetian capital are blocked up and all the ports on the Adriatic are blockaded by the French squadron, a large number of vessels being engaged in enforcing a strict blockade.

NAPLES.
France has not yet recognized the neutrality of Naples.

COMPLIMENT TO LIEUT. MAURY.—We believe the compliment implied in the following letter to our distinguished countryman, is altogether without precedent:

HALL OF THE EAST INDIA MARINE SOCIETY, May 18, 1859.
Whereas Lieut. M. F. Maury, Superintendent of the Observatory at Washington, has devoted a very considerable portion of his life to nautical research, and has done more to promote the interests of the mercantile marine than any other living man; and whereas one of the principal objects of this society is to advance nautical science and knowledge, therefore, with a view of expressing the high sense and appreciation of the society for the important and invaluable services he has rendered his country and the commercial world—

Resolved, That Lieut. M. F. Maury be, and hereby is, elected an honorary member of the East India Marine Society.

Unanimously adopted.—Weekly States, Wash. City.

campaign by an advance into Lombardy.—To imitate the indecision of the Austrians, by pausing over the results of a first victory, would be as great a mistake as that committed by the latter. The remainder of this month has, therefore, probably been occupied in the organization of the military plans for an advance, and in the strengthening of the Italian States which have declared for the allies. These necessary steps accomplished, Louis Napoleon, who is almost as much of a predestinarian as his uncle, may select the 14th of June for another Marengo, if the Austrians will give him the opportunity.—N. Y. Weekly Herald.

THE NEW BISHOP OF NEW JERSEY.—The quest on of the successorship to the late Bishop of New Jersey has been happily settled by the election of the Rev. Wm. H. Odenheimer, D. D. of Philadelphia, to the Episcopal office.

THREATENED TROUBLE BETWEEN FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—[From the London Morning Advertiser (Liberal) May 17.]—We are enabled to state that a very angry correspondence is just now going on between the French and English governments, relative to the permission granted by our government to Austrian vessels to take shelter under our guns at Malta.

The French government energetically complain of this, as showing an undue friendship for Austria, inasmuch as French vessels, having no fear of Austrian ships, do not seek or require the same protection.

LOANS TO THE FIGHTING POWERS.—Europe on the brink of Bankruptcy.—From the news from Europe, it appears that Louis Napoleon asks for a loan of 500,000,000 francs ($160,000,000) to carry on the campaign in Italy, in which he takes command in person. This loan will be obtained from the middle classes, in small sums. The loan lately put in the market by Russia is $90,000,000. Besides these there are in the market a loan for Austria of $100,000,000, which hitherto she has been unable to sell, but has seized instead the metallic currency of the Austrian banks; a loan for Sardinia of $25,000,000, which she has succeeded in obtaining; a loan for Prussia of $45,000,000, and a loan for England in behalf of India for $30,000,000.

The total amount of new loans in the market is $360,000,000, besides over $10,000,000 already due by these Governments. The effect of the coming war will be to make nearly all of them bankrupt. The annual interest on the debt of England alone is $120,000,000. The annual expense of her army and navy is $157,500,000. Her whole annual expense is $340,000,000. Russia owes $989,000,000, and the annual expense of her army and navy is $73,500,000.

Trip of the President to North Carolina.

[From the Washington Star, May 31.]

The President left the city yesterday by the three o'clock train for Baltimore, on his way to Chapel Hill, North Carolina. He was accompanied to the depot by the members of the Cabinet, Mr. Navy Agent Flinn and several other personal friends.

The President was looking in fine health and spirits, and as if disposed to enjoy to the utmost his brief relaxation from the cares of State.

He arrived in Baltimore at half past four, accompanied by Hon. Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior. At the depot the distinguished visitors were received by Dr. John Morris, Postmaster, and General J. W. Watkins, United States Marshal, and proceeded to the wharf of the Baltimore Steam Packet Company. Col. Moor N. Falls, President of the line, received them on board of the fine steamer Louisiana, Captain Russell, where fine staterooms were reserved for their accommodation. The principal saloons were tastefully decorated by Mr. George S. Allen, purser of the steamer, with the American flag, and there is no doubt that the passengers, quite a large number, were much pleased with the trip. Upon the arrival of the party at the wharf, several persons had assembled, and many of them, without regard to party, seemed much pleased in exchanging congratulations with the President. He expects to return to the White House on Monday.

The Wilmington (N. C.) Herald of the 20th ult., says:

We learn that quite a number of our citizens, ladies and gentlemen, independent of the military, intend being present at Chapel Hill to participate in the pleasures and see the President. Several left on Saturday; others go at three o'clock this afternoon, with the military. We notice several members of the Lafayette Cornet Band of Fayetteville in town this morning. They have been engaged for the trip by the Light Infantry, and will be accompanied by one or two performers from this town.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.
The Southern Convention assembled at Vicksburg to-day. Eight States are represented. Charles Clark, of Mississippi, was appointed President. Resolutions in favor of the re-opening of the slave trade were offered by Mr. Spratt, of South Carolina.—Gen. Foote denounced Mr. Spratt's sentiments as high treason, and read the laws of ten States, prohibiting the slave trade. He thought it was the duty of the government to acquire Cuba, and to gain a preponderance on the Isthmus; and also advocated resistance to the rule of a Republican President.

A letter to The Times, dated Paris, May 2, says: "At a dinner given to the superior officers of the Imperial Guard by the Emperor before their departure, his Majesty said to the officers, on bidding them adieu, 'We are going to have a Summer's work together, but I hope we shall be able to hunt together at Campaigne in September.' His Majesty limits the war to four months. It is said he never appeared so gay and joyous as at present."

THE PIKE'S PEAKERS RETURNING ENRAGED.—The St. Joseph correspondent of the Democrat notices the arrival at that place of 100 Pike's Peakers, who give deplorable accounts of mining prospects and suffering on the Plains. It is estimated that 20,000 men now on their way, all or most of whom, destitute of money and the necessities of life, are perfectly reckless. Desperate threats are made of burning Omaha, St. Joseph, Leavenworth and other towns in consequence of the deception used to induce emigration. Two thousand men are reported fifty miles west of Omaha, in a starving condition. Some of the residents at Plattsmouth have closed up their houses and fled, fearing violence at the hands of the enraged emigrants.

Interesting St. Joseph Items.
[From the Journal, May 24.]

ARRIVAL OF ELEVEN HUNDRED MORMONS.—No less than 1,100 Mormons, men, women and children, arrived on the train Friday night from Hannibal. With this army of Mormons and the Pike's Peakers, our town presented a formidable appearance throughout Saturday. In fact, if they have had coals, they might have cleaned us out.

H. AND ST. J. R.—We understand that the officers of this road, with a commendable spirit, having been taking large numbers of the returned emigrants over the road free, and those who had means were only charged a small price.

THE PEAKERS.—There was no less than a thousand returned Peakers in our city on Saturday night. The Hesperian brought down nearly five hundred, and they report much suffering on the plains. Many have perished for want of food and water.

OVER THE PLAINS.—Another long train of wagons, accompanied by a drove of about two hundred young cattle, passed up the Bellemont ferry boat, yesterday, destined for the golden State of the Pacific. There were several families with the train, who are to cast their destinies upon the shores of the placid ocean, and the sunshine and flowers of California.

NINE HUNDRED PASSENGERS.—We venture the assertion that the Railroad packet St. Mary left for Omaha Saturday night with the largest passenger list ever before crowded on any steamer on the Western waters. She had nine hundred passengers aboard, seven hundred and thirty-five were Mormons on the lower decks. But very few of the Mormons took cabin passage, probably less than fifty, but the decks were one living mass of human beings. What a fearful responsibility rested on the pilot and engineer. Just think! nine hundred souls entrusted to their care.

EMPHATIC.—We have been somewhat amused in noticing the inscriptions and devices on the wagon covers of the Pike's Peak emigrants. One went through a day or two since, with a large elephant painted over the whole cover. Another had a rude attempt at a pike, with a pyramid to represent the Peak. But the most unequivocal inscription yet, we noticed on the wagon cover of a returned emigrant on Saturday. It reads: "Oh Yes! Pike's Peak in H-I and D-N nations!" We think the man owning that wagon must be of the opinion that he has been badly humbugged, and he thus emphatically expresses himself.

By the California Mail.

TELEGRAPH TO SALT LAKE.—We are gratified to state, says the Mountain Democrat, that orders have been sent to Genoa to commence immediately the extension of the Placerville and St. Joseph Telegraph Line to Salt Lake. Fifty miles of the wire, the President of the company informs us, is already at Genoa, ready for use, and a large quantity more on the road. The company intend to push forward the work with the utmost rapidity, and if they meet with no accident, hope to be in direct communication with Salt Lake by the fourth of July next.

P. H. & S. L. TELEGRAPH CO.—We are pleased to learn that this company are about resuming operations on the construction of the line, with a view of extending it to Salt Lake during the coming season if possible.—Territorial Enterprise, Carson Valley.

Governor Stevens addressed a large number of his fellow citizens at Olympia recently. He already has 32 out of the 62 votes at the coming Territorial Convention instructed to support his claims as delegate to Congress.

Mr. Owen, Sub-Indian Agent was on his way down to Vancouver with the noted chiefs, Kamiakin and Skilom.—Olympia Pioneer.

Utah affairs will occupy the attention of the Government. Judge Cradlebaugh has not, as reported, been removed, although the probability is that he will be.—San Fran. Herald.

Judge Cradlebaugh has neither resigned, nor been removed, as he is at present officiating in this city.

Carson Valley Correspondence of S. Fran. Herald.

MORMON AFFAIRS.

We await with anxiety the arrival of the mail stage now due from Salt Lake, hoping to hear of a collision between our cousins, the boys of Uncle Sam, and Brother Brigham. We have every reason to anticipate such news, for it is not probable that Gov. Cumming would have issued his proclamation of the 9th instant, if danger had not been imminent.

THE INDIAN MURDERS.

Major Dodge, our Indian Agent, has returned from his expedition to the north, whither he had gone for the purpose of ferreting out the murderers of Lassen and his man. I am sorry to say that the Major has not been able to detect the murderers, but he discovered facts sufficient to convince him that they were not Indians. These facts are, the undisturbed condition of the clothing and provisions of the unfortunate men; the unerring accuracy of the three shots fired at Lassen and his companions—two persons being killed instantly, and the third ball passing through the clothing of the survivor; and the fact that no Indians nor signs of them can be found anywhere in the country around.

The Plute chiefs state the existence of numerous white banditti infesting the country in the neighborhood of Pyramid Lake.

THE OPENING OF THE NICARAGUA ROUTE.—The necessary security has been given by Mr. Johnson, the contractor with our government for opening the Nicaragua route to California, and the contract is now signed, sealed and delivered. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the business is now a fixed fact. Not only has the contractor the authority of our government, who are determined to have the route open at all hazards, but he has also the authority of the Nicaraguan government, who will protect his line against all others. The opening will take place on the 5th of October next, and there are to be two trips each month, one on the 5th and the other on the 20th.—There will be no necessity, therefore, for filibusters hereafter. What they wanted to accomplish by force and war is achieved by diplomacy and the arts of peace. We wish the line every success; indeed, of that there can be no doubt, if it be not the fault of the contractor himself. There is ample business to make it pay well. Let him be punctual in opening the line at the stipulated time; let the comfort and convenience of the passengers be attended to, and let good, sea-worthy vessels, well commanded and well manned, be employed, and there is no danger of failure.—This route has been long enough closed by the schemes of steamboat commodores and Wall street financiers, and the public rejoice that it is now so soon to be opened under the sanction of our government and that of Nicaragua.—N. Y. Herald.

THE FASHION DECREE.—Eugenie, the Empress of the French, and the Queen of that large army of the weak-minded, who are willing slaves of Fashion, has decreed that the dresses, which now hang upon the shoulders with straps, and mar their shape, shall be dropped to the arm-pits—leaving the upper part of the bust completely bare, after the style of Catherine de Medicis. She also adjudges long dresses a bore, and wills it that they shall be shortened to about halfway below the knee, with an adoption of the flesh-colored stockings worn by Madame de Castiglione. Already in some of the soirees dantesques in New York, some of the most fashionable women have adopted the habit, in all its nakedness.

A Card to the Public.

The Copartnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Livingston, Kinkead & Co., has expired by limitation.

Mr. Kinkead retires from the concern, having sold his entire interest to James M. Livingston, Esq.

The new firm of Livingston, Bell & Co., have full control of the entire effect of the old firm and power to adjust all claims for or against.

HOWARD LIVINGSTON,
CHAS. A. KINKEAD,
WILLIAM BELL.

Daily Mo. Republican, insert three times, and send bill to "Valley Tan" Office for payment. 33-3t.

A CARD.

James M. Livingston, William Bell and Howard Livingston, have formed a Copartnership to do business in this Territory, under the name and style of Livingston, Bell & Co., as successors to the old firm of Livingston, Kinkead & Co., and would most respectfully solicit a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to that firm.

33-3t LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

250 Tons Merchandise.
LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,
Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd.

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest stock, and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale in this market; and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, flattering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates.

33-3m LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS,
CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
IMPORTING
AND
WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Wholesale Importing Druggists,
DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles,
Paints, Oils, Brushes,
Camphene, Lamps,
Machine and pure Lard Oils,
Hops, Brewers' Materials, &c.

139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for the following valuable preparations:

Jaynes' Alternative, Expecterant, Hair Tonic, Vermifuge, Sassafras, Sarsaparilla, Peruvian, Febrifuge, Glove Anodyne, and Roman Eye Balsam;
Dr. Moffatt's Pills and Bitters;
Ayer's Pectoral and Pills;
Wistar's Balsam Wild Cherry;
Green's Oxygenated Bitters;

All of which we offer for sale at very near New York prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.

WE are agents for the celebrated Perfumery House of Jules Haugel & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

HOPS! HOPS!
WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1858 hops, to which we invite the attention of
R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.

THERE is no longer any doubt about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr. Marsh's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.

WE have just received per clipper Intrepid, from New York, a large invoice of choice Paints and Oils, consisting in part of superior Boiled and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Paris Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermillion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue, Putty, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Conch Varnish, Japan, Furniture and Danish Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyke Brown, &c., for sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for sale by
R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, No. 139 J street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rate, by
R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power & Weichmann, Philadelphia.

200 ounces Quinine;
75 pounds Iodine Potassium;
80 pounds Chloroform;
750 pounds Sp. Nitro, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,000 superior Soda Corks, 50,000 superior Wine Corks, 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Keg Corks, &c., for sale low, by
R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

Oils, Oils, Oils!

PURE Lard Oil, Machine Oil, Sperm Oil, and refined Palm Oil, for sale low, by
R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Druggists, Sacramento.

Information Wanted
OF ANN and CATHARINE COOK.

Who left St. Louis for Salt Lake in 1854. Any one giving the desired information will confer a great favor on their brother Peter Cook. Address Peter Cook, Box No. 2440, St. Louis P. O., or to Secretary of St. U. T.

NOTICE!!
LARGE SALE OF PUBLIC
MULES, WAGONS AND
HARNESS.

On THURSDAY, 14th JULY next,
WILL be Sold at Public Auction, at CAMP FLOYD, U. T., to the highest bidder, for special or Government Funds, 2000 or more excellent draft and saddle Mules, with several hundred Army Wagons, together with Harness for the same complete.

The Mules are all young, sound, thoroughly broken, and in good condition; and the Wagons and Harness are in complete repair, with all equipments for immediate service.

The sale of this valuable property will commence on the day above mentioned, in lots of one or more, and will continue, from day to day, until all are sold.

G. H. CROSSMAN,
Dep'ty Q. M. Gen'l.,
Camp Floyd, U. T., June 22, 1859. 32-3t

NOTICE.
MANY HORSES and MULES, the property of the United States, have strayed and been stolen from the different public herds during the past autumn and winter in the Valley of Utah, and satisfactory evidence having been furnished to the undersigned that some of those animals are, or have been in possession of citizens of Utah Territory.

This is to give notice, that I will pay a reasonable and proper reward in money, to whomsoever will deliver to me Estrays or stolen public animals, evidence also being furnished the undersigned that the immense herds of animals known as Church Herds, or as the property of Government, have been taken up by a great number of the Mormon animals, with the U. S. brand discovered by being over-branded with a trying pan, or a smoothing iron. This is to give notice to such individuals as have control of that stock, to deliver the same to me at this Depot.

P. T. TURNLEY,
Capt. Q. M. Dep't.,
Camp Floyd, U. T., June 14th, 1859. 32-3t

200 DOLLARS REWARD.
STOLEN!
FROM the Kanyon, south of Cedar Fort, and 5 miles north-west of Camp Floyd, in Cedar Valley, on the morning of the 4th inst., one small bay PONY, branded with the letter "J" on the left shoulder, and one small light bay mare MULE, branded B.G. on left shoulder, and U.S. on left hip; together with their saddles and bridles (the saddles government pattern).

The above animals were stolen by two young men, who were passed going up the Kanyon (one of them had a light beard and was dressed in buckskin breeches), and were seen from the top of the mountain to go up to where the animals were picketed; they were afterwards tracked down to Cedar Fort, and their foot-prints found to have come from that place in the morning.

Another Mule, stolen at the same time and place, was recovered the same day, tied to the bushes at the mouth of the Kanyon near Cedar Fort.

$50 will be paid for the recovery of each of the animals and their equipments and $50 each for the apprehension and delivery of the thieves at this Camp.

Camp Floyd, U. T., June 10th, 1859. 32-3t

THE VALLEY TOWN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, 1859.

NUMBER 34.

AFFAIRS IN UTAH.

The President's Instructions to the District Attorney of the Territory.

The following letter from the United States Attorney General to the District Attorney for Utah was found in the Washington Constitution:

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
May 17, 1859.

Sir:—Your letters of March 24 and April 6, addressed to me have been received. The grave importance of the facts contained in them, and in other communications from Utah by the same mail, required that the whole correspondence of the several departments with the officers of the Territory should be laid before the President. He has carefully considered the subject, and his opinion will be found expressed in a letter from me to the two Associate Justices of the Territory—a copy of which I send you.

You are clothed with the authority of a public accuser for the Territory. It is your duty to commence and carry on all public prosecutions with such aid and assistance as you see proper to call in. On proper occasions, and in a proper, respectful manner you must oppose every effort which any judge may make to usurp your functions. Do not allow your rights to remain unasserted. If the judges will confine themselves to the simple and plain duty imposed upon them by law, of hearing and deciding cases that are brought before them, I am sure that the business of the Territory will get along very well. This must be impressed upon their minds, if possible, for, if they will insist upon doing the duties of Prosecuting Attorney, and Marshal, as well as their own, every thing will be thrown into confusion, and the peace of the Territory may be destroyed at any moment.

But your duty must be performed with energy and impartiality. Every crime that is committed, no matter by whom, should be exposed and punished. I need not say that you are to make no distinction between Gentile and Mormon, or between Indian and white man. You will prosecute the rich and the poor, the influential and the humble with equal vigor, and thus entitle yourself to the confidence of all.

It is only by these general remarks that I can express the wishes of the President with reference to your office; for at this distance it is impossible to give you detailed instructions. But there is one subject to which I would call your special attention. It appears that a company of emigrants from Arkansas to California was attacked at the Mountain Meadows, three hundred miles south of Salt Lake, and one hundred and nineteen cruelly murdered, none being spared except a few children, all of whom were under seven years of age. This crime, by whomsoever committed, was one of the most atrocious that has ever blackened the character of the human race. The Mormons blame it upon the Indians, and the accusation receives some color from the fact that all the children who survived the massacre were found in the possession of Indians. Others, and among them a judge of the Territory, declare their unhesitating belief that the Mormons themselves committed this foul murder. All the circumstances seem, from the correspondence to be enveloped in mystery. In your letter the manner of the murder is described—showing that the emigrants were attacked within a corral which they had formed for defence, that they agreed to surrender their arms upon the promise that their lives should be spared, and after doing so were all of them treacherously butchered. Why does the information stop there? If that much be known how is it that we know no more? Who were the parties that received this surrender, and how is it proved? Cannot the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, or some one connected with that department of the public service trace back the children from the Indians in whose possession they were found to the corral where their parents were slain? It is said that some of the Mormon inhabitants of Utah have property of the emigrants in their possession. If this be true, will it not furnish a thread which, properly followed, would lead back to the scene of the crime?

These are mere suggestions, which are intended to show the interest of the government on the subject, rather than to instruct you in the performance of your duty. It is, however, confidently expected of you that you will intermit no watch, nor let any opportunity escape you of learning all that can be known upon this subject. If you shall be under the necessity of employing agents, such reasonable expenses as you may be put to on that account will be paid. Your conduct at Provo seems, from all accounts of it, to have been perfectly proper, and is fully approved by the President. Your refusal on a former occasion to violate the promise of pardon contained in the President's proclamation was equally praiseworthy and correct.

I am, very respectfully,
Yours &c.,
ALEX. WILSON, Esq., J. S. BLACK.
U. S. District Attorney,
Utah Territory.

EMIGRATION.—The prospect of a great emigration this year—far surpassing that of 1858, and at least equal to that of '57—is beginning to be realized. The number of emigrants arrived at the port of New York during the week ending the 18th inst., was 7,128, making a total of 22,329 since the commencement of the year.—Wash. States, May 23.

NEWS ITEMS.

RUSSIA.

The "Nord" states that the Russian government has given orders for the 1st, 2d, 3d, 5th and 6th corps d'armee to be placed immediately on a war footing, with the whole of the artillery and cavalry belonging to each. The reserves are to be called, and all soldiers on furlough to rejoin their colors to be ready to march within three months.

SPAIN.

The Spanish government has given orders for a supply of tents for an army of 30,000 men.

The "Moniteur" also contains the following despatch from Alessandria, May 16, 1859.

The rain has fallen incessantly during the last two days, but the bad weather has not prevented our troops from taking the positions assigned to them by the Emperor, whose headquarters still continue to be at Alessandria.

GERMANY.

It is affirmed in the ministerial circles of Berlin, that Prussia for the moment maintains an expectant policy, and has not bound herself to any power to remain neutral. Germany is disposed to leave the initiative to Prussia, as she will have the heaviest burden to support in the common defence.

The position of Austria is one of extreme difficulty. In Italy she has to make head against France, Sardinia and the national party; in Dalmatia and in the Viovodina she must be prepared to ward off the attacks of the Turkish Rayahs, Savians and Roumans; and she has now to place a large army on her north-eastern and northern frontiers, in order to keep Russia at bay. While Austria is in this terrible dilemma, England announces that she intends to maintain an armed neutrality, and Prussia tells Germany that the moment for action is not yet arrived.

By the overland telegraph in London, it appears that the Red Sea cable has been laid from Aden to Cossier, which is within about three hundred miles of the Suez. The completion of that branch of the undertaking may, therefore, be expected almost immediately.

It is said that arms have been sent to Hungary, and that the Hungarians abroad are indefatigable in their exertions to create a diversion in favor of the French by an insurrection in that part of the Austrian dominions. Gen. Klapka is said to be now in Piedmont, waiting for the most favorable moment to carry out the plans organized by the Hungarian committee.

New York, May 27.

A private dispatch from New Orleans says Miramon's Cabinet has issued a decree, restoring Santa Anna to all rights and title which he formerly held in Mexico, and inviting his return via Tampico, whither General Wall is marching to meet him.

St. Louis, May 29, 1859.

The California overland mail of the 6th of May arrived yesterday. The news is entirely unimportant.

A letter from Fort Belknap, of the 22d instant, says that an express has just arrived there from Camp Radziminski, bringing a report to the effect that Major Van Horn had a desperate fight with the Northern Camanches on the fork of the Arkansas river, May 16. Forty Indians were killed and thirty-six taken prisoners. Of the United States troops, two soldiers were killed and several wounded. Among the latter are Lieutenant Lee and Captain Smith. A letter also says that between four and five hundred Texans were encamped about twenty miles below the Brazos, on the Indian Reserve, with the avowed intention of attacking the Reserve Indians. Much excitement prevailed in that region.

WASHINGTON, June 2d.

The Navy Department to-day received a letter from Captain Farragut, commanding the U. S. ship-of-war Brooklyn, dated Vera Cruz, May 21, in which he says that Captain Jarvis sailed in the ship Savannah, for Pensacola, on the 18th, and the U. S. ship Saratoga arrived at Vera Cruz on the same day. He adds, as Minister McLane is desirous of having a ship at Tampico, in anticipation of an attack on that place by the Miramon party, I shall direct Commander Turner to proceed thither immediately, with orders to land a force of marines and others, if necessary, for the protection of the American Consulate, and such American citizens as may seek his protection, and in the event of the town being carried by assault, to require of the Commanding General the assurance of protection to the Consulate and all American citizens. Such instructions will be in conformity with the views of the Minister.

Col. Steptoe, Capt. Carr, Capt. Palmer, and Lieut. Palmer have been ordered to Sardinia as has been stated, as a corps of observation of European hostilities. They, however, have obtained leave of absence, as private individuals, with permission to visit Europe, and doubtless they will visit the scene of war.

STORM IN THE SOUTH.—A letter from Gainesville (Ala.) of the 10th ult. reports a terrific storm in that vicinity, causing, among the disasters, the death of J. W. M. Berrien, brother of the late Senator J. M. Berrien.

The Murder of Joseph Charles.

Elsewhere will be found the particulars of this terrible tragedy. We have known Mr. Charles personally from our childhood, and in common with his many friends—and they can be enumerated only by thousands—regret his sad and sudden death. We say death, because at 10 o'clock, the hour we write, he is reported to us as sinking very fast, and that before the rising of another sun his spirit will have taken its flight to its long home.

Whilst we sympathize with the relatives of Mr. Charles, we also regret the mortification the relatives of Thornton must necessarily experience in consequence of this melancholy event. They are estimable people, and highly respected in this city.

No explanation will probably be given by either the party who committed the deed or the dying victim, and therefore we volunteer our opinion: Three years ago the Boatman's Saving Institution was robbed of nearly $2,000, and Thornton, who, at that time, was cashier, was suspected of having had some knowledge of the robbery. The money was nearly all in bills on the State Bank of Missouri. Two years afterward, a boy presented a large roll of mutilated bills, which had the appearance of having been buried in the ground, at the counter of the State Bank of Missouri, for redemption. At first he refrained to say who had sent him with the bills, but finally admitted that it was Thornton. The matter was then reported to Mr. Charles, who at that time was President of the Bank, and he immediately informed the officers of the Boatman's saving institution of the occurrence, and they had Thornton arrested. Thornton was tried on a charge of embezzlement and acquitted, and we suppose that he has assigned all of his trouble, blasted reputation and incarceration in prison, to this act of Mr. Charles, in which, in our opinion, Mr. Charles did nothing more than his duty.—St. Louis Morning Herald, June 4.

A GLANCE AT THE PAST.—Battles in Europe.—As a matter of interest, at present, we give the following result of desperate battles fought in Europe since 1812:

On the heights, four miles from Salamanca, in Spain, the English and Spaniards under Wellington, totally defeated the French under Marmon, on the 22d of July, 1812. The allies lost 6,200 men; and the French 16,000.

At the battle of Smolensk, in Russia, in 1812, the French loss was 17,000, and that of the Russians 10,000.

At Borodino, on the 7th September, was fought a desperate battle between the Russians and French. The French lost, in killed, wounded and prisoners, 50,000; and the Russians about the same number. The survivors of the French army, from the Russian campaign, were not more than 35,000, out of an army of 600,000 men.

At Lutzen, in Russian Saxony, on the 2d May, 1813, the allied Russian and Prussian forces were defeated by the French under Napoleon, the French losing 18,000, and the allies 15,000 men.

At Bautzen, in Saxony, on the 21st and 22d May, 1813, a battle took place between the allies and the French, in which the French loss was put down at 25,000, and that of the allies 15,000.

At Dresden, in Saxony, on the 26th and 27th August, 1813, the allies were defeated by the French. The loss of the allies was about 25,000, killed, wounded and prisoners, and that of the French about 12,000.

At Leipzig, in Saxony, in October, 1813, a desperate battle was fought, which lasted three days, and the French were totally defeated by the allies. Napoleon lost two marshals, twenty generals, and 60,000 men. The allies lost 1,790 officers, and about 40,000 men.

At Vittoria, in Spain, on the 21st of June, 1813, the English and French fought a battle, in which the French lost 7,000 men, and the English 5,180 men.

At Toulouse, in France, Wellington defeated the French under Soult, on the 10th April, 1814. The French loss was 4,700; allied army's loss 4,280 men.

At Ligny, in France, a battle occurred between the Prussians and the French, on the 16th June, 1816, two days before the battle of Waterloo, in which the Prussians lost 15,000 men, and the French 6,800.

In the decisive battle at Quatre Bras, in Belgium, on the 16th June, the day before the battle of Waterloo, the allies lost 5,200 men, and the French 114.

At Waterloo, the total loss of the allies was 16,830 men. Napoleon's was about 40,000.

Neither the Austrians nor the Prussians can derive much encouragement from history to engage in a war with France. The French troops have only been matched in these wars by the English, the Spaniards, and the Russians—scarcely by the last named.—Mo. Repub.

ANOTHER PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE.—The Chester (Pa.) Republican strongly recommends the Hon. John M. Reed, one of the Supreme Court Judges of Pennsylvania as a proper man to be nominated for President by the republicans.

The latest Presidential gossip at New York is, that the hards are moving for the nomination of James Guthrie, of Kentucky, for President, and of Horatio Seymour, of New York, for vice President.

SATIRE OF THE LONDON TIMES UPON NAPOLEON III.—The London Times of May 11 has an article upon the departure of Napoleon III. to assume the command of the French army, in which it bitterly satirizes and derides him. It opens thus:

"Yesterday the Emperor of the French left his capital to take command of his army. When these words were read by our fathers, some half a century ago, every one knew there was thunder in the air, and that the bolt would soon fall; they knew also that the crash of sacked cities and cries of broken armies would soon be heard. It is not quite with the same certainty of havoc that we follow the flight of the tamer eagle of the Bonaparte family. He has taken all his possessions; he has left the Empress all the functions of the regency, and has weighted them with those proper restrictions which he thinks necessary to prevent the operation of amicable weakness, or feminine irresolution. In matters of State, in his absence, he has left her his orders and instructions to guide her, and his photograph, newly taken, to console her. If we look back for a precedent for an event of this courtly impertinence, we must rest upon the magnificent ceremonial which accompanied the departure of the uncle of the present Emperor, in the month of May, in the famous year 1812. Then, also, an Emperor of France recommended to the protection of his people his wife and his one child, and went forward in a plenitude of magnificence, which even Napoleon III. cannot yet emulate, to take command of half a million of men in arms, and to direct the thunders of thirteen hundred guns."

The temper and style of this article are in remarkable contrast to the extravagant eulogies which the Times delighted to bestow upon this "tamer eagle of the Bonaparte family" during the Crimean War, when he was the ally of England. It carries us back to the days of the coup d'etat in 1851, when it was accustomed to denounce him in the most savage manner. Napoleon is personally great or small, good or bad, as his policy shall happen to chime in with the wishes of England.

The allusion of the Times, and its comparison of the departure of Napoleon III. for his army with that of his uncle in 1812, when he set out on the disastrous Moscow campaign, is as bitter as gall. The Times evidently wants the nephew to find his Moscow in Italy.

90 MILES MORE OF THE COLUMBIA OPENED TO STEAM.—The Col. Wright returned to her landing at Des Chutes mouth, on Tuesday last, having landed Gen. Palmer and his freight at Priest Rapids, on the east bank of the Columbia. The distance by the meandering of the river, from the Walla Walla landing to Priest Rapids is estimated at 90 miles, the stream being singularly crooked in its course. It is described, however, as a noble sheet of water all the distance, without a rapid or obstruction to navigation. The banks are low and sandy and worthless on either side for cultivation, as far as could be seen from the steamer's deck. Priest Rapids, it would appear are in character, very similar to the Cascades, and are estimated at five miles in length, with, possibly, more fall in that distance than at the Cascades. The question of surmounting them with steam power has therefore, been set at rest. They are impracticable, and whenever the trade of the country shall warrant it, a steamboat will be placed above them, as has been done above the Cascades and the Des Chutes. The last trip of the Col. Wright, to Priest Rapids, is another important step in the development of the country.—Dallas Journal.

The United States Mail Steamship Vanderbilt, Capt. P. E. Lefevre, from Southampton on the 11th instant, arrived at New York on Saturday at noon.

The log book of the Vanderbilt indicates that the present voyage is the most rapid of all transatlantic passages. We subjoin an extract:

	Distance in Miles.
May 12 Left the Needles at 7 p.m. Distance at noon	235
May 13 Light wind at south	330
May 14 Light wind at north	327
May 15 Calm	325
May 16 Strong winds W. and S. W.	323
May 17 Light winds at northeast	335
May 18 Strong winds at N. E. by E.	345
May 19 Light winds at east	365
May 20 Calm and thick fog. Distance by D. R.	340
May 21 Light winds S. E., with fog	190

Total distance from Needles to Lightship 3115
Hove to off Lightship at 10 p.m., in a dense fog.

Adding the usual time of passage from the Lightship to New York, and the differences of longitude, the entire voyage is found to have occupied only nine days, nine hours and twenty-six minutes.

The Paris correspondent of the National Intelligencer says that in the Austrian service there are no less than five Irish Field Marshals, four Major-Generals, and a dozen or more Colonels and Majors, while, if France should cross the Alps, a far more numerous army of fighting Irish will be marshaled against their Austrian kinsmen. There are two hundred Irish officers upon the French army list, and General McMahon is likely to guide the first campaign in Piedmont, in case of war.

Abstract of Remarks Of Orson Hyde, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Morning, June 28th, 1859.

Brethren and Gentlemen and Ladies—I desire your earnest attention; my words are of momentous interest, not only to the Saints and people in the mountains, but of equal interest to the people of the States, and of the world.

Somewhere in the writings of the ancient prophets of God may be found the following scripture: "In the last days, Saviors shall be raised up to save the people, and they shall be judges in Zion."

In order to fulfill this prophecy, there must be last days—days of trouble—the people—God's people must be in great tribulation and danger, without capacity or power to ward off that danger or save themselves; and Saviors must be raised up with power and will to save, having knowledge and grace to be rulers and judges in Zion.

What is a Savior? I cannot better give you an understanding of its true meaning and force, than by relating the history of one who was eminently the Savior of a nation and its people. He here related with minute particularity the history of Joseph, after he had interpreted the King's dream, and been elevated to power in Egypt. Showed that Joseph had purchased all the surplus grain of Egypt, with the public money, during the seven years of plenty, garnering it away for the seven years of famine—making himself emphatically a savior of the people from starvation, though he did bring all their money into the king's storehouse, and purchased all their herds, and lands, and finally themselves, with bread. And he you warned. These all remain, from that day, the property of the king. The desolation here spoken of is about to come to pass, and be fulfilled in your midst. Great tribulation is drawing close upon you. Famine will soon, very soon, stare you in the face. Misery and want will cling to you. Who will save this people from impending ruin? Who, I ask, of these Elders and Bishops, will prepare themselves to be Saviors of this people from temporal death—from starvation. How do we know that this desolation will shortly come to pass? I answer: God has revealed, and I declare unto you is now revealing, these things to His elect, to the end that Zion shall not starve.

His ancient prophets foretell the time, and declare "the people shall deceive and be deceived."

How is that? You know everything is deception. The linen you buy is part cotton; your rum is rotum; your money may be bogus. Whiskey is no longer pure, but is drugged with arsenic and other poisons. It hardly becomes me to say that governments deceive; yet you know that corruption is in high places. Here you have the proof of the signs of the times. And I tell you, I warn you, a famine is coming upon you, in which you will raise nothing for three years. Who will prepare for this exigency? Will you, dear Saints, being fully warned, save yourselves? Or will you be like the foolish virgins? I fear when the emergency shall come, many of your lamps will need oil—your granaries be empty of wheat!

What! you do not think that when the Saints are purified, by the sloughing off of the apostasy now going on, so great a proportion will be found foolish among us, as was of the ten virgins? Yes! you will not learn wisdom.

An east wind now prevails every night, already blighting vegetation. You will not forget how much trouble we had to germinate seeds this Spring. Where is that plentiful harvest of fruit promised in the early Spring? Most of it now withers on the ground.

Let me entreat you, husband your surplus, that perchance you may have enough to last you, as did the wise virgins, though you may not be able to give to the foolish ones. Sell it! not. The time has been when an hundred pounds of flour brought an hundred dollars in Utah. The time is near at hand when a barrel of pure gold dust will not buy a barrel of flour. Be not astonished, nor try to flee from this valley to escape the famine. If you do, you will only be jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire. Because the famine will be much worse in the States than here. You know judgment must begin at the house of God. And if the righteous shall scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly appear? If you leave here you will only be jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire. I have been a traveler—have crossed the ocean six times, and been in many hard storms; and have never yet thought it safest for me to leave the ship and leap into the mad waters. The people of the States will soon begin to flock here to us, in our mountain home, for bread.

Who will save this people? I call upon you Elders and Bishops, and all those in high places, to prepare for this dreaded time. If this people are not faithful in the riches of Mammon, then will not God give us the true riches.

ACCIDENT.—The Council Bluffs Bugle is responsible for the following:

We learn from persons just returned from Pike's Peak, that General Larimer attempted to climb to the top of the Peak, and when within about six feet of the top, the point broke off in the General's arms, and the General and the Peak rolled down to the foot of the Peak together. The Gen. was badly bruised, but the Peak was not seriously injured.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, July 6, 1859.

Another "Independence Day" has passed, the eighty-second anniversary has been celebrated, and we congratulate ourselves that we are not called upon to chronicle here any of those disastrous accidents from the careless use of fire-arms, which are so apt to mark the day in the States. So far as we learn, the day passed off without fracas or disturbance of any kind, although the city was quite full of persons enjoying the National Holiday.

The Declaration of Independence was read by Col. J. E. Little, at the court house. There was some display of the local militia during the day. The horses attached to one of the cannons, ran off early in the morning, and seriously injured two or three persons.

The Eastern mail arrived on Sunday, evening July 3d. We have dates from Liverpool to 25th May, and from New York to June 9th. A battle was fought at Montebello May 20th. The bulletins of the opposing parties contain very different versions of the affair. We extract as fully as our room will admit of, from our eastern exchanges.

Two of the boys, the oldest and most intelligent of the survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre, have been kept here in case their evidence should be needed in the endeavors to ferret out the actors in that tragedy.

We omitted in our last, to state that Major Whiting had consented to take the immediate charge of the children sent to the States.

We have been informed that some of the ladies who had been engaged to attend to these children, had not been allowed to leave.

Affidavits were made against Mrs. Hardie, that she was about to leave with the intention of defrauding her creditors, or rather her creditor—the "Perpetual Emigration Fund."

The amount due was over $200. These debts to the P. E. Fund are like Sinbad's old man of the sea—very difficult to be got rid of.

A man by the name of Price, a wagon-master to the army, was shot through the heart this morning, (July third,) in Fairfield, adjacent to Camp Floyd, by a man by the name of Rice, commonly called Balty; a writ has been issued for his arrest. He had left for G. S. L. City. The coroner's inquest brought in a verdict of "wilful murder" against Rice.

We would call attention to the advertisements of our local merchants, Messrs. Livingston, Bell & Co.; C. A. Perry & Co.; Gilbert & Gerriah; Wm. Nixon; Miller, Russell & Co.; and Hockaday & Burr; who have been very busy for the last few days, attending to the calls of their customers.

Attention is also directed to the advertisement concerning Wm. A. Aden.

COMMISSIONERS OF DEEDS FOR UTAH TERRITORY, IN MISSOURI, COMMISSIONED BY GOV. CUMMINGS.—Edward E. Shands, Charles H. Tilson, Andrew Elliott, and Charles Goff, (all residing in St. Louis.)

During Saturday night, a flag-staff recently erected in front of the Governor's and Secretary's office, was cut down by some Vandals, whose bump of reverence for the "Star Spangled banner" must be only very slightly developed.

We find that the people of the western part of our Territory are very anxious for an independent Territorial organization.—Hon. Jas. M. Crane has been urging the matter at Washington for the past two years, and from his card in the Territorial Enterprise of June 11th, we believe he has good reasons to hope for success. In addition to the reasons urged, we think that the deserts intervening between the eastern and western portions of this Territory, would naturally indicate the formation of two Territories to be proper.

Capt. A. B. Miller, who arrived in this city June 28th, having made the trip from Atchison in fourteen days, furnishes us the following items:

Passed Major Hunt, Pay Master U. S. A., June 14th, at Grasshopper, forty miles out, having $460,000 in coin in charge, en route for Utah. He was accompanied by four or five hundred recruits.

The goods en route for this market are estimated at one thousand wagon loads.

The Democratic party of Kansas has carried the Territory by handsome majorities for Delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

We are pleased with, and return thanks for having the opportunity of, inserting the following report. Owing to the difficulties to be overcome in finding and pursuing Indians in a wild country, it is seldom that we are enabled to notice so complete a victory, and one accomplished, numerically, with so slight a loss on the part of the troops engaged:

Head-Quarters, Wichita Expedition—Camp on Small Creek, about 15 miles South of Old Fort Atkinson.

May 13th, 1859.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report, that after a march of over two hundred miles, I have just come up and had an engagement with a party of about ninety or one hundred Comanche Indians, and that I have succeeded in capturing, wounding and killing nearly the whole number.

Forty-nine are dead on the field, (50 including one killed a few days previously, five are wounded, and thirty-six are prisoners of my guard. More than a hundred animals are captured, and the whole camp is destroyed. The fight was quite a sharp and bloody one, and took place on foot, in a jungle, or brush-covered ravine. Eight Comanche women were unavoidably and unintentionally killed.

I have with great regret to report that Lieutenant Fitzhugh Lee, Acting Adjutant, was dangerously, and Captain E. K. Smith quite severely, wounded; also the following non-commissioned officers and soldiers killed and wounded, viz.:

Private Willis Burrows, of Company "G," 2d Cavalry, killed.

WOUNDED,

Sergeant Thomas Elliott, of company "A," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Private Eugene Camees, of company "A," 2d Cavalry, dangerously.

Private Patrick Kenevane, company "A," 2d Cavalry, severely, (2 wounds.)

William Moore, Company "A," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Sergeant W. J. Leverett, company "B," 2d Cavalry, dangerously, (since died.)

Sergeant Peter Alba, company "B," 2d Cavalry, severely.

Private Isaac Chrisman, company "B," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Private William Hartly, company "B," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Sergeant J. W. Spangler, company "H," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Private Rorison, company "H," 2d Cavalry severely.

Corporal George Nichols, company "H," 2d Cavalry, slightly.

Two friendly Indians were also slightly wounded.

I am so crippled by my wounded and prisoners, that I shall be compelled to return at once to Camp Radzinski. Upon my arrival, I shall hasten to make a full report of my operations since the date of my last report, when I shall take occasion to do justice to the officers and men, who have, by their gallantry and good conduct, added another wreath to the laurels of their regiment.

I am, Captain,

very respectfully,

your ob't serv't,

EARL VAN DORN,

Bvt Maj. 2d Cavalry, Commanding.

To CAPTAIN JOHN WITHERS,

Asst Adj't General,

San Antonio, Texas.

P. S.—This band of Camanches is a part of the same with whom we had the affair in October, Buffalo Hump's.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.

June 28th, 1859.

Mr. Editor: Our camp is very disagreeable and dull at present, having had no rain for some time. The camp is a continued cloud of dust from 10 A. M. until about sunset.

I had the pleasure last Sunday of listening to a very able sermon, delivered by the Rev. Mr. Vaux, from Laramie.

Major Eastman, 5th Infantry, Major Whiting, 7th Infantry, and two companies of the second dragoons, left here on Sunday. Majors Eastman and Whiting are for the States; the dragoons for Fort Kearney, Company "C," light battalion, 3d artillery, under command of Bvt Major Reynolds, left on Monday morning for Fort Vancouver, Oregon.

I attended the Theater last night—Mr. Willis' benefit. The programme was, "All that glitters is not gold," and "Robert Macaire." Both pieces were badly performed. Mr. Willis erred in bringing forward so many "sock and buskin" apprentices. Soldiers are easily pleased; but the amateurs failed in satisfying a very indulgent audience. Messrs. Baldwin and Crawford, however, fully sustained their respective parts. To-night they will perform the tragedy of the "Gamester," the after-piece being the laughable farce of the "Eaton Boy." I shall attend, and perhaps give you a few remarks in my next.

If some kind friends in your city will pray for rain, and succeed in their prayers, we will shower our blessings on them from camp.

Yours, &c.,

PRIVATE.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.

June 28th, 1859.

Mr. Editor: Since we were paid off, Camp Floyd has kept up quite a lively appearance, although the credit side of some of our accounts was greater than the debtor.

The programme of amusements were somewhat changed on Monday last, by the entrance into Camp of Bartholomew's Great Pioneer Circus; and in a short time all the butler's stores were decorated with flaming jills, which excited the curiosity of the curious. They treated us to their first performance on Wednesday night, and had a crowded pavilion, all anxious to see the great feats as set forth upon the bills; but all were disappointed, and left the circus impressed with the belief that the bills were the best of the "Pioneer Circus."

The Military Dramatic Association played, on Tuesday night, "The Robbers," by Schiller. This piece was not so well played as others we have had the pleasure of seeing lately; but their worst is better than the "Pioneer Circus." The after-piece—the "Eaton Boy"—was first-rate. White and Mrs. Whitlock both played their parts to perfection. Indeed, White deserves much credit; for after playing a leading character in a five-act tragedy, which he has always sustained very well, he appears as a comedian, and is always first-rate—showing that he has a diversity of talents on the stage. I am satisfied, could some of the levers of the drama drop into the Camp Floyd Theatre, and see Dick White, Bill Warren, Mrs. Tucket, and Mrs. Whitlock, upon the boards, they would be agreeably surprised, to say nothing of many others who play "good."

Nor should we pass unnoticed the orchestra, led by Serjt J. Pound, band-master 7th Infantry, who has spared no pains to give us good music, and I can safely say that it would please any audience.

COMEDY.

Great Breach of Promise Case.

CARSTANG VS. SHAW.—The defendant in this suit, just decided at St. Louis, is Mr. Henry Shaw, of that city, an old and highly respectable citizen, of immense wealth, aged about sixty-five years, and the plaintiff is Miss Effie Carstang, a young woman under thirty years of age, the daughter of a deceased Methodist clergyman, of respectable character, but in comparatively humble circumstances of life. It was in evidence that Mr. Shaw, during a period of two years, continued those particular attentions to the young lady which are understood to be significant to an engagement, and which, unless on this supposition, would be manifestly improper. He visited her constantly, to the virtual exclusion of her other acquaintances; was treated as a privileged guest by the other members of the family; was admitted to her private apartments, and in all respects was placed upon the footing of an accepted lover. He made her costly presents—among others, an elegant piano—and was in the habit of sending her, almost daily, such delicate tokens of his affection as the choicest bouquets of flowers. His distinct admission, to her sister, of an engagement, was also proved. As time of marriage approached, for which the wedding dress had been procured, he suddenly, without warning or any excuse of a quarrel, discontinued his visits, having first removed the piano to his own residence, on the pretence that it was wanted for a musical party. How much Miss Carstang suffered in feeling we are left to conjecture; but her reputation was somewhat compromised by the abrupt discontinuance of Mr. Shaw's visits, leaving the impression that their previous intimacy was open to suspicion. The defence was lame and inconclusive. An attempt was made, somewhat indirectly, to impeach her character, but it was unsuccessful, and probably aggravated the damages. The decided weight of testimony was to the effect that she was "a prudent, chaste, and virtuous girl." The verdict in the case was for the plaintiff, and awarded the full amount of damages claimed—one hundred thousand dollars—one of the heaviest verdicts ever given in this or any other country for a breach of promise of marriage. The wealth of the defendant was proved, on the trial, to be over a million of dollars.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—The following is a list of army officers who have permission to go beyond the United States, with understanding that they are to put themselves in communication with the antagonizing armies in Italy, so as to note military operations, viz:

Col. W. W. Loring, mounted riflemen; Lieut. Col. G. B. Crittenden, mounted rifles; Maj. G. A. Blake, first dragoons; Maj. H. Brewster, of engineers; Lieut. Col. E. J. Steptoe, ninth infantry; Maj. T. R. Tignor, engineers; Capt. H. B. Clitz, third infantry; Capt. J. A. Palmer, second cavalry; Capt. T. Seymour, first artillery; Lieut. Geo. W. Carr, ninth infantry; Lieut. J. C. Kelton, sixth infantry; and Lieut. John Pegg, second dragoons.—National Intelligencer.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

PARIS, May 26, 1859.

The last news we have from the Emperor's headquarters is dated Alexandria, May 25, seven o'clock p.m. It simply states that his Majesty had been passing some hours at Voghera, and that no definite time was fixed for his departure.

Of course the battle of Montebello, which has given the sons so glorious an opportunity of proving that the valor of their fathers has not degenerated, is still an unexhausted theme of interest. It simply states that the village of Casteggio and Montebello were occupied by some two hundred of the Piedmontese light cavalry, about fifty of which were at Casteggio, and a part of these were on the road which leads to Casteggio to Stradella, on the lookout for some Austrian patrols. All at once, however, this small body found itself face to face with such a force that they were obliged to fall back and despatch one of their number, giving the alarm to General de Sonnaz. The Piedmontese General hastily despatched a messenger for assistance to Baraguard Hilliers, who was posted at Ponte Corona, the consequence of which was the arrival of Gen. Forey's division, the regiments of which were scattered about the route leading from Voghera to Casteggio. Col. Cambriels, the Emperor's ordnance officer, immediately hastened to Montebello with some 250 men, where large numbers of Austrians were already encamping themselves, and at once a desperate struggle ensued. Col. Cambriels, attacked on all sides, formed his men in square and fought like a lion. After half an hour's resistance on the part of this little band, General Forey arrived in time to save it from destruction with the Seventy-fourth and Eighty-fourth regiments, forming the First brigade, commanded by the unfortunate General Beuret, who was shot dead in the hour of victory. The Ninety-first and Ninety-eighth, forming the Second brigade, commanded by Gen. Banchard, soon followed, as also the Seventeenth battalion of Foot Chasseurs, in all between five and six thousand men. In fact, of all the divisions of the army, in consequence of numerous soldiers still absent on leave, General Forey's is the least numerous.

The French statement is, that the Austrians out numbered them nearly in the proportion of three to one—that is 15,000 Austrians to 6,000 French. The saturated state of the soil prevented the French from using their artillery. Out of two batteries they could only make use of four pieces. The Austrians were masters of the position, for Casteggio was in their possession, and they were supported at Montebello. They could make free use of their artillery, and the cannonading had continued nearly five hours when the French charged, bayonet in hand, and for half an hour a furious struggle ensued, finally ending in the Austrians retreating from Montebello, and subsequently from Casteggio, where the Piedmontese cavalry behaved with great intrepidity. Not a single French prisoner was taken, and the killed and wounded are now said not to exceed 360. General Forey was struck by a ball on the scabbard of his sword and is slightly lamed from the contusion; he was, however, able to limp forward to receive the Emperor's felicitations. When his Majesty arrived on the ground it was still strewn with dead bodies. He was accompanied by Marshal Baraguard d'Hilliers. Col. Cambriels, whose glant stand with his little band has been mentioned, is, it is said, to receive a high recompense for his conduct. The Austrian officers taken prisoners were presented to the Emperor. Some of them had figured only a few weeks before at the balls of the Tuileries. The wounded French were delighted with his Majesty's attention, and raised their feeble voices in salutation. The soldiers under arms filled the air with acclamations. Montebello itself was defended by 5,000 Austrians, supported by two batteries of artillery. A body of 1,200 French advanced with the bayonet, in order to save their few remaining cartridges, and succeeded in their gallant attack.

If the whole number of the Austrians is therefore correctly stated, the remainder of the 15,000 must have occupied Casteggio. Various rumors still bear an air of indistinctness which every day will tend to dissipate. For instance, it has been said that the National Guards of Casteggio barricaded themselves in their houses and repulsed a strong Austrian patrol with musket shots; that a column of Austrians afterwards advanced to punish the inhabitants of the village who had sent to demand the assistance of the allied troops. Then it was that the Piedmontese cavalry, under General Sonnaz, took up a position, but being attacked in his turn by a very superior force, he was compelled to have recourse to General Forey.

This version will give to the combat of the 21st the character of such an incident as frequently occurs in war. But the composition of the enemy's columns, their number, and their tenacity in maintaining Montebello—everything leads to the belief that it was a preconcerted plan. The French officers, as at Malakoff and the Mamelon fight in the Crimea, led on their men to the battle cry of "En avant," which circumstances explains the relative considerable loss among the officers. "We entered," said one of the men, "black with powder and came out red with blood." Colonel Morelli, who was one of the colonels killed, was only forty-three years of age. He had lately been on a mission to England to procure horses for the cavalry, and was considered one of the best officers in that service.

The news that the division of Gen. Cialdini had crossed the Sesia the same day in front of Verceil is now official. The Austrians on that point were repulsed with great loss; in fact, the campaign has opened for them altogether under most discouraging auspices. The regiment of Nice cavalry, in which Louis Philippe's grandson, the Duke de Chartres, serves as lieutenant, followed the movement of Gen. Cialdini. Col. de Bellefoude, another of the French colonels, expired the night after the combat. Col. Laetelle heard only of his being named as officer of the Legion of Honor a moment before he breathed his last.

All accounts agree in stating that the moral effect of the victory is equal to an additional reinforcement of 50,000 men; that in Piedmont the greatest enthusiasm prevails, and that the Emperor lives in one perpetual fête, the passage of the Po, and which will probably come off towards Stradella, is already half decided by it.

The Austrian prisoners have arrived at Marsailles. The Austrian colonel is dead of his wounds. The officers number about twenty. After the combat they were lodged in a garage; wine, segars, &c., were sent to them, and an aide-de-camp from the Emperor came to express his Majesty's hope that they had received all the courtesy their situation demanded. It is said some of them behaved with great bravuquerie in return for these attentions.

The law of the 4th of August, 1839, limits to twelve the number of marshals in time of war. At the present moment there are only five, so that three batons may be given in the present campaign. Gen. Forey, whom circumstances have placed in so enviable a position was born in Paris in 1804, and entered the military school of St. Cyr in 1822. He took part in the expedition to Algeria, and distinguished himself as captain at Medeah. He was named Chef de Bataillon in the African Chasseurs in 1840; and after making four campaigns in Algeria, returned to France in 1844. In 1848 he was promoted to the rank of general of brigade, in 1852 to that of general of division, in 1854 he commanded the division of the reserve of the army of the East, and was temporarily charged with the command of the troops before Sebastopol. In 1856 he was placed at the head of the first division of the army of Paris. Gen. Forey has been since 1854, Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor, and in 1851 he co-operated in the accomplishment of the coup d'etat of the 2d of December.

I may as well take this opportunity of mentioning that the formation of the army of the East of France—that which is to deal with Germany should its present demonstrations assume any more practical form than that of protest—is already being proceeded with, and everything is already prepared for its concentration. Gen. Schram, formerly Minister of War, and Gen. Rustolan, ex-commander-in-chief of the French troops in Rome, have been appointed to commands. The Duke de Malakoff will shortly proceed to Nancy to inspect in the various garrisons the elements of the army of which he has been appointed commander-in-chief. Great pains, however, are taken that it shall be understood that generally, since the English declarations of neutrality, the armaments of the French arsenal are suspended, and with regard to the navy that enlistments have altogether ceased.

In a number of towns throughout France the authorities, with a view to satisfy the legitimate impatience of the people, published the text of the official despatches by beat of drum. The reading of the first bulletin was made by the commissaries of police, in official costume, and was everywhere received with cries of "Vive l'Empereur," "Vive l'Armée," "Vive l'Armée."

A courier leaves Paris daily, and arrives at Marsailles. He embarks on a steamer, which leaves for Genoa every morning at seven o'clock. The Minister of war has decided that the 140,000 young soldiers of the class of 1858 shall begin to join their regiments from the 8th of June next.

Measures have been taken by the administration of the telegraphic lines to provide for the service of private despatches addressed to officers and privates in the army of Italy by their families and friends. The despatches can only be sent to Turin or Genoa by telegraph; from these places they are to be forwarded by post to their destination. A telegraphic despatch of twenty words to Genoa or Turin costs 9frs, with 1fr additional for the postage.

There is a shadow over the Paris Bourse just now, under the influence of which securities of all kinds have partially receded. The death of the King of Naples is thought to bode further complications, and that a revolution in the kingdom of the Two Sicilies is at hand. The language of the King of Drede, on the opening of the chambers on the 25th, combined with that held by Prussia, seems far from reassuring. "When," says a letter from Berlin, "the English circular recommending moderation to the German government was communicated to the different States, Prussia demanded explanations on the subject, and ascertained that the said circular chiefly consisted of instructions to the English diplomatic agents, some of whom had added declarations as to the intentions of their government. Prussia also spontaneously seized the opportunity, when the question of maritime law was raised by France and St. Petersburg, of informing the courts that she should enter into no engagement of any kind. This attitude of Prussia has been made known to the German courts."

The difficulties of France in this chivalrous enterprise in aid of Italy are indeed peculiar. The telegraphic despatches which record Garibaldi's success in occupying the town of Varese, in the neighborhood of Como, with 6,000 men, on the 23d inst., and which may be considered as the latest intelligence from the seat of war, are considered, in a measure, only an advance upon the dangers of Germany—the alarm of the confederation increasing pari passu with French success. If, on the other hand, the arms of France were to meet with the slightest check, spite of the loan, spite of all we have heard of love for the freedom of Italians, he would be a bold man who should say what might not take place in Paris.

With respect to England, without troubling themselves to assign any logical reason, without even entering into the probabilities, the great fact seems generally implanted in all men's minds that war with that country is the inevitable consequence of the present state of politics. Among tradesmen you find a disposal from all the degrees of character the even already open to Medical community the change in the goods and a paration

ADDIT

The Aust and F. Losses with D.

The D. are full strength accounts as high as

The off Gyalaf's tails of

He say Wound Killed, Miss!

The en stained f. The B. an autog the troop for their

The killed under that in their

The Vi "Times" to the off Po on the bridge at certain found the

He the army ne as to ma

In the The Frail durit tired, hat

The as are satis as the, a French v iction th as well a

The L writes th state not two hun gaged at admitted but not at the mome

Other a in this ac It is a with bull Private of the Fr

The fol sued by tl

Three 130 cavalry march' to Detach of Chasseo Cris-to-for

The ene A mass four o'clock attacked hours late mate, on

The Ch charging The cou of course General treating e

To-day Verceil, and De la ceived by the popu hearty y

A despt Garibaldi res, and it likewise and that t country h baldi had the Lomb

A brig strong p Candia, b and 25th i a battery c howitzers

The surpri favorable, change his abandon h

The Lon writing on preason p an action affair of M

ANOTHER TLE—MILIT

The follo Times: The Frei of Voghera in what st yesterday der Count

Po by a bri from this, Vincino and will they fa

100-443886-1

There is Storm
Storm o
Well, Storm
Real
Riff

Be not c
Be no
Are fig
How
For Real
Riff

Let you
Look Better & Than
For Res
Rif

Form, I Form
True, th
But a
For Res
Rif

The E

Thus course bling a 600,000 king in than ar little ch follows

France
Austria
Sardinia

Total

Amor
700,000 or less but little caused as sold home.
from lar of agric former males. G bor is n moveme importa tend ove however and in a quarters

Italy, w ply are of the w
There
ment for sorts in and moq
prise no
This is what ex place.
thing in land, ha vines; al

were all Under the produce been quit
all. The
in any d in the m a scarcit of the n ament of decline i tions of
The m
United S sales of large; bu to the w

INFIT since we to const Peak.

of an inf
by one w
1 Rag torn off;
1 Pair
shreds;
1 Hat,
1½ She
¾ Pour
¾ Pint
In any designed our trave
—[Westy

CONCLUSIONS

LAGER BEER.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

XXX. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an extensive butcher is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals,	$1 00
Supper, breakfast and lodging,	2 00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head,	60
" " hay and grain,"	1 00

and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.

MOGO, BURR & CO.
 Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS.
 BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.
TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,
Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
WE respectfully invite the attention
of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory,
and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of
Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.
Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, has enabled us to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Goods at prices as low as they can be purchased in any of our St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, has enabled us to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Goods at prices as low as they can be purchased in any of our St. Louis.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the East for the most advantageous price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, the most desirable and fashionable goods.

Brown sheeting	Merrimack Prints
Bleached do	Blue Demins
" shirtings	" drills
Brown do	White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes	Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey	Woolen do
Kentucky jeans	Quilts & comfortablees
Bed ticking	Alpacas and merinos

Delaines & cashmeres	Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels	Sewing thread
" napkins	Curtain damasks
" table cloths	Satinett & cassmeres
Crash, Towling and	Cottonades and nans

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil
White linen bosom shirts cloths
Colored calico do Apron check
Grey flannel do Heavy duck (all Red do dd widths)

Blue do do &c., &c., &c.
Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bk's and fancy dress. Embroidered Setts silks " collars & sleeves
Plain all wool delaines " window curtains
Fancy do " edgings and insertions
Alexander's kid gloves " sections
Bay state long shawls " linen handkerchiefs
Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric " do Delaines in dress do Hem stitched " do do do do do do do do do

White cambric muslin " cravats and ties
 Jackonets Suspenders
 Swiss Dress trimmings
 Mull and Namsoks Buck gloves and
 Plaid jaconet muslins gauntlets
 Plaid cashmere for children
 Silk and cashmere gloves
 Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and bareges
Plain colored silk ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and Yankee notions &c.
cutlery &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufacturing styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled by
TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 325 Broadway, New York.
Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Combing Co's Goods.

LAW NOTICE.
ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him.
Office with Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian affairs, G. S. L. City. 17-1

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to 215
GILBERT & GERRISH.

FOR SALE,

ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots
to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.
CHARLES HOGG.
Hot Spring Brewery.

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors, at proportionate rates.

MILLER, BRASS, & CO.

10-1 10-2 10-3 10-4 10-5 10-6 10-7 10-8 10-9 10-10 10-11 10-12 10-13 10-14 10-15 10-16 10-17 10-18 10-19 10-20 10-21 10-22 10-23 10-24 10-25 10-26 10-27 10-28 10-29 10-30 10-31 10-32 10-33 10-34 10-35 10-36 10-37 10-38 10-39 10-40 10-41 10-42 10-43 10-44 10-45 10-46 10-47 10-48 10-49 10-50 10-51 10-52 10-53 10-54 10-55 10-56 10-57 10-58 10-59 10-60 10-61 10-62 10-63 10-64 10-65 10-66 10-67 10-68 10-69 10-70 10-71 10-72 10-73 10-74 10-75 10-76 10-77 10-78 10-79 10-80 10-81 10-82 10-83 10-84 10-85 10-86 10-87 10-88 10-89 10-90 10-91 10-92 10-93 10-94 10-95 10-96 10-97 10-98 10-99 10-100 10-101 10-102 10-103 10-104 10-105 10-106 10-107 10-108 10-109 10-110 10-111 10-112 10-113 10-114 10-115 10-116 10-117 10-118 10-119 10-120 10-121 10-122 10-123 10-124 10-125 10-126 10-127 10-128 10-129 10-130 10-131 10-132 10-133 10-134 10-135 10-136 10-137 10-138 10-139 10-140 10-141 10-142 10-143 10-144 10-145 10-146 10-147 10-148 10-149 10-150 10-151 10-152 10-153 10-154 10-155 10-156 10-157 10-158 10-159 10-160 10-161 10-162 10-163 10-164 10-165 10-166 10-167 10-168 10-169 10-170 10-171 10-172 10-173 10-174 10-175 10-176 10-177 10-178 10-179 10-180 10-181 10-182 10-183 10-184 10-185 10-186 10-187 10-188 10-189 10-190 10-191 10-192 10-193 10-194 10-195 10-196 10-197 10-198 10-199 10-200 10-201 10-202 10-203 10-204 10-205 10-206 10-207 10-208 10-209 10-210 10-211 10-212 10-213 10-214 10-215 10-216 10-217 10-218 10-219 10-220 10-221 10-222 10-223 10-224 10-225 10-226 10-227 10-228 10-229 10-230 10-231 10-232 10-233 10-234 10-235 10-236 10-237 10-238 10-239 10-240 10-241 10-242 10-243 10-244 10-245 10-246 10-247 10-248 10-249 10-250 10-251 10-252 10-253 10-254 10-255 10-256 10-257 10-258 10-259 10-260 10-261 10-262 10-263 10-264 10-265 10-266 10-267 10-268 10-269 10-270 10-271 10-272 10-273 10-274 10-275 10-276 10-277 10-278 10-279 10-280 10-281 10-282 10-283 10-284 10-285 10-286 10-287 10-288 10-289 10-290 10-291 10-292 10-293 10-294 10-295 10-296 10-297 10-298 10-299 10-300 10-301 10-302 10-303 10-304 10-305 10-306 10-307 10-308 10-309 10-310 10-311 10-312 10-313 10-314 10-315 10-316 10-317 10-318 10-319 10-320 10-321 10-322 10-323 10-324 10-325 10-326 10-327 10-328 10-329 10-330 10-331 10-332 10-333 10-334 10-335 10-336 10-337 10-338 10-339 10-340 10-341 10-342 10-343 10-344 10-345 10-346 10-347 10-348 10-349 10-350 10-351 10-352 10-353 10-354 10-355 10-356 10-357 10-358 10-359 10-360 10-361 10-362 10-363 10-364 10-365 10-366 10-367 10-368 10-369 10-370 10-371 10-372 10-373 10-374 10-375 10-376 10-377 10-378 10-379 10-380 10-381 10-382 10-383 10-384 10-385 10-386 10-387 10-388 10-389 10-390 10-391 10-392 10-393 10-394 10-395 10-396 10-397 10-398 10-399 10-400 10-401 10-402 10-403 10-404 10-405 10-406 10-407 10-408 10-409 10-410 10-411 10-412 10-413 10-414 10-415 10-416 10-417 10-418 10-419 10-420 10-421 10-422 10-423 10-424 10-425 10-426 10-427 10-428 10-429 10-430 10-431 10-432 10-433 10-434 10-435 10-436 10-437 10-438 10-439 10-440 10-441 10-442 10-443 10-444 10-445 10-446 10-447 10-448 10-449 10-450 10-451 10-452 10-453 10-454 10-455 10-456 10-457 10-458 10-459 10-460 10-461 10-462 10-463 10-464 10-465 10-466 10-467 10-468 10-469 10-470 10-471 10-472 10-473 10-474 10-475 10-476 10-477 10-478 10-479 10-480 10-481 10-482 10-483 10-484 10-485 10-486 10-487 10-488 10-489 10-490 10-491 10-492 10-493 10-494 10-495 10-496 10-497 10-498 10-499 10-500 10-501 10-502 10-503 10-504 10-505 10-506 10-507 10-508 10-509 10-510 10-511 10-512 10-513 10-514 10-515 10-516 10-517 10-518 10-519 10-520 10-521 10-522 10-523 10-524 10-525 10-526 10-527 10-528 10-529 10-530 10-531 10-532 10-533 10-534 10-535 10-536 10-537 10-538 10-539 10-540 10-541 10-542 10-543 10-544 10-545 10-546 10-547 10-548 10-549 10-550 10-551 10-552 10-553 10-554 10-555 10-556 10-557 10-558 10-559 10-560 10-561 10-562 10-563 10-564 10-565 10-566 10-567 10-568 10-569 10-570 10-571 10-572 10-573 10-574 10-575 10-576 10-577 10-578 10-579 10-580 10-581 10-582 10-583 10-584 10-585 10-586 10-587 10-588 10-589 10-590 10-591 10-592 10-593 10-594 10-595 10-596 10-597 10-598 10-599 10-600 10

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.
THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards.

Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Caps,	&c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do	Bourbon
New York do	Rectified do
Gin,	Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard,	Mixed Pickles,
Durham do	Assorted do
Assorted Jams,	do Gherkins,
do Jellies,	Piceofill,
do Syrup,	Pickled Onions,
do Cordials,	Tomato Catsup.

Brandy Peaches,	do	Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries,	do	Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears,	do	Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India		Celery Seed,
Preserves,		Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit,		Pepper Sauce,
Peach do		Assorted Sauce,
Apple do		do Nat. Preserves,
Flumb do		Capers Capotes,
Raspberry do		Natural Pres'd Pine,
Gooseberry do		Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy,		Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy,		String Beans,
Fresh Lobster,		Green Peas,
Pickled do		do Corn,
Fresh Clams,		Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat,		do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat,		Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower,		Peaches,
Pickled do		Nat'l Preserved Beans

Worcestershire Sauce, berries,
 Stoughton Bitters, Natural, Preserved
 Fresh Salmon. Damsons,
 Fresh Tomatoes, Mushrooms,
 French Pickles, Asparagus,
 Hostetter Bitters, Tarragon Vinegar,
 Boker's do Fields' Oysters,
 Le Drard's do Cove do
 Royal Windsor do Pine Apple Cheese,
 Maraschino, Olive Oil,
 Curacao, Assorted Candles,
 Absynth, Raisins,
 Scotch Ale, Almonds,
 London Porter, English Walnuts,
 Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,
 Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,

Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
Crackers,
Family Supplies, Cracknells,
Morning Call, E. D. Cheese,
Indian Queen Maderia,
also a large and well-selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858. 61f

L. & A. CARR,
WHOLESALE
BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS
AND
BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,
No. 49 Main Street,
ST. LOUIS MO.
KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammars, geographies, philosophies, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c. now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.
Their stock of
FOREIGN AND

DOMESTIC STATIONERY,
BLANK BOOKS,
PRINTING
AND WRITING PAPER.

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having a large stock of

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,

Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books, to order, and at the shortest notice.

14-11

MILLER, RUSSEL & CO.,
Wholesale and retail dealers in

FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES,
Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps,
HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
and outlying goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figure, for Cash or Country produce. 1-17

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Will practice in all the courts of the Territory and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional requirements.
OFFICE—One door North of Post Office, Street East
Lake City. 1-17

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,
ATTORNEY AT LAW

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake Ctr. Utah Territory, 2-17.
S. M. BLAIR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW.
Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Ramsey
s. cor. 2-17.

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., at cheap with great care, and to which the attention those desiring WHOLESALE refreshments is especially called. 2-17 JOHN M. WALLACE.

WORK CATTLE.

100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by
1-11 GILBERT & GERRISH.

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1859.

NUMBER 35.

THE WAR.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

There is a storm of thunder afar,
Storm in the South that darkens the day,
Storm of battle and thunder of war,
Well, if it do not roll our way,
Storm! storm! storm! storm!
Ready, be ready to meet the storm,
Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

Be not deaf to the sound that warns,
Be not gull'd by despot's plea!
Are signs of thistles, or grapes of thorns?
How should a despot set men free?
Form! form! riflemen form!
Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

Let your reforms for a moment go,
Look to your butts and take good aims,
Better a rotten borough or so,
Than a rotten fleet or a city in flames!
Form! form! riflemen form!
Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

Form, be ready to do or die!
Form in freedom's name and the Queen's!
True, that we have faithful ally,
But only the devil knows what he means.
Form! form! riflemen form!
Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

The Effects of War upon American Produce.

Thus far there is nothing to change the course of commercial affairs. The assembling and marching of 700,000 Austrians, 600,000 French, and 100,000 Sardinians, making in all 1,400,000 men, or 700,000 more than are usually under arms, will make but little change in the consumption of food, as follows:

	Population.	Army.
France.....	39,210,000	700,000
Austria.....	39,101,000	600,000
Sardinia.....	4,981,000	100,000

Total..... 80,292,000 1,400,000

Among 80,000,000 of people, the taking of 700,000 men, they are one out of seventy, more or less. In ordinary occupations, will have but little effect upon production, and no effect upon consumption. What they actually eat as soldiers is less than what they get at home. A large portion of these are idlers from large cities, and in Europe the labor of agriculture, thanks to the long wars of former ages, is customarily performed by females. No conscription is taken where his labor is necessary to his family. The mere movement of the men is of no commercial importance. Where their operations extend over a large agricultural surface, they, however, destroy and prevent agriculture, and in so far cause a demand from other quarters. If this is confined to Northern Italy, while all the ordinary sources of supply are undisturbed, the commercial effects of the war will hardly be felt.

There never was a more propitious moment for war than now, since crops of all sorts in Europe are very abundant, capital and money abundant and cheap, and enterprise not recovered from the panic of 1858. This is a very different state of affairs from what existed when the Russian war took place. There was then a failure of every thing in Western Europe. Wheat, in England, had touched 10s. In France, the vines, silk worms, food, and other crops, were all short, and money was very dear. Under these circumstances, the exports of produce from the United States would have been quite as large had there been no war at all. That event did not add to the demand in any degree. Its influence was felt only in the manufacturing towns of England, in a scarcity of labor, whence a large portion of the new troops were drawn. The armament of the war, however, caused a great decline in government funds, under anticipations of large loans.

The migration of men and capital to the United States during the Crimean war, and sales of produce to Europe, were certainly large; but those circumstances were not due to the war—they were the result of short crops in Europe, which drove forth great numbers, and called for large imports to sustain those who remained. Those circumstances are not now to operate, at least for a year to come. If in that time the war should become general, involving strife between England and France, their fleets would disturb the ocean, instead of keeping it open, and England would be thrown upon the United States for those large supplies she now draws from France.

IN FIT FROM PIKE'S PEAK.—Some months since we were giving tables showing items to constitute a complete outfit to Pike's Peak. We are now able to give a schedule of an outfit as we saw exemplified yesterday by one who has been there and got back: 1 Ragged coat, with collar and tail torn off; 1 Pair pants hanging together entirely by shreds; 1 Hat, barrin' the rim; 1 Shoes, looking like fried bacon rind; 1 Pound raw beans; 1 Pint parched corn. In answer to our interrogatory whether he designed returning to Pike's Peak shortly, our traveler responded, "not by a jug full."—[Westport Star.]

The Virginia Election.

The Democratic State ticket is elected by majorities ranging from four to seven thousand. The latest telegraphic advices give Letcher's majority as 3,700 in 129 counties, with several counties to hear from. The Richmond "Enquirer" of June 1st is still of the opinion that his majority will exceed 6,000. Messrs. Montague and Tucker, the Democratic candidates for Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General, run considerably ahead of Mr. Letcher.

Democratic Congressmen are elected in all of the Districts except the Eighth. Here the indications are that Alex. R. Boteler, (opposition,) has beaten Chas. J. Faulkner by a small majority, but there are still some doubts of the result.

The other Congressmen chosen are as follows: 1st District, M. R. H. Garnett, re-elected; 2d District, John S. Millson, re-elected; 3d (Richmond) District, D. L. De-jarnett, beating John S. Caskie, the late member; 4th District, William O. Goode, re-elected; 5th District, Thomas S. Bocock, re-elected; 6th District, Shelton F. Leake, beating Paulus Powell, the late member; 7th District, William Smith, re-elected; 8th District, John T. Harris, beating J. H. Skinner; 10th District, H. A. Edmundson, re-elected; 11th District, Sherrard Clemens, re-elected; 12th District, Albert G. Jenkins, re-elected; 13th District, Elbert S. Martin, beating B. Rush Floyd. It will be seen that quite a number of changes occur in the delegation as compared with the last; Messrs. Caskie, Powell, Faulkner, Letcher and Hopkins retire, and are replaced by Messrs. De-jarnett, Leake, Boteler, Harris and Martin.—[N. Y. Weekly Day Book, June 4.]

Political.

A number of the States have already appointed the time and places for the meeting of their State conventions, to make preparations for the fall campaign, as well as to select delegates, in whole or in part, to the great Presidential nominating conventions in 1860. In Ohio the Democratic State convention will meet in Columbus on the 26th inst. Candidates are to be nominated for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Supreme Judge, Auditor, Treasurer, Secretary of State, School Commissioner, and member of the Board of Public Works. The election will take place on the 1st of October. In Iowa, in Des Moines, on the 1st of June, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and three Judges of the Supreme Court are to be chosen. Election October 11. In California, in Sacramento City, on the 22d June. All the State officers are to be elected. Election takes place on the 7th September. In Maine, in Bangor, on the 30th June. A candidate for Governor is to be nominated. Election September 12. In Mississippi, at Jackson, on the 4th July. Candidates for State officers are to be selected. Election will take place on the 3d October. In Minnesota, in the city of St. Paul, on the 17th August. Candidates for Governor, Lieut. Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Treasurer, and two members of Congress are to be selected. Election on the 11th October. In Louisiana, in Baton Rouge, on the 25th inst. Candidates for State officers to be selected. Election November 7.—[Weekly States, May 28.]

Flood in the Upper Mississippi.

CHICAGO, June 7. From St. Paul papers of Saturday and Sunday, we learn that that city, and other towns above and below, have suffered seriously from the flood in the Upper Mississippi. Much damage has been done to property in warehouses on the levee in St. Paul. Brooklyn, on the opposite side of the river, is entirely submerged, and the inhabitants compelled to abandon their dwellings, on account of the general inundation. At St. Anthony, the damage to property is immense. Several hundred thousand feet of logs belonging to the saw mills along the river have been swept away, and the mills greatly damaged. The upper bridge, which cost twenty thousand dollars, has been swept away, and the lower one, built at a cost of sixty thousand dollars, has been greatly damaged. Reports from various quarters along the Upper Mississippi, state that nearly all the bridges across the streams are gone. The river is higher than it has been for a number of years.

VIRGINIA CONGRESSIONAL DELEGATION.—The following are the names of the gentlemen just elected by the people of Virginia to represent that State in the next Congress. We believe there is no longer any doubt as to the result in any district. In five of the districts, it will be perceived, the regular nominees of the Democratic party have been defeated:

1st District, John S. Millson, Dem.
2d " M. R. H. Garnett, Dem.
3d " D. C. De-jarnett, I. D.
4th " Wm. O. Goode, D.
5th " Thos. S. Bocock, D.
6th " Shelton F. Leake, I. D.
7th " Wm. Smith, Dem.
8th " Alex. R. Boteler, Whig.
9th " John T. Harris, I. D.
10th " Sherrard Clemens, D.
11th " Albert G. Jenkins, D.
12th " H. A. Edmundson, D.
13th " Elbert S. Martin, I. D.

The Oregon-Utah Expedition—Orders of Gen. Harney.

We have received a copy of special orders No. 40, issued by Gen. Harney, directing the organization of an expedition to proceed from Columbia River to Salt Lake. They are dated "Headquarters, Department of Oregon, Fort Vancouver, W. T., April 27th." The following officers are attached to the expedition:

Capt. Wallen, Fourth Infantry, commanding; First Lieut. Bonnycastle, Fourth Infantry; First Lieut. Johnson, First Dragoons; First Lieut. Switzer, First Dragoons; Second Lieut. Reno, First Dragoons; Second Lieut. Houston, Engineers; Second Lieut. Roberts, Engineers; Second Lieut. Dixon, Topographical Engineers; Assistant Surgeon Randolph.

ORDERS.

1. To increase the facilities of communication between the Columbia river and the valley of the Great Salt Lake, in connection with the overland route to the frontiers of the Western States, the following command will be organized at Fort Dalles, to move from that point by the 1st of June next, for the purpose of opening a good wagon road to the Snake river, in the vicinity of the mouth of the Malheur river, and from thence to a point called "City Rocks," at the junction of the road from Forts Laramie and Bridger, with the road from Fort Hall to the Salt Lake City, viz:

Companies E. and H. of the First Dragoons; company H. of the Fourth Regiment of Infantry; detachment of Engineers, company A. Capt. Henry D. Wallen, Fourth Infantry, commanding. Detailed instructions will be given Capt. Wallen.

II. Brevet Second Lieutenant Joseph Dixon, Corps of Topographical Engineers, will report for duty with this command.

The detachment of Engineers will be provided with the necessary floats and implements to facilitate the passage of any streams this command may be required to cross.

III. The Quartermaster, Subsistence, Ordnance and Medical Departments at Fort Vancouver, will furnish four months supplies to this command, with the necessary transportation, assistance and means to enable it to accomplish its complete and thorough manner the requirements of this order.

IV. The Medical Director will designate in time an officer of his department to accompany this expedition.

V. Company G, Third Artillery, will relieve company H, Fourth Infantry, by the 25th May next, at Fort Cascades.

By order of Gen. Harney.
(Signed) A. PLEASANTON,
Capt. Second Dragoons, A. A. A. Gen.
To Capt. Wallen, Fourth Infantry, commanding.

A Republican journal, the New York Commercial "Advertiser," in referring to the questions raised by the pending case in Ohio, and in deprecating the language employed by a portion of the Northern press, justly remarks as follows:

"We are glad to see that the supremacy of a law that is unpopular can be maintained in any part of the Union, for we hold and have always held that so long as the law is upon the statute-book it is to be obeyed, except in cases of genuine scruples of conscience, where a man to save himself from doing violence to his deep convictions, religious or moral, prefers to bear the penalty of non-compliance. And we think that in this case there was no alternative but to enforce the law, or practically admit that there was no executive power in the Federal Government. The violation of the law was clear, bold, and deliberate, even on the showing of the prisoners themselves. There may have been, and probably has been, much party spirit and some vindictiveness manifested by the prosecution, but the offence was committed—is not denied, is justified, and in spirit is persisted in.

"Nor in the course pursued by the Federal Government is there any infringement of legitimate State rights, as some of the more violent of the Western journals have maintained. If it is one of the reserved rights of a State to repudiate the authority of a law which she, through her Representatives, in the House and in the Senate, and by her popular vote in the election of a Chief Magistrate, has had a constitutional share in framing, where shall we stand? Of what use, because of what authority, is any law which Congress has ever enacted? The assumption that a State has such a reserved right, is so glaringly absurd, that one wonders to see it gravely asserted and put in print. We are glad to see, however, that some of the journals nearer the scene of the excitement, while strongly and intensely sympathizing with these prisoners, and showing their abhorrence for the fugitive slave law, hold and teach a very different doctrine.

"The course of all good citizens is indeed plain. The Supreme Court of Ohio, though the full statement of their reasons has not yet reached us, have doubtless decided against the application according to legal principles and usage. It is not reasonable to suppose that they have lacked a just appreciation of State rights or been misled by sympathies counter to those so universally prevalent through the State. And the people of Ohio must learn to profit by the example of their own judiciary and obey the law, as law, whatever their personal sentiments or sympathies."

For California.

The emigration for California continues unabated—over one hundred teams per day passing through the city for that destination. On Tuesday, some enterprising gentlemen came in with a large number of horses, carriages, and everything requisite for stocking a first rate livery stable, which they were taking to California. Several fine large droves of cattle have also passed in that direction during the week.

On Wednesday, a gentleman who has made two trips to California, crossed the ferry at this point with four thousand five hundred sheep, that he was taking to the golden State. He informed us that he had driven his sheep from Southern Missouri, and that he took the north Platte route on account of its superiority over all others, as well as its being much shorter. The testimony of one such man is worth more than a thousand ignorant bigots who travel once over one of the Southern routes, never see any other, but "unhesitatingly" pronounce the road they traveled the best.—[Omaha Nebraskaian, June 11.]

For the Mountains.

The Chippewa, an elegant little stern wheel steamer of light draft, reached this port on Saturday night, 4th inst., having on board Majors Vaughan and Chibbertson, and a quantity of Indian goods for the Indian tribes of the Upper Missouri. This boat and the Spread Eagle were chartered at St. Louis for a trip to the Yellow Stone, to convey Captain Reynolds and Lieutenant Warren's party, and stores, for the exploration of the country about the headwaters of the Yellow Stone. The Spread Eagle will go to the mouth of the Yellow Stone, and there transfer her freight to the Chippewa, which boat will proceed as high as that river is navigable. Captain Reynolds and party will then disembark, and proceed northward, bringing up eventually at Fort Walla Walla. The entire season will be necessary for their operations.

The Chippewa lay at our wharf until Tuesday evening, when she started out in company with the Spread Eagle.—[Omaha Nebraskaian.]

STEAMSHIP OPPOSITION IN EARNEST.—The Pacific Mail Co. made a further reduction in the rate of passage yesterday for the Atlantic States on account of a second cabin tickets. This move was immediately followed by a corresponding reduction by the Garrison line. The rates to-day are $42 50 in the steerage, and $90 in the second cabin.—S. F. Bulletin, May 3.

FILLIBUSTER FIGHT IN NEW YORK.—Col. Titus in the Row.—New York, May 31st.—A number of fillibusters congregated at the bar room of the St. Nicholas last night, and had a fight among themselves. Among those present, were Col. Titus, Captain Anderson, General Wheat, Maj. Hall, and Lieut. Peel. An altercation ensued between Anderson and Titus, respecting an old feud, when a third party interfered, and Titus knocked him down. A general melee ensued, in which Titus drew a revolver, but did no damage. A policeman arriving took him out of the room. As he was passing out, he declared Anderson to be a d—d coward, who did not dare to cross the lines and fight him with pistols. The disturbance was renewed soon after. The police again interrupted the quarrel, and took Titus, thus saving his life at the risk of their own, as the Anderson party seemed very anxious for the blood of the Colonel.

FORCED INTO THE ARMY.—The Indianapolis "Journal" says that Mr. Frederick Rush, of that city, a well known and prosperous produce dealer, who went to Europe some six or eight weeks since, on a visit to his old home and friends, immediately on his arrival in Prussia was claimed as a conscript, forced into the army, and is now held there to serve out his three years as a Prussian soldier.

FASTEST TIME ON RECORD.—Trotting, Tuesday, May 23d.—Purse, $2,000; best three in five to wagons:
Dixallman b m Flora Temple.....1 1 1
H Woodruff b s Ethan Allen.....2 2 2

Time, 1st heat. Time, 2d heat.
Half mile 1:11 1:12
Mile 2:25 2:27
Time, 3d heat.
Half mile 1:12
Mile 2:27

DISUNION IN ALABAMA.—The Mobile (Ala.) "Mercury" states boldly that there are at present, active movements going on in the city of Mobile with a view to the dissolution of the Union. It declares that the times are ripe for a political movement in the slave-holding States, irrespective of party, preparatory to action. Indeed, it says that conferences have already been had upon the subject by leading patriotic men of all parties, and that the country must soon be prepared for the development of their plans.

THE BOTTOM.—The prospects for making a crop by the planters in the Mississippi Bottom, are anything but favorable. The high water has remained so long, that it is getting too late to entertain much hope of making a cotton crop this year. A failure to make a crop two years in succession will ruin a great many planters.—[Oxford (Miss.) Mercury.]

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH PROJECT.—The N. Y. correspondence of the Charleston Mercury, in his letter of May 25th, writes:

Mr. Cyrus W. Field left for England in the Persia to-day, to advise and assist the London Atlantic Telegraph company in the manufacture of a new ocean cable for a third experiment next summer. The form of cable which will be adopted, will probably be somewhat smaller than the last one, and will be composed of parallel iron wires instead of twisted. The single conducting copper wire, the gutta percha insulation and the outside bandage of oakum and tar, will be the same as before. It is still believed by many intelligent mechanics, that a simple copper wire, about three times as large as the one previously tried, securely insulated and stoutly wrapped about with a thick coating of oakum and tar, would be far better than any other kind of cable that could be devised. It would be much lighter, could be paid out like a rope, without snarling, and would be sufficiently strong and substantial to resist all the strains to which it would be subjected, and once in its quiet ocean bed would last forever. An energetic man like Mr. Field will soon communicate his enthusiasm to the commercial world, and look for a speedy revival on both sides of the water, of the profound public interest and cordial cooperation in this third gallant endeavor, which were called out last year and the year before.

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE.—One of the most memorable passages ever uttered by Mr. Webster, was in vindication of the authority of conscience and of Providence, on a trial for a dark and mysterious murder:

"The guilty soul cannot keep its own secret. It is false to itself. It labors under its guilty possession and knows not what to do with it. The human heart was not made for the residence of such an inhabitant. It finds itself prayed upon by a torment which it does not acknowledge to God or man. A culture is devouring it, and it can ask no sympathy or assistance, either from heaven or earth. The secret which the murderer possesses soon comes to possess him; and like the evil spirit of which we read, it overcomes him, and leads him whithersoever it will. He feels it beating in his heart, rising to his lips, and demanding disclosure. He tries to shut the whole world out of his face, and to shut his own conscience in the silence of his thoughts. It betrays his discretion, it breaks down his courage, it conquers his prudence. When suspicions from without begin to embarrass him, and the net of circumstances to entangle him, the fatal secret struggles with still greater violence to burst forth. It must be confessed; it will be confessed; there is no refuge from confession but suicide; and suicide is confession."

AVOID QUARRELS.—It is much easier to get into a quarrel than to get out. In the year 1005, some soldiers of Modena ran away with a bucket from a public well belonging to the State of Bolagnia. This impudent was probably worth a shilling, but it produced a war which was worked up into a long and sanguinary conflict. Henry, the King of Sardinia, assisted the Modeneses to keep possession of the bucket, and in one of the battles he was made prisoner. His father, the Emperor, offered a chain of gold that would encircle Bologna, which is seven miles in compass, for his son's ransom; but in vain. After twenty-two years' imprisonment he pined away. His monument is now extant in the Church of Dominicans. This fatal bucket is still exhibited in the tower of the cathedral of Modena, enclosed in an iron cage.

Col. King, of Gonzales county, Texas, who is an equal enemy of hard money and grammar, having a proper contempt for both, and who lives, as he says, "down to the foot of navigation," near Gonzales, a little creek which runs only in summer, recently delivered himself of the following emphatic remark: "Ef I owe a man an on-just debt, and I make him a lawless tender of a bank bill, and he infuses to inept it, but pursues out a writ for to level on my property, ef I don't make a sacrament of him I'll be d—d."

The sun shone brilliantly into the room where Humboldt died, and it is reported that his last words, addressed to his niece, were: "Wie herrliche diese Strahlen! sie scheinen die Erde zum Himmel zu rufen! [How grand these rays; they seem to beckon Earth to Heaven!]"

I saw a great mule train start from the Fort to-day, and another will start soon, filled with 160 soldier's wives and babies, on their way to join their husbands in Utah, from whom they have been separated nearly two years. I argue from this fact, that Uncle Sam expects to have use for his army in Utah for some time yet.—[Horace Greely's Correspondence from Leavenworth, May 26.]

Every one ought to have a wife. If a man is married happily, that one "rib" is worth all the other bones in his body.

"Dad, did you always act so strange?"
"Why, Billy?"
"Because, when mam gets sick you always have to fetch a baby here to squall around and make such a noise."

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, July 13, 1859.

UTAH NOMINATION.

For Delegate to Congress,

HORACE S. ELDRIDGE.
For Commissioners to locate University Lands:IRA ELDRIDGE, CHESTER LOVELAND,
S. A. KNOWLTON

Great Salt Lake County.

For Members of Legislative Council:

DANIEL H. WELLS,
ALBERT CARRINGTON,
ORSON PRATT, Senr.,
FRANKLIN D. RICHARDS,
JAMES FERGUSON.

For Representatives:

JOHN TAYLOR,
HOSEA STOUT,
DAVID CANDLAND,
HIRAM B. CLAWSON,
EDWIN D. WOOLLEY,
JOSEPH A. YOUNG,
SETH M. BLAIR,
A. P. ROCKWOOD,
JOHN M. MOODY.

For Select-man,

REUBEN MILLER.

For Treasurer,

JAMES W. CUMMINGS.

For Recorder,

FRANKLIN B. WOOLLEY.

For Constable,

JOHN S. WHITNEY.

For Pound-keeper,

BRIANT STRINGHAM.

A heavy fraud, in esse, on the government, has been laid open within a few days, and some of the parties implicated arrested.

So far as we learn, the facts are these:—Some person at Camp Floyd, whose name has not yet transpired, furnished information which led to the arrest of a man named Brewer, in whose boots counterfeit government checks on the Sub-Treasury, at St. Louis, were found, some already filled out ready for issue, with the exception of the signature of Col. Crossman, Deputy Q. M. General, and others partially, to the amount of eighty thousand dollars.

An arrow was also made in G. S. L. City of one Mr. Kenzie, who is an engraver, and whose office was over the Desert Store, and in his possession was found all the implements and materials used for preparing the counterfeit checks, together with a large bundle of checks, already struck off, ready for filling out.

The checks being printed with green ink were to be made payable at St. Louis. The New York checks being printed with red.

The workmanship on these counterfeits was most excellent, and it would have taken close examination to detect them from the genuine.

That such a piece of business was on hand, has evidently been known for some time, for as soon as the evidence sufficient to convict was full, the arrests were made.

It is not supposed that any of the counterfeits are in circulation. Much credit is due to the individual who has exposed this affair, and the merchants and others who handle these checks should be particularly grateful. If the attempt had been successful, much damage would have been done in the depreciation of government paper.

As the paper was designed for California, it would be as well for parties there to be careful, as perhaps some checks may have been put in circulation.

Personal.

With the last mail from the East, Horace Greeley, the well-known editor of the N. Y. Tribune, arrived in our city. He will remain some days prior to departing for California.

He came through via the Pike's Peak gold region, from thence to Laramie, and reports rather more favorably of the prospects in the mines, than we understand generally from our exchanges.

The report is that Jones & Russell have purchased the entire interest in the St. Jo. and Salt Lake mail route. Mr. B. F. Ficklin has been appointed Road agent. This, however, needs confirmation.

The Post Office here is in charge of Mr. Menefee, Deputy Post Master in the absence of Mr. Morell, P. M. It is stated in a California paper that Mr. Clayton has been appointed Post Master vice Mr. Morell which we are satisfied is not the fact.

We are gratified to be able to state that Mr. Wilson, the Attorney General of Utah, who has been very ill, although extremely weak, has so far recovered as to be enabled to leave his room.

Pike's Peak.

The accounts from the gold mines are so various, that it is difficult to arrive at a correct conclusion as to whether it is a humbug or not.

By making an average of all the statements, the result would be, that with hard work, a man might make a living.

Curtis E. Bolton, Salt Lake City, Utah, has been appointed Commissioner of Deeds, by Gov. Stewart of Missouri.

New Goods Arriving.

A train of 24 ox wagons, with goods for Livingston, Bell & Co., arrived on Sunday last.

Another train of merchandise will enter the city to-morrow, for Miller, Russell & Co.

THE WEATHER.—During Friday, Saturday, and Sunday last, we were favored with some delightful, as well as most useful showers of rain. It is rather unusual to have such rains in July, as the complement of summer rains generally falls in June.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
7th July, 1859.

After a longer recess than was agreeable to many of the frequenters of the theater, who had been in the habit of driving dull care away by their almost constant attendance, the management came to the conclusion that prudence would justify them in re-opening it, consequently, on Saturday, the 4th of June, after a prologue written and recited by Mr. Joseph Rutledge, (which contained some smart hits, and was several times interrupted by applause, the performance commenced with Tobin's comedy of the "Honeymoon." It was both well performed, and was received as it deserved to be. Space, in the present instance, will not allow us to notice the merits of the different aspirants for histrionic fame; but we must refer to a few of the improvements which have been made in the theatre. The stage has been lowered two feet; the seats in the orchestra have also, so as not to obstruct the view of the audience; commencing from this point there is a gradual incline to the back, which gives a much better opportunity of seeing, to the occupants both of the reserved seats and pit. Two nicely-fitted up private boxes in a line with the orchestra are also a great desideratum.

The drop scene is enlivened on each side by a vase of flowers, and a shield crossed with warlike weapons, in place of the nondescripts which formerly defaced these panels; one new street scene especially called forth the plaudits of the audience; several others have been touched up, and considering the materials employed, are very creditable. There is a very ingenious contrivance for darkening the stage, which was much wanted. Since they have played the "Robbers," "Eaton Boy," "Venice Boy," and "Don't judge by Appearances," they have drawn good houses.

Next, Mr. Willis' benefit, "All that glitters is not gold," and "Robert Macaire;" then followed the "Gamster" to a very poor house. Mr. Baldwin then made his appearance before the curtain, and in the course of some pertinent remarks, denied that the Dramatic Association were to blame for the failure on Willis' benefit. They had lent the house to an ex-member, who had selected his own performers and pieces. He was sure if any members had been asked they would have cordially responded to the call.

On Saturday, July 2d, Bulwer's play of "The Lady of Lyons" was performed to a good house; all the characters sustained their parts in a very creditable manner. Mr. Jones then sang two songs very nicely. The whole concluded with the laughable farce of "The Loan of a Lover." This farce was well acted throughout. Mrs. Tuckett and Mrs. White shewed what they could do in parts that suit them. On the whole, the evening's entertainment was about the best and most complete they have ever presented to the public, and was properly appreciated by the audience.

The costumes are both rich and appropriate, and would do credit to any theatre. They have cost upwards of $1,000. The music and actresses have already cost nearly $4,000; but the association do not play for "filthy lucre." They have a higher aim—that of affording an agreeable and intellectual source of amusement to the troops and citizens in the vicinity of the camp.

Up to the present time, almost every member has been at more or less personal expense in connection with the affair, and they may be very glad if at the winding up (whenever that event may occur) they come out square.

On the morning of the 30th June, (muster) the troops were reviewed by Col. C. F.

Smith, 10th Infantry, commanding officer at the post. The parade consisted of the 5th, 7th, and 10th regiments of infantry, Lt. company "B," 4th artillery, and two companies of the 2d dragoons, the whole numbering about 2,500 men under arms. The troops marched to the parade ground at 5 A. M., and, notwithstanding its being so early, all the citizens around camp and Fairfield were on the ground to witness the display. Indeed, it is well worth any persons while to come even a distance to witness the review of so large and efficient a regular force. It is a treat that but few people in the Republic are likely of having the opportunity to see.

The troops were again assembled for parade on the 4th July, at 11 o'clock. On arriving on the ground, Phelps' battery moved in front of its position, and at noon commenced firing the national salute. On the first gun being fired, the different bands played Hail Columbia, and on the 16th, The Star Spangled Banner. After the firing had ceased, the troops passed in review, before General Johnston, commanding department, the bands playing Yankee Doodle, after which the troops were marched to their respective parade grounds, and dismissed, when each soldier was served with a gill of whisky. Everything seemed orderly and quiet in and around camp, unlike many anniversaries which we have seen.

Col. Ruggles (commanding 5th Infantry) gave a splendid entertainment to the General commanding the Department; Col. Howe, 2d Dragoons, Major Porter, Asst. Adj't Gen., Capt. Clarke, C. S., and numerous other staff officers; also, Capt. Stevenson and Lieut. Torbert, 5th Infantry. The band of the 2d Dragoons played during dinner with their accustomed ability. The Colonel's quarters were tastefully decorated with the colors of the regiment. The observance of a grand display of fire-works concluded the 83d anniversary of the Day of Independence.

On the 3d inst., Mr. Price, wagon master, who was shot by Rice, was buried. It seemed as though all the male inhabitants of Fairfield attended. There was also present a large number of soldiers, who knew the worth of the unfortunate deceased. If we may judge from the number that attended his funeral, he must have been universally esteemed. The band of the 2d Dragoons headed the procession, and played an appropriate Dead March.

Rice, whom the Coroner's inquest found guilty of "wilful murder," has not since been heard of, though a reward has been offered for his apprehension. Of course he has escaped.

"DRAMA."

[For the "Valley Tan."]

Humboldt, June 8, 1859.

There is no little excitement on this road, and the owners of stock and property are suffering from Indians, it being an established fact that certain Mormons are out here among them; they present the most daring and thievish appearance. They have, at a certain time to my knowledge, attempted to stampede animals. A train lost several animals staked out at their corral, the lariats being cut.

Mr. Tomlinson followed the tracks, and found his animals tied up in different valleys. I make these statements in order that travelers may be on their guard.

The route is as good as has been represented; the train of Tomlinson, with light loads, made thirty miles per day; a portion of the road was tracked by wheels for the first time by this company.

A large number of emigrants are en route for the States, most of them with pack animals.

Through this country there is the best grass and water on the route.

In haste, from E. O. T.

AT THE GRADE NEAR THE LINE BETWEEN UTAH AND CALIFORNIA.

June 19, 1859.

To-day we have done some of the best traveling since we left the Missouri river.

At the Sink of the Humboldt, an orphan boy named Reuben, (surname not known,) whose parents died in Salt Lake Valley, was drowned. He was engaged as cook in the train of Tomlinson & Co.

After crossing the last desert, we came to the crossing of Carson River; the same place where Capt. Simpson crossed, at Miller's Station.

The measurements made by Capt. Simpson make this central route 200 miles shorter than any other route.

The "digging" of Carson Valley and Walker's River, as far as I have been able to find out from the miners, and by washing some myself, will pay from three to four dollars per day to the man.

An affray took place at Willow Town, between a station-keeper and a negro named

John, of Salt Lake, who was with Tomlinson's train. Several shots were fired without any damage being done.

To-day, a man named Hedge, belonging to the same train, in attempting to move a rifle in a wagon, shot himself through the right breast. As there is no physician near, he is not expected to live.

Yours, &c.,

E. O. T.

Latest from New Mexico.

Arrival of the Santa Fe Mail.

INDEPENDENCE, June 11.
The New Mexican mail, with Santa Fe dates to the 24th ult., arrived here to-day.

Webb & Kingsbury's train arrived at Santa Fe on the 19th, being the first arrival at that point this season.

A mass meeting of the Democracy at Santa Fe, on the 15th ult., endorsed the Administration of Mr. Buchanan and the course of Mr. Otero, the New Mexican delegate to Congress.

Great preparations were being made for the reception of Hon. J. S. Phelps, of Missouri, who has gone out in response to an invitation by the Legislature to visit New Mexico.

Since the establishment of a military post at the crossing of the Colorado river, the Stockton, California mail arrives promptly and regularly at Santa Fe.

No rain has thus far fallen in New Mexico.

Maj. Harrison came in as a passenger.

[The General Newspaper Despatch.]

WASHINGTON, June 10th, 1859.

The Secretary of the Treasury has given notice that sealed proposals will be received until the 20th inst. for the issue of any portion or the whole of five millions of dollars in Treasury notes, in exchange for the gold coins of the United States, under the authority of the acts of Congress of 2857, and 1859, the interest not to exceed six per cent.

The receipts into the treasury for the week ending on Monday were $1,283,060. The amount of the drafts issued was $1,713,000, and the amount subject to draft $3,574,000. In addition to the twelve army officers whose names have heretofore been published, Colonel Cooke of the dragoons, and Colonel Thayer of the engineers, have obtained permission from the War Department to go beyond the United States. They will visit Europe to observe military operations.

Voluminous despatches were received this morning at the State Department, brought by the Africa from our Ministers in London, Paris, Turin and Naples. Mr. Dallas refers to the Maritime Neutral Rights question, and states that it excites unusual interest among the commercial classes, and that England, before she commits herself upon the question, desires to know the exact position which the United States intends to assume. He mentions among other matters the report, which was current both in England and France, that new and strenuous efforts were being made to adjust existing difficulties and put an end to hostilities.

WASHINGTON, June 11, 1859.

The Secretary of the Navy, by order of the President, has named the purchased vessels respectively Mystic, Wyandott, Sumpter, Mohawk, Anacostia, and Crusader. The Mystic and Sumpter are to be added to the African squadron, and the others added to the Gulf squadron, making thirteen, which are as follows, viz:

Roanoke,	Saratoga,
Sabine,	Relief,
Savannah,	Preble,
Brooklyn,	Fulton,
St. Louis,	Water Witch,
Jamestown,	Mohawk,

Lieut. Masfit, who captured the Echo, is to have command of the Crusader, and Lieutenant Craven, of one of the other vessels which is going to the Gulf. Commander Williamson has received preparatory orders to the Fulton.

The principal object in augmenting the Gulf squadron at this time is to look after American interests generally, and in case of any emergency to protect them at all hazards. To display a pretty strong American force will exert a good influence.

The government has not decided upon any definite policy as to the course they will pursue in regard to Mexican affairs, and are awaiting further advices.

The administration are not fully advised with reference to the intentions of the English and French Ministers. It is stoutly denied that those Ministers are throwing any obstacles in the way of the Juarez government. An unwarrantable interference on their part, just at this time, with Mexican affairs, might make plenty of work for our squadron. There is no telling what may happen. Now censors.

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1859.

The views of the administration on the subject of neutral rights will soon be transmitted to Mr. Dallas, and by him communicated to the British government. Copies of the despatch will also be furnished our Ministers at other European courts, after the manner of Secretary Marcy's instructions to Mr. Buchanan (while the latter represented the United States in Great Britain) with reference to the declaration of maritime law in 1855 by Great Britain, France, Austria, Russia, Prussia, Sardinia, and Turkey, but dissented to by our government.

The brief letter of Secretary Cass relative to the risks incurred by naturalized citizens of the United States in returning to their native land, having occasioned much misconception, a document in course of preparation defining the exact position of the administration on that subject and as to how far such citizens are entitled to the protection of this government.

It is now positively ascertained that there is no truth in the report of Mr. Slidell being appointed Minister to France.

What our Minister at Berlin Thinks of the War—Opinion of Mr. Dodge Relative to the Acquisition of Cuba.

[Special Despatch to the New York Herald.]

WASHINGTON, June 12, 1859.

Letters have just been received here from our Minister at Berlin. He is decidedly of opinion, after a careful survey of affairs, that the war will extend beyond Italy, and involve the whole of Europe. That Prussia is determined to remain neutral, and preserve the compact entered into by the confederation, the smaller German Powers are averse to it, and manifest a strong desire to take a part in the contest now going on. Whether Prussia will be able to maintain her position of neutrality and control the action of the German States is exceedingly doubtful. The present aspect of affairs in Europe, he thinks, is perilous indeed. It is believed by many, notwithstanding the authoritative contradiction, that there is a secret treaty or understanding between France and Russia, and that should war continue it will shortly develop itself.

General Dodge, late Minister to Spain, has arrived here, and yesterday had an interview with the President and Secretary of State. The General speaks in glowing terms of the Spanish people; and especially of the Queen Mother, whom he considers to be a kind-hearted, amiable person. In regard to the acquisition of Cuba, the General is very sanguine. Our present Minister, he thinks, will be very popular; but whether he will be able to get Cuba by purchase or otherwise the deponent sayeth not.

WASHINGTON, June 13, 1859.

The English mission will probably not be filled until after the meeting of Congress. The Sardinian mission will not be filled until after the meeting of Congress.

WAR DEPARTMENT.—Capt. Dahlgren, having, by order of the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography, examined and tested Joslyn's breech-loading carbine, makes the following official report.

ORDNANCE OFFICE OF U. S. NAVY YARD,
Washington, June 1, 1859.

Sir: Conformably to your order, I have examined and tested the breech-loading arm of Mr. H. F. Joslyn, as follows:

May 30—Began at 11 o'clock, and by 3 p. m. fired 484 rounds continuously, only stopping when the piece became excessively hot. Carbine easy on the shoulder—service caps—firing steadily. At 313 rounds fired 50 rounds in 12 minutes. At 472 rounds fired seven rounds in one minute, then five rounds with loose powder, and ball, making a total of 484 rounds. The carbine was then put into the office, without removing any of the foulness from firing. The recess of the stock when receives the closing lever was very foul with residuum, but without the least influence on the movement of escape externally. The mechanism worked smoothly, throughout.

The next day (the 31st) the piece, all soiled and uncleaned from a previous day's firing, was fired 16 rounds, chiefly with loose powder and ball—making 500 rounds in all. The small rings of the breech-plug and the rest of the parts in perfect order.

This style of gun, therefore, commands itself to the tests of the service. The only objection is the shortness of barrel.

JOHN A. DAHLGREN, etc., etc.
Captain-INGRAHAM, Chief of Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography.

ARMY MOVEMENTS.—A detachment of 350 recruits for the Department of Utah, left Fort Leavenworth on the 9th inst.

The following officers left on the same day for the same destination:

Col. W. W. Chapman, 5th Infantry, commanding; Lt. Jas. H. Hill, 10th Infantry, Adjutant; Lt. L. R. Rich and 1st Lt. 5th Infantry, A. A. Q. M.; Asst. Surgeons Taylor and Suckley.

Also the following officers of the 2d dragoons: Major H. H. Sibley; Lt. C. E. Norris, Lt. Jno. Green and family, Lt. C. F. Armstrong, and Lt. S. Williams.

Lts. O. F. Solomon and C. H. Morgan, of the 4th artillery.

Maj. N. B. Rossel, and Lieutenants E. Freeman, W. J. S. Nicodemus, and B. M. Thomas, of the 5th Infantry.

Capt. M. R. Stevenson and family; Lieutenants A. B. Carey, and C. H. Ingraham, of the 7th Infantry.

Captain Jesse A. Gove and family, Capt. Jno. Danovant, Capt. C. Grover, and Lieutenants W. H. Rossel and O. P. Gooding, of the 10th Infantry.

A detachment of 225 recruits left Fort Leavenworth on the 8th, by steamer Florence, for Fort Randall.

Also the following officers of the 4th artillery: Capt. J. A. Brown and family, Lt. C. L. Best and family, Lt. S. D. Lee, Lt. J. C. Dana and family, Lt. W. S. Albert and family, and Lt. Jno. T. Goode and family.

The order sending Hunt's Battery from Fort Leavenworth to Fort Randall, has been revoked. The battery remains at Fort Leavenworth, which had been ordered to Fort Leavenworth, remains at Fort Adams.

Asst. Surgeon Swift, who has recently returned from Fort Laramie, has been assigned to duty at Fort Randall. —Leavenworth Herald, June 18.

[From the Leavenworth Daily Herald, June 19.]

BY THE ST. LOUIS & LEAVENWORTH TEL.

FARTHER FT. BELOW QUEBEC, June 19.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool on the 8th inst., passed this Point this morning, bound for Quebec. She brings most important news from the seat of war. A great battle has been fought near Milan in which the Austrians were defeated with the loss of 25,000 killed and disabled, and 5,000 taken prisoners. The French loss is stated at 12,000. The Austrians have evacuated Milan. The Queen's speech was delivered in Parliament on the 7th inst. It contains nothing very important. A motion was pending of a want of confidence in the ministry.

NEWS FROM OREGON.

The California Steam Navigation Company's steamer Pacific, left Portland June 11th, arrived at San Francisco June 11th.

LEGISLATURE.—The Oregon Legislature adjourned sine die, on the 4th inst. After adjournment, the Oregon Legislature failed to elect a United States Senator to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the late term of Delorm Smith. On the 30th ult., a Democratic caucus was held at Salem, at which Delorm Smith was declared the nominee of the party, but failed to receive votes enough in the Legislature to secure his election.

FLOOD IN THE WILLAMETTE VALLEY.—The rise of the Willamette waters has furnished the first topic of conversation among our citizens during the past week. It is generally to be feared that the crops on the bottom and low lands will be almost entirely destroyed. The farmers have already been compelled to drive their stock to the high lands, and in many instances to remove their families and goods. The rise is now estimated at about twenty feet six inches from the average low water mark.—Portland Times.

FLOOD IN THE COLUMBIA VALLEY.—The rise in the Columbia, overflowing the bottom, has also caused a rise in the potato market. Potatoes are now commanding $2.50 per bushel.—Portland Advertiser.

NAVIGATION OF SNAKE RIVER.—The Col. Col. Wright, made a successful ascent of the Snake river, to a distance of fifty miles from the mouth of the Tu-kah-nah, to the mouth of the Palouse and Teton, about three miles of very strong and rapid water. She, however, made the ascent. Hereafter, she is to make her landing at the mouth of the Palouse, for all freight and passengers destined north and west of Snake river.—Id.

BOY ON WALLA WALLA.—Just at this time there are numerous citizens of the Willamette valley who are desirous of driving their stock to the grazing country east of the Cascades. The snows in the mountains prevent them from so doing, and they will remain deep in the mountains till the middle of this month. The steamboats, then, must furnish the principal means of transfer of stock to that region till the last of June. The several attempts to construct a road north of mount Hood, so as to be payable at an earlier period of the year, have thus far proved abortive.—Id.

THE SALT LAKE EXPEDITION.—The expedition to Salt Lake, under the command of Capt. Walling, will leave the Dalles on Monday next. We anticipate for this company a successful exploration of a new and practicable route to Salt Lake, and from the observations of citizens of Oregon who have traveled somewhat in the direction this expedition proposes to explore, we should not be at all surprised to learn that their researches should develop much more hidden wealth to the people of Oregon.—Id.

FATHER DE SMET, the celebrated Indian Missionary, paid a visit to this city, accompanied by some seven Indian chiefs. These chiefs have been to Vancouver to attend a "grand talk" with General Harney, who told them to inform their people that the "Great Father" at Washington had sent him to look after and punish the misdoings of the "pale faces." He said he had no presents to make them, and they were welcome to plenty of "muck-a-muck" while they remained with him, and when they were ready to leave for their forest home, he would give them a written manuscript of his intentions, &c. The chiefs were much pleased with their interview with General Harney, as also with the treatment they received from the Portlanders, and have signified their intention to do all in their power to foster feelings of friendship between their respective tribes and the whites.—Id.

THE FORT BENTON EXPEDITION.—The expedition, under the command of Lieut. Mullan, embarked at the mouth of the Deschutes on Wednesday of last week, on the steamer Col. Wright. His escort embraces a hundred men, detachments from several companies of the 3d artillery. They were disembarked at the mouth of the Palouse river. We learn that the party of surveyors and employees under Lieut. Mullan, are to leave the Dalles on or before Monday next, and proceed to join the escort on the other side of Snake river.—Id.

THE STATE SEAL.—An act was passed to provide for the seal of the State, the device to be as follows:

"An escutcheon supported by thirty-three stars and divided by an ordinary, with the inscription, 'The Union.' In chief mountains—an elk with branching antlers—a wagon—the Pacific Ocean, on which a British man-of-war departing, an American steamer arriving. The pick, quartering with sheaf, plough and a sickle. Crest—the American eagle. Legend—State of Oregon."

NEWS FROM COLVILLE.—The news from Colville is up to the 3d of May. At that time the snow had gone from the valleys, and the farmers were busily occupied in putting their spring crops. Strong hopes are indulged that an abundant harvest will be realized, and that a ready market at high prices will be found for all they can raise. Many of the miners at Colville have done well during the past winter, and much expectation exists that the presence of troops at Colville will embolden the miners to make more extensive prospects the coming season, which may result in the discovery of new and richer gold fields than those now worked.—These expectations are much enhanced by the tales of Indians, who speak of gold in the mountains.

The Arizonians are indignant at Congressional neglect, and have held a meeting at which it was resolved to establish an independent government.

WAR NEWS.
Sardinian Bulletin.

TORIN May 31.
A fresh victory has been gained by our troops. At 7 o'clock this morning a force of 23,000 Austrians endeavored to take Palestro. The King of Sardinia commanded the 4th Division in person. Gen. Cealchini, at the 3d Regiment, of Zouaves, resisted the attack for a considerable time, and then successfully assumed the offensive and pursued the enemy, taking 1,000 prisoners and capturing eight guns, seven of which were obtained by the Zouaves. Five hundred Austrians were drowned in a cannonading.

Another fight took place in Confranza, in the province of Zullumine, in which the enemy were repulsed by the division under Gen. Forey, of the first corps of the French army, after two hours conflict. Last night a picket of the enemy endeavored to pass the Po at Ceresera, but they were repulsed by the inhabitants of the vicinity.

The Austrians have evacuated Verolme, in the province of Robbio.

TORIN, June 3.
A serious conflict occurred at six o'clock last evening at Palestro. The enemy endeavored to re-enter, but were repulsed by the division under Gen. Clalidia, composed of the Zouaves and Piedmontese cavalry. The King pressed forward where the fight was most furious, the Zouaves vainly trying to restrain him. On Tuesday the Austrians attacked the Sardinian Vanguard at Zesto Calende, and after a fight of two hours our troops pursued the enemy across the Ticino. The details of the battle of Palestro says that the Sardinians were at one time outflanked by the Austrians who threatened the bridge of boats across the Sesia, over which Canrobert was to effect a junction with the King. At this junction the Zouaves lost one officer and twenty men killed, and the Austrians two hundred killed, including ten officers.

The accounts from Gen. Gribaldi state a numerous Austrian corps having arrived before Verez he ordered the National Guard not to resist and fall back on Lago Maggiore.

An attack was attempted by our troops against Saveno on the lake but without result.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The Sardinians forced a passage over the river Sesia, at Palestro, in the face of Austrians, who were protected by the fortifications erected there since their occupation of the city. After a severe conflict, they also succeeded in the capture of the city, taking many prisoners.

The Sardinians were under the immediate command of King Victor Emanuel.

Gen. Garibaldi was still creating a sensation in Northern Lombardy. A rumor prevails that he has been defeated by a superior force, and retreated into Sesia, but the rumor lacks confirmation, as the Turin dispatches intimate that he was making still further progress.

The Emperor Napoleon was about removing the headquarters of the allies to Cassala.

It is reported at Paris that, as soon as the French enter Milan, England and Prussia will jointly make strenuous efforts to terminate the war by negotiation.

A fight had occurred at Florence, between some English and American sailors on account of the latter wearing tri-colored regiments.

The Emperor of Austria; the Arch-Duke Charles, and Gen. Hess, all reached Verona on the 31st, on their way to headquarters.

FRANCE.

It is rumored that Napoleon will return to Paris in August, after the first series of military operations are carried into effect.

Heavy shipments continue to be made of artillery and siege materials.

The Paris Bourse was buoyant at an advance of over 1 per cent; 3 per cents, closed at 62 1/2.

GERMANY.

The military committee of the German Diet had received a motion to place an army on the Rhine.

State of Germany at the last dates.

At latest dates the state of feeling in Germany was most disturbed. The anxiety with reference to the French Army of Observation, whose presence on the Rhine frontier was hourly feared, is represented as spreading rapidly.

Accounts from the Southern States of Germany reiterate the report that the war excitement there was most intense. Explanations are said to have been demanded respecting the passage of Austrian troops through Bavarian territory. Twenty thousand men from Bohemia, under Field Marshal Clam Gallas, being on their way to Italy through Munich, the capital of that kingdom.

At the sitting of the federal Diet at Frankfurt on the 26th ult., the minor German States voted that in certain eventualities military measures should be taken. Prussia claimed that in such cases the initiative should be accorded to her.

Meanwhile reports continued to circulate that Prussia would call out the Landwehr on the 5th of June.

It is said that France is about to send a special Commissioner—Mons. Bernadelli—to Germany with a view to compromise matters there.

In this state of things the part the German confederation may be called upon to play in the war it is yet impossible to predict. Should Napoleon order the army under the Duke of Saxe-Coburg to take up a position on the Rhine, the German States would doubtless feel compelled to send the federal army to that point also, to protect their territories, in which event the statement of the Paris correspondent of the London Post may be verified, who says:—

"It is believed by some people that the small German States, with Prussia at their head, will eventually come to the rescue of Austria. If so, the war would become universal, for Russia could not do otherwise than join France, which would involve a revolt of the whole Christian population of the East, and within a year we might find the Russians at Constantinople.

It will thus be seen that the position of Germany is full of difficulty and uncertainty. With all her best interests demanding that she should remain neutral in the war, the force of circumstances, many of them still unforeseen, may compel her to take an active part in the contest.

WASHINGTON, June 13, 1859.

The following important letter was to-day communicated to A. V. Hofer, of Cincinnati, by Secretary Cass. It needs no comment:—

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1859.

SIR—In answer to your letter of the 6th inst., I have to inform you that the brief letter from this Department to which you refer, dated the 17th of May last, and addressed to Mr. Felix Leclerc, was in reply to an application for information, and was principally intended to recommend caution to our naturalized fellow citizens, natives of France, in returning to that country, as the operations of the French conscription law were not precisely known here, and might bear injuriously upon that class of American citizens. Most of the Continental European nations have a system of military organization by which their citizens are compelled to serve in the army by conscription to France, where the duty is designated by lot, or by draft, as in Prussia, where every person is required to take his turn as a soldier.

The condition of American naturalized citizens returning to their native country where the system of compulsory service prevails, and who had left before performing such service, has frequently been the subject of discussion with some of the European Powers. Quite recently it has arisen between the United States and Prussia, and the representative of this country at the court of Berlin has brought the matter to the attention of the Prussian government. In the instructions which were sent to him, dated May 12, 1859, it was explicitly stated that this government is opposed to the doctrine of perpetual allegiance, and maintains the right of expatriation and the right to form new political ties elsewhere. Upon this subject it is observed, that in this age of the world the idea of controlling the citizen in the choice of a home and binding him by a mere political theory to inhabit for his lifetime a country which he constantly desires to leave, can hardly be entertained by any government whatever.

The position of the United States, as communicated to the Minister at Berlin for the information of the Prussian government, is that native born Prussians naturalized in the United States and returning to the country of their birth, are not liable to any duties or penalties, except such as were existing at the period of their emigration. If at that time they were in the army or actually called into it, such emigration and naturalization do not exempt them from the legal penalty which they incurred by their desertion, but whenever they shall voluntarily place themselves within the local jurisdiction of their native country and shall be proceeded against according to law. But when no present liabilities exist against them at the period of their emigration, the law of nations, in the opinion of this government, gives no right to any country to interfere with naturalized American citizens, and the attempt to do so would be considered an act unjust in itself and unfriendly towards the United States. This question cannot of course arise in the case of a naturalized citizen who remains in the United States. It is only when he voluntarily returns to his native country that its local laws can be enforced against him. I am, sir, your obedient servant.

LEWIS CASS.

[Despatch to the New York Times.]

WASHINGTON, June 10.

A correspondence has been going on for some months with the British Government, relative to the manner in which the United States was carrying out the provisions of the Ashburton Treaty, touching the suppression of the slave trade. England thought the treaty should either be observed according to its spirit, or that proper steps should be taken for its abrogation.

I have reason to believe the State Department is in receipt of a note from Lord Lyons concerning a communication from Admiral Gray, commanding the British squadron on the coast of Africa, in which that officer complains of Commodore Conover's want of efficiency in his efforts to carry out the treaty stipulations.

He says that the African slave trade is conducted almost wholly under the American flag, and enumerates twenty-five instances as coming within his knowledge. As our Government claims of others strict conformity to treaty provisions, President Buchanan has determined to answer the complaints, which he regards as well founded, by ordering to the coast of Africa and the Gulf of Mexico all the new gun-boats now approaching completion at the several navy yards. These little steamers are peculiarly fitted for the service, and will be put in commission as soon as possible.

Lord and Lady Napier are now in London. His lordship writes that the impression in London is that Germany will soon be involved in the war, and with Germany all Europe. The German Government are opposed to interference, but the excitement among the people is so wild they cannot be checked. An army will march to the Rhine, he thinks, at an early day. This necessarily involves England in the fight.

It is true that Lord Napier stated that the English Government has disapproved the action of Sir Wm. Gore Ouseley in Nicaragua.

The Commercial Advertiser calls attention to the foreign slave trade, and demands that the Government should show more zeal in suppressing it.

For a long time our Government, through inattention, practically left the responsibility of suppressing the traffic to British cruisers—in time the pecuniary value of slaves here was enhanced to such a degree as to create a strong temptation for the avaricious to enter upon the African slave trade. It was profitable whenever successful, and others were thus tempted to engage in this traffic, until their number became large enough to create, when overhauled by British cruisers, an excitement in their behalf on the abstract question of the right of search. If in this dispute they were successful, they could elude those of their own flag. They did succeed, and beyond doubt there are now a goodly number of slave traders actually pursuing their horrible business unmolested, under our flag, if not, indeed, in bona fide American vessels, with American officers and crews.

THE VOLUNTEER MILITARY IN ENGLAND.—England is encouraging the formation of volunteer rifle companies as a means of defence. The Government sees the best defender of her soil is militia who voluntarily submit to voluntary training, perfect themselves in discipline, practice with the rifle till they become good marksmen, and who also individually bear the expenses of this training. With this volunteer spirit properly stimulated in so brave a nation, England will soon have a fighting force which she can always rely upon in an emergency, either for defence or invasion, and have no necessity of employing foreign auxiliaries to fight her battles. The Times recommends that the attention of the new companies shall be turned chiefly to rifle practice so as to become sure marksmen, as the chief value of a soldier is in his sure aim; the field movements and evolutions can be learned with very little training afterwards. It says:

"Hitherto the greatest characteristic of all military force—at least since the use of firearms—has been waste of powder. In old times we know that English archers would shoot so 'wholly together' that no body of men could or did stand before their shafts; but with the musket it was computed, on reasonable grounds, that 210 shot out of 230 might as well never have been fired. When it is recollected further that troops rarely crossed bayonets, and that such execution as was done was done mostly by musket balls, it will soon be seen how many soldiers stood uselessly in rank to swell the mortality of the forlorn or the hospital. It is hardly possible to calculate the effect of a force, in which every musket would tell, and tell it should, if our volunteers do their duty. Nothing ought to live within range of their places. It is beyond all doubt or question that rifles can be made which, with proper handling, will deal certain death five hundred yards, or more. It is equally beyond question that we, as a people, are naturally apt in such exercises, and that we are better qualified to attain something like universal proficiency in them than almost any other nation. Here then, are first rate weapons and first rate hands. We hope the next few months will see the two put together, and then we may snap our fingers at invasion."

The Leavenworth Times gives the following summary of the election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention of Kansas Territory, which the editor vouches for as substantially correct:

REPUBLICAN:.....23
DEMOCRAT:.....20
DOUBTFUL:.....3

The Result in Kansas.

The Leavenworth Daily Herald, of June 10th, gives the following as the result of the election for Delegates: Dem., 26; Rep., 23; doubtful, 2.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The Copartnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Livingston, Kinkadee & Co., has been dissolved by mutual consent.

Mr. Kinkadee retires from the concern, having sold his entire interest to James M. Livingston, Esq. The firm of Livingston, Bell & Co., have full control of the entire stock of the old firm and power to adjust all claims for or against.

HOWARD LIVINGSTON,
CHARLES A. KINKADEE,
WILLIAM BELL.

Daily Mo. Republican, insert three times, and send bill to "Valley Tan" Office for payment. 23-31

A CARD.

James M. Livingston, William Bell and Howard Livingston, have formed a Copartnership to do business in this Territory, under the name and style of Livingston, Bell & Co., as successors to the old firm of Livingston, Kinkadee & Co., and would most respectfully solicit a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to that firm.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES.

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods,
Liquors,
Hats & Caps,
Boots & Shoes,
Clothing,
Hardware,
Outfitting Goods,
Harness,
Saddles,
Bridles,
which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,
25 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 500 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one horse MILL; SACKS; one fine STALLION. For sale by
C. A. PERRY & CO.

WANTED.

A CAPABLE, sober, and industrious, MILLWRIGHT, to take charge of a Saw Mill at Fort Bridger. None need apply unless they can bring good recommendations. Wages $50 per month, and rations. Apply at the office of the Deputy Q. M. C. at Camp Floyd, U. T.

G. H. CROSSMAN,

Deputy Quartermaster General. Camp Floyd, U. T., July 2d, 1859. C. H. C. 34 if

CITY BREWERY.

MR. W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers. He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments. n311f

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their

NEW STORE ROOMS,

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of MERCHANDISE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 24-if $20 Reward!

STAYED OR STOLEN, from the point of the West Mountain, twelve mules and one blue roan horse. Mules branded "H. O. & Co." on the left thigh. J. M. HOCKADAY & Co., P. K. DOTSON 24-25

$1,000 REWARD.

WILLIAM A. ADEN.

I have learned through the Post Master, Lucius E. Sooy, of Provo City, Utah Territory, that one W. A. ADEN, residing at the late of October, 1857, in California, by the name of ADEN, to make a party of emigrants, who were then on a dry land road of him. To William A. Aden, a young gentleman of Provo City, Utah, who had formed an acquaintance with him, and agreed to write as soon as he got through, but, as yet, not a word from him. Mr. Sooy says, under date of March 25, 1858: "Mr. Aden has since been in California, and is a just and fair man, and his return, however, by a man in one of the extreme Southern settlements, that a certain Indian in New Mexico, a 'pacha' or chief, had taken one of your men who was left here, and it is great a pity that he was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. Said

WILLIAM A. ADEN,

If alive, is now about twenty-one years of age—five feet high—blue eyes—fair skin—dark hair, and dark—a pretty good talent for music (both vocal and instrumental)—writes poetry to enable him to make a natural growth—particularly at PAINTING. For particulars, as to dress, &c., visit to W. D. Roberts, Provo City.

For the rescue and delivery of my son, if a prisoner, to Governor Cumming, of Utah, or to Governor H. L. L., of Nevada Territory, California, or an undoubted acquaintance of mine, I will give the above reward, and I will give a liberal compensation for knowledge of his whereabouts, if alive, so that he may be rescued; if a prisoner perhaps he may be bought off from the Indians. And any information in reference to him would be gratefully received by his distressed parents, brothers and sisters.

As an assurance of the reward, I refer to the annexed note to Governor Cumming, of Utah, from G. W. Harbison, of Tennessee, with whom I have been personally acquainted for many years.

Paris, Tennessee, May 27th, 1859.

S. B. ADEN.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Nashville, Tenn., May 31st 1859.

His Excellency, the Governor of Utah Territory:

SIR: Dr. S. B. Aden, of this State, is under the apprehension that his son William, en route for California, was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. The Dr. is in deep distress, and wishes to offer a reward for the rescue of his son, if living, and at his instance I write this note, to say that Dr. Aden is a gentleman of high character, and in every way worthy and responsible; and any reward which he may offer for the rescue of his son, from the custody of the Indians, will be promptly paid, which fact you will please make known to your people, by the publication of this note, or otherwise, so that full credit may be given to such reward as Dr. Aden may offer.

Very respectfully,

ISHAM G. HARRIS,

Governor of Tennessee.

N. B.—Any person who shall be entitled to the above reward, will please draw on myself at this place, or my son, F. F. Aden, of St. Louis, Mo.

S. B. ADEN.

250 Tons Merchandise. LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd,

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest stock, and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale in this market, and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, desiring themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates. 23-32 LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

THE VALLEY TOWN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 36.

Extract

From a Speech delivered by Senator Green, of Missouri, at Jefferson City, June 8th, 1859.

One of the most difficult questions that has agitated the public judgment, is the power of the government over the Territories and the rights of the people living in them. All of these questions have sprung up since the days of the Revolution, and the ideas of the American people have been less definite, less fixed and less exact with reference to the territorial power and the power of Government over their territories, than perhaps any other question that has been presented to the Government for action. So be it; I have that confidence in the American judgment and the patriotism of the American heart, I believe that no question can be presented but what we can solve, and solve to the satisfaction of the vast majority of the people, and solve in a manner that will cement this Union together in all its legitimate functions, making the Government go forward in the career of general prosperity. [Applause.] It has been said with reference to this subject, that the present administration has hardly discharged its duty. With regard to Utah, there are many circumstances to excuse it, not to justify what has been done there. As a misled people, the President was disposed to extend to them every degree of clemency that was compatible with his executive functions. For that he is entitled to our commendation.

But I have ever thought and yet think that in its extent it has been a mistaken policy. I believe that a necessity exists for some more stringent measures, and for one, and but for one, I will never consent to permit any class of people to set at defiance the laws of the United States, and pass unpunished and live in the constant commission of crimes revolting to the common judgment of the people. [Great applause.] This Federal government has the power to suppress it, and it ought to exercise that power. Perhaps it may be the first time it was ever said, and yet I will say it, at all hazards, for there is no impropriety in it. I would by Congressional interference, if it could not be otherwise done, suppress murder, robbery and polygamy in Utah. [Renewed applause.] A bandit should not secure himself in the fastnesses of the Rocky Mountains and say, "my religion teaches me crime and polygamy."

There is a line of demarcation as broad as the space between heaven and hell between crime and religion; and under the beautiful garb of religion there should never be any crimes cloaked up, so far as the action of Government is concerned, in those revolting scenes of defilement. [Cheers.] The Government does not define or punish sin. There is no union of Church and State, but it is for the protection of society from injurious action. If they call it religion it does not follow that it should be tolerated. If they say that they will murder our emigrant trains as they have done, they may still call it religion, yet it is a crime according to the judgment of the human family, and whatever strikes at the basis of society, whatever terrifies the stream of justice should be classed with crimes. [Applause.] The motives of the human heart we do not inure into. The act and external demonstration—the effect produced upon society we must look at, and ought to control so far as we have the power.

It has been the favorite theme of that deluded people, (deluded a portion of them are, but more knaves than fools among them) that we persecute them because they are Mormons. We have never persecuted them for that or any other cause. They were not persecuted in the State of Missouri, but they were persecuted when they stole our cattle and we sought to punish them. They were not persecuted in the State of Illinois, but they were persecuted when they committed crimes. And so, in the Territory of Utah, so important to us where we must maintain the Federal authority. I say it to you my friends, that an emigrant train cannot pass through Salt Lake Valley in the absence of that army in safety. Are we to maintain Gen. Johnston with twenty-five hundred troops and even then be threatened with attack on the part of volunteer Mormons? Did not an American train with more than one hundred persons from Arkansas meet their sad fate—men, women and children—at the hands of the Mormons? I am not referring to this to excite any indignation, but to show you the necessity existing in the proper authority and proper power to stop that stage of things and maintain our rights. We never will consent that communication between the eastern and western portions of the Union shall be interrupted by lawless banditti under the name of religion. Politicians, unfortunately, have sometimes been afraid of the subject, and afraid to say Congress should intervene. They seem to be afraid to announce a doctrine which political opponents might unfairly make use of for some other purposes. Sirs, I am never afraid to take the position which I conscientiously believe. [Applause.] Nor am I afraid to avow it. What is a territory? What a sovereignty? What an independent power? Can a territory make war upon the government of the United States? No. It is a piece of land belonging to the United States. These United States constitute a government formed by the association and support of independent States, and this property or territory belonging to the association of States to be held and managed by the Federal Government for the benefit of all the States alike. To do that, as a mere matter of convenience, they may throw it into an organic form, prescribe its boundaries, name a central city and government, and confer upon it certain privileges. This, however, is but an agency, subject not only to the constitution of the United States, but to the power of the Congress of the United States. Congress cannot rid itself of a constitutional obligation, but Congress can for convenience sake permit the people of a territory to do certain things, provided these things do not conflict with the rights of all the States and of each of the States. But Congress cannot permit the people of a territory to do what will conflict with the rights of any of the people of any of the States, as it, the territory, is property belonging to all, and it must be administered for the benefit of all. Losing sight of this, main, simple and palpable truth, parties have said we must submit to the doctrines of territorial sovereignty. In such words they use that term, but they thereby make territory by their argument and positions, far more independent, as I think any of you can easily demonstrate in five minutes, than any State in this Union; for the States of this Union are subject to the constitution of the United States. It has been contended by some that a territorial government owing its existence to the fiat of Congress is not under the constitution of the United States. It has also been contended they can do as they please; in other words that they can legislate for themselves in their own way without regard to the constitution. I admit they can act in their own way, subject to the limitations of the constitution and rights of the States existing under the constitution. But if they do it against the constitution, then they can do what no independent State in the Union now does. You cannot coerce them, say they, they are a Foreign Government to all intents and purposes, and you have no power to control them. Why, fellow citizens, go back to first principles. It may be said that this will raise another discussion, that it will give rise to agitation, and that the slavery question will be introduced, and the whole Union will be convulsed again with excitement with reference to the subject of slavery. The slavery question may be introduced. It has always existed since 1820, and it will always exist, as the great Apostle of Republicanism says, until either Republicanism is killed politically or there is a total abolition of slavery. We are compelled to stand upon one side or the other. It is not renewal of agitation. It is the discussion of existing questions in which you, and I, and all of us, are most deeply interested.

Knights the Golden Circle.

The New York Tribune of the 13th, informs us in a leading editorial, of the existence of a secret order called "Knights of the Golden Circle," whose object is to "conquer certain countries and thereby spread over them the genial influences of our own institutions; to cultivate the martial pride of our own people; and to render substantial aid to weak and oppressed nationalities." The order, whose seat is Baltimore, consists, or is to consist, of two legions, of 10,000 men each, one of which is in progress of organization in the United States, and the other in some country (supposed to be Cuba) symbolized by the figure 6. The members of the order are allowed to secede from it at any time, absolved from all obligations except that of secrecy. When a Knight is initiated, he is told that the chief object of the order is the conquest of "6," and is put in possession of the signs and passwords by which members are made known to each other.

The members are each to pay $1 initiation fee, and also a weekly tax of ten cents. One quarter of the initiation fee, and half the weekly tax, is retained by the captain, to defray the incidental expenses of the company; one quarter of the initiation fee goes to the colonel for a similar purpose, and half the initiation fee, with half the weekly tax, is to be forwarded to the commander-in-chief, for the incidental expenses of his department. A fund for the purchase of arms, ammunition, and general outfit, is to be raised by the sale of scrip, in which all the subordinate officers are to be employed. This scrip is issued in sums of $5, 10, 20, 50, or 100, or $1,000, and is to be paid for either in cash, in powder, lead, iron, cotton cloth, red or blue flannel, tobacco, train oil, shoes, blankets, spades, &c., or partly in cash and partly in promissory notes of short dates—the money, as fast as received, to be forwarded to head quarters. Upon the moneys thus raised, the parties who sell the scrip are allowed to retain a commission of 20 per cent.

This money part of the operation looks much like a scheme for putting into the hands of the commander-in-chief, who would seem to be the originator of the whole affair, not only a comfortable weekly sum as the product of initiation fees and weekly payments, but also whatever money, minus the commission, can be raised by the sale of this scrip, which purports to be payable, according to a specimen of it now before us, on the first day of January, 1865, at the Treasurer's Office, in the city of Andalusia, with 20 per cent, per annum interest, or to be receivable for Government lands at the rate of one dollar an acre. The soldiers who may enlist in this expedition are promised each a grant of 6,400 acres of land; also, $7 a month in specie, and $7 in scrip; arms, ammunition, uniforms, &c., to be furnished by the Board of War before leaving American soil. The men, it is stated, can pursue their ordinary business till November. The circulars urge great zeal in enlisting men, but remark that better attention must be paid to drilling, as the arms to be used are new, and not suited to the French or United States exercise. On the whole, we are inclined to suspect that this is not so much a bona fide filibuster organization as the scheme of some designing persons to make money for themselves by playing on filibuster credulity. However that may be, we have reason to believe that a large number of names have already been enrolled, especially in the South-Western States, and that at this moment a considerable number of agents are traveling in the Southern States initiating members. It is alleged, perhaps with the design of getting new recruits, that Southern members of Congress and Federal office holders are parties to the scheme, and that its existence is known to President Buchanan, and that he regards the movement with favor.

A MANLY SPEECH.—Gen. Shields, formerly a Senator of Illinois, and recently a Senator also from Minnesota, was greeted on his return home with a public reception, on which occasion he replied to a complimentary address. In the course of his reply he made the remarks which we subjoin. We confess, says the National Intelligencer, we have seldom read a speech of equal length, or rather of equal brevity, with more pleasure. It is in keeping with the character of the gallant gentleman who delivered it, and we copy it for the gratification of our readers, who, we are sure, are all capable of appreciating the independent sentiments of the address and the frankness of their avowal.

"There is one incident of my life of which I am disposed to feel a little proud, and that is my immigration to this State. You all know that defeat is sooner or later the ordinary fate of politicians; that every party is bound to be, or ought to be, defeated some time or other. Well, I met my fate in Illinois; but while I had to submit to the ordinary fate, I think I did not cringe under it like an ordinary politician. I never stopped to solicit any kind of office from the Executive, nor suffered any friend of mine to solicit one for me. I suppose, if I had sought it, I might have obtained some moderate office of Commissioner to the Sandwich Islands, or to the Cannibal Islands, or some other ill-fated island. But, no; I preferred to do what every man with an independent mind would approve under similar circumstances—I put all my goods and chattels in a trunk and emigrated to Minnesota, and here I am, and here is my home, and here I mean to spend the rest of my days.

"I made my pre-emption, as you all know, on the Faribault prairie. I paid for it with my own warrant, the warrant which I received for my services in Mexico, the only bounty which I ever received from the Government of the United States for those services. And I will venture to say that I am the first General of the United States army who ever made his own pre-emption with his own warrant. Now this, I think, is a home to be proud of; a home which I hold sacred because I purchased it with my own blood. Then why should I not be true to that home and the fair young State in which that home is situated?"

The Express objects to the BUTTERFIELD Overland Mail contract, as being too enormously expensive to the Department, while it is but slightly advantageous to the public. The Express says of it:

What is called the Butterfield Mail, costs us $600,000. It goes fully six hundred miles out of the direct course to San Francisco from St. Louis. It passes, for two hundred miles, through a sandy desert, where there is neither wood nor water, where no white, red or black man could live, and where no settlement will ever exist. It takes a circuitous route to California, in order to make a direct trip to the Treasury. It gets money out of the public coffers in order to put it into the pockets of contractors. If the object of such a mail was to serve the public, it would be carried for three hundred thousand, in place of six hundred thousand dollars. There would be then less for the people to pay, and less to divide among the agents who used their exertions to secure the contract to the Butterfields and their numerous partners in the speculation.

SWITZERLAND.—The federal assembly of Switzerland has raised an army to preserve their nationality in the present crisis of European affairs. It consists of about seventy thousand men. Its commander is General Wm. Henry Dufour. He is about seventy-five years of age. Louis Napoleon studied military tactics under his tuition when he resided in Switzerland. At one time Napoleon enlisted as a soldier in the Swiss army. When Louis Philippe demanded the surrender of the present Emperor of the French, Gen. Dufour commanded the troops that were to protect his pupil in case of hostilities.

The Mormon property at Nauvoo, Ill., consisting of the Icharian Hall, Joe Smith's Mormon Temple, and a large number of residences is to be sold at public auction on the 15th of August.

A LITTLE MORE OF THE SAME SORT.—A movement is being made in Connecticut to follow the example of Massachusetts in relation to the qualifications of foreigners. They propose to add one year instead of two to the time now required, before a foreigner can vote or hold office. The Legislature of Connecticut is strongly Republican, or American Republican.

The Overflow at Portland.

Never, since 1853, has there been so high a stage of water at Portland as at present, and it is expected that there will still be a rise of some 3 to 5 feet above the line now marked. The hills and mountains of the Cascade range, of the Upper Columbia, and of the whole North Country, are still clad in snow. With the melting warmth of summer these are certain to send down torrents, which, superadded to the present stage of water, must cause a great overflow. Already the water is within a very few inches of the highest line reached in 1853. There are but two of the city wharves un submerged—both of them much too low for the convenient landing of an ocean steamer. The low lands below and opposite the city are completely whelmed, and all down the Willamette and Columbia, the water has flowed beyond the high front backs, so that only at the ordinary higher base lands can a landing be effected. The flood has entirely ruined several fine gardens, farms and orchards for the present year, and further serious loss is apprehended. Along the banks of both rivers, houses and barns before deemed sufficiently above high water level, are half submerged, stock are driven to the hills, and every species of disaster from such a cause is either already felt or anticipated.

The Portland "Advertiser" of 16th June says:

By the Mountain Buck, which arrived at Portland about half-past eleven o'clock last night, [15th June] we have intelligence from the Columbia above, as far as the Dalles. From Monday morning, when the Hesseloe left the Dalles, up to Tuesday noon, the water rose about 18 inches. Since then there has been but little perceptible change. No other stores gone since our last report. Isaac's stone store has cracked, but it is thought it will stand. It has about 15 inches of water on its floor. Boats navigate Main street from one end to the other. Nearly all the wooden buildings north of the ridge on the north side of Main street have been carried away by the water—the goods of the merchants mostly saved. The expectation, there, is that the river will rise soon again. Its present height above low water mark is 45 feet. Judge Waite was to have opened his court at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, at the Dalles.

At the Cascades, the whole of Bradford's Railroad, from the lower depot up to the salmon fishery, or the big eddy, about a mile in length, has been carried away. About 100 yards more of Rucker's road is gone. The front of Rucker's house, at the middle landing, has been stove in by the action of the surf. Between the Cascades and Dalles, the whole country, from mountain to mountain, is submerged, and from the Cascades down to Vancouver it is thought that 20 acres of bottom land cannot be found above water.

By the "Cowlyt" we learn that Deer Island is all under water, that the settlers along the bottoms have all left for higher ground, and that the "Cowlyt" was sought to take off stock from Deer Island, but she was unable to make a landing so as to take them on board.

Among other things damaged and destroyed by the high water may be classed the fruit orchards. Many of the settlers along the Columbia and Lower Willamette had planted and cultivated fine apple and peach orchards, which had just commenced to bear fruit, and return them a good interest upon their investment. Many of these have been entirely destroyed, and others greatly damaged.

Captain Turnbull informs us that the stock is suffering much in consequence of the high water. Some parties have lost several head by drowning; that every effort which can be made is now being put forth to remove their stock beyond the reach of high water.

The "Advertiser" adds, that from 6 o'clock on the 15th June, till 6 o'clock next morning, the water at Portland rose half an inch.

POLITICAL PELAEVER.—On Wednesday, 8th June, Gen. Lane and Delazon Smith delivered political harangues before a large assembly in Stewart's theatre, Portland. There were two mortal hours of "Delusion." Lane then followed with an hour or more's talk. In the evening of the same day, a crowd of citizens assembled in front of the Metropolitan hotel, to listen to other speakers. Mr. Dryer of the "Oregonian" led off; after him came Mr. Logan and Mr. O'Meara followed.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING.—On Wednesday evening, (8th June,) the marriage of Lieut. Hodges, of the 4th infantry, U. S. A., to Miss Annie, only daughter of ex-Gov. Abernethy, of Oregon City, was gaily celebrated by the large concourse of guests invited to witness the ceremonies, at the elegant residence of the bride's father, at Green Point. Gen. Harney honored the occasion with his presence. There were also present most of the officers, stationed at Fort Vancouver: Commander De Camp, of the U. S. steamer "Shubrick," and Commander Foulteroy, of the "Massachusetts." The array of beauty was contributed from Oregon City, Portland, Vancouver, Astoria, and other neighboring places.

On Friday evening (10th June) Gen. Harney gave a brilliant party to the bride, at which there was a charming display of beauty and fashion. Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen from Portland were in attendance. The festival ended at a seasonable hour. [Portland Standard.]

THE SMALL POX DISAPPEARED FROM PORTLAND.—The "Standard" says that there is now not a case of varioloid or small pox in Portland. The few who have been afflicted had entirely recovered.

From Washington Territory.

From the "Pioneer and Democrat," of Olympia, W. T., of 10th June, we have the following news:

Political excitement is running high in Washington Territory. Gov. Stevens and Col. Wallace, his competitor, are canvassing together. The impression is that Stevens will be re-elected Delegate to Congress by a large majority. It is also confidently believed that the county elections will almost universally result favorable to the Democracy.

Three canoes full of Indians had made an attack upon Blunt's or Smith's Island light-house. Major Haller had dispatched a force of twenty soldiers to drive away the Indians, but before they could arrive at the scene of action, a volunteer force of 15 men under Capt. Jones made their appearance. On perceiving the strength of the party opposed to them, the Indians withdrew.

The steamer Wilson Hunt is running upon the Sound and to Victoria, employed in carrying U. S. Mails.

For the three days ending May 27th, 736,000 feet of lumber were shipped from Port Gamble to San Francisco.

Interesting from Northern Mexico.

BATTLE NEAR CHIHUAHUA—LIBERALS VICTORIOUS.

The San Antonio Texan, of the 1st inst., has a letter from a correspondent at Fort Davis, in which the writer says:

Don T. Zuloaga arrived at this place, a few days since, from El Paso, with the intention of going to his brother in Mexico, by way of Presidio del Norte; but he was informed that his brother's party stood a good chance of being defeated, and his intention now is, I believe, to enter Mexico by way of Eagle Pass. The Liberal party drafted one hundred and ninety men at Del Norte, a few days since, and a large number of Mexicans are taking refuge on this side of the Rio Grande, from the fact that they do not like to be pressed into service and leave their families to starve. Many families now in Mexico, on the opposite side of the river, are in a state of starvation, the husbands having been forced into service and leaving their wives and children without sustenance. The Priest party is reported to be 700, and the Liberal party 1,200 strong, on the side of the river.

By the arrival of the overland stage on the night of the 31st inst., the San Antonio "Herald" has the following intelligence:

From private letters received from El Paso we learn that a bloody battle was recently fought at Carileto, near Chihuahua, between the Government party and the Liberals, in which the Liberals were victorious. Several hundred were killed on each side.

ACTIVITY OF THE FRENCH.—What the English Think of it.—The Paris correspondent of the New York "Commercial Advertiser" says in a late letter:

It is truly astonishing to witness the celerity with which the French transport their troops and munitions of war. Four steamships arrived at Genoa in the morning at 10 o'clock, with 7,000 men, 600 horses, and 70 pieces of artillery, and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon they were off again to Toulon for another like freight. This is only a small specimen of what Louis Napoleon has done and is doing. The Englishmen here are amazed at all this, and well they may be, for if Napoleon can in forty hours plant 60,000 men, and artillery in proportion, in Sardinia, how long would it take him to place 100,000 men on the shores of England, with a navy quite as efficient as that of Great Britain to protect them.

SIZE OF THE WEST.—Illinois would make forty such States as Rhode Island, and Minnesota, sixty. Missouri is larger than all New England; Ohio exceeds either Ireland, Scotland or Portugal, and equals Belgium and Switzerland together. Missouri is more than half as large as Italy, and larger than Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland. Missouri and Illinois are larger than England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

CLAY MONUMENT AT NEW ORLEANS.—Joel T. Hart, Esq., American sculptor at Rome, who is the modeler, Mr. Maler, of Munich, the carver, will soon complete their labor, and the statue of Mr. Clay will be received in New Orleans before the first of January next. It will be inaugurated on the 12th of April next, the eighty-third anniversary of Mr. Clay's birth.

The University of North Carolina, at its late commencement, conferred the honorary degree of LL. D. on President Buchanan. He also was made an honorary member of the "Philanthropic Society" of the University, a compliment which the President was pleased to accept.

A bill to prohibit the marriage of white and black persons has passed the Wisconsin Legislature.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, July 20, 1859.

From Camp Floyd we learn, that the sale of Government animals which began on the 14th inst., as per advertisement, still proceeds. We understand that several hundred mules have been disposed of to different individuals who purchase for their own use, and consequently the animals are run up, to the full, or nearly the full value. The demand for "home consumption" is so large that there will only be a small proportion of the mules to fall to the lot of the speculators. Prices vary from sixty to one hundred and forty dollars.

An examination has been held in the forgery case, Brewer being admitted as State's evidence. It has resulted so far as is yet known, only in the committal of McKenzie to await his trial before the circuit court, for making and issuing counterfeit cheques on the Sub-Treasury. There may be an outcry made as to the proximity of the court to Camp Floyd; but, according to the testimony, the forged cheque was delivered, and paid for within three hundred yards of the place where the examination was held, in Fairfield, therefore making it perfectly legal and proper for the case to be tried there. In another column we give the proceedings of the court as reported to us.

We call attention to the notice of Messrs. Gerard B. Allen & Co., on our fourth page, of the "Fulton Iron Works," St. Louis, Mo. From our long acquaintance with the head of the firm, we can recommend them to those desiring to deal with them. None more fair in their dealings can be found in any place.

Items from the California Papers.

We gather from the Territorial "Enterprise" that Capt. Simpson, with his party, left Genoa on the 24th ult., on his return trip to Camp Floyd.

Capt. Simpson and the officers of his party, had been complimented with a ball at the Genoa House.

Major F. Dodge, U. S. Indian Agent for Western Utah, has consented to represent the people of Nevada, before Congress at the coming session—in case of his election by the people.

The alleged discovery of coal in Eldorado and Sacramento counties has been proved by experiments to be a fact. The seam is sixteen feet thick, and highly bituminous.

TYPOGRAPHICAL AND PRESS ASSOCIATION OF G. S. L. CITY GREETED HORACE GREELEY IN A PUBLIC RECEPTION.

Upon last Saturday evening, the 16th inst., the Typographical and Press Association of this city manifested their high regard for the intellectual distinction and individual characteristics of the celebrated editor of the New York Tribune, Horace Greeley, through the agency of a meeting of the same, and a supper at the "Globe" Restaurant. Mr. G.'s arrival in our midst having been at an unexpected moment, and he intending to make his sojourn brief, of course the entertainment presented many features of informality, and lacked that completeness of arrangement which a fuller allotment of time would have permitted. The court-room of the Council-House was the place of meeting, and was arranged for the occasion, considering the great haste unavoidably attending the operation, in a splendor and display of taste truly creditable to the expeditious authors of the work. The walls of the over-filled hall were gorgeously decorated with the national colors and local flags, and the supporting pillars festooned with evergreen boughs, which lent a charm of gaiety to the scene of entertainment which must have been appreciated by the most stoical, while Ballo's "excellent brass band" "dis-coursed sweet music" in the intervals of exercises, to the still higher enjoyment, if possible, of the evening's pleasures.

Hon. Horace Greeley was introduced to the house by Mr. Phineas H. Young, President of the Society, and proceeded in his style-ignoring, familiar way, to expatiate upon his experience as a journeyman printer; the rapid and mighty improvements which had been made in the "art divine" since his connection with the business; the yet more important improvements in prospect, which he deemed close at hand; the importance of daily news, the world over, wherever humanity breathes; the close alliance of the press and the plow; and the salutary influences of the press generally when conducted in the proper spirit.

Said he had been related to the printing and publishing business for a period of thirty-three years, and possessed a strong and growing attachment for the vocation of his choice. Thought he might, perhaps, have been a farmer, had the science of agriculture, at the time he entered a printing-office as an apprentice to the trade, been so fully developed as it is at the present time; but that the slow, drudging style of tilling the soil thirty-three years back afforded few temptations to a youth desirous of launching into a field of activity and progression. Though his first application to become a member of the typo fraternity was unsuccessful, on account of his youthfulness, (a lad of ten years,) the burning desire, which seemed a natural impulse, to be among the types, through which he could acquaint himself with the workings of the world around him, was not to be subdued by this refusal of admission to the business; and five years subsequently (in 1825) a second application was made, successfully. Here he found facilities for examining and feeling the pulsations of the popular systems of the world, which the plow could not afford; which fact was probably the cause of the craft gaining a member, and the world losing at least a tolerable good farmer.

He spoke of the great changes which a few past years had wrought in the manner of throwing off typographical impressions. In his apprenticeship days, the fastest presses known were a sort of Adam's manufacture, which were capable of printing but 500 sheets per hour; now, the "Tribune," and other publications of New York City, are published by power presses which, at their fullest speed, will give birth to 20,000 impressions in that brief space, and average fairly 15,000 per hour. Expressed his opinion that the acme had not yet been reached in this branch of publishing. The time was close at hand, when newspapers—instead of being printed in separate sheets, on one side at a time, as at present, and afterwards folded by a machine disconnected from the press, at a cost of comparatively a great amount of human labor—will be printed on both sides entire, from an endless roll of paper, unfolding itself to suit the rapidity of the impressing machinery, and cut to the proper dimensions before reaching the type-forms, and simultaneously almost with leaving the same, folded, wrapped, and mailed, ready for delivery at the post-office—all to be done by machinery belonging and attached together! This advancement he expected to see in his own day; but did not for a moment suppose that progress in the publishing business would stop here—where it would end he would not pretend to say.

As great as is the number of papers published in the Union, and in the world, the supply is insufficient for the wants of the people. The time will soon come when one man's suggestions, ideas, knowledge, if worth anything in the light of healthy, beneficial progression, as soon, almost, as developed, must become the property of his poorest neighbor. Newspapers, daily newspapers—laid upon the table, or desk, or thrown into the gate-way—must be the bounty of every family, whether living in hovel or palace, regularly as food is placed upon the breakfast-table. Individuals, nations, must interchange thoughts with each other with a rapidity and certainty that will bid defiance to long-stretched ocean-billows and cloud-reaching mountain-tops. The tide which flows up on the rocky beach to a certain mark this time, may fall below that mark the next time, and the next, but the third it may reach or go above it. What has been done can be done. A message over the subtle, fine-twisted wires, though now they are buried in the weeds, and sand, and mud of the ocean's depths, painfully silent, had absolutely been sent from London to the United States. That electric line is now perfect from our shores to Nova Scotia. May we not confidently hope, soon, very soon, to know of that link, between the two most enlightened continents upon the face of the globe, which once trembled with a message from the sovereign of Great Britain to the Chief Magistrate of the United States, being secured beyond contingency?—a long-lasting, practical, palpable, positive matter of fact?—and disseminating from one end of our country to the other to-day all the important transpirations of the capitals of Europe of yesterday? Yes, this gratifying stage of progression is close at hand. And when it comes, great must be its effect upon the publishing business. As the avenues of knowledge become more numerous, and the sources more prolific, the universal thirst of the people for knowledge will proportionably increase. It is as necessary that the mind be regularly fed as the body. Said the speaker, "I would rather dispense with my breakfast than my morning news."

The man who wishes to live a life of ease, and comfort, and intelligence, must have a philosophical government over his actions; and if he wishes his actions to comport with the general current of human progress—to enjoy all the advantages of ever-developing improvements in modes and means—his mind must be continually fed upon that diet which newspapers alone afford.

Mr. Greeley elaborately discussed the connection between newspaper publishing and an enlightened system of farming. Impressively elucidated the influence which the agricultural department of a journal exerts upon the mind of the agriculturalist: leading to experiment, and from experiment to improvement—ever guiding the agricultural mind to a loftier elevation in its most honorable of callings.

After returning his thanks, in the most sincere language, for the honor conferred upon him in thus inviting him forth before a Salt Lake City audience, and for the attention and respect manifested in his behalf, Mr. Greeley took his seat, amidst great applause, followed by an air from the band.

Elder Orson Hyde now took the stand, and made a few remarks relative to the mighty powers of the press for weal or woe; hinted that God was instrumental in fostering the publishing business, in such great extent as we see it, in this the high-noon of the nineteenth century, in order to open the way for the advancement of the interests of the Latter Day Saints. As to the telegraph, he was not much interested in the terrestrial wires; but there were invisible wires which extended from God to the hearts of this people, which he always wanted to see in good working order and the connection complete. The doctrine of revelation must have been what he made allusion to.

He expatiated at length upon such principles as he believed to constitute a correct system of religion,—the whole speech, or rather sermon, being inappropriate anywhere but in a Mormon Church; and calculated, upon the whole, to lead thinking men to believe that Elder Hyde feared very much that Mr. Greeley's profound discerning judgment would espy, during his sojourn among us, and hold up to the gaze of the world, certain things discreditable to the followers of Joseph Smith, and crippling to the present and expected profits (prophecy) of the Church, unless, through a sermon poked into his ear, and pelavering laudations heaped upon his head, he could be influenced in a different direction from what it might reasonably be supposed he would unbiassedly take.

Elder John Taylor, (who arose after Mr. Hyde,) although he did say a few scattering words in relation to his experience as an editor, yet followed in the main, like unto his file-leader: The fearless upholder of the rights of all men and women, black or white, (blue spirits or grey,) was again doomed to listen to the most bare-faced flattery, and to hear Mormonism expounded. The memories of Gutenberg, of Shoeffler, and of Faust were entirely forgotten by the Elder, while he poured forth a confession of faith in general, and expressed himself in particular upon certain points concerning unjust Judges, bayonets, dragoons, &c.; and while lauding the loyalty of the Mormons, preached resistance to the lawful authority of the government to which he is supposed to have sworn allegiance. His praises of the United States, and of the form of government, were rather remarkable, considering the country where he was raised. Adverting to the unwavering loyalty of the Mormons, he remarked that should the Union, from any circumstances, become completely wrecked, and broken into fragments, the people of Utah, after all else had deserted, would be found rallying around the ruins, the very last to give up their country and flag; but still he had certain rights which his forefathers fought, bled, and died for—liberty of conscience, &c.—which he intended to have and enjoy. He did not object to the people of the States having one wife, and as many mistresses as they wanted, and they had no right to object to the Mormons having as many wives as they wanted,—and the brethren said Amen.

A poem, welcoming Mr. Greeley to Salt Lake City, composed by Mr. John Lyon, and delivered almost as loud, and fully as musically, as sky-rending thunder, was here delivered by Mr. McKnight, of the "News" establishment. The literary merits of this production we presume were not discreditable to the author, but so unintelligibly did the elocutionist deliver it, we are not here able to express a definite opinion.

Mr. Clements being called for, arose, and, although he could not restrain his ideas from running into Mormon dogmas, he delivered a more appropriate speech than the two preceding speakers. He spoke fluently of the tendency of the press to further the cause of human liberty, talked with some ability upon the fundamental principles of government, and evinced a full acquaintance with the New York "Tribune" and its illustrious editor.

After whom Mr. Banks arose, and, though incapable of keeping out of the limits of Mormonism, he addressed an old-fashioned, ardent, welcome to Mr. Greeley, which undoubtedly gushed forth from an undisguised and heart of generous warmth; and expressed unfeigned gratification at having the pleasure of meeting the distinguished guest of the evening.

Mr. Banks closed the speaking; after which the band favored the audience with fine pieces of music, and several interesting songs were sang, when the majority of the ladies and gentlemen present repaired for refreshments to the "Globe," thence to their respective homes, well satisfied, we opine, with the evening's entertainment.

Between the speeches, Mr. Greeley made a remark to the following effect:

However much I may like the Mormons, there is one thing that I have noticed. I have read your journals often, and have met many Mormons, but I have never yet seen an expression, or heard a Mormon come out boldly and decidedly as an abolitionist. I would like them much better if this thing could be corrected.

During the evening, Mr. Greeley was called upon for a few remarks upon the Woman's Rights question, upon which he arose, and said that he would dispose of that in a few sentences: He believed that women had the right to do what was right, that it was right for women to do everything that was right, and that they had, or ought to have, the right to do whatever they could do right.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
July 10th, 1859.

MR. EDITOR:

Since my last, another anniversary has passed. We had what would be called in some places quite a day. At 11 o'clock A. M., on the 4th, the troops formed in line of battle. At meridian thirty-three guns were fired, by Phelps's battery, the regimental bands at the same time playing the national airs. After the salute, the troops were reviewed by General Johnstone; after being marched to camp and dismissed, a gill of whisky was issued to every enlisted man, not on the sick list, or in confinement.

A citizen by the name of Price was shot dead last Saturday night in Fairfield, a village near the camp. The murderer has escaped. I have not heard the particulars of the occurrence.

The theater has not been open for the last week; the last performance was the splendid 5 act play of the Lady of Lyons, Claude as personated by Mr. White was admirable; the part of Pauline was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Tuckett. Colonel Dumas in the hands of Mr. Baldwin, received ample justice. Mr. Thomas deserves his share of praise. He is a very young actor, but promises to make a good amateur. The after-piece of the "Loan of Lover" was very well performed. It is seldom we have the pleasure of witnessing so good a performance.

The Chief Justice's Court (Judge Eckels presiding) was in session two days, last week; in this camp. I believe that all the business done was to annul the trial of Thomas Ivie, who was tried by a Probate Court in San Pete County, some time ago, and found guilty of murder. He is remanded to San Pete County for trial before the District Court.

The Camp is very pleasant, after three day's rain. It will improve the crops very much, as it was greatly needed.

I am, Mr. Editor,

Very respectfully,

Your obt's servant,
"PRIVATE."

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
July 14, 1859.

On Saturday the 9th inst., the Dramatic Association played Otway's Tragedy of "Venice Preserved" with the following cast:

Jaffier, Mr. R. C. White; Pierre, W. Warren; Priuli, J. K. Rutledge; Renault, J. Shaw; Redamar, A. Thorne; Spinosa, O. Baldwin; Belvidra, Mrs. Tuckett.

Jaffier is one of Mr. White's best characters; Pierre was played by Mr. Warren, with great spirit and ability; Priuli, by Mr. Rutledge, was rendered with sound judgment, his declamation was very good; Renault, in the hands of Mr. Shaw, was characterized by that attention to detail, which marks the actor. Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Thorne were both good, in the small parts allotted to them; Belvidra, was rendered by Mrs. Tuckett with great taste and feeling, she is greatly improved, and this is her best character in the heavy line.

The manner in which this tragedy was put on the stage, and the care evinced in its performance reflects the highest credit on the Association. The house was tolerably full.

The comic extravaganza of Bombaster Furiasso concluded the evening's entertainment, which (in spite of Mr. Smith's defection as Artiscominus) provoked great laughter.

On Wednesday evening, "Love's Sacrifice" was repeated to a very poor house, not that the play (which is as well performed as any they have undertaken) does not possess sufficient interest, but there are only a certain number of play-goers who have the means to attend, and they are satiated with a piece which they have seen three or four times.

After pay day this will be different, and the Association have a number of stock pieces which will draw crowded houses.

We have before noticed this play, but must mention the great improvement in Mr. Lee as Matthew Elmore, he has evidently made himself master of the character, it was a fine piece of melo-dramatic acting, we think the best we have seen on these boards.

Mrs. Whitlock is always at home in Herminia, it is decidedly her most successful effort.

Mrs. Kelting played Jenny with great spirit, she always dresses with taste, and her acting is good.

After which the farce of "The Loan of a Lover" this farce was not so well performed as on previous occasion, Mr. White was not well up in his part which made the piece flag.

In noticing the improvements made in the Theatre, in our last we omitted to mention, the scene manager and property-man, Mr. H. Marion, who by his indomitable perseverance, energy, and business habits, has contributed so largely to the successful working of the undertaking.

DRAMA.

[REPORTED FOR THE VALLEY TAN.]

CAMP FLOYD, July 10, 1859.

On Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, Judge Eckles held a court in the Theatre to make the primary examination in the case of the forgery of Quarter Master's Cheques on the Treasury. Judges Sinclair & Cradlebaugh were present.

Myron Brewer, who was admitted as State's evidence, was the first called. After being duly sworn he made the following statement:

Resided in Salt Lake City for 3 or 4 years; in the month of May met McKenzie on the street; in course of conversation a plate was mentioned, afterwards separated; about four weeks elapsed, again talked with him about the feasibility of executing a counterfeit plate.

Witness told McKenzie he would consult his friend Mr. J. M. Wallace—did so—seemed to coincide with the views of McKenzie, spoke to him, when McKenzie said nothing was quashed. McKenzie said he must get some other party; he said Mr. John Kay had spoken to him about it, did not understand the behavior of Wallace after his return from Camp Floyd, said he was resolved to carry the thing out at all hazards.

Court—Did he assign any reason? He said he had scruples and must communicate with Mr. Young on the subject—Young gave him short answers.

From this time the plate progressed—the witness was to have nothing to do with the issuing. The plates were accomplished. Mr. Wallace proposed going to Camp Floyd to see about the feasibility of issuing; received the plate from McKenzie and took it into Wallace's back room; went to Camp with Wallace.

It would be necessary for some one to go to California. Witness could get a trusty agent.

The bill was struck in Great Salt Lake City; witness filled it up—that is the cheque; the counterfeits are prepared by tracing—are twice traced; this paper has been traced; knew of a plan for counterfeiting the New York cheques. The cheque was passed to Mr. Lint, at Wallace's, in Fairfield.

Court—You state that Young said so and so. What Young?

Wit.—Brigham Young; The Tithing office is on the west side of Young's house; is enclosed and belongs to the church.

McKenzie stated he could get some paper from a son-in-law of John Kay. George P. Watt got some of the paper for him, he lives in the city; he is the reporter for the church. Witness got a quire from the Valley Tan office, but thought it was not used.

Court—Was there any agreement in writing as to the disposal of the proceeds?

Wit.—McKenzie said he should exact a receipt from Wallace for two-thirds of the proceeds. Nothing less than $500 00 was to be issued, at first $1000 was mentioned.

Court—Did he assign any reason for so large an amount?

Wit.—That it might not fall into the hands of the people of the territory—they wished the government to be the sufferers. The ultimate arrangement was, the bills were to pass through the hands of witness to Wallace. Had seen McKenzie at work, in the upper room of the Tithing office; he worked in the day time—every one can have access to the room. There was some contrivance with the handle of the door which gave notice of the approach of any one, and the plate disappeared under a false sill in the window. McKenzie had made some plates for the church and The Deseret News office; he worked as a mechanic. Witness procured the color and gave it to McKenzie; saw the bill struck—explained how the plates could be altered to St. Louis, New Orleans, &c.; the impression was taken off the plates by a hand press in the office in the Tithing store; Mr. Wallace was engaged as agent.

The gamblers had been spoken of as likely persons to pass the counterfeit bills; was present when they were printed.

Maj. F. J. Porter, Asst. Adj. Gen'l then gave his evidence. Had read several letters which had been received from Mr. Wallace, the purport of them was to keep the General commanding posted in the working of the affair; also stated his business in the city was to show Gov. Cumming the counterfeit cheque, and the original, drawn by Col. Crossman on the U. S. Treasury with a view to having the arrest made. He received the information within two days after it was known to Mr. Wallace.

Mr. J. M. Wallace next stated he had an interview with McKenzie, who told him that (Wallace) was recommended to him by Mr. Brigham Young as a man to be trusted.

Wallace entered into the scheme, and notified Gen. Johnston of what was going on and expressed a desire that Col. Crossman should not be made acquainted with the matter at present. He explained afterwards to Col. Crossman's satisfaction, his reasons for not making him acquainted with the facts at the time.

Col. Crossman sworn—Is deputy Quartermaster General, Camp Floyd; recognized the cheque on the table, and when it was presented to him he was utterly startled, he could hardly tell the original from the counterfeit, it was so well executed. He then explained the difference between the New York Asst. Treasurer's paper and that of the Asst. Treasurer in St. Louis—the latter being printed on a lighter quality of paper than the New York. He supposed the counterfeit draft before them which he and Mr. Lint had endorsed for identification when brought before the court, was printed on paper used by the Treasurer at New York, otherwise he hardly could tell which was which. He wished to do Mr. Wallace justice by stating, that he was fully convinced he entered into this scheme with true and worthy motives.

Mr. Lint was next called and stated that Mr. Brewer came to him and wanted to negotiate the cheque, which he now identified; he did not cash it at the time, but told Brewer he would, and in the course of the day did so. Brewer asked him to go with him to Mr. Wallace's; took him to the back room, opened an iron safe, took from the safe the draft and handed it to Mr. Lint and thanked him very kindly for the great favor he had done him by cashing it. The amount was $365 65.

Court—How many years from where the court is now sitting was this place?

Wit.—From 250 to 300.

The court adjourned till 4 o'clock, when upon re-assembling the court rendered its decision: That the prisoner be remanded to the custody of the marshal to await his trial for forgery. Mr. Brewer was discharged from custody.

The following, relative to the proposed reduction of service upon the Great Overland Mail, and the Attorney-General's opinion thereon, we clip from the San Francisco Herald, of June 24, which says—

A telegraphic dispatch to the St. Louis papers states that—

"The Postmaster, on the 18th of April, asked the opinion of the Attorney-General as to his powers to reduce the Great Overland Mail from semi-weekly to weekly service, thus designing to curtail, to a great degree, the expenses of the Department. The Attorney-General has just replied that the Postmaster-General cannot, under the law, reduce the present rate of service."

It is most fortunate for us that the Postmaster-General cannot reduce the present rate of service; for in the crippled condition of his department, no other course was left open for him to pursue. We are satisfied that it was far from the desire of the Postmaster-General to do anything that would conflict with the interests of any part of the Union, if he could possibly avoid it; but with his hands tied, through the selfishness of a factious opposition in Congress, he had no choice. A reference to the New York Herald, of May 27, just come to hand, will show that the process of curtailment was to have been extended to other mail facilities besides those of California. The pruning hook was to cut everywhere. The Herald says:

"WASHINGTON, May 26, 1859.

The question whether the Postmaster-General has the authority to pay for the transportation of the mail on the line to Southampton and Havre out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, under the general provisions regulating the foreign mail service, has been referred to the Attorney-General, in consequence of a difference of opinion between the Postmaster-General and the first Controller. The Attorney-General, I understand, sustains the view of Mr. Holt, that the service on this line can be paid for out of the general treasury, notwithstanding a specific appropriation was made for the line, payable out of the revenue of the Postoffice Department."

The great Trans-Atlantic mails were to be cut down. We would therefore suggest that, instead of sending a petition to the Postmaster-General relative to our Overland routes, the service of which it is not in his power to reduce, according to the opinion of the Attorney-General, the people of California petition Congress to abolish the franking privilege. This evil once abated, there will be no difficulty about our mail facilities.

The Eastern Mail arrived on Tuesday, in schedule time; brings New York dates to the 22d of June. We extract a condensed account of the last great battle:

SECOND AND LATER DISPATCH.—A desperate battle was fought at Magenta on the 4th of June between the allied army under the Emperor Napoleon and the Austrian army under Gen. Hess, in which unlimited forces were engaged on both sides.

The Emperor Napoleon, in his dispatches to the Empress at the Tuilleries, claims a decisive victory, saying that his army took 7,000 prisoners, disabled 12,000 and captured three cannon and two standards. He estimates the loss of his own army at 3,000, but it was rumored in Paris that the French loss is between 9,000 and 12,000.

It is reported that there were from 150,000 to 180,000 Austrians and 130,000 French were engaged in the battle.

The Austrian accounts differ widely from those of the French. The bulletins speak of several battles being fought with varying success on both sides.

It was still undecided on the night of the 6th, as to who gained the victory.

Great losses on both sides are reported. General of Division Espinasse, of the second corps d'Armee, was killed, and Marshal Canrobert, commander of the third corps, was mortally wounded.

Gen. Maurice McMahon, commanding second corps d'Armee, had been created marshal and duke de Magenta, as a reward for his bravery on the battle field.

Five of the French marshals and generals were wounded.

Marshal Count Baraguay d'Hilliers has been superseded in his command of the first corps d'Armee, by Gen. Forey.

Four Austrian generals and five staff officers were wounded at the battle.

There had been a general revolt at Milan, and the people had declared in favor of the King of Sardinia.

The Austrians retired from Milan, but the city had not yet been occupied by the French.

Later rumors detract from the French claim to the victory at Magenta.

It was believed that proposals of peace would follow the entrance of the French army into Milan.

IMPORTANT FROM RUSSIA.

An important circular from Prince Gortschakoff to the Envoys of Russia at the several courts of Germany, declares that if Germany goes to the aid of Austria, the political equilibrium resulting from the treaties by which the German Confederation is constituted, will be destroyed.

IMPORTANT FROM GERMANY.

A despatch from Darmstadt says, that at the opening of the chambers there, the Presidents of both branches of the Legislative body declared in favor of war against Louis Napoleon.

MOVEMENTS OF GARIBALDI.

General Garibaldi had quitted Lecco, and General d'Urban had retreated to Monza. It was supposed that Garibaldi was directing his march against d'Urban.

MOVEMENTS OF KOSSUTH.

HIS INTERVIEW WITH THE FRENCH MINISTER IN LONDON—DEPARTURE FOR ITALY.

Kossuth was leaving England for Italy on the 7th inst. He had an interview with the French Ambassador in London. Some three hundred Hungarians who had returned from America, were to follow him to Italy.

Interesting from Washington.

The Neutral Rights Question—The Charleston and Havana Mail Contract, &c., &c.

WASHINGTON, June 19, 1859.

Lord Lyons had a long interview with the Secretary of State to-day on general subjects. There is every reason to believe that Great Britain is at this particular time most anxious to cultivate friendly relations with us. Lord Lyons is impatient to learn the conclusion of the important question of neutral rights, now under advisement by our government.

In consequence of the failure of Congress to authorize a continuance, the Postmaster-General has notified the Charleston and Havana steamship Company that their mail contract expires on the 30th of June, and will not be renewed unless they choose to accept the postages as in full for services. The postage is, however, so inconsiderable that it cannot be accepted, and the line will therefore cease running.

GENERAL TWIGGS.—The San Antonio Herald, of the 4th inst., has the following welcome paragraph:

"As much interest is felt in the health of our noble Department Commander, we take pleasure in stating that he is out of danger, and is recovering as speedily as could be expected."

Gen. SAM HOUSTON is again a candidate for Governor of Texas, in opposition to Mr. RUNNELS, the regular Democratic candidate.

It is stated that the Earl of Ardenne applied by letter to the Emperor of Austria to sanction the presence of the Times' correspondent at the Austrian headquarters, and that this request has been granted.

Arrival of Gold Express.

SEVEN DAYS FROM THE MINES.

HORACE GREELEY SPEAKS FLATTERINGLY.

Glorious Intelligence.

In the storm and bluster last night there came tidings of great riches found in western Kansas.

The mines are proving more gloriously than was ever dreamed of in a boundless wealth.

Horace Greeley safely arrived in the express at Denver City, going through in six days and twenty-three hours.

The express to this city made the trip in eight days, and were detained one day through a slight accident. $2,500 were received by Smoot & Russell; $1,000 to them, the rest in eastern consignments.

Horace Greeley confirms the richness of the new country. He made a speech to the miners, at which some 4,000 were present.

Mr. Williams left here on the 30th of May, spent some time in the diggings, and returned on the 19th June.

Great gold discoveries had been made at the Jackson diggings, which Mr. Greeley had not visited. It is thought they will equal the Gregory diggings. Other rich discoveries had also been made.

Smoot & Russell received $512 worth of "the ore" from the Jackson diggings. They also have other splendid specimens.

Jones and Russell start a mail and express every Tuesday. They will soon put on daily coaches. This is the best way of getting to the mines.

The expresses will make the round trip in two weeks. Eastern exchanges will make particular notice of this important fact—also that Mr. Greeley's flattering reports only relate to the Gregory diggings, while others, equally rich, he has not yet visited.

Mr. Greeley gave a man $100 to pick him out a good claim, on which to work. He was delighted with the country, and meant to remain there some days.

It is long past midnight, and yet we cannot refrain from speaking a word in honor of Messrs. Jones, Smoot & Russell.

The whole country is under obligations to them. A glorious work have they accomplished in unfolding the golden regions of the West.

Honor to them, and may their prosperity be as great as it is merited.

The Rocky Mountain "News" sends half an ounce of gold to the "Times" for paper. The "News" shall have it.

We have received a batch of interesting letters from our special correspondents, which will be out and for sale before this reaches the eye of most of our readers.

We work all through to-night, with an extra force.

We mean to make the whole country acknowledge the great truth, that the mines are rich as those of California, and that Leavenworth is the great city of this western country.

(From the Daily (Sacramento) Union, of Thursday, June 23.)

Senator Gwin arrived in the city yesterday for the purpose of being in attendance upon the State Convention.

Over two thousand letters were received yesterday from the East by the Overland Mail.

(From the Daily Union of Friday June 24.)

The LeCompton State Convention nominated, yesterday, Milton S. Latham, of Sacramento, for Governor, on the second ballot.

This nomination will not surprise those who have watched the indications as presented in our tables of results in the Primary and County Conventions. Although for the last day or two appearances showed a large nominal vote for Weller, yet it was a forced vote, and could not be made the basis of further accessions. Latham's real vote was always larger even than announced in our tables; and yet it was thought by some that our calculation was too favorable for him.

Weller's vote, even with accessions from Denver, did not rise but little above the figure that we allowed him. The friends of Nugent gave him his full vote on each ballot—20. In our last table we placed his figure at 30, within 10 of his actual vote.

On the first ballot, Weller had 111; Latham, 129; and Nugent, 29; on the second ballot, Weller had 104; Latham, 136; and Nugent, 29. For the office of Lieutenant Governor, J. G. Downey, of Los Angeles, was nominated by acclamation.

In the address of Mr. Latham, made before the Convention yesterday, in response to his nomination, he said that during the canvass he should, in taking his platform, stand by the principles of Popular Sovereignty and non-intervention as defined in the Kansas and Nebraska Act, by the Cincinnati platform and the administration of James Buchanan. Many will consider that the support of the latter would be a virtual denial of the former propositions.

The amount of treasure shipped on the 20th showed a falling off. The following have been the treasure shipments thus far in the month:

Per Golden Age and Uncle Sam, June 6..... $2,387,777 31

Per Sonora, June 20th..... 1,904,038 67

Per sailing vessels (coin)..... 526,884 97

Total..... $4,818,700 95

Previously this year..... 18,866,860 99

Total..... $23,685,561 94

Same period, 1858..... 23,481,233 45

Excess in 1859..... $204,278 45

A recent traveler, who made the tour of the United States mentions a very singular custom, which he says, prevails in Philadelphia. We give his words: Every time an engine in Philadelphia gets a new hub or a fresh coat of paint, five hundred men feel it incumbent on them to lose a day's work and get up a parade."

Washington News.

The Herald has the following: WASHINGTON, June 16th.

The Administration thinks it can discover in the recent intelligence from Mexico the speedy triumph of the Liberal cause in that distracted country. The recent instruction to our minister, and also to the naval officers in command of forces in the Gulf of Mexico, are clear and positive, and should the minions of Miramon and Zuloaga interfere, as it is alleged they contemplate doing, with the Tehuantepec Route, they will then see what the Government will do.

The mail by the Tennessee are over due three days. It is expected it will bring some important intelligence.

The Sardinian minister had a long interview with the Secretary of State to-day. He is greatly elated with the brilliant manner in which the Sardinians acquitted themselves in their recent engagements with Austria.

Gen. McDowell, of Missouri, who was recently appointed Consul-General at Constantinople, has resigned on the account of ill health.

Despatch to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16,

Gen. Davis, who is now here, expresses freely that Congressional action is necessary to enforce our views relative to Cuba, no respect being paid to expressions of Executive policy through our foreign ministers. It is understood that he will bring forward a bill next winter, directing the immediate acquisition of the Island by purchase, or otherwise; also a bill defining, by legislation, the rights of neutrals in time of war. He denies that the right of search is a billigerent right, and thinks that the United States should take the initiative in correcting the error.

The Indian Bureau has transmitted $80,000 to the agent in California, for disbursement. The law requires the Superintendent to disburse, unless otherwise directed by the President. Under the circumstances at present existing in California, Mr. Buchanan has directed the money to be sent to the agent. No bonds had yet been received from Mr. McDuffie as required by law.

Senor Molina returned to Washington this morning, and denies that any ill feeling existed between Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

IDOL WORSHIP IN CALIFORNIA.—A correspondent of the New York Times, writing from San Francisco, says that the Supreme Court of that State has decided that idol worship is not forbidden by the Constitution.

The case was that of Eldridge vs. the See Yup Company, wherein the plaintiff attempted to get possession of the asylum erected by the Chinese Company. Among the plaintiff's averment was one that the trusteeship under which the Company holds was void, because the building was erected for the purpose of being used partly for idol worship. The Supreme Court says: "There is no force in the objection that a trust, created for the purpose of idol worship, is void."

Under our Constitution, all men are permitted the free exercise of their religious opinion, provided it does not involve the commission of a public offense; nor can any distinction be made in the law between the Christian or Jew, Mahomedan or Heathen. The courts have no power to determine that this or that form of religious or superstitious worship—unaccompanied by acts prohibited by law—is against public policy or morals."

It appears that the Chihamen who come here are made to pay roundly for the privilege of entering the temple and worshipping these idols. Thousands of readers will find it difficult to realize that idol worship, with all its heathenish forms, is actually practiced in a great city of the United States and in this century.

We understand that our friend Herford has purchased Dave Burr's interest in the lager beer manufactory. Bob is just the man for a brewer.

NOTICE!

To All Whom it May Concern!

THAT no agent or employee of the firm of JONES, RUSSELL & CO., shall contract any debt or debts to third parties, unless such agent or employee has authority so to do, in writing, signed by one of the firm.

Leavenworth City, June 11. n36-2w

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE

Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Mules furnished at the different stations at reasonable rates.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. n36-1f

Information Wanted!

OF WESLEY KLIPSTINE, who left Kansas Territory in May 1859, for Salt Lake City, or California, and has not been heard of since. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his brother. Address

ISRAEL KLIPSTINE, Nevada City, Nevada Co., California. [39-31]

WANTED.

A CAPABLE, sober, and industrious, MILLWRIGHT, to take charge of a Saw Mill at Fort Bridger.

None need apply unless they can bring good recommendations.

Wages $80 per month, and rations. Apply at the office of the Deputy Q. M. Gen. at Camp Floyd, U. T.

G. H. CROSSMAN, Deputy Quarter Master General, Camp Floyd, U. T., July 2d, 1859.

News please copy and send paper and account to this office. G. H. C. 34-1f

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES. WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED A LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods, Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing, Hardware, Outfitting Goods, Saddles, Harness, & Bridles,

which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO, 75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN WAGONS; 250 the AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MALTSE JACK; one fine STALLION. For sale by

C. A. PERRY & CO.

CITY BREWERY.

MR. W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments. n3-1f

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their NEW STORE ROOMS,

ON MAIN STREET.

A large Assortment of MERCHANDIZE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 34-1f

$1,000 REWARD.

WILLIAM A. ADEN.

I have learned through the Post Master, Lucius N. Scoy, of Provo City, Utah Territory, that my son, WILLIAM A. ADEN, left there about the 1st of October, 1857, for California, by the south route, aiming to overtake a party of emigrants, who were then some fifty miles ahead of him. To William A. Aden, a young gentleman of Provo City, with whom he had formed an acquaintance, my son agreed to write as soon as he got through, but as yet, not a word from him! Mr. Scoy says, under date of March 25, 1859: "Mr. Roberts has since been to California, and has just got back, and on his return learned, by a man in one of the extreme Southern settlements, that a certain Indian is now wearing a peculiar buck skin coat, like one your son wore when he left here," and the great presumption is, that he was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. Said

WILLIAM A. ADEN.

If alive, is now about twenty-one years of age—pretty well grown—blue eyes—fair skin—hair curly, and rather dark—a pretty good talent for music (both vocal and instrumental)—writes poetry tolerably well—natural gentleness—particularly at 44171X. For further particulars, as to dress &c., refer to W. D. Roberts, Provo City.

For the rescue and delivery of my son, if a prisoner, to Governor Cumming, of Utah, or Ex-Governor Boone, of Napa Valley, California, or an undoubted assurance of his release, I will give the above-named reward of $1,000, and a liberal compensation for knowledge of his whereabouts, if alive, so that he may be rescued (if a prisoner perhaps he may be bought off from the Indians) and any information in reference to him, would be gratefully received by his distressed parents, brothers and sisters.

As an assurance of the reward, I refer to the annexed note to Governor Cumming of Utah, from Gov. Harris, of Tennessee, with whom I have been personally acquainted for many years.

Paris, Tennessee, May 27th, 1859.

S. B. ADEN.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Nashville, Tenn., May 8th 1859.

His Excellency, the Governor of Utah Territory:

Sir: Dr. S. B. Aden, of this State, is under the apprehension that his son William, en route for California, was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. The Dr. is in deep distress, and wishes to offer a reward for the rescue of his son, if living, and at his instance I write this note, to say that Dr. Aden is a gentleman of high character, and in every way worthy and responsible; and any reward which he may offer for the rescue of his son, from the custody of the Indians, will be promptly paid, which fact you will please make known to your people, by the publication of this note, or otherwise, so that full credit may be given to such reward as Dr. Aden may offer.

Very respectfully,

ISHAM G. HARRIS, Governor of Tennessee.

N. B.—Any person who shall be entitled to the above reward, will please draw on myself at this place, or my son, F. F. Aden, of St. Louis, Mo.

S. B. ADEN.

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO., Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd,

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest Stock and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale in this market; and in which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, flattering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

Incident During the Visit of the President at Chapel Hill, N. C.

During an interval in these exercises, Professor John T. Wheat appeared on the platform, and introduced student Elisha E. Wright, of Tennessee, to President Buchanan as the one who had won the prize offered for the most meritorious English composition, adding that the prize would be doubly valued if presented by himself. The President consented, and said:

"I confess I am taken by surprise at this incident of this evening, but I am happy to be the honored medium in the presentation of this token to the young gentleman. He is distinguished for most meritorious composition, and that is the great merit among literary gentlemen. The man who writes clearly must think clearly, and will by practice come to speak clearly. There is great merit in short sentences. The author who uses long sentences is always laboring with difficulty. One distinct idea distinctly set forth has more potency than a book full of those in which everything under the sun is jumbled together, as is commonly the case among our modern writers. The ancient style was the best style, and that was the style of Calhoun and Webster. I wish you, sir, great honor and great prosperity in whatever pursuit in life you may engage. I have been delighted with this examination. I have never heard more genuine sense, humor, and wit than in the address delivered by the gentleman who spoke to you this afternoon, (Dr. Hooper,) and who was formerly a professor here; and, with regard to the more sober portions of it, I hope they have sunk deep into the minds of every student in this college. The great curse of our country, which has involved so many in crime, is drunkenness. It is more dreadful than the pestilence, than the yellow fever, than the plague, than all the calamities that visit man. In it, we bring on ourselves a greater calamity than heaven has brought upon us in any form or shape of misery. I wish, with all my heart, to repeat what has been said, what that speaker said, and to ask of you all to take care of that fatal vice which degrades man to the level of the brute, and brings him into disgrace in the eyes of the whole world. [Applause.]

Nat. Intel.

On the 7th inst., says the Washington "Star," the Rev. Mr. Rogers, (M. E.) the pastor of Ryland Chapel, united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Sr. Antonio Bucknigh and Mrs. Margaret L. Eaton. The announcement of the marriage of this lady will create quite a stir in the world of fashion, the country over; for no other in the capital has been better known since the accession of Mr. Jackson to the Presidency to distinguished sojourners here and their families. She will be recollected by those who frequented Washington during "the season" in the course of the Presidency of General Jackson, as the brilliant wife of his Secretary of War, Gen. John H. Eaton (to whom she—then the widow of the late Purser Timberlake—was united, if we remember correctly, in 1829 or 1830), in whose behalf the "old man of iron will" separated from his first cabinet, on the occasion of social difficulties in their families. The happy bridegroom is an accomplished Italian professor of the Terpsichorean art, as ardent and brilliant as his countrymen usually are at his age—perhaps twenty-two—yet hardly more sprightly than his bride, under the genial influence of some sixty summer's suns in this delightful climate.

New York, June 14.

The government has recovered the claim of $130,000 from the estate of Gardner, the forger of Mexican claims, and the money has been paid over.

THE LAST CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.—Hon. William Smith, sometimes called "Extra Billy" for shortness, who has just been re-elected to Congress from the 7th district of Virginia, has been proposed by a party who honored him with a serenade, as a suitable candidate of the democratic party for President in 1860. The aspirants accumulate. We have now, in Virginia alone, Gov. Wise, Gov. Smith, would-be Gov. Goggin, Gov. elect Letcher, and Senator Hunter.

The Galveston "News" of the 26th ult., contains a letter written in the vicinity of San Antonio, which says:

Gen. David E. Twiggs is fast sinking into his grave. He is given up by his physicians, has made his will, and given directions as to his funeral. San Antonio is noted for the fatality attending the Commanding Generals of this Department; and yet no local cause exists therefor. General Worth died of cholera, General Brooks of an old disease, and now General Twiggs is likely to follow, of a disease which has troubled him at times for years past.

TEXAS POLITICS.—The Democratic State Convention has nominated for Governor, H. R. Runnels; for Lieutenant Governor, F. R. Lubbock; for Commissioner of the General Land Office, F. M. White, of Galveston—all three the present incumbents. Col. Wm. N. Neal has been nominated as the candidate for Congress in the Galveston District.

We learn from the California "Bee," that Gen. J. W. Denver, late Governor of Kansas, was waited on by a large crowd of visitors on his arrival in Sacramento, and that he announced himself as a candidate for Governor of the golden State.

The largest carom run of billiards on record was recently made at the International Saloon, Cincinnati, by Philip Tieman; who made two hundred and twenty-six on the white and red. One hundred and seventy-nine, previous to this, was the largest record run.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS, CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., IMPORTING AND WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Wholesale Importing Druggists, DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Rel. Oils, Brushes, Camphor, Lamps, Machine and pure Lard Oils, 11 No. Brewster's Materials, &c. 139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES. WE are Agents for California for the following valuable preparations: JAMES' Alternative, Euphorium, Hair Tonic Vermifuge, and Pills; Sassafras, Peruvian, Febrifuge, Clove, Anodyne, and Roman Eye Balsam; Dr. Harkness' Pills and Bitters; Agnes' Pectoral and Lung; White's Kidney and Bladder; Green's Oxygenated Bitters. All of which we offer for sale at very near New York prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY. WE are agents for the celebrated Perfumery House of Jules Haue & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS! WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1859 hops, to which we invite the attention of Brewers.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses. THERE is no longer any doubt about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr. Marshall's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.

WE have just received per clipper Intrepid, from New York, a large invoice of choice Paints and Oils, consisting in part of superior Colored and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Paris Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermilion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Gouache, Vermilion, Japan, Burnt Umber and Damar Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyke Brown, &c., &c. For sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rates, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power & Welch, Philadelphia:

400 bottles Styrolene; 75 ounces Nitric Acid, pure; 25 ounce Sulphate Morphine; 100 ounces Iodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.

200 ounces Quinine; 75 pound Tartar Emetic; 50 pound Chloroform; 750 pounds Sp. Nitric, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,000 superior Soda Corks, 60,000 superior Wine Corks; 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Corks, &c., for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Oils, Oils, Oils!

PURE Lard Oil, Machine Oil, Sperm Oil, and refined Petroleum, for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

JAS. E. D. JESTER.

(Successor to D. W. Baylies & Son.) WATCH-MAKER & JEWELER.

HAS on hand a well assorted stock of Materials, Glasses, Guard Chains, Keys, &c., and is ready to repair Watches, Clocks and Jewelry, at short notice, and in a workmanlike manner. He hopes by strict attention and superior work to merit continuance of the old patronage, and a liberal share of the new.

All work warranted to give satisfaction. Office with T. S. Williams, in Salt Lake House, one door north of the Post Office.

He particularly offers to work from a distance, and from Camp Floyd. All jobs in the latter, received and returned by express free of risk and expense to the owners.

We take pleasure in commending to the people our successor, Mr. Jas. E. D. Jester, who has been in our employ during the past winter, as a superior and skillful workman, and one well worthy their confidence and patronage. From our old friends and patrons, we beseech him a continuance of their favors.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,

AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.

CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best market affords, and most comfortable apartments.

F. B. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

13-11

To the Traveling Public. STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

ON and after the 9th day of May, 1859, we the undersigned will commence a Daily line of stages from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 A. M., and arriving at 2 P. M.

We have now four teams of horses in the road, also good and comfortable coaches, and careful drivers; therefore we feel warranted in saying that we can carry passengers through in less time.

LIVERY NOTICE.

We will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at our new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, light or day.

Our New Carriages and Buggy, now on the way from Col. Forting will be here in a few weeks, when we will be able to accommodate the public with the finest turn out in Utah Territory.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

We will run an Express, in connection with our stage line, to and from Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by us, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passengers baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All packages weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cts each.

A lower 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by our agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

WILLIAMS & JACKMAN, Proprietors.

FRANK D. GILBERT, Agent at Salt Lake City.

J. W. McFADDIN, Agent at Camp Floyd.

NEW GOODS JUST RECEIVED.

East Temple St., between the Desert Reading Rooms and saloon and John Willis' Bakery.

HAS just received a choice lot of assorted Merchandise, to which he wishes to call the attention of his old friends and the public generally, consisting in part of:

TOBACCOES, Lewis's No. 1 and 2, Grape Vine, Buffalo Chips, Com'der in Chief, Strawberry, and other choice Brands.

GROCERIES.

Tea, Coffee, Sugar, Candy, Nutmegs, Boston Soap, Mustard, Indigo, Cotton Yarn, Madder, All kinds of Spices.

With a choice lot of Fancy bottled and 6 oz. fruits, oysters, sardines, lobsters, London gin and other liquors, yeast powder, a day's ration, cream of tartar, and other useful articles in that line.

Also—Calicoes, de laines, bleached and brown linen sheeting, linen table cover, blue and brown drills, bed-ticking, alpacaes, lawns, gingham, lace, edgings, bonnet and ruffalo ribbons, velvet trimmings, and a large variety of all kinds of small wares and notions.

Together with Men and boys' calf and kip boots, and shoes; a choice lot of gents' trousers, women's and children's calf, kip and fancy shoes, boots and gaiters; men's and boys' hats and caps; and

Ready Made Clothing.

WANTED.—Wh. sty, flour, butter, eggs, and all other kinds of produce in exchange for which the highest market price will be paid.

WANTED.—1000 to 5000 buck, antelope, mountain sheep and elk skins.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY.—Some good pine lumber, also 10,000 shaves suitable for making a 30 d price will be paid if delivered soon.

W. NIXON, thankful for past favors will endeavor to merit a continuance of the same by selling good goods at fair prices for.

READY PAY ONLY IN CASH OR PRODUCE.

He would also call the attention of Farmers to his South and in Cedar Valley, to his large and well assorted stock of General Merchandise at CAMP FLOYD, north side of the creek, where they can always depend upon finding a good variety of everything in his line, in exchange for Cash, Beef, Cattle, and every kind of Produce.

28-11

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!!

PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH, MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

He would be pleased to see the friends of the profession in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES, PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replicated his Establishment with a large supply of the oldest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is now prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole agent for St. Louis.

The stock of MEDICINE, CHEMISTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS.

28-11

GERARD H. ALLEN, OLIVER D. PILLEY

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD H. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low Pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet Iron Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Saws and Brass and Iron Castings of every description.

Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

30-11

LAGER BEER.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

A. A. ALB, PORTER, and our unrivaled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1.00

Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2.00

For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 80

For animals, for a single feed of hay and grain, 1.00

and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.

MCGO, HURK & CO., Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS.

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., IMPORTERS AND JOHNNERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of Brown sheeting, Merrimack Prints, Blue Demins, "drills, White & cold bl'kets, Canton flannels, Woolen do, Quilts & comfortables, Alpacaes and merinos, Spun yarn, Delaines & cashmeres, Sewing thread, "napkins, Curtain damasks, "table cloths, Satinett & cashmeres, Crash, Toweling and Cottonades and paint doilies, Carpets and oil cloths, Apron check, Heavy duck (all widths), &c., &c.

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered Setts, silks, collars & sleeves, Plain all wool delaines, "wind curtains, Fancy do, "edgings and insertions, Alexander's kid gloves, "linen handkerfs, Bay state long shawls, "Plain linen cambric, Stella and merino do, Hem stitched do do, Delaines in dress, Silk do, White cambric muslin, "cravats and ties, Jackonets, "Suspenders, Swiss, "Dress trimmings, Mull and Namsco, Buck gloves and Plaid jaconet muslins, "gauntlets, Plaid cashmere for children, Silk and cashmere gloves, Lace mitts and gloves, Dress lawns and bareges, Plain colored silk ribbons, Bonnet do, Velvet do, Combs brushes and cutlery, Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assortment on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods.

25-11

LAW NOTICE.

ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him.

Office with Dr. Purney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City.

17-11

WANTED:

A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH.

2-11

FOR SALE,

ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.

10-11

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion.

16-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Caps,	40. &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky
Dark do	Bourbon do
New York do	Rectified do
GI,	Port Wine,

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard,	Mixed Pickles,
Durham do	Assorted do
Assorted Jams,	do
do	Jellies,
do	Syrups,
do	Cordials,
Brandy Peaches,	do
do	Cherries,
do	Pears,
Assorted West India	Celery Seed,
Preserves,	Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit,	Pepper Sauce,
Peach do	Assorted Sauer,
Apple do	do
Thumb do	Nat. Preserves,
Raspberry do	Capers Capotes,
Gooseberry do	Natural Pres'd Pines,
Blackberry Brandy,	Roast Turkey,
Raspberry Brandy,	String Beans,
Fresh Lobster,	Green Peas,
Pickled do	do
Fresh Clams,	Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat,	do
Sausage Meat,	Nat. Sweetmeats,
Fresh Cauliflower,	Natural Preserved
Pickled do	Peaches,
Worcestershire Sauce,	Nat'l Preserved Straw-
Stoughton Bitters,	berries,
Fresh Salmon,	Natural Preserved
Fresh Tomatoes,	Damsons,
French Pickles,	Mushrooms,
Hoefetter Bitters,	Asparagus,
Baker's do	Tarragon Vinegar,
Le Drard's do	Fields' Oysters,
Royal Windsor do	Cove do
Maraschino,	Fine Apple Cheese,
Curacao,	Olive Oil,
Assynth,	Assorted Candles,
Scotch Ale,	Raisins,
London Porter,	Almonds,
Scheidam Sch apps,	English Walnuts,
Golden Grape Cognac,	Brazil Nuts,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,	Prunes,
Brandy,	Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
ky,	Crackers,
Family Supplies,	Cracknels,
Morning Call,

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 37.

[Written for the "Valley Tantan"]
The Eye.

The tongue of eloquence may thrill,
The poet's mystic pen inspire,
Yet words belie the heart at will,
And fancy rules the waking lyre;
But if you would behold the mind,
Its secret, silent springs espy,
In the reflections you will find
Upon the canvas of the eye.
As dark'ning clouds obscure the skies,
When lightnings flash and thunders roll,
So sombre shades hang o'er the eyes,
When sorrow's storms distract the soul.
And as the rainbow's glowing form,
Speaks through tears of a shining sun,
So hopeful eyes, above a storm,
Bepeak the calm that is to come.
And thus you'll find, in light or shade,
In friendship warm or malice cold,
In every rank and every grade,
The eye's the window of the soul.

Opinion of the Austrian and French Armies by a Military Officer.

The New York Post gives the following report of a lecture delivered in Newark, New Jersey, by Major Burr Porter, who commanded a body of 1,000 men in the Turkish army, during the Russian war. The lecturer commenced by alluding to the fact that Austria was in many respects much like the United States, and unlike other European countries. The people of Austria generally were contented and happy. There had been a great change in the army of Austria since 1818. Many of the officers are now elevated from the ranks; then but few were thus elevated. This had tended to make the army more popular, and the soldiers more energetic. The policy of the Emperor of Austria had been of late to endeavor to secure the good will of the middle classes of his people. The lecturer's knowledge of the Austrian army had been derived from actual experience. He had been among them, and though he might differ from the majority of newspapers, he did so intelligently, knowing his observations to have been correct.

"The Austrian troops the speaker considered the handsomest in the world; their officers were all fine looking men, who seemed every inch the soldier. The men loved and respected their officers, and would follow them thro' any danger. The Austrian army was made up principally of the hardy mountaineers, and the men were physically superior to those composing the French army. Their riflemen were considered by the speaker greatly superior to the French. They were more natural riflemen, who were practised in the use of the weapon. In these days of the use of the long range and deadly Minie arms, this was an important desideratum. The speaker alluded to the effect during battle of good rifle shooting, when every third man would be picked out of the ranks at every discharge. It soon discouraged the men standing before such a fire. They could not face it long.

"The speaker then alluded to the Hungarian cavalry as having been for a long time the admiration of all Europe. Their horses were brought up with the men, and, though spirited, they were docile, and easily governed by their masters. The men are stout, thick set fellows, and are excellent riders. In a battle, their charge is fearful. The Austrian artillery are not inferior to any in Europe. The horses are well selected and powerful, and the men experienced and efficient. The speaker considered her whole army the best officered of any in Europe. While the French made their officers by taking intellectual youths and putting them through a course of studies more fitted to make them book-worms than anything else, the Austrians took the country gentlemen's hardy sons, and after giving them a brief and appropriate schooling at excellent institutions, put them in the field, and told them to make officers of themselves. The field is the only place to make good officers.

"The speaker thought an army that had the best appointed and most numerous force of artillery should win the most battles. A battery of one hundred guns should be able to keep the field against almost any number of opposers—being powerful enough to sweep all before it. From the experience of the speaker, he considered the old-fashioned gun much better for a low range than the new breach-loading pieces. The Austrian army, though formerly inferior, were now equal to the French troops—that is, the French troops of the line—except in the use of sharp and pointed weapons. The French Imperial Guard could not be equalled by the Austrians; he considered them the best soldiers in the world. The Austrian soldiers had some advantages as an off set to the ability of the French in the use of sharp and pointed weapons. They were very strong in cavalry. This was an important thing in case of defeat, enabling the army to retreat without great loss. The French soldier acted badly in defeat, and the Italian was scarcely to be relied on. Another advantage possessed by the Austrians, we find in the fact of their being accustomed to the climate of Italy, the present battle ground. They could maintain perfect health there. The French were unused to the climate, which was warmer than that of their country, and their battalions would become thinned by disease.

"The French possessed great ardor, and this was very apt to lead them beyond the bounds of prudence. He was inclined to think that in the present contest the great ardor of the French would prove a disadvantage to them and lead them to defeat. Ardor was a capital thing in troops when they were superior to those opposed to them, but when equal there was great risk of those possessed of great ardor being overcome. The speaker, in alluding to the character of the French soldier, said he was one of those who doubted very much whether the Emperor Napoleon's path was to be strewn with flowers, as many anticipated.

"He reviewed the military history of France, and, alluding to her former greatness, said for several years she had made a poor figure in Europe. The French were a mighty people when united and confident. Confidence did a great deal for them. As long as they believed they were going to win they would do well, but if they lost confidence they were worth but little.

"The speaker did not by any means wish to disparage the French soldier. He would be little of a soldier if he could not admire them for their soldierly qualities. The French, he believed, had more military genius than the people of any other country. The life of a soldier, suited them and they enjoyed it. The explanation of this was found in the fact of the poor condition generally of the peasants, who were ever willing to enter the army, and their ambition to be somebody and gain renown made them valorous. In the present contest the battle-field would be in a country more beautiful even than their own, and there was no reason why the French soldiers now should not be animated by the same enthusiasm which animated their fathers sixty years ago when treading the same soil.

"The speaker thought the policy of the Austrian army in the present war would be to act on the offensive and defensive. The battle of Montebello, just fought, was a peculiar one. He had read the different accounts of it, as published, and the Austrians seemed to have had no cavalry engaged in it. This he accounted for on the supposition that this branch of the army had been sent out hurriedly to secure or defend some important position before it had been joined by cavalry, or that it was a stratagem to lead the enemy into a false impression in regard to the manner in which they intended to carry on the campaign. Their officers were very enterprising, and received much important knowledge by their system of reconnaissance, which frequently extended within the enemy's lines. For several hours during the battle of Montebello the Austrians appear to have had it all their own way, and it was not until the Zouaves came up to the aid of that portion of the French with whom they were engaged that they were forced to retire. The Austrians were always best in the latter part of a campaign, and the French in the first. The French had one advantage at this time. They had lately been in the field, and were experienced in actual service, many of them having been in the late war between the allied powers and Russia. The Austrians had seen no service for ten years."

HUMBOLDT'S WILL.—The late Baron de Humboldt has bequeathed to his domestic, Seiffert, who lived with him thirty-three years, all his immense library, all his furniture, and all his articles of value, with the exception of a few which he charged him to present to certain persons. His manuscripts, however, are not included in the donation, and amongst them is a geographical work of greater extent than any hitherto published. The domestic is his testamentary executor. The money in hand at the time of the Baron's decease was under five hundred thalers. Of this sum he had given four hundred thalers to the servant, with written instructions to apply the money to the expenses of his funeral. As a proof of the little value M. de Humboldt set on personal distinctions, it may be stated that the great number of decorations which he had received from the sovereigns of all countries, were found lying pell-mell in a cupboard. His legal heirs, the sons and grandsons of his brother William, had caused the property to be put under seal, not being aware of the donation to Seiffert. This old and faithful servant had some years before been appointed guardian of a royal palace at his master's request, but the King dispensed with his fulfilling the duties of his post during the lifetime of Humboldt.

SUICIDE OF AN OLD CITIZEN.—Yesterday morning, about 3 o'clock, Maj. Thomas A. Morgan, a citizen of this city, died from the effects of arsenic, which he had taken several hours previously. He purchased the poison on Monday. Mr. M. was about sixty years of age, and leaves a large family to lament his untimely death. For some time previous to his death he was laboring under a settled melancholy, caused, it is supposed, by pecuniary embarrassments. He was at one time a prominent merchant in this city, but more recently a book-keeper in a mercantile establishment.—Louisville Courier.

The Bersaglieri, who are so often mentioned in connection with the Sardinian troops, are among the most dashing soldiers in the world. As their name indicates they are riflemen, sharpshooters. In the battles between the Sardinians and Austrians in 1848-49, they were the most effective men who entered the contest. Their uniform consists of a very dark green frock coat, pants of the same color, and hats of a soft felt substance, in form like the "Kossuth." The only ornament to their head piece is a flat, flowing plume, composed of black cock feathers. Many of them from boyhood have been taught the use of the long rifle in the Alps of Savoy. They, in their hardy chase of the chamois, are almost unerring in their aim. In their bravery, dash, and enterprise, they resemble the Texan rangers, while, saving the color of their uniforms, the look in their simple dress like hunters of the Western plains. Under such leaders as Garibaldi and Cialdini they will make their mark in the present war.

It is not known to many persons that the common elder bush of our country is a great safeguard against the devastations of insects. If any one will notice, it will be found that insects never touch the elder. This fact was the initial point of the experiments of an Englishman in 1894, and he communicated the results of his experiments to a London magazine. Accident exhumed his old work, and a Kentucky correspondent last year communicated to the Dollar Newspaper a copy of the practical results as asserted by the English experimenter. That the leaves of the elder, scattered over cabbages, cucumbers, squashes, and other plants subject to the ravages of insects, effectually shields them. The plum, and other fruits subject to the ravages of insects, may be saved by placing on their branches and through the tree bunches of elder leaves.—Herkimer Journal.

George Lee Brent, of Virginia, is to be the Secretary of Legation of the United States of America to the Argentine Confederation.

A Sirocco at Santa Barbara.

Friday last, the 17th June, says the Gazette, will be long remembered by the inhabitants of Santa Barbara, from the burning, blasting heat experienced that day, and the effects thereof; indeed it is said that for the space of thirty years, nothing in comparison has been felt in this county, and we doubt, in any other. The sun rose like a ball of fire on that day; but though quite warm, no inconvenience was caused thereby until two o'clock, p.m., when suddenly a blast of heated air swept through our streets, followed quickly by others, and shortly afterwards the atmosphere became so intensely heated that no human being could withstand its force—all sought their dwellings, and had to shut doors and windows and remain for hours confined to their houses. The effects of such intense and unparalleled heat was demonstrated by the death of calves, rabbits, and birds; the trees were all blasted, and the fruit, such as pears and apples, literally roasted on the trees ere they fell to the ground, and the same as if they had been cast on live coals; but, strange to say, they were only burned on one side—that is, the direction from whence came the wind. All kinds of metal became so heated, that for hours nothing of the kind could be touched with the naked hands. The thermometer rose nearly to fever heat, in the shade, but near an open door, and during the prevalence of this properly called Sirocco, the streets were filled with impenetrable clouds of fine dust, or pulverized clay.

Speculation has been rife since to ascertain the cause of such a terrible phenomenon; but though we have heard of many plausible theories thereon, we have not been fully convinced yet, however, that might be, we see its terrible effects all around us, in blighted trees, ruined gardens, blasted fruit and an almost general destruction of the vegetable kingdom. We hope we will never see the like again.

Since writing the above, we regret to announce that the Sirocco was not, as we hoped, local, but that Los Angeles was visited the same day by similar blasts, and more intense, if possible, than were experienced here; and that not only the fruit trees are injured, but the vineyards are reported as nearly destroyed. The general opinion that the cause is fire in the mountains is now abandoned; and the belief is that there has been a volcanic eruption in the southern portion of this State.

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1859.

Private letters received here from El Paso and Arizona, to the 7th June, state that the late attempt to revolutionize Chihuahua by Jose Maria Zuloaga, brother of the late President of Mexico, has been entirely suppressed, and Zuloaga surrendered without a battle, being pardoned.

Hon. John S. Phelps, of Missouri, and Lieut. Mowry, of Arizona, are the guests of Judge Hart, of El Paso. Extensive preparations were being made to give Mr. Phelps a grand reception in New Mexico.

The people of Arizona adhere to their determination to take no part in the new Mexican election, on the ground, heretofore stated in their memorial to Congress, of having no fair representation or vote.

No United States Court will be held at Masilla during this year. Arizona will send her own Delegate to Congress, and if Lieutenant Mowry runs again he will be elected without opposition. Hon. M. A. Otero will be returned to Congress as the Delegate from New Mexico, without serious opposition.

Horace Greeley was expected to arrive at El Paso in July.

Some reforms in the present system of advertising and the delivery of letters, being necessary, the Post Office Department will speedily adopt such as may seem practicable and efficient, and will hold its officers to strict accountability for their own mistakes.

THE NEW DISCOVERY.—We have long entertained the opinion that the chief mineral wealth of California will ultimately consist in other minerals than gold. There are indications of vast beds of copper, which have not yet been thoroughly prospected. Quick-silver is found in deposits of incalculable extent, and the new discovery of silver on Honey Lake promises something extremely rich. The following notice of it appears in the Shasta Herald of June 25th:

A party of miners have returned from the silver lode to Honey Lake bringing in a quantity of the ore. It is said to be much richer than that which was brought to Shasta and assayed. This news is causing considerable excitement in the valley.

THE FLOOD AT THE DALLES.—A gentleman who came down on the Pacific, says the S. F. Alta, gives the following particulars: On the 20th, the Mountain Buck arrived at Portland from the Dalles. The captain stated that the water was still rising. On the Friday previous, the new stone stores of Green, Heath & Allen, and Grover & Smith, fell in, the foundations being entirely washed away. The water is higher now than has ever before been known there. The damage so far at the Dalles, caused by the flood, will not fall short of $300,000.

It is reported that Lieutenant-General Scott has made a bet of 500 bottles of champagne that Louis Napoleon will never return to Paris.

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Herald.]
OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DESPATCH.
WASHINGTON, June 20, 1859.

The letter Gen. Cass is engaged upon, which is to be sent to Mr. Dallas and all our Ministers in Europe, upon the American doctrine of goods contraband or otherwise of war, will shortly be completed. Sufficient is known, however, already, of some of the leading principles which will be enunciated. The view taken by England, which enlarges the schedule of goods contraband of war, will not be acquiesced in by our government. On the contrary, we will take ground that all regular articles of commerce, with the exception of powder, lead, muskets, &c., and saltpetre, are not contraband of war, and that it would be a serious infringement of our commercial rights to enforce a less liberal doctrine. If coal is contraband, so also should be, in a higher degree, provisions. Nor will the letter be less decided upon the point that the fact of goods being on board vessels carrying the flag of the United States exempts them from seizure, the broad ground being taken that the flag carries protection with it up to the period of unloading. The French government, it is understood, takes the same view of this question as the United States.

The criminal authorities of this place, at last, are in hot pursuit of some of the leeches that have grown fat upon the public treasury. An indictment is out against Seaman, the late Superintendent of Public Printing, for malfeasance in office, which may involve other parties of more consequence, if the bench warrant against Seaman can be executed, of which there is some doubt, inasmuch as he has mysteriously disappeared. In addition to this case, there are some four indictments out against Cullom, Clerk of the House during the Congress preceding the last, for frauds in office, which may, perhaps, implicate a few stray Congressmen. I understand, also, that a certain Duval, of Philadelphia, has been indicted for perjury in the Seaman case, probably a bit of false swearing to shelter himself; and one Captain Leach will also have to answer an arraignment for frauds in his office, as financial agent of one of the Great Western wagon road expeditions. And these are but a few of the alleged rogueries and robberies in high places that will be overhauled in this quarter during the next six or eight months; and some rich cases of this sort, which our courts may fail to reach, will be turned over, no doubt, to some new investigating committees of Congress.

Application was made to the President some days ago for the pardon of Plumer, convicted at Boston for mutiny and murder on board the ship Junior, near the coast of Australia, and sentenced to be hung on the 24th inst. After a careful examination of all the facts in the case, the President refused to interfere; but an offer has been made by telegraph to-day of a respite for two weeks, provided his spiritual adviser deems it necessary in case he is not properly prepared to meet his fate.

THE GENERAL NEWSPAPER DESPATCH.
WASHINGTON, June 20, 1859.

The Collector of Baltimore has applied to the Secretary of State for information as to the nature and extent of the protection which may be afforded by the United States to a foreign built vessel purchased by an American citizen. It is understood that our government entertains the views held by the last administration—namely, that if an American citizen buys in good faith a vessel from a belligerent or neutral with whom we are at peace, it becomes American property, and is entitled to protection like any other American property. The vessel, however, cannot get a register, unless by act of Congress.

Information has been received here that the new steamer Seminole, building at Pensacola, will be launched on the 25th inst. She will carry six Dahlgren guns and four large pivot guns.

NIGGERS AND MORMONS.—The Savannah "News" desires to know if Congress cannot pass a law prohibiting the emigration of fanatics and insane persons to this country? It says: "If it has the power to prohibit the introduction of Africans from Africa, who are needed, and whose presence here would give no trouble, but would be beneficial to themselves and the country, it can see no reason why they should not prevent the insane Mormons of Europe from converting Utah into a social and political hell. If the Federal government can exert its power to prevent heathen from coming here to be christianized, why can it not also prevent civilized people from coming here to be heathenized? Mormonism is in opposition to all laws, human and divine. Slavery is in accordance with both. Mormonism is a curse to the country and to its deluded victims, while slavery is a blessing to the African, to the white race, and to the State."

In the Free States there are but three papers that desire the intervention of Congress for the protection of slavery in the Territories: The New York "Day Book," the Concord (N. H.) "Standard," and the Vevay (Ind.) "News." Neither of them are Democratic "according to the most straightest sect."

A Kentuckian being asked how much corn he raised, answered: "About ten barrels of whisky, besides what we waste for bread."

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, July 27, 1859.

Capt. W. H. Hooper will be sent to Washington, as Delegate to Congress, in place of Gen. Eldredge, who had been nominated; but as it was discovered that his long absence from the Territory would disqualify him, his name was withdrawn.

"It is reported that Brigham has dismissed the favorite plan of building up the kingdom, or that he has stopped 'sealing,' or giving many wives to one man, as the constant application for bills of divorce, all such being made to him, has forced him to conclude that it is not a happy system. We have this from one well versed, and we think, if it is correct, that outside influences had more to do in forcing the conclusion than application for bills."—Jenny.

We clip the foregoing piece of news from the Alta Californian, and although the writer does not vouch for its entire correctness, we can hardly think that it can be true. It is customary in the States to announce marriages in the public prints; but that is quite not followed here, or the number of marriages are but few. Perhaps, however, although unacknowledged, there is an innate sense of shame and impropriety implanted in the breasts of those who practice polygamy, which will not allow them to let the world in general know that they have taken another woman—or perhaps, (as the issue of the Church Organ, is only weekly,) as has happened in many cases, there would be a divorce before the marriage would be published. Should the practice be followed of publishing every marriage, and every divorce, and the different degrees of kinship existing between the parties, some astonishing light would be thrown on this repulsive system of Polygamy. It would sometimes be found that a man, who has taken a widow with a young female child, has, after raising that child in his family, allowed himself to be so debased as to have this child given to him as his second wife. It would perhaps be found that a man has taken the daughter of his own brother as a wife, and that it is the fourth sister of the same family, who bears the same relation towards him.

The system of polygamy practiced in this Territory we regard as utterly repulsive to the rights of humanity.

All civilized countries, and, (what has the most bearing in this particular case,) all the States and Territories of the United States, (except one) consider and treat Polygamy as a crime, and punishable with penalties more or less severe.

We believe that the Territories of the United States, being the common property of those States, should be ruled by the Federal Government for the benefit of all the States.

We think not only that the Federal Government has the right to suppress polygamy, but we say that, in virtue of the power it has for the protection of society from abuses of civil or religious liberty, it ought to have been done long since. While the constitution of the United States guarantees the rights of conscience in religion, and the pursuit of happiness, it is not supposed that the authorities under the constitution shall overlook any enormities which may be perpetrated under the name of religion, or any undue interference with the rights of others while in the pursuit of happiness.

In former days, and even at present, among the Aborigines, stealing from neighbors, and revenge the most bloody, was the most prominent principle of faith; according to their belief the more a man stole, and the more human life he destroyed, so much the more certain was his chance of admittance to the "happy hunting grounds," so much the more acceptable was he to the Great Manitou, the Father of Life.

But, although the Indian was utterly ignorant of the laws of humanity and civilization, from all precedents in their case we find, that it has never been held as a sufficient justification for them, that their religion taught them, and enforced it upon them as essential to their salvation, that they should commit what are considered crimes in civilization; how much more then should those who are under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government be prevented from committing crimes against civilization, of practicing and upholding a doctrine, under the plea of religious persuasion, abhorrent to the whole civilized world. It is claimed that a thousand miles of separation will not allow them a peaceful enjoyment of their religion; but the principle is the same as though the Mormons were located in the centre of the State of Kentucky. This is as much United States soil as that would be. If the plurality wife system can not be justified in any of the States, so much the more reason why it should not be allowed in any of the Territories.

It was well understood by the framers of the constitution, that no person or persons should set up arbitrary rules, regardless of the common rules of humanity and decency. It was not thought necessary to fix certain boundaries, but it is folly to say that there is not, or that there ought not to be any bounds.

If a sect should arise, as in Hindostan, where mothers, in the name of religion, in order to propitiate some heathen deity, cast their infant children into the jaws of the crocodile, is it not folly even to ask the question, would it be tolerated by the people of the United States? Why was this and other kindred monstrosities, such as immolating oneself, beneath the wheels of the car of Juggernaut, and burning the widow on the funeral pyre, suppressed by the British Government? Because it was contrary to all the dictates of Christianity and humanity, and where the force existed to put a stop to such proceedings, as a tribute due to Nature, and Nature's God, the benighted heathens were prevented from committing these crimes.

If Brigham has thought better of the many wife system, and has stopped giving so many wives to one man, so much the better, that would be one step towards clearing the skirts of the Mormons, from one institution in which they are antagonistic to the feelings of the majority of the people of the United States; and if this evil could be abated, and done away with by the manifestations of its own legitimate effects it would be well, for although the present administration may, "lean too much to virtue's side," and practise too much leniency through a mistaken view of humanity; yet the time will come when the voice of the people of the United States will compel the executive to assert its supremacy.

The emigrants for California are still quietly passing through the city. Some of them from Pike's Peak are not quite so enthusiastic on the subject of "paying diggings," as the late eastern papers.

Mr. S. R. Shrader, of Liberty, Mo., arrived here on yesterday; his train of staple groceries will arrive about the 10th of August.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT COURT.

The United States District Court for the Third Judicial District, Hon. Charles E. Sinclair presiding, was opened on Monday, July 25, at 11 o'clock, a.m., in Secretary Hartnett's Office.

Court issued a venire for the summoning of a Grand and Petit Jury, and the court adjourned till Tuesday, at 11 a.m.

TUESDAY.

Court met pursuant to adjournment, and adjourned to meet in the Council House on Thursday, the 28th at 10 o'clock.

NEW RESTAURANT.—Epicures can gratify their appetites by calling upon Mr. David Candland, at the "Globe," where choice viands, most scientifically prepared, are always awaiting the call of customers. Best of wines and cigars can there be obtained, with a pleasant room to sit in, and the latest news to read. We have tried it; "go thou and do like-wise."

According to an act of Congress, passed in April, 1848, after the 4th of July ensuing the admission of a new State, another star has to be added to the national flag. Oregon having been admitted, our flag will now bear thirty-three stars.

In the Probate Court, in the case of the U. S. vs. Deloss Gibson, defendant was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The counsel for defense gave notice that they would file a motion to set aside the verdict, and ask for a new trial.

ARMY MOVEMENTS.—The headquarters of the Sixth Infantry of the U. S. Army, under Col. Hoffman, which have lately been at the Presidio, have been changed to Benicia; and the headquarters of the Third Regiment of Artillery, which is now at Benicia under Col. Merchant, will be changed to the Presidio.

A RARE PARTY OF HONORABLES.—At 2 o'clock yesterday, the following distinguished gentlemen dined together in the Ladies' Ordinary, at the Burnett House: Ex-President Millard Fillmore, Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, Hon. Thomas Ewing, Hon. Garret Davis, of Kentucky, Hon. A. D. Banks, of Va.; Hon. Thos. Corwin, and Hon. Geo. E. Pugh. So large a gathering of "honorable" has not probably been seen since the adjournment of Congress, but whether or not it portends "mischief," we are unable to say. It was a rare combination, however, of political dignitaries, and it afforded the large number of ladies present, many of whom were from the South, a deal of gratification to be present on the occasion.

Mr. Douglas left for Washington at 11 o'clock last night, over the Little Miami road. Mr. Fillmore will leave for Buffalo this evening.—[Cincinnati Gazette.]

Welcome to Greeley.

Welcome friend Greeley, to our mountain home

We greet thee as the friend of all mankind; And pray to heaven a thousand such would come

The truth of Mormon principles to find. 'Tis with such men the Saints would still commune, And speak as if before the 'Great Tribune'

Arraigned, we've plead before the senate's bar

For justice and the common rights of man Yet, they've condemned, not knowing what we are

And sought, and did, the purest souls to tread And offered up their sacrifice of ire, At Moloch's shrine, to please their blind desire.

Then came the exodus—like the dread si-moon Scattering destruction o'er the pathless wild

While travelling 'mid the winter's dreary gloom Death came to many a husband, mother, child

Till here at length we found a resting place, A home, amongst the savage of our race

And yet, a thousand miles extended length Of barren wilds, cannot make us secure We're hunted still; while treason adds its strength

To all we're blamed for, everything impure That vice can name, is laid upon our backs Till every bone beneath the huge load cracks

To whom we appeal, than unto God! We sought to man, he spurned our righteous claim

And armies followed with their civil code, And men who knew not justice but in name Have held their courts by military awe. Despising Authority, and civil law!!

We've sued for freedom as our rightful due— (Not from the constitution, nor its laws— These we respect as all good subjects do— And will maintain,) but from vile man, who draws

His living, by falsehood, fraud, and bare-faced lies— Which you friend Greeley, manfully despise!

You are the advocate of human rights Of free untramm'd liberty to all. While bears God's image, be they black or white, Learned, or illiterate, or great, or small And shall the Mormons be by you neglected? Have they not claims and rights to be respected?

The press!—the living press of burning words, Has been the scourge of tyranny and wrong! It is the voice of God's ELECTRIC CHORDS, To despots dire, scathing the arm, tho' strong,

That dares to wrench from man that freedom given Warded by virtue,—greatest boon of heaven.

We ask no privileges, nor favour'd claim— We ask no pardon, for we've done no crime! We ask the light of truth—the trump of fame!

Your pen and press may send to every clime, And then the world will know that one man dared

To speak the truth of all he saw and heard. The foregoing is the "Pome" which we mentioned in our last, and which the Deseret "News" says was written for the occasion by Mr. John Lyon. We think it ought to have a general circulation, as a specimen of Mormon literature, and to show the stupendous arrogance of this people. One would think that those who claim so much of divine inspiration would be helped out a little better.

In one place, "God's people" was erased, and "Mormons" substituted. We suppose that was thought to be too gross an arrogation in the connection; perhaps, also, he thought that it might occur to Mr. Greeley, that he was one of those who were not "God's people," and might possibly shock the sensibility even of one who is so notoriously fond of all the "isms."

They seem to think it hard that they should not be allowed to do as they please after traveling a thousand miles; they ought to have added a few more miles to their travels, and got out of the jurisdiction of the United States, if they wanted to establish an independent order of celestial beings.

We do not know of any persons who were trepanned, but think it would do some of them good to have that operation performed.

There is much talk about justice, but we expect it is pretty much such a case as that of the Irishman, who would have been very glad of justice had it not been awarded him.

They did not seek freedom from the constitution, because they were too good subjects to doubt, or dispute that, "but from vile man," &c.; now just note the assurance of the people and the slur cast upon the administration, and the people of the United States. They are, as a race, vile in distinction from the Mormons, who are Saints.

What a pity that these "vile men" have the power to make laws for these poor innocent people, who have never done anything wrong,—who acknowledge the laws to be right, but will not obey them because "vile man" has the administration of them.

"We ask no pardon, for we've done no crime." They still continue to assert this, in the face of all reason, and ignoring the fact of having accepted a pardon, pusillanimously backing out when they had been sticking up for their rights so long; it would have been more consistent if they had resisted to the last extremity. We have given this subject more space than it intrinsically merits, but it is the principle we wish to exhibit; in it are embodied some of the views of the principal men, put forth at Mr. Greeley, with what they thought a sufficient dose of flattery to cause him to swallow the poison. We think, however, the sugar coating on the pill was of itself sufficiently thick to cause a nauseating sensation.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., July 25, 1859.

On Saturday evening the performances at the Theatre commenced with "Miralda," or "the Yankee in Cuba."

Miralda (Mrs. Whitlock), a creole orphan, is a vendor of cigars, betrothed to Pedro (Mr. White), a boatman, who are to be married as soon as she has saved money enough to pay the mortgage on the store she inhabits. In the mean time Count Almonte (Mr. F. Lee), a Spanish noble, falls in love with her, and as he cannot obtain possession of her person by fair means, resorts to stratagem. Under pretence that the Governor General has ordered her to appear before him, the Count bribes some soldiers to carry her to his residence a few miles in the country, where she is strictly guarded; at the same time he gets Pedro confined in prison on the charge of illegally fishing in the bay, which prevents him from attempting her rescue.

Seth Swap (Mr. C. Northrop), a Yankee, who has previously thwarted the Count's designs, pays Pedro's fine, who is released from prison. Together they find where Miralda is confined, and Pedro visits her in the guise of a priest, and hears the Count's intentions towards her. He leaves her to seek the assistance of the Governor, when the Count enters and endeavors to persuade her to become his mistress. While he is struggling to obtain a kiss, Seth Swap jumps through the window and again disappoints him. Seth then talks against time, until a messenger from the Governor arrives, who orders them to appear before him; when he commands the Count to marry Miralda at once; he hesitates, but the Governor is peremptory. They go under charge of an officer to a church hard by, and are married. Immediately on reaching the street the Count is shot by order of the Governor for treason; one half her husband's estate are confiscated to the state, the other belongs to her, with liberty to marry her own true love, which she joyfully accepts. This conduct so pleases the Yankee that he magnanimously makes the Governor a present of his hat. There is also a woman named Cecil, whose daughter the Count has seduced six years previously, awaiting her time to be revenged. This character was very effectively played by Mrs. Westwood.

The piece was very well put on the stage; the principal character, Seth Swap, was played by Mr. Northrop with such rare humor, that he has made it his own; it was a decided hit. The rest of the characters were well sustained.

Mrs. Whitlock, we are sorry to say, was laboring under very severe indisposition. The extravaganza of Bombastes Furioso followed; the part of Artaxomines by Mr. Crawford; it was played with spirit throughout, and created roars of laughter.

"My Neighbor's Wife" concluded the evening's entertainment; it was not so well played as we have seen it on these boards.

On Wednesday evening, "The Yankee in Cuba," and "Born to good luck," in the latter Mr. James Shaw enacted the part of "Paudeen O. Rafferty" to perfection. There is a raciness in his brogue which is irresistible. The piece was very well received by the audience.

Horace Greeley, Esq., was present.

"DRAMA."

Pursuant to previous notice, the citizens of Fairfield assembled at El Progreso Hall, July 31, at 10 o'clock A. M.

On motion, Wm. H. Lent, Esq., was called to the chair, and Wm. J. Osborn Secretary.

The Chairman stated the object of the meeting to be to give expression of condolence at the untimely and unfortunate death of Henry F. Price, formerly of Ohio, whose sad event occurred this morning at the hands of John T. Rice, alias "Balty," and to take such steps as might be necessary to attend his funeral.

On motion, David Wills, Jack Wolf, and A. F. Chaffield, were appointed a committee to report resolutions for the consideration of the meeting.

On motion, C. W. Crocker, T. R. Macmannus, and J. H. Hammond, were appointed a committee to procure the services of one of the military bands, and to make all arrangements for the funeral.

The committee on resolutions having returned, reported the following:

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the untimely death of our friend and valued fellow citizen, Henry F. Price, which, an unfortunate event took place at 6 o'clock A. M., without cause, at the hands of John T. Rice.

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. Price, society has lost a bright and useful member, relations an honor to their household.

Resolved, That we attend the funeral at 4 o'clock P. M., en masse, as mourners, and wear the usual badge of mourning.

Resolved, That the Chairman be directed to transmit the proceedings of this meeting to the relatives of the deceased.

The committee on arrangements reported having secured the services of the band of the 2d dragoons.

On motion, The officers and soldiers at Camp Floyd were respectfully invited to attend the funeral.

On motion, Resolved, That the "Valley Tan" be requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.

On motion, Adjourned to meet at quarter to 4 o'clock P. M., at the house of J. S. Hutchinson, the late residence of the deceased, to attend the funeral.

WM. H. LENT, Chairman.
WM. J. OSBORN, Secretary.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.—Ex-Governor H. S. Foote, of Mississippi, was married in Nashville, on the 5th inst., to Mrs. Rachel D. Smiley, widow of the late R. G. Smiley, of Nashville.

CARSON VALLEY ELECTION.—By a telegraphic despatch from Genoa last night, we learn that the returns have not all been received yet. The race between Dodge and Crane for Congress, is very close, but it is believed that Dodge is elected.

Capt. Pendleton, who was convicted on three several charges for cruelty to sailors, has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment and a fine of $175. He may be said to be in a "streak of good luck."

STOCK IN OREGON.—Maurice Baker, who went to Oregon last fall, to purchase cattle, informs the Yreka "Union," that there are now on the road to California 20,000 head, in droves from seventy-five up to eleven hundred head. In Oregon two year old steers bring from $22 to $25; three year olds about $32, and four year olds as much as $45—they are worth more there than here and the drover will sustain heavy losses. Grass is scarce, and dried up on the road; no rain since the first of May.

The mail from San Francisco, with dates to the 23d May, came in last night, making the trip in its usual time of twenty-two days.

Two passengers, Mr. Barnes, of Fort Chabourea, and Mr. Herbert, of California, who came in with the mail, say that the Texas volunteers who had collected for the purpose of exterminating the Caddo Reserve Indians, had disbanded and gone home.

They were prevailed to do so by Major Van Dorn, who gave them assurances that he would have an eye to the Indians in future and prevent them from depreeding upon the Texans.

They also re-state the accounts brought by passengers by the last mail, that the Camanches had been defeated by Van Dorn and his command of U. S. cavalry. It is still a little uncertain whether these reports do not apply to the engagement with the Camanches which has already been officially reported, but our informants think that they refer to a second conflict.—[Mo. Republican, June 16.]

BALTIMORE, June 16.—A severe hailstorm prevailed at Gova's town, Baltimore county, this evening, causing considerable damage.

The hail stones were very large. The storm in Baltimore was accompanied with vivid lightning, a high wind and torrents of rain.

Col. Charles A. May arrived at Fort Leavenworth on Thursday en route for Fort Kearney, of which post he is the commanding officer.

DEAD.—Mr. Brocklebank, brother-in-law of Gov. Weller, is dead.

NEWS
Rela
garding
The exp from Fl in the at ent has press it
In co ports b visiting
Black h be emp immedi
The contract the ma and all ment at weekly
two cot
Gen.
June 20
Gen. seen in men.
A sk sailing
der Gel
Zuzu started attack
The
him an
of Mex
The Americ
The
to-day
ed by
The
ing to war th
Oglio
A ba week.
Lord
a stot sell, V
Coble
Parl
Palm his pre
FURT
The
had re
Gar
The Italy
Nap attack
The allies
Kos
roule Prit
movin
This
the Vi
Fro
It is fe
Europ
Kos
Frenc arrive tion a with report
An
leal p monst
later
The
of las fort, i ration
80,000
40,000
Rhine
Th
sla w in the Ac
peace poleo are a war, great werc
Th
sla is all th
the fl ships of wi
The
cent,
to Lo
in Ar order
Jud
Th
are in plain Prest
ted a
"J quilt presen fore" it wi upon ducte
the J
Pres
prin
Mea

NEWS BY THE EASTERN MAIL.

WASH., June 28.

Reliable reports have been circulated regarding a filibustering foray on Nicaragua. The expedition leaves the middle of August from Florida, to be conveyed to Nicaragua from the steamer Spottish Chief. The President has, however, taken active steps to suppress it.

WASH., June 28.

In consequence of numerous illegal passports being issued on American citizens visiting foreign parts, Attorney General Black has recommended that only one officer be empowered to issue passports, and urges immediate official action.

The Liberal government of Mexico has contracted with Col. Butterfield for carrying the mail between New Orleans or Mobile and all the Gulf ports. Should our government succeed, which is highly probable, the weekly steam communication between the two countries will be established.

Gen. Vidauri had received a letter dated June 25, which says:

Gen. Zuzua, on the 25th of May, was at sea in the vicinity of Guanapita with 6000 men.

A skirmish had taken place at Silva, resulting in the defeat of the Reactionists under Gen. Messina.

Zuzua was waiting for a brigade which started from Mexico, and two batteries to attack Gen. Wall.

The Liberals were confident of routing him and continuing their march to the City of Mexico.

The report that Juarez had received 3,000 Americans in his army is untrue.

HALIFAX, 28th.

The Royal mail steamship arrived at noon today with 3 days later advices than received by the Nova Scotian at Quebec.

There are no battles to report, and according to the latest advices from the seat of war the Austrians were retreating from the Orto towards the Minio.

A battle was expected to occur within a week.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Lord Palmerston has succeeded in forming a strong cabinet, embracing Lord John Russell, Wm. Gladstone, Lord Elgin, Richard Cobden, J. W. Gibson, and Earl Granville. Parliament had reassembled, but Lord Palmerston postponed the presentation of his programme for the present.

FURTHER FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The Austrians report that General Urban had repulsed Garibaldi.

Garibaldi was at Brescia.

The Austrian troops were moving towards Italy.

Napoleon demands 100,000 more men to attack the Austrian fortresses.

The Austrians are preparing to attack the allies at Mantua.

Kossuth had passed through France en route for Italy.

Prince Napoleon's corps had commenced moving.

The Austrians are reported to have entered the Valtellina.

From indications in Prussia and Germany it is feared that this war will convulse all of Europe.

THE VERY LATEST!

(By telegraph from London to Liverpool.)

LONDON, June 18—A. M.

Kossuth has left London for Paris, with French passports. On Monday next he will arrive at Genoa, where a becoming reception awaits him. He will have an audience with Napoleon, but no grounds exist for the report in circulation as to his plans.

An amnesty has been granted to the political prisoners at Naples, on the strong recommendation of Mr. Elliott, the British Minister.

The London "Times," in its city article of last evening, quotes advices from Frankfurt, which state that the German Confederation are understood to have resolved that 80,000 men, namely, 40,000 Prussians and 40,000 Austrians, shall be stationed on the Rhine.

There were also strong rumors that Prussia will issue some decisive announcement in the course of a few days.

According to the prevalent conjectures, peace is to be proposed to the Emperor Napoleon on certain conditions, and if these are refused, Germany is to enter into the war. Under these circumstances, there is great anxiety, and stagnation in all commercial cities.

The London "Times" also says that Russia is making vast warlike preparations at all the naval depots. The Neva division of the fleet is reported to number 88 first class ships, and the Baltic fleet 35 out of the lines of which (14) are at Cronstadt.

The London "Times" accounts for the recent shipments of gold from St. Petersburg to London as payment for machinery made in America and elsewhere. Large Russian orders are lying still unexecuted in England.

Judge Douglass and the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 23.

The friends of Judge Douglass in this city are in possession of the following letter, explaining his position on the subject of the Presidency, and of which they have permitted a copy to be taken for publication:

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1859.

"My Dear Sir: I have received your letter inquiring whether my friends are at liberty to present my name to the Charleston Convention for the Presidential nomination. Before this question can be finally determined, it will be necessary to understand distinctly upon what issues the canvass is to be conducted. If, (as I have full faith they will,) the Democratic party shall determine in the Presidential election of 1860 to adhere to the principles embodied in the Compromise Measures of 1850, and ratified by the people in the Presidential election of 1852, and reaffirmed in the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854, and incorporated into the Cincinnati Platform in 1856, as expounded by Mr. Buchanan in his letter accepting the nomination, and approved by the people in his election.

"In that event my friends will be at liberty to present my name to the convention, if they see proper to do so. If, on the contrary, it shall become the policy of the Democratic party (which I can not anticipate) to repudiate these, their time-honored principles, on which we have achieved so many patriotic triumphs, and in lieu of these the convention interpolate into the creed of the party such new issues as the revival of African slave-trade, or a Congressional slave code for the Territories, or the doctrine that the Constitution of the United States either establishes or prohibits slavery in the Territories, beyond the power of the people legally to control it, as other property, it is due to candor to say that in such an event I could not accept the nomination if tendered to me.

"Trusting that this answer will be deemed sufficiently explicit, I am, very respectfully, your friend.

(Signed).

S. A. DOUGLASS.

INDIAN TROUBLES.—PAWNEE VILLAGE BURNED.—About a week since, the able bodied men of the Pawnee tribe, started on a buffalo hunt, leaving their village—about forty miles west of this city—in charge of the women, children and old men. On the day before yesterday, (the 22d inst.) a small party of Chayennes, and Burley Sioux Indians, made a foray upon the village, which they burned, and killed most of the tribe remaining there. Runners were dispatched to the hunting grounds, for the braves of the Pawnees, and it is probable that an important battle will be the result. To us it matters little which tribe is victorious.—Omaha Nebraskaian.

The city was horrified yesterday morning with a report that an accident, attended with unusual loss of life, had happened near Mishawaka, about 80 miles from this city, to the Express train of the Southern Michigan Road, which left the depot in Chicago, on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, P. M., with something near 150 passengers in the five cars—two second class and three first class cars—of which the train was made up. The rumor was soon confirmed by enquiry at the office of the Railroad Company, and within one hour every part of the city had heard of the great catastrophe, though nowhere was the fatality of the tragedy suspected. Report at first stated the number of killed at 30 then at 40, and later at 50; but at this hour there is no room to doubt that at least 60 human beings have been sent home by the catastrophe of which we speak.—Chicago Press.

The U. S. Surveys in Utah having two years ago been interrupted by the Mormon difficulties, they are to be immediately resumed by the surveyor general N. Stambough. The lands already surveyed amount to two millions of acres.

ARMY MOVEMENTS.—A Company of U. S. troops, under the command of Col. Chapman, composed of Infantry and Dragoons, have been encamped within a short distance from our city for some days. They were en route for Utah, for the purpose of joining the army in that Territory. The officers visited our city on several occasions in full uniform, and presented an imposing appearance.—Albion Union.

Advices from the plains state that the Kaws, Comanche, Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians are collecting their forces on Smoky Hill Fork, for the purpose of fighting the Texas Rangers and the Government troops now on their way out.

The details by the Persia, contradict the report of the death of Marshal Canrobert—his wounds were not mortal.

The well-known Missouri river steamer Morning Star was burned to the water's edge on Monday evening last.

According to the census of 1850, there were in the United States 23,190,876 people. At the same time there were 26,842 clergymen, or one clergyman to 893 persons. But New Hampshire takes the lead in supporting clergymen, as she has one clergyman to every 490 persons. All the New England States support one clergyman to less than 600 persons. New York has one clergyman to every 722 persons. Virginia one to 1,317; South Carolina one to 1,410; Louisiana one to 3,000.

ANCIENT MINES IN NEBRASKA.—An interesting discovery of ancient mines has been made in Nebraska, about seven miles from Wyoming. They are the most extensive operations of ancient miners ever discovered upon the continent. For miles in extent the whole country is literally torn up and thrown into the most fantastic and promiscuous ridges, hillocks, gutters, trenches, shafts, &c. There are remains of chimneys, furnaces, stone walls, and earthen houses, fragments of jugs, glass bottles, and many other things to numerous to mention. Rocks have been drilled and blasted, evidently with some explosive material, stone dressed with the hammer, and every evidence of the operations having been carried on by civilized men. Old California miners who have visited these mines, say that it would probably cost millions of dollars to do the work that has been done there, and the appearance of the surface is similar to the placers of California, where the miners have been at work. What the mineral was has not yet been fully ascertained, but this is soon to be tested by parties skilled in metallurgy. It is generally thought that the metal was gold or silver. The mines are so ancient that there are large oak trees growing upon them. When was this done and by whom?

Naval Intelligence.

It is stated that every available vessel belonging to the navy of the United States, not at present in commission, is being fitted out for immediate service. We subjoin a list of them, together with their present location:

At Portsmouth, (N. H.,) the frigate Constitution; at Philadelphia, the sailing frigate Congress, steam sloop Lancaster, (on her trial trip,) Wyoming and Pawnee; at Boston, steam frigate Colorado, steam sloop Hartford, (on her trial trip,) Narragansett, and probably the steam frigate Minnesota; at Norfolk, steamers Water-Witch and Fulton, steam sloop Richmond and Dacotah; at New York, steam frigates San Jacinto, Niagara, and Susquehanna, and the steam sloop Iroquois; at Norfolk, steam sloop Mohican, the sailing sloop Portsmouth and Constellation having sailed for the coast of Africa; at Pensacola, steam sloop Pensacola and Seminole; and at Mare Island, Cal., steam sloop Saginaw and a side-wheel steamer.

Of these vessels no less than twenty-two are steamers, to which, if we add the six already in commission, (exclusive of tenders, &c.,) the result will show that of all our steam navy not one ship is destined to be unemployed by the first of October. Of the ten frigates, four will be in commission, four are too old to do any ocean duty, one is on the stocks, and one idle; of the twenty-one steamers of war, only two are not being rigged for service; all the frigates are even now at sea. In short, we never had so large a naval force afloat as we soon will have.

Letters and papers for the Pacific squadron will be taken out in the war-steamship Lancaster, to sail for that station in a week or two. The sloop Cyane and the permanent storeships are the only ships that will certainly be on the squadron when the Lancaster arrives out, although the St. Marys and Decatur may not have sailed for home. Of the new squadron, the Levant, Portsmouth, Constellation, and John Adams have already gone to sea.

TOWNSEND PREMIUM.—The Townsend premiums for English composition have been awarded to the following members of the senior class of Yale College: Louis H. Bristol, New Haven; Edward C. Carrington, Colebrook; Thos. K. Lonsbury, Ovid, New York; Truman A. Post, St. Louis, Missouri; Joseph H. Twitchell, Plantsville; Robert A. Styles, New Haven.

FORT KEARNEY,
June 17th, 1859.

EDITOR ATCHISON UNION:

Your paper has again come to hand in very good time. We have had exceedingly fine weather here lately, with occasionally a small shower to help vegetation and lay the dust. Emigrants to California are still passing in large numbers westward, on both the North and South sides of the Platte river. Long trains of the Mormons are passing us on the North side of the Platte. Russell's trains from Nebraska City are beginning to come in fast. The roads are in fine order, and everything in their favor. There is every prospect of freight trains making rapid progress towards the mountains.

FROM NICARAGUA.—THE NICARAGUA CANAL.—The reports received respecting the progress of the Nicaragua canal are not of a promising character. The form of laying the foundation stone had been gone through, but notwithstanding the preparations which were previously made for celebrating the occasion in a magnificent style, it turned out to be a most insignificant affair. Neither the President of Costa Rica nor Nicaragua were present, although Commissioners were sent expressly from England to invite them; indeed, no one was there except a few employees of M. Belly, so far as we can ascertain; certainly no one of any distinction.

Considerable sickness has broken out among the Engineer corps, and one of the party had died of yellow fever.

The survey of the river and lake was being proceeded with, but in a very superficial and hasty manner, with the object, probably, of getting a report into the market as soon as possible. The general opinion appears to be, even of the most sanguine believers in the canal, that the scheme is very likely to meet with a premature death; and, although we never had the slightest faith in the undertaking, our opinion of its being a humbug is only strengthened by the reports which reach us.—Panama Star, June 3d.

GOLD ON CARSON RIVER.—It has been known to a few, for the last two or three years, that gold existed in considerable quantities on the East Fork of Carson river, but for the reason that no very large strikes had been made in that vicinity, no extensive mining operations have ever been carried on, and those who did work the mines did it in a very imperfect manner. Mining operations were entirely confined to the immediate margin of the stream, convenient to the water, and although good wages were obtained, ranging as high as $10 or $12 per day to the hand, yet when the most available portion of the ground was worked over, the mines were abandoned. Recently, and within a few days, a company of five men have commenced work in these mines, and report that they are doing well, and we doubt not—if they are experienced miners that they will, by taking advantage of modern improvements in mining, make large wages. The gold is of an excellent quality, worth over $17 per ounce. The mines are situated on the East Fork of Carson river, in the foot-hills, about 16 miles distant from Genoa, and on an auriferous range of country which doubtless extends from Gold Canyon to Walker's river.—Territorial Enterprise, Genoa, 18th June.

Going into battle by rail is one of the peculiarities of the present war. At the battle of Montebello the allied supporters came into the field under the lead of locomotives, rapidly succeeding trains each bringing up a brigade.

GLOBE.

AT the solicitation of many of my former patrons I have concluded to meet the demand of a FIRST CLASS BOARDING HOUSE, and will shortly make arrangements for sleeping apartments, thus making the house complete.

TERMS:

BOARD PER WEEK.....$10 50
SINGLE DAY.....2 50
SINGLE WEEK.....14 00
SINGLE MEAL.....1 00

Strangers without baggage will be required to pay in advance.

Restaurant.

Gentlemen and Ladies wishing meals at any hour can be accommodated either with private rooms or at the stated hours.

BILL OF FARE.

Porter House Steak,
Mutton Chop,
Ham & Eggs,
Tripe,
Oysters, &c.

Vegetables and Fruit in their season.

Every attention paid to guests; and those wishing quiet, punctuality, and the best the market affords, are invited to give the "Globe" a call.

PRICES OF THE RESTAURANT

will be as low as any house of a similar style.

BUSINESS MEN

will find superior accommodations as to time and style of meals furnished.

HOURS OF MEALS.

Breakfast.....at.....7.
Dinner.....".....11.
Dinner, if a number so register.....4.
Regular Supper.....6.

WARM SPRINGS OMNIBUS

will call at the house all hours of the day, particularly on the arrival of the stages.

REFERENCES:

To all who have tried the house formerly.

CHOICE WINES AND CIGARS.

BALLS AND PIC-NICS

furnished as low as any one when a good article is wanted.

A FRUIT STALL.

I have made arrangements with the principal fruit growers for a regular supply of

Apples,
Peaches,
Auricots,
Nectarines,
Grapes.

Orders accompanied with the cash will be executed with dispatch.

Shaving Saloon.

A first rate artist engaged. Satisfaction guaranteed.

STABLING PROVIDED.

DAVID CANDLAND,

LAWSON.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,

where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread,
Crackers,
Cakes,
& Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS,
CONFECTIONERY,
SODA WATER, &
SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS,

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath.....75 cents.
Five Baths.....$3 00
Ten do.....$5 00
37-3m
E. REESE.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;
—ALSO—

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,
AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd,
Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive. 37-12

MULES FOR SALE.

40 MULES are for Sale. Apply to 37-3t JOHN HARTNETT.

Sixty Dollars Reward!

IS OFFERED to any one finding, and bringing to P. K. Dotson, five mules and a blue roan horse, or ten dollars per head for each of the above animals.
They are branded "H. O. & Co." on the left thigh.
The animals strayed from the herd ground at the point of the West Mountain.
Apply at the store of Hockaday & Burr, G. S. L. City. 137-3t

LOST.

STRAYED from our Corral in this City, a pair of Black Mules, branded X 5 on neck. Twenty Dollars reward will be paid upon their delivery to Thomas Adams or to the subscriber.
37 3t R. HEREFORD.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

Taken, or strayed from my Corral during the night of the 18th of July, a bright bay, Mare Mule, branded S on the right hip. The above reward will be paid any one who will find and return said mule to me at my office.
37 1t JOHN HARTNETT.

NOTICE.

CAME into my camp in Echo Canyon, on the 15th of July, one Mule and one Horse. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges, and take them away. Apply to 27 3t E. W. VAN ETEN

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

X. X. ALE, POUTER, and our unrivaled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them are as follows:

Single meals.....$1 00
Supper, breakfast and lodging.....2 00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, 10¢, 20¢, 30¢, 40¢, 50¢, 60¢, 70¢, 80¢, 90¢, 1 00, 1 10, 1 20, 1 30, 1 40, 1 50, 1 60, 1 70, 1 80, 1 90, 2 00, 2 10, 2 20, 2 30, 2 40, 2 50, 2 60, 2 70, 2 80, 2 90, 3 00, 3 10, 3 20, 3 30, 3 40, 3 50, 3 60, 3 70, 3 80, 3 90, 4 00, 4 10, 4 20, 4 30, 4 40, 4 50, 4 60, 4 70, 4 80, 4 90, 5 00, 5 10, 5 20, 5 30, 5 40, 5 50, 5 60, 5 70, 5 80, 5 90, 6 00, 6 10, 6 20, 6 30, 6 40, 6 50, 6 60, 6 70, 6 80, 6 90, 7 00, 7 10, 7 20, 7 30, 7 40, 7 50, 7 60, 7 70, 7 80, 7 90, 8 00, 8 10, 8 20, 8 30, 8 40, 8 50, 8 60, 8 70, 8 80, 8 90, 9 00, 9 10, 9 20, 9 30, 9 40, 9 50, 9 60, 9 70, 9 80, 9 90, 10 00, 10 10, 10 20, 10 30, 10 40, 10 50, 10 60, 10 70, 10 80, 10 90, 11 00, 11 10, 11 20, 11 30, 11 40, 11 50, 11 60, 11 70, 11 80, 11 90, 12 00, 12 10, 12 20, 12 30, 12 40, 12 50, 12 60, 12 70, 12 80, 12 90, 13 00, 13 10, 13 20, 13 30, 13 40, 13 50, 13 60, 13 70, 13 80, 13 90, 14 00, 14 10, 14 20, 14 30, 14 40, 14 50, 14 60, 14 70, 14 80, 14 90, 15 00, 15 10, 15 20, 15 30, 15 40, 15 50, 15 60, 15 70, 15 80, 15 90, 16 00, 16 10, 16 20, 16 30, 16 40, 16 50, 16 60, 16 70, 16 80, 16 90, 17 00, 17 10, 17 20, 17 30, 17 40, 17 50, 17 60, 17 70, 17 80, 17 90, 18 00, 18 10, 18 20, 18 30, 18 40, 18 50, 18 60, 18 70, 18 80, 18 90, 19 00, 19 10, 19 20, 19 30, 19 40, 19 50, 19 60, 19 70, 19 80, 19 90, 20 00, 20 10, 20 20, 20 30, 20 40, 20 50, 20 60, 20 70, 20 80, 20 90, 21 00, 21 10, 21 20, 21 30, 21 40, 21 50, 21 60, 21 70, 21 80, 21 90, 22 00, 22 10, 22 20, 22 30, 22 40, 22 50, 22 60, 22 70, 22 80, 22 90, 23 00, 23 10, 23 20, 23 30, 23 40, 23 50, 23 60, 23 70, 23 80, 23 90, 24 00, 24 10, 24 20, 24 30, 24 40, 24 50, 24 60, 24 70, 24 80, 24 90, 25 00, 25 10, 25 20, 25 30, 25 40, 25 50, 25 60, 25 70, 25 80, 25 90, 26 00, 26 10, 26 20, 26 30, 26 40, 26 50, 26 60, 26 70, 26 80, 26 90, 27 00, 27 10, 27 20, 27 30, 27 40, 27 50, 27 60, 27 70, 27 80, 27 90, 28 00, 28 10, 28 20, 28 30, 28 40, 28 50, 28 60, 28 70, 28 80, 28 90, 29 00, 29 10, 29 20, 29 30, 29 40, 29 50, 29 60, 29 70, 29 80, 29 90, 30 00, 30 10, 30 20, 30 30, 30 40, 30 50, 30 60, 30 70, 30 80, 30 90, 31 00, 31 10, 31 20, 31 30, 31 40, 31 50, 31 60, 31 70, 31 80, 31 90, 32 00, 32 10, 32 20, 32 30, 32 40, 32 50, 32 60, 32 70, 32 80, 32 90, 33 00, 33 10, 33 20, 33 30, 33 40, 33 50, 33 60, 33 70, 33 80, 33 90, 34 00, 34 10, 34 20, 34 30, 34 40, 34 50, 34 60, 34 70, 34 80, 34 90, 35 00, 35 10, 35 20, 35 30, 35 40, 35 50, 35 60, 35 70, 35 80, 35 90, 36 00, 36 10, 36 20, 36 30, 36 40, 36 50, 36 60, 36 70, 36 80, 36 90, 37 00, 37 10, 37 20, 37 30, 37 40, 37 50, 37 60, 37 70, 37 80, 37 90, 38 00, 38 10, 38 20, 38 30, 38 40, 38 50, 38 60, 38 70, 38 80, 38 90, 39 00, 39 10, 39 20, 39 30, 39 40, 39 50, 39 60, 39 70, 39 80, 39 90, 40 00, 40 10, 40 20, 40 30, 40 40, 40 50, 40 60, 40 70, 40 80, 40 90, 41 00, 41 10, 41 20, 41 30, 41 40, 41 50, 41 60, 41 70, 41 80, 41 90,

A NEW POET.

"The Disbanded Volunteer," a correspondent of the New York Sunday Times, has been to Niagara, and has been requested to write some poetry on the chief places of interest from there to the St. Lawrence. He complies, and sends the following:

TO THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE, NIAGARA RIVER.

Anonymous structure! Whar, I'd like to know,
Did the constructura stand as bilt this rode Rite throo the air? Say, gentle mews,
Wot hed they to hold on to? But, alas!
The mews says nuthin'. O! Jerusalem!
Wot buoyed em up? Imadjaashun, floed,
Kant git the hang of it!

I have it now!
They did it in balloons!

ON LAKE ONTARIO.

Green are thy waters, green as bottle glass,
Behold em stretched thar;
Fine Muskologes and Oswego bags
Is chiefly ketch'd thar.
Wanst the red Injuns thar tuck their delights,
Fisht, fit and bled;
Now most of the inhabitants is whites,
With nary red.

POETICAL REFLECTIONS ON PASSING THROO THE THOUSAND ISLES.

O what a fary senel! It peers to me
As ef the strene, as fur as eye ken see,
Hed with a shower of islands reddy made
Ben librally peppered. Ime afraid.
They're troubled with muskeeters, otherwise
Thar woud I like to lofe; also black-dies
Is orful plenty, when the weather's hot,
And makes you sware, which I hed rayther not.

Stingin a feller blinder than a bat,
And his head swellin bigger'n his batt!
Woll, setch is life; thar's allurs some darned thing
To take the stiffenin out'er Fancy's wing,
And that which seems romantical afar
Proves, when your'e near it, rayther below part!

ON THE LASHEEN RAPIDS.

Roshin on with oncommon force,
Faster by chorks than a quarter horse;
Steppin at more'n a racers speed,
Throo the wast looking channil I ever seed, Atween rocks whar it seemed that we must be plined

Down we dasht in the Jenny Lind.
What a glorius pictur it is, no doubt,
But it's arter your'e throo that you find out;
For as we sheered throo the hissen fome,
I'd hev given a V to hev ben to home-

The Arkansas Wedding.

Arkansas! the State of all the southern confederacy the worst ridden by politicians and demagogues. Rich in her soil and mineral wealth; and poorest in everything like internal improvements and commercial facilities of all kinds.—
Her public roads are quagmires, and her rivers innocent of any improvements save those afforded by nature. Jogging a long over one of these self-same roads,
I broke my buggy trying to drive around a suspicious spot, where some philanthropist had erected a hickory sapling, bearing the ominous words,

"No bottom here."

Delayed and benighted I at last reached a log-house, whose blazing firelight through the open door promised comfort, and if I guessed aright, some half-dozen horses hitched at the gate indicated that something was going on, I hailed:

"Hallo who lives here?"

"Me Bob Wood. What do you want?"

"Supper and lodging if you can accommodate me."

This brought Bob Wood to the gate, where he proceeded to inform me that his darter, Melindy, was about getting married, "but he'd as lief makea dollar as not, ef I'd fed my horse myself and sleep on a corn-husk shake-down afore the fire." I jumped at the offer, and out of my buggy, fed "Lightning" a better supper than he ever had in his life before, washed my hands, and went to see the fun. The idea of an "Ole-ren's feller" currying and feeding his own horse was something entirely new, and I was a favorite instant, guaranteed by a prompt invitation to liquor. The parson imbibed, drew an enormous bandanna across his lips, and announced that "he was ready to talk when the rest was." This brought forth the happy couple. The groom was a lanky specimen in homespun, and led his bride by the hand. She was a bouncing, rosy-cheeked girl, following a step or two behind, feeling evidently in a novel position.

"Yo, Melindy, take your finger out of yer mouth."

Melindy cast a defiant look at her maternal relative, withdrew the offending member, wiped it on her apron, and quicken'd her pace. The young parson, after some little trouble, arranged them to his satisfaction and proceeded.

"John Stribner, do you take Melindy
Woods, in the presence of these witnesses to be your lawful wife?"

"That's wot I'm here for," answered
Mr. Stribner, cramming his hands into his pockets.

"You will please answer, 'yes, or
no.'"

"Yes or no," promptly returned the gentleman.

"No, no, say yes."

"Y-a-s, then," casting a sheepish look around him.

"Melindy Woods."

"Y-a-s."

"Wait a moment, please. Melindy woods, do you take John Stribner, in the presence of these Witnesses, to be your lawful wedded husband?"

"I reckon."

"Then in the presence of the witnesses spoken of, I declare you man and wife, 'cordin' to the law of Arkansas and the Gospel; and wot's thus jined let no man put assunder."

The parson turned away, flush and excited, but was recalled by a query from Mr. Stribner.

"Mass! I kiss her, now, George?"

"As you please, John, she's yours now."

"Hold up your mouth, Melindy."

"Shan't do it! Right here afore all the folks."

John didn't argue the point, but sid-ded up to the grinning group where I was standing, and proposed that us boys should take some "bust head" (whisky.)
Meanwhile I heard Melindy's triumphant voice amongst some of her companions:

"Kiss! Humph! Jayn's turned fool,
I believe."

Poultices of pounded beef root, renewed whenever they become dry, will cure lockjaw; and two gills of sweet oil will neutralize any form of vegetable, animal, or mineral poison, known to chemistry, when accidentally swallowed.—
Let these simple remedies be borne in mind.

BURNING OF A TOWN.—A disastrous fire broke out at Tehama on Saturday morning, and in spite of all the efforts of the citizens,
it destroyed, in a few hours, the whole town with the exception of three buildings.

$1,000 REWARD.

WILLIAM A. ADEN.

I have learned through the Post Master, Lucius N.
Scott, of Provo City, Utah Territory, that my son, WILLIAM A. ADEN, left there about the 1st of October, 1857, for California, by the south route, aiming to overtake a party of emigrants, who were then some fifty miles ahead of him. To William D. Roberts, a young gentleman of Provo City, with whom he had formed an acquaintance, my son agreed to write, as soon as he got through, but, as yet, not a word from him! Mr. Roberts says, under date of March 25, 1859:
"Mr. Roberts has since been to California, and has just got back, and on his return learned, by a man in one of the extreme Southern settlements, that a certain Indian is now wearing a peculiar black skin coat like one your son wore when he left here," and the great presumption is that he was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. Said

WILLIAM A. ADEN.

If alive, is now about twenty-one years of age—pretty well grown—blue eyes—fair skin—hair curly, and rather dark—a pretty good talent for music (both vocal and instrumental)—writes poetry tolerable well—a natural genius—particularly at PAINTING. For further particulars, as to dress, &c., refer to W. D. Roberts, Provo City.

For the rescue and delivery of my son, if a prisoner,
to Governor Cumming, of Utah, or Ex-Governor Booth, of Napa Valley, California, or an undoubted assurance of his release, I will give the above-named reward; or I will give a liberal compensation for knowledge of his whereabouts, if alive, so that he may be rescued; (if a prisoner perhaps he may be bought off from the Indians.)
And any information in reference to him would be gratefully received by his distressed parents, brothers and sisters.

An assurance of the reward, I refer to the an-nexed note to Governor Cumming, of Utah, from Gov.
Harris, of Tennessee, with whom I have been personally acquainted for many years.

Paris, Tennessee, May 27th, 1859.

S. B. ADEN.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Nashville, Tenn., May 8th 1859.

His Excellency, the Governor of Utah Territory:

Sir: Dr. S. B. Aden, of this State, is under the apprehension that his son William, enroute for California, was either murdered or taken prisoner by the Indians. The Dr. is in deep distress, and wishes to offer a reward for the rescue of his son, if living, and at his instance I write this note, to say that Dr.
Aden is a gentleman of high character, and in every way worthy and responsible; and any reward which he may offer for the rescue of his son, from the custody of the Indians, will be promptly paid, which fact you will please make known to your people, by the publication of this note, or otherwise, so that full credit may be given to such reward as Dr. Aden may offer.

Very respectfully,

ISHAM G. HARRIS,

Governor of Tennessee.

N.B.—Any person who shall be entitled to the above reward, will please draw on myself at this place, or my son, F. F. Aden, of St. Louis, Mo.

S. B. ADEN.

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. PILLEY.

FULTON IRON WORKS,

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet Iron

Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard

Screw and Brass and Iron Castings of every description,

Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

24-4

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS,
CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
IMPORTING

AND
WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Wholesale Importing Druggists,

DEALERS IN
DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRU-
MENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles,
Paints, Oils, Brushes,
Camphene, Lamps,
Machine and pure Lard Oils,
Hops, Breweries, Materials, &c.

139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for
the following valuable preparations:
Jaynes' Alterative, Exp-ctorant, Hair Tonic Vermifuge

Sando's Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Pebrifuge, Clove Anodyne, and Roman Eye Balsam;
Dr. Moffatt's Pills and Bitters;
Ayer's Pectoral and Pills;
Wistar's Bal am Wild Cherry;
Green's Oxygenated Bitters;

All of which we offer for sale at very near New York
prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.

WE are agents for the celebrated
Perfumery House of Jules Hugel & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS!

WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1858 hops, to which we invite the attention of Brewers.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.

THERE is no longer any doubt
about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr.
Marsh's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.

WE have just received per clipper
Intrepid, from New York, a large invoice of choice Paints and Oils, consisting in part of superior
Boiled and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Earth Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermilion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue,
Putty, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Coach Varnish, Japan
Furniture and Damar Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyke
Brown, &c., for sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for
sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, No. 139 J street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rates, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power &
Welshman, Philadelphia.

400 bottles Strichnine;
75 ounces Nitra Silver, pure;
25 ounces Sulphate Morphine;
100 ounces Jodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.
ALSO
200 ounces Quinine;
75 pounds Iodide Potassium;
80 pounds Chloroform;
750 pounds Spis Nitre, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric
Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,
000 superior Soda Corks, 50,000 superior Wine
Corks; 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Keg
Corks, &c., for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Oils, Oils, Oils!

PURE Lard Oil, Machine Oil, Sperm
Oil, and refined Polar oil, for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

JAS. E. D. JESTER,

(Successor to D. W. Baylies & Son.)
WATCH-MAKER & JEWELER,

HAS on hand a well assorted stock
of Materials, Glasses, Guard Chains, Keys, &c., and is ready to repair Watches, Clocks and Jewelry, in short notice and in a workmanlike manner. He hopes by strict attention and superior work to merit continuance of the old patronage, and a liberal share of the new.

All work warranted to give satisfaction.
Office with T. S. Williams, in Salt Lake House, one door north of the Post Office.
N. B. Particular attention paid to work from a distance, and from Camp Floyd. All jobs from the latter, received and returned by express free of risk and expense to the owners.

We take pleasure in commending to the public our successor, Mr. Jas. E. D. Jester, who has been in our employ during the past winter, as a superior and abili-tful workman, and one well worthy their confidence and patronage. From our old friends and patrons, we bespeak him a continuance of their favors.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,

AT

CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.

CHARLES HARRISON,

PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments.

P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

12-12

To the Traveling Public.
STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS
NOTICE.

ON and after the 9th day of May,
1859, we the undersigned will commence a Daily line of stages from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and
from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m.
We have now four charges of horses on the road,
also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers;
therefore we feel warranted in saying that we can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

We will be ready to receive horses on, Every May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at our new Stable,
in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.
Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or
day.

Our New Carriages and Buggies, now on the way from California, will be here in a few weeks, when we will be able to accommodate the public with the finest turn out in Utah Territory.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

We will run an Express, in connection with our stage
line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by us, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.
All pack-goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents
per pound.
The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk,
Package, Parcel, or any other species of property wherever, except receipted for by our agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

WILLIAMS & JACKMAN,

Proprietors;

FRANK D. GILBERT,

Agent at Salt Lake City;

J. W. McFADDEN,

Agent at Camp Floyd.

NEW GOODS

JUST RECEIVED

WILLIAM NIXON,

East Temple St., between the Deseret Reading
Rooms and saloon and John Willis' Bakery.

HAS just received a choice lot of assorted Merchandise, to which he wishes to call the attention of his old Friends and the Public generally consisting in part of

TOBACCOES.
Lewis's No. 1 and 2, Grape Vine,
Buffalo Chips, Com'der in Chief,
Strawberry, and other choice Brands.

GROCERIES.
Tea, Coffee, Sugar,
Rice, Candy, Nutmegs,
Liquors, Cigars, Boston Soap,
Mustard, Pepper, Indigo,
Cotton Yarn, Madder, All kinds of Spices.

With a choice lot of Fancy bottled and case fruits
oysters, sardines, lobsters, London gin and other liquors,
yeast powder, soda, saleratus, cream of tartar, and other useful articles in this line.

ALSO—Calicoes, do laines, bleached and brown linen sheeting, lineable covens, blue and brown drills, bedtickings, alpacas, lawns, slugs, laces, edgings, bonnet and taffeta ribbons, velvet trimmings, and a large variety of all kinds of small wares and notions.—
Together with
Mens and boys calf and kip boots and shoes; a choice
lot of gents gaiters, womens and childrens calf, kip and fancy shoes, boots and gaiters; mens and boys hats and
caps and

Ready Made Clothing.

WANTED.—Wheat, flour, butter, eggs, and all other kinds of produce, in exchange for which the highest market price will be paid.

WANTED.—1000 to 5000 buck, antelope, mountain
sheep and elk skins.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY.—Some good pine lumber,
also 10,000 shaved shingles for which a good price will
be paid if delivered soon.

W. Nixon, thankful for past favors will endeavor to merit a continuance of the same by selling good goods
at fair prices for

READY PAY ONLY IN CASH OR PRODUCE.

He would also call the attention of Farmers residing South and in Cedar Valley, to his large and well assorted stock of General Merchandise at CAMP FLOYD,
north side of the creek, where they can always depend upon finding a good variety of everything in his line, in exchange for Cash, Beef-Cattle, and every kind of Produce.

28-11

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!!

PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH,

MARBLE BUILDING,
CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, and PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL
PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and
of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,
selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvement.

He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,
including every variety, English and French, to his asortment of

PERFUMERIES,
ELEGANT EXTRACTS,
POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

THE VALLEY TANT.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 38.

River Intelligence.

The river at this point receded about two feet yesterday by our mark, and was still falling at 9 o'clock last night. We have had the last high water we will have this season, so far as the river is concerned. We are glad to learn that no material damage was done, though it ran over the banks in many places.

The Daily Democrat of the 28th says:

A meeting of the Missouri river steamboat association was held yesterday, and doubtless business of importance was transacted. It was rumored that great changes are maturing in regard to the running of the boats in future, and that the Association will be dissolved, if it has not already, preliminary to the formation of another line of twelve boats, to leave daily for St. Joseph. It is rumored also that the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad will, or have proposed, to compromise with the Missouri river packers, by raising their prices, and withdrawing their Omaha packets, and also their Leavenworth packets, thus vacating the Missouri river to the legitimate carriers. There is, no doubt, considerable foundation. About 150 persons were on the train; of these, 50 have been taken from the ruins dead; and 50 or 60 more are wounded or escaped unhurt; the rest not heard from, as many of the dead were drowned in the ravine. It is feared that others not heard from have lost their lives in the same manner.

Mr. Bliss, the President of the road, and Mr. Hiram Sibley, one of the Directors, were in the sleeping car and escaped uninjured. The engineer and fireman, both named Chulph, of Laporte, were killed; Hartwell, of Toledo, expressman, and Babington, baggage-master, were also killed, in the baggage car. C. W. Smith, road master, killed. Mrs. E. P. Gillett, and child, of Stone Mills, dead—E. P. Gillett but little hurt. W. H. Gillett, Cortland, N. Y., missing.

The names of the dead it is impossible to obtain. The wounded are Fred. Miller, Holmesville, Ind.; E. M. Knapp, Hudson, Wis.; Miss Hattie Knapp, Auburn, N. Y.; J. R. Gardner, Jonesville, Mich.; Chas. Sherman, Boston; Augustus White, Holmesville, Ind.; Wm. Flannery, P. Myers, P. Quinn, C. Anderson, V. R. Anderson, all of Ansonville, Ill.; A. D. Piser, Chicago; D. Rhodes, Cleveland; Miss A. Moore, Freeport; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jurry, Brooklyn, N. Y.; C. Jackson and Miss C. M. Elder, Waukesha, Wis.; Oscar Wasperton, Rockford, Ill.; Walworth, father and son; Adrian, C. Bennett, Adrian.

Thos. Misham, train boy, dead; M. H. Regan, wife and daughter, Rockford, Ill.; lady badly hurt, daughter not yet found; S. O. Ross, Coldwater, slightly injured; Jesse Dyling, Louisville, Warren county, Pa., slightly; W. J. Hawk, Charleston, Va., slightly; C. Yard and wife, Otago county, N. Y., slightly; A. Van Sycke, wife and four children, Warren county, O., he and one child badly burnt.

Stephen H. Arnold, Decatur, Iowa, badly hurt; W. H. Weiler, Milwaukee, slightly; O'Brien, Chicago, slightly; W. N. Conwell, slightly; Mary Coats, Youngstown, O., slightly; Olmstead, leg broken; Miss D. A. Porter, Hudson, Mich., slightly.

The following are not hurt: Lewis Heller, Strasburg, Pa.; John Heck, Rome, Jones county, B. W. Tait, Susquehanna Depot; J. E. Gardner, Chicago; Henry Crease, Philadelphia; M. White, De Kalb, Ill.; S. Arnold, brother of the wounded Arnold; Calvin Hagan, Milwaukee.

Citizens of South Bend and Mishawaka turned out en masse to assist the wounded, and search for the dead.

One lady was carried down the stream towards the river, but lodged in a tree top, and heard several float by crying for help. The engineer had been running over the bridge from Laporte each way carefully.

The train was not running faster than ten or twenty miles per hour. The train going west had passed over the embankment safely at 8:30 P. M.

The United States express had over $30,000 in their safe, which broke to pieces by the collision, but the agent here has found most of it in the ruins.

One of the through mail bags was found near the river, two hundred yards from the break. Whether others are lost, cannot be told.

The ravine is about twenty-five feet deep, and seventy-five to one hundred feet wide. The night was very dark, and there was a curve in the road just before the embankment was reached.

For these rumors. No association boat left yesterday, but as the Association has an agreement with the Pacific Railroad to have one boat every day at Jefferson City until the 1st of January 1860, we believe the Somers agreed to call there to-night. The Roma has laid up and we could learn nothing in regard to the immediate movements of some of the other boats.

The weather was exceedingly warm yesterday, causing a sweltering that was anything but pleasant.

At St. Louis the river was rising slowly on the 28th, but the upper Mississippi was falling from St. Paul to Dubuque.

The Democrat also has the following in relation to the burning of the C. W. Scott:

seen by persons on the levee to approach the city floating at random in the current, and enveloped in flames. This drew an immense concourse of people to the wharf, who, gazing upon the passing mass of smoke and fire, saw it taken in tow by the ferry-boat and towed to a point on the Illinois shore, where it could do no injury. The ferry-boat being the one furnished with the powerful fire engine, played upon it with no apparent effect, as the hull appeared to burn with much vigor until nothing remained but a smoking and charred ruin upon the surface of the water.

We are glad to be able to state, with absolute certainty, that everybody on board escaped unhurt.

The Ohio was rapidly rising at Pittsburgh.

Napoleon's Proclamation issued at Milan.

An Imperial Sensation Document.

NEW YORK, June 26. The steamer Bremen brings London dates to the 14th, and the important items of news are that there had been no more battles fought. The Austrians were still on the retreat. A new British Ministry had been formed with Palmerston at its head, and Lord John Russell for leader in the House, and Metternich is dead.

Presuming you have the general news summary from your regular correspondent, I send you Napoleon's proclamation to the Lombards, and the London Times' comments thereon. The following proclamation has been published at Milan:

"The fortune of war has conducted me to the capital of Lombardy. Let me tell you why I am here. When Austria unjustly attacked Piedmont, I resolved to sustain the King of Sardinia, my ally. The honor and interests of France made this my duty. Your enemies, who are my enemies, have endeavored to diminish the sympathy which exists throughout all Europe for our cause, by trying to persuade the world that I am carrying on this war only for personal ambition or to aggrandize the territory of France. If there are men who do not understand their epoch I am not of the number. In the enlightened state of public opinion which prevails, men are greater by the moral influence which they exercise than by barren conquests, and this moral influence I seek after with pride in contributing to emancipate one of the most beautiful parts of Europe. Your reception has already proved to me that you have understood me.

I do not come here with any preconceived plan to dispossess sovereign nor to impose my own will upon you. My army will only occupy itself with two things—to combat your enemies and to maintain internal order. It will place no obstacle in the way of a free manifestation of your legitimate wishes. Providence sometimes favors nations like individuals in giving them occasion to raise suddenly to greatness; but it is on condition that they have the virtue to profit by it.

Profit then by the fortune which is offered you. Your desire of Independence, so long expressed, so often deceived, will be realized if you show yourselves worthy of it. Unite then, for one sole object, the enfranchisement of your country. Seek military organization. Hasten, all of you, to place yourselves under the flag of Victor Emanuel, who has already so nobly shown you the path of honor. Remember that without discipline there is no army, and animated with the sacred fire of patriotism, be nothing to-day but soldiers. To-morrow you will be free citizens of a great country.

Done at the Imperial quarters at Milan, the 8th of June, 1859.

Signed: NAPOLEON.

Napoleon III. to his Army.

SOLDIERS: A month ago, confiding in efforts of diplomacy, I still hoped for the maintenance of peace, when suddenly the invasion of Piedmont by the Austrian troops called us to arms. We were not ready. Men, horses, material, and supplies were wanting, and we had, in order to assist our allies, to pass in small divisions beyond the Alps before an enemy formidable and prepared before hand.

The danger was great; the energy of the nation and your courage supplied all; France has again found her old virtues, and, united in one feeling, and for one object, she has shown the power of her resources and the strength of her patriotism. It is now only ten days since operations commenced, and the Piedmontese territory has been already cleared of its invaders. The allied army has fought four combats and gained a decisive victory, which has opened to it the gates to the capital of Lombardy. You have put more than 35,000 Austrians hors de combat, taken 17 cannon, two colors, and 8,000 prisoners; but all is not terminated; you will have more struggles to support and obstacles to overcome.

I rely on you. Courage, then, brave soldiers of the Army of Italy! Your forefathers from above contemplate you with pride.

NAPOLEON.

Alice Carey has written four as beautiful lines as can be found in the English language:

Among the pitfalls in our way,
The best of us walk blindly;
So man be wary, watch and pray,
And judge your brother kindly.

Illustrious Babies.

The Cincinnati Sunday Times furnishes the following interesting particulars concerning three European babies, who are probably destined to make a great figure in the world—the Anglo-Prussian offspring of Victoria Adelaide, Princess Royal of England, and Frederick William, grandson of the King of Prussia; the Spanish baby, offspring of her Catholic Majesty of Spain, and presumptively of her husband, Whilcom Duke of Cadiz; and the French baby presented some three years ago by the Empress Eugenie to her spouse Napoleon III. The Times says:

The Anglo-Prussian baby, which is yet in long clothes, is a very fine sample of a nursing prince. There can be no doubt upon the subject, because when his Royal Highness showed the boy to his household, they were unanimous on that point, and they could not all be mistaken. Even the King of Prussia, though laboring under an aberration of mind, superinduced by overdoses of an effervescent medicine known as cliquet, roused himself sufficiently to pronounce his grandson a splendid fellow.

The Spanish infant is also described by the journals of Madrid as a nonpareil of a prince. Queen Isabel is fond of taking him out in an open carriage and showing him to the soldiers and the people, who, of course, shout "hooray" in Spanish, as in duty bound.

Among the illustrious babies of Europe, la petite Napoleon is, so to speak, "cock of the walk." He is over three years old, and very fond of wooden soldiers and make-believe artillery. No pains have been spared to impress his infant mind with the idea that he is the grand nephew of his grand uncle, Napoleon la Grand. There are some people wicked enough to suspect that he is the grandson of the great Bonaparte, but that is scandal. His grandmother, Queen Hortense, revered the Emperor—nothing more. It is plain that ambition already begins to swell in the little breast of the "child of France."

He sometimes rides his rocking-horse furiously, with his right arm extended toward Italy, telling his attendants, in baby French, that he is crossing the Alps. He also occasionally charges, flag in hand, through the corridor into which the imperial nursery opens—an exploit supposed to refer to the passage of the bridge of Lodi. Strange to say, he never mentions Waterloo—perhaps he has never been told of that bit of a skirmish. If his father should die a natural death—if he himself should escape from the measles, croup, etc., and if France should abstain from revolutions until he is out of his minority, together with other ifs too numerous to mention, the boy may possibly wear a crown; but it is quite as likely that about the time he should put it on, he may have no head to put in it.

It is the opinion of some hopeful people that by the time the above-named cradle princes are big enough to sit on thrones, there will be no thrones for them to sit on. We are not sanguine.

AN INSATIATE MONSTER.—A story is told of a chap in North Carolina, who went the entire figure in the way of courting all the girls who would have him, without asking for any of them to die off, as the law directs. After having married his thirteenth, some of his first loves came down upon him, and had him lodged in jail. But a person so fond of liberty, and who could get into Hymen's noose with such ease, found little difficulty in getting out of the "jug"; and the next news of him, he was running at large, with a heavy reward offered for his apprehension. He was shortly recognized by a gentleman, who, anxious to get the reward, invited him to his house, desired him to sit down—called his wife to chat with him, as an inducement to detain him there—while he made some excuse for leaving him a few moments, and started for a constable to arrest the runaway. What was the poor man's astonishment, on returning with the constable, to find the gay Lothario—taking the advantage of his short absence—had absconded with his wife. This made the fellow's stock of wives on hand fourteen.

UNITED STATES CONVICTS.—The Secretary of the Interior laid before the last session of the House of Representatives, an interesting statement of the amount paid to State Prisons, for the maintenance of the United States convicts. We learn from it, that the sum of fifty cents per month is allowed for rent of prison for each prisoner, in all the States and Territories. The per diem, weekly, monthly, or annual allowance for board is extremely irregular, hardly any two districts charging the same rates. There is but one State which has prescribed the amount that the United States shall pay for keeping its convicts. In Maryland it is fixed by law at 30 cents per day for all expenses.

The following statement will show the amount per day charged for board by certain States:

Alabama.....	$1.30	Kentucky.....	$0.37 1/2
Arkansas.....	50	Kansas.....	50
North Carolina..	35	Louisiana.....	35
South Carolina..	30	Missouri.....	40
Delaware.....	35	Minnesota.....	40
Florida.....	40	Nebraska.....	50
Georgia.....	20	Ohio.....	37 1/2
Illinois.....	35	Texas.....	50
Indiana.....	37 1/2	Tennessee.....	37 1/2
Iowa.....	50	Utah.....	100

The amount charged for board in the State of California is $2.50 per day.

In the Northern District of New York the amount charged for all expenses per year, is $60, and in the Southern District, 25 per day, and in the Eastern District $2.50 per week.

A Model Newspaper.

Somebody has said, "If a man drink beer, he will think beer." We are unacquainted with the extent to which the normal character of the human mind may be changed by the kind and quality of its food; but there are phenomena enough around us to predicate a woful distortion of its powers, if it continues to swallow the food with which it is most liberally supplied. A large, well printed paper in Western New York comes to us within the week, with the following bill of fare. The headings are copied in their order, beginning on the first page. We have omitted some telegraphic reports and advertisements, which occupy a part of the fourth page:

The end of the world.
Fiendish attempt to set fire to a steamboat.
Water-spout and destruction of life.
Meteor.
A living insect cut out of a man's body.
Gold discovery in Indiana.
Kidnapping.
Ox killed by a railroad.
Infant with a cat's head.
$2,500 saved in cigar money. Large sale of wool.
Railroad employees paid up.
A dark deed of crime—jealousy and probable murder.
A fight between Saints and Pike Peakers.
Case of hydrophobia.
A tale of horror in Utah.
A villain throwing cars from a railway track.
The St. Louis tragedy—Mr. Charles murdered.
Man nearly killed by a mad bull.
Extensive Post Office frauds.
Two men shot at Chattanooga.
Further particulars of the Fanny Halsey mystery.
Train of cars thrown off—Chicago excursionists in danger.
The year of locusts—extensive ravages.
The battle of Montebello.
Atrocities of the Austrians.
First battle of Montebello.
Another battle—five days later.
Singular suicide.
15,000 pounds salmon.
Execution of Dr. King.
Three men hung in Hamilton.
Bogus coin.
Eight whites killed by Indians.
Export of cotton—the price of wool.
Particulars of the St. Louis assassination.
The wife poisoning case in New Jersey.
Lynch law in Pike county.
A frog in the stomach three years.
Warning to serenaders.
Horrors of the Smoky Hill route. Emigrants eating each other.
From the frozen regions.
Sudden death in a public school.
Another anti-rent excitement.
A progressive clergyman.
Mr. Buchanan receiving his degree of L. D.

Suicide of a Pike's Peaker.
Ginseng excitement in Minnesota.
Ohio Republican platform.
Drawing on the President—trouble.
State College farm and building.
White labor on tobacco.
Population of North America.
Growth of animals.
More battles in Italy—fight between American and British sailors.
Kossuth on the war.
Revival of the slave trade.
Rights of naturalized citizens.
Mormons preparing to fight.
Frost—Injury to crops.
Tragedy at Oramel.
Attack of rowdies on the Sunday School.
Candidate for Governor.
The Italian Chief.
Great flood at St. Paul.
Acquisition of Cuba.
Effects of the battle of Montebello.
One thousand dogs killed by cholera.
Trout fishing.
Return of Santa Anna to Mexico.
German sympathy for Austria.
Shooting case in Saratoga County.
Whirlwind and water-spout.
Distressing occurrence.
Elopement with another man's wife.
An insane girl wandered away.
Incendiary attempt on Rock Island Bridge.
Execution of a wife-murderer.
More murders in Oswego county.
A river's tale.
Romance of the Lost Island calamity.

We commend the above to the Napoleon of journalists and his corps of gunmakers, lecturers and poets. There is basis enough for a serial of the most fascinating and thrilling character. The incidents are remarkable fitted for dovetailing with grand effect. For example, "the water spout" could come along just in time to extinguish the fire on the steamboat, and the meteor might crush the villain who attempted to throw the Chicago trains off the track. What could be more opportune than to bring up the fifteen thousand pounds of salmon when the gold seekers on the Smoky Hill route were casting lots for whom should be roasted and eaten by his companions?—The sudden death in the public school might naturally result from carrying a frog in the stomach three years—to go in as a tadpole, and hop out full-grown on the post mortem. The moral instruction to be drawn from the various incidents related would be an excellent subject for the great Laudator.

[Century.

Punch.

The Whole Duty of Neutrality.—"I never says nuffen to nobody, and when I says a thing I always does it."

A Little Lesson for the Pope.—"You must do at Rome precisely as Rome does, and as Rome cannot move you must not think of moving. You must stop where you are."

The Heat in Paris.—A lady writes from Paris to say that the heat during the last week has been so intense that it is impossible to keep a secret for more than half an hour.

Roman Letters.—So anxious is Pio Nono to get out of Rome, if he can, that the Prince of Wales said that "the true meaning of Papacy, if carried out to the letter, would be found to be 'P. P. C.'"

How Feelings of the Princes do run away with Them.—"I believe that Prince Napoleon commands the right wing of the French army?" said one old veteran to another. "More likely the one that's left," was the reply of one who had known the Prince in the Crimea.

In the course of a sermon preached by Mr. C. Spurgeon, at Trinity Chapel, Brixton, the reverend divine remarked that "pulpits must have been first erected by Satan, for it never could be intended that a minister was to be stuck up a pair of stairs in a square box to preach; it would destroy the eloquence of the most distinguished advocate at the bar to stick him up by himself, and so did it with ministers. He preferred preaching with his congregation mingled around him."

M. Belly gets along very slow with his Nicaragua transit canal. The poet Lowell says that Jonah was the only man the world has ever produced who successfully made the Belly transit route.—Syracuse Journal.

Jonah didn't make it much more than half way. After getting thus far, he stopped for three days and nights, and then had to go back the way he had entered.—Louisville Journal.

THE WEAVERVILLE WALKER.—A telegram from Weaverville, dated 20th June, thus gives the sequel of the match against time:

The old man Griffith, who was performing the astounding feat of walking one hundred consecutive hours, finished his task about 1 o'clock p.m. to-day, walking some minutes after the time was up. He then walked across the street and was bathed, and placed in a carriage and driven home. He appears but little exhausted, and suffers but little—his ankles being somewhat swollen. He spoke but little during the whole time—refusing to converse with any one. The most astounding part of the thing is the fact that he has been confined to the house all winter, and only a few weeks since made his appearance out of doors. There is no doubt that he actually performed the feat, which, considering the circumstances, is unparalleled. Considerable sums changed hands on the result.

IT HAS COME.—The Pike's Peak gold is here. We have seen it, have handled it, and know it to be the genuine stuff. The samples exhibited to us yesterday represented three varieties—the thin gold as first discovered, and the gold from Gregory's Diggings. The quantity amounts to over $400, and the gold itself was to be forwarded, yesterday, to the Assay Office at New York, for the purpose of determining its exact value. Elsewhere we publish several letters from the Pike's Peak country, giving most encouraging accounts of the gold prospects. A letter from our own correspondent confirms the glowing accounts furnished by our Leavenworth cotemporary.—Mo. Repub.

Mons. Blondin positively walked across the Niagara river recently, on a tight rope, near the Suspension Bridge. An immense crowd gaped at him. He crossed twice, we are informed, and was accompanied by the "Maid of the Mist" steamer. The writer of the telegraphic dispatch hardly intends to be understood that the steamboat crossed on a tight rope also. Mons. Blondin, the newspaper say, proposes to take exercise during the summer by walking that rope. He will take a trip forward and back, for the purpose of acquiring an appetite.

WASHINGTON, June 27, 1859.

The board contemplated by the former orders of the War Department, is meant to be convened for the examination of non-commissioned officers recommended for promotion, and will be composed of the Instructor of Tactics, the Professor of Mathematics, and the Professor of Ethics, at the Military academy, and will meet at West Point the first Monday in September.

Annually enlisted men serving with the troops will not hereafter be allowed a commutation of rations.

Fashion course, Monday, June 27, match $2,000, three mile heats:
J. Bevin named br h Bill Cheatham - 1 1
O. P. Hare named br h Tar River - 2 2
Time 5:42—5:03.

Union Course, L. I.—Monday, June 27.—Purse and stake $800, two mile heats, in harness:
D. Tallman named br h George N. Patchen..... 1 1
H. Woodruff named br h Lady Woodruff..... 2 2
D. Pifer named br h Brown Dick..... 3 3
Time 5:01—5:31.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Aug. 2, 1859.

Indian troubles on the California Road.

There is a report that an emigrant party has been attacked somewhere near the Goose Creek mountains, on the California road, by Indians and some five or more men and two women killed. Full particulars have not been received, nor does it seem to be known what tribe of Indians were the actors, or whether or no any provocation was given by the whites for the attack. Some Indians had brought mules, oxen, and other articles, unusual for Indians to have, to Rox Elder, to trade to the towns people, which led to enquiries, and information was obtained tending to establish the fact of the massacre. A daguerreotype case containing four likenesses was obtained from an Indian and sent down here with the express. It is said to be that of a family named Smith, who passed through here some time since.

Goose Creek is immediately on the route proposed to be followed by Maj. Wallen, U. S. A., and we should think that he could not be far off from that point now. The Flatheads are said to have been engaged, but we rather think it must be the Banacks who live around that vicinity.

The Indians on the Southern route are reported to be inclined to give trouble, having threatened an attack on the Shell Creek mail station.

We are favored with the letter sent to Dr. Forney, who, although just ready to start for the western part of the Territory, will go immediately north, in order to obtain certain information.

These facts having been laid before Gov. Cumming, he has made a requisition on Gen. Johnston for a small force to be sent onto the road in that vicinity to arrest the murderers, if possible, and for the protection of others on the road.

General Election.

The election in the city, on Wednesday, was a very quiet affair—a stranger, accustomed to elections in the States, would not have supposed that an election was going. As there was no opposition ticket here, the votes were all cast for the opposition ticket.

There was about twelve hundred votes polled in the city, which, as we understand, does not come up to the usual number.

Outside of the city we have no authentic returns.

There was an opposition ticket at Fairfield pursuant to the nomination of a convention held there on the 23d of July; the proceedings of which convention we publish in another column.

Had this nomination been made at an earlier date, Dr. Hurt would doubtless have received a vote that would have been far from being discreditable to him under the circumstances; but no one ever expected that a Gentile could have been elected to Congress from Utah.

We are informed that on being first nominated by acclamation for Congress, Dr. Hurt tendered his thanks to the Convention for their confidence and esteem, and declined the nomination; but after further deliberation, Dr. Hurt was again unanimously declared the choice of the Convention for Congress.

The tide of emigration California-ward continues unabated—mostly composed of discomfited Pike's Peakers. Upon arriving here, and hearing the late encouraging intelligence from the newly-discovered gold regions of the Rocky Mountains, they appear in a dilemma similar to the drunken man holding on to a lamp-post, who dared not relinquish his hold through fear of the disastrous consequences of a fall, and yet was in a critical situation in holding on. They waver between turning back and going ahead.

PIONEER CIRCUS.—This interesting institution operates to-night in a benefit to the town, Mr. Quigley. True it is, that this establishment cannot peer, in most points, with eastern circuses, yet there are some features in it extremely edifying, and worthy of a passing note. The horse "Young America," for instance, would command admiration in any part of the world. A night spent in witnessing the varied performances affords a refreshing relief from the monotony of a tedious trip across the plains, and will be found productive of interest to all. We hope Mr. Q. will receive that consideration which he merits; and if he does, himself and friends will both be satisfied.

Other members of the company are equally deserving, and will probably receive attention soon.

We learn that Quarter Master Crossman will dispose of the wagons and harness at Camp Floyd, at private sale, in quantities to suit purchasers. The best Philadelphia wagons at twenty dollars, and harness for six mules, complete, at thirty dollars.

We insert such proceedings of the U. S. District Court, now in session, as we deem of interest. We have not been able to obtain a copy of the Judge's charge to the grand jury in time for the present issue.

MURDER.—We hear a report that a Mexican was murdered and robbed on the emigrant road somewhere near the Weber station.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT COURT.

Thursday, June 23, 11 a. m.
Court met pursuant to adjournment, in the Council House, Hon. Charles E. Sinclair presiding.

The panel for grand jury having been complete, the Court appointed Wm. Bell foreman, after which he was sworn, and then the rest were called and sworn by fours.

Judge Sinclair then delivered his charge to the grand jury.

Two applicants for naturalization were admitted as citizens of the United States. Court then adjourned.

Saturday, July 30, 10 a. m.
Court met pursuant to adjournment.

District Attorney Wilson presented a motion asking the court to issue a writ of habeas corpus, to take Deloss Gibson from the custody of the Probate Court.

The Court granted the writ, and made it returnable on Tuesday next, at 10 o'clock.

Court took a recess to await the action of the grand jury.

Court resumed its session, and the grand jury came into court and presented two bills of indictment.

During the day, nine persons were made citizens of the United States, and took out their final papers of citizenship.

Tuesday, Aug. 2, 11 a. m.
The record of Saturday was read and signed by the judge.

Mr. Wilson called up the case of Thomas Colbourn, a colored man, against whom the grand jury found a true bill on Saturday last, for the murder of Captain Hooper's negro, Shep.

The court declared the recognizance of Colbourn forfeited on account of his absence on Saturday when called.

Mr. Wilson then called up the habeas corpus case, named in the report of Saturday, and the court ordered the prisoner Gibson turned over to the custody of the marshal.

Mr. Wilson expressed himself ready, if necessary, to argue the question of the jurisdiction of the Probate Court.

Mr. Ferguson said, he had been kindly notified by Mr. Wilson that a writ of habeas corpus had been issued for the prisoner, for whom himself and Mr. Mills were counsel. When the prisoner was first committed, no time had been appointed for holding a term of the U. S. court for this district. The prisoner wished and was entitled to a speedy trial. Fully believing in the right of the Probate Court to try the case, at the request of the prisoner he petitioned for a trial before the Probate Judge of this county. He was at that time prepared to vindicate the jurisdiction of that court. His client, however, had been arraigned, tried and convicted before that court, of murder in the first degree. Hence while he would make no concessions on the questions at issue, he could not consistently defend the jurisdiction of the court before whom his client had been condemned. He would be glad, however, if the question could be calmly argued at some future time, and the arguments and decision of the court fully laid before the public.

Samuel Snider and Thomas J. Wheeler gave good and sufficient reasons for their non-attendance on the grand jury and were excused.

Court took a recess till 3 o'clock.

4 15 p. m.
Court resumed its session.

Thomas Colbourn was arraigned and clerk read the indictment in his hearing.

The names of the jurymen returned on the venire were called, and the usual questions put to them by the court, and only four good and lawful men were impanelled from the whole number.

Mr. Blair, counsel for the defense, filed a motion to quash the array of the petit jury.

Court ordered the marshal to summon talliesmen sufficient to complete the panel.

John Balser was admitted a citizen of the United States.

Court adjourned till to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

MASS CONVENTION.

At a Mass Convention of the Gentiles of Cedar County, held at Fairfield, near Camp Floyd, U. T., on Saturday, July 23d, 1859. Dr. Garland Hurt moved (seconded by Mr. S. P. Jones) that Hon. Andrew Humphreys, of Indiana, be appointed President. It was carried unanimously. On taking the Chair he said:

Friends and fellow citizens of Utah Territory, it would be an act of ingratitude on my part to remain silent on the present occasion, without returning to each and every one of you my sincere and heart-felt acknowledgements for the honor you have conferred upon me—that of unanimously selecting me to preside over the deliberations of your Convention; and the more so, because it is the first Convention that has ever assembled in this Territory, that was willing that "law and order" should prevail. It will be expected of me that I should state the objects of the meeting, but my recent arrival in the Territory prevents me from sufficiently understanding what your objects are, I therefore content myself by presiding over the Convention to the best of my ability.

On motion of Mr. Kirk, Mr. G. H. Crossman, Junior, and Mr. John E. Risley, were appointed to act as Secretaries.

Dr. Hurt (seconded by Mr. S. P. Jones) moved that a committee of eight be appointed to draft an address and resolutions.

The Committee consisted of Dr. Garland Hurt, W. H. Lent, John Bigler, W. D. Kirk, C. L. Craig, S. P. Jones, M. W. Hanley and J. E. Risley.

The following is a copy of the address and resolutions drawn up by this committee.

ADDRESS.

As citizens of the United States, devoted to our form of government, and the social organization of its people, it becomes us, when in mass convention assembled, to declare to our fellow citizens the causes which induce us to dissent from opinions, and condemn practices hostile to the letter and spirit of our constitution, and subversive of our rights as freemen.

We declare our hearty approval of that religious liberty which entitles every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience; and we most solemnly declare, that we have not, and will not, interfere with that right in any religious sect, whether Jewish, Pagan, Mormon or Christian; but with the simple exercise of that right, Brigham Young and his followers have not been, and will not be, content. They have practiced intolerance and persecutions hitherto unknown in our country, and unequal elsewhere in the nineteenth century. A fundamental principle in their organization is an union of church and state; they acknowledge an ecclesiastical head whom they profess to believe—a viceroy of divinity, whose will is higher than all law, even human conscience itself, and whose command is a sufficient justification for crimes of every grade. Nor are they content to support their obnoxious system by voluntary contributions from its adherents, but have heretofore, and yet do, levy taxes upon us, and compel an unwilling people to pay tribute to support an organization that they despise.

By legislative enactments, they have granted to church officials the exclusive privilege of establishing ferries and bridges over the principal rivers, and a large percentage of the enormous tolls exacted from emigrants, goes to their emigration fund.

They confiscate to the same use stray property found within the Territory. They escheat the property of deceased persons to the use of the church. They have assumed the right to dispose of the timber, and grass, the water and its privileges, for the exclusive support of church dignitaries.

They have granted large and valuable tracts of public lands to church officials to the exclusion of all others.

They have created a corporation by chartering their church, investing it with powers destructive of the best interests, and dangerous to the liberties of its inhabitants. Three-fourths of their population are aliens, who know nothing of our institutions, and care nothing for them; they emigrated to our country, not to enjoy the freedom it affords, but merely because it was the home and centre of Mormonism; many of them boast that they are not, and never intend to be, American citizens.

They have imprisoned American citizens, for no other cause than that of refusing to attach themselves to their revolting institutions.

In their attempts to establish a theocracy founded on the divine right of their priests to govern, they were led in 1857, to declare war against the United States, after having killed some, and imprisoned others, of our fellow citizens; stolen the property of the United States, as well as of private individuals; they accepted the pardon of the President, without making restitution, or in any way accounting for the property stolen, and without surrendering, or attempting to surrender, their hostilities to the Government of the United States.

We declare our full conviction, from all we have witnessed, that the Mormon people are no more loyal to the constitution of the United States to-day, than when they declared their independence of that government, defied its powers, levied a military chest, organized their army, and fortified Echo Canyon.

They have murdered, and then robbed whole trains of emigrants, not sparing defenceless women and children, whose cries for mercy, found no "ear to hear, no heart to feel, and no arm to bring deliverance."

They have debauched, and then murdered, helpless women.

They have taken the lives of American citizens by order of their priesthood.

They have made eunuchs under church authority, and they still claim the right to continue the diabolical practice.

They have incited the merciless savages to rob and murder unprotected people.

They have prevented the execution of the law by conferring criminal jurisdiction upon courts of their own creation, in violation of the organic act.

They have disfranchised American citizens from serving on juries.

They have refused to provide jails, or other means, for the safe keeping of prisoners.

They have steadily refused to provide money, to enable the federal courts to try and punish offenders.

They have in nearly every instance, prevented the arrest of criminals, and when a few were arrested, their officers have permitted them to escape.

They have inspired witnesses and jurors with fear, by threats of terrible meaning. Witnesses have not dared to testify in courts of justice, unless they could be protected by the army, and when that protection was afforded them, the Mormons, fearful that the truth would be made known, and their leaders punished, have falsely pretended that they were afraid of the soldiers, and that they were persecuted on account of their religion.

They practice incest and polygamy in its most horrid forms, setting at defiance all the laws of consanguinity—instances being known of men high in their confidence having pretendedly married the mother and her daughters, and cohabited with them at the same time—where they have thus married their half sisters, and nieces, and to justify this outrageous practice, they denounce as prostitutes the women of the States among whom are our mothers, our sisters, our daughters, and our friends.

They have stolen large quantities of public property since their pretended treaty of peace with the United States.

They have made no restitution, nor in any way whatever accounted for the vast amount of property they have stolen or destroyed, and for none of the crimes we have enumerated have the perpetrators been brought to punishment, nor has the public accuser (appointed by the Federal government) taken any of the necessary steps to do so.

The United States Marshal for the Territory has used every means within his power to make arrests, where prosecutions have been set on foot by individuals, but the means placed at his disposal are found wholly inadequate.

We cannot too highly commend the exertions of the Federal Judges in their attempts to do their duty in executing the law, nor the action of Gen. A. S. Johnston in affording protection to the civil authorities generally, but especially to the court held at Provo, nor can we too deeply regret the action which the President has felt it his duty to take, in depriving the courts of similar assistance in future, thereby extinguishing all hope of maintaining the supremacy of the law; for if the law ever was, it certainly is not now "King" in Utah. These are some of the wrongs which we as American citizens have a right to complain. In doing so we have been compelled by the limits of such a proceeding, to deal in general rather than detailed statements; but for the truth of our assertions we stand pledged to the civilized world.

RESOLUTIONS.
Resolved 1st. That we hold the Mormon people responsible for the blood of American citizens, so wantonly shed upon American soil, so long as the real perpetrators, aiders, and abettors, are protected by them from the just penalties of the law.

Resolved 2nd. That Polygamy is an abomination in the sight of God—a violation of the laws of nature tending to degenerate and sexualize our race—a crime punishable by law in every state in the Union, and should not be tolerated in the territories.

Resolved 3d. That a union of Church and State, and especially one making the latter subservient to the former, is incompatible with our Republican institutions, and any attempt to establish such an union being subversive of our rights, we will resist the same by all means in our power.

Resolved 4th. That in our opinion Congress has the power to secure to us a Republican form of Government and we hereby call on that honorable body to exercise that power.

Resolved 5th. That the Gentile population of this Territory be requested to aid in an organized effort to maintain our rights in Utah.

Resolved 6th. That we deplore to necessity that existed for the severance of Kirk Anderson Esq., from the "Valley Tan" newspaper. That we appreciate his efforts in our behalf, and that our regards will ever follow him.

Resolved 7th. That we heartily endorse the sentiments expressed by the Hon. James S. Green, of Mo., in a recent speech delivered by him at Jefferson City, relative to Utah affairs.

On the motion of Mr. C. L. Craig, the convention then proceeded to nominate candidates for the various offices; when, after a spirited contest the following persons were declared duly nominated.

For Delegate to Congress,
DR. GARLAND HURT.

For Council—Mr. Wm. H. LENT.

" " " JOHN BIGLER.

" Representatives—SAMUEL C. MILLS.

" " C. W. CROCKER.

" " J. M. WALLACE.

" Sheriff—O. P. THOMAS.

Upon motion of Geo. H. Crossman, Esq.,

Resolved, That we will support the nominees of this Convention.

Resolved, That the editors of newspapers throughout the Union, friendly to our cause, be requested to publish the proceedings of this Convention.

Resolved, That our thanks are due to Hon. A. Humphreys, for the able and impartial manner in which he has presided over our deliberations.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this Convention be signed by the President and Secretaries.

A. HUMPHREYS, Pres't.
Geo. H. Crossman, Secretary.
JOHN E. RISLEY, Secretary.

FURTHER PROCEEDINGS AS REPORTED BY OUR CORRESPONDENT.
Dr. Hurt moved that a clause in the address be struck out as reflecting on the President.

Mr. Thomas moved that it be passed as is the original address.

Mr. Risley stated that he did not understand it as reflecting in any way on the President.

Mr. S. P. Jones.—If the facts were stated he for one would vote for its retention whether it reflected on the President or not.

Chief Justice Eckels.—I cannot see in what manner this paragraph reflects on the President.

Judge Cradlebaugh.—I do not believe that a reflection is intended to be cast on the President, but so far as that clause is concerned, I know its truth and give it my support.

On the 7th resolution being put to the meeting, Dr. Hurt said, although fully endorsing the opinions as expressed by Senator Green in the speech referred to, objected to the motion unless some gentleman would state to the meeting the sentiments contained in it.

It would be better if they were made acquainted with what they were voting for; for in the event of its being lost it would appear as if the convention did not endorse it.

Mr. Osborn here handed a synopsis of the speech in the "Valley Tan," which was read by Mr. Risley.

The address and resolutions were then adopted with acclamation.

DR. FORNEY SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.
Dear Sir:

Agreeable to your request, that I should inform you whenever any movement of the Indians took place of any importance in this part of your superintendency I wish to say to you, that some Indians came yesterday from the North with reports that some whites had been murdered some 200 miles North of this, on the California road. The reports were so vague and contradictory, that at first I did not consider them worthy of credence; but having afterwards learned that some Indians had in their possession some horses, mules, oxen, and other property unusual for them to traffic in, trying to trade the same to citizens in the suburbs of the city, I thought best to institute an inquiry in reference to the matter. I fear the report is too true, though there is much contradiction in regard to the circumstances and extent of the murder. One report is, that two Indians entered a camp of emigrants to do some trading, and were killed by said emigrants. The Indians then gathered their forces, and revenged their deaths by killing five men and two women, belonging to said camp. Other reports make the number of the whites killed more, and state other causes for the massacre. I send this by Mr. Nichols, Bishop of this settlement, who will give you further particulars.

I also send by him a daguerreotype which has been obtained from the Indians by one of our citizens, and given to me to send down to you. It is stated by the Indians to belong to some of the murdered party.

Yours with much respect,
SAMUEL SMITH.
Brigham City, Box Elder County, August 1, 1859.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
July 30, 1859.

On Saturday, July 23, the performances at the theater commenced with the "Idiot Witness," with the following cast: Gilbert, Mr. Crawford; Le Sieur Arnaud, Mr. T. Lee; Robert, Mr. Thorne; Paul Fugascall, Mr. James Shaw; Hans Gerthold, Mr. W. Warren; Earl of Sussex, Mr. O. L. Baldwin; Walter Arlington, Mr. Tucker; Dame Fugascall, Mrs. Kelting; Janette, Mrs. Whitlock.

Mr. Crawford enacted his part with great propriety. Mr. Lee played Le Sieur Arnaud with force and judgment. Robert Arnaud was very nicely performed by Mr. Thorne. Paul Fugascall brought out Mr. Shaw in a different line of character from what he usually takes, and by the style of its performance, which was very good, he gave another instance of his versatility of talent.

Mr. Warren played Hans Gerthold well, but we thought the part inappropriately dressed for a hired assassin. Mr. Baldwin in the little part of the Earl of Sussex was good. Mrs. Tuckett looked and acted the part of the page to perfection. Mrs. Kelting as Dame Fugascall, was sufficiently lively and bustling, and Mrs. Whitlock played Janette with good taste.

Mr. Jones next sang two songs, and the performances concluded with the very laughable farce of "Born to Good Luck." It was very well played, and gave great satisfaction. The theater is now being partially pulled down; the heavy rains had so much damaged the walls that it was found to be necessary.

"DRAMA."

What They Say in the States.

We extract the following from one of our exchanges, which we are inclined to believe will not be acquiesced in by some of our Mormon citizens:

THE MORMONS OF UTAH.—Three quarters of the Mormon inhabitants of Utah are subjects of Great Britain. The fact is, that Utah, nominally a Territory of the United States, is, in reality, much more an English colony. Worse than that: It is an English colony within the demesne of the United States, having not the slightest fraternal feeling with the States—the majority of the Mormons not being citizens of the United States, and without any desire to become citizens. The Mormon emigrants come to Utah, not to the United States. If Utah were in Timbuctoo, they would go where Utah was, in the belief that there, for the present, the gates of the Mormon Paradise are opened unto them.

The Mormons are increasing with considerable rapidity. On the eleventh May, seven hundred and twenty-five landed at New York, in one batch, from Europe. A collision of these people with the United States Government, which they hate, is only a matter of time.

Destruction of a Santa Fe Train.

We learn, just as we go to press, that the train of Nestor Armijo, was destroyed by the storm of Sunday night, on the prairies; damage is estimated at $17,000. The train was loaded principally with dry goods. We have been unable to learn full particulars.

Major Ben McCulloch, late United States Marshal of Texas, is a prodigy. He not only resigned his office, but upon settling his accounts, the Government found due him $18,06 more than he claimed. During the seven years he was in office he disbursed $180,00 for the government, and collected under executions and judgments about a half a million more.

HISTORY OF JACK FROST.—The Ravena Democrat says:

On the night of the 4th June, 1817, a frost occurred which destroyed the fruit and seriously damaged every description of growing crops.

On the 16th May, 1832, there was a similar frost, which destroyed the fruit, cut down the wheat crop, &c. In that year, the wheat growers of Stark county mowed their wheat fields, and cured the straw for fodder—after which the wheat started up again and produced a fair crop.

On the 28th of May, 1845, there was a heavy frost in this region, which made a similar havoc with crops and fruits, since which there has been nothing like it till now.

It would seem from the above record that frost blight occurs at regular intervals—on an average, once in fifteen years.

THE MINES!

RICH DEVELOPMENTS!

Since our last issue, we have again spent several days in the Gregory diggings and vicinity.

About one hundred sluices are now in operation, and their product may safely be set down at two hundred dollars per day to the sluice—several of them are making much more; one we know washed in one day $510,00, and on Saturday last, Messrs. Leper, Gridly & Co. obtained $1009 from three sluices.

In this connection, we publish the following report, furnished us for that purpose. It shows the operations of a single sluice for a series of days, and may be set down as a fair average:

Gregory's Diggings, June 11th.
We put in one small sluice on the 18th of May, and commenced work on
May 18th, made $66,00
20th do 80,00
23 do 95,00
24 do 305,00
25 do 257,00
26 do 281,00
27 do 203,00
28 do 193,00

To-day we sold our claim for $7,000, and were out of business until June 8th, when we started one sluice and made

June 8th $31,00
" 9th 205,00
" 10th 151,00
" 11th 213,00

The above is the total of our operations in the mines to this date.

Respectfully,
W. DEFREES & CO.,
of South Bend, Ind.

[Omaha Nebraskanian.]

We would recommend the perusal of the following sensible remarks to those who have any idea of going to "Pike's Peak."

The Gold Mines.

We continue to receive news, through different channels and of quite contradictory import, from the South Platte gold mines. Horace Greeley's report, about which there has been so much said, has been published in his own paper, and may therefore be considered as having received the seal of genuineness. Elsewhere in to-day's paper will be found a private letter from the editor of the Tribune to a friend in New York, which was published in his own paper of the 27th inst. The letter bears date of June 10th, which is subsequent to the discoveries certified to by Mr. G., but does not contain anything that is likely to set the world on fire. Indeed it is very moderate in tone.

The facts, then, as we have been able to gather them, and we have seen everything that has emanated from that quarter, may be thus briefly summed up:

First, There is gold existing over a wide region of country, which will pay almost anywhere from two to five dollars per day, if faithfully worked. And by faithful work we don't mean desultory exertions, but faithful, patient labor from morning till night, such as was necessary to accomplish anything in California.

Secondly, There have been rich, marvelously rich, diggings discovered by a few, but those rich placers have been found by but a small number, and are of course liable to be exhausted at any time.

Thirdly, That the number of persons actually in the mines is much smaller than is generally believed, and the product of their labors has gone, chiefly into New Mexico from whence they have, in a great measure, drawn their supplies.

Fourthly, That the total failure of the large number who have returned from the mines and made adverse reports is referable chiefly to the want of proper and continued exertion, and to a want of such appliances as are absolutely necessary to success.

Fifthly, That no one should think of emigrating to the new gold fields without an ample supply of provisions for several months support, and all the implements of mining which experience has suggested.

Sixthly, That the mines are not likely to ever rival California, either in extent or richness, and he that bases hopes upon such calculation will be very likely to meet with sore disappointment.

Our advice, then, to all, wait till the country shall be farther developed. If the gold shall prove to be as plenty as it is now hoped it may, next spring will be time enough, and if it be not there in such quantities as to justify mining the fact will be fully established by that time.—St. Joseph Gazette, July 2d.

Crossing At LOUP FORK.—Mr. James C. Mitchell, Secretary of the Columbus Ferry Company across Loup Fork, informs us that up to June 25th, one thousand eight hundred and seven wagons, twenty hand carts, five thousand four hundred and one men, four hundred and twenty four women, four hundred and eighty children, 1,810 horses, 406 mules, 6,010 oxen and 6,000 sheep, had crossed this ferry at that point. This statement includes no portion of the Mormon emigration, but embraces merely California, Oregon and Pike's Peak emigrants and their stock all going westward. The returning emigration crossed at Shinn's Ferry, some fifteen miles below the confluence of the Loup Fork with the Platte. Many of the outward bound emigrants also crossed at the same point, so that it is probable that not less than four thousand wagons have passed over the military road westward from this city, since the 20th of March. It is more than probable that another year the number passing up the Platte Valley will be ten times as great.

We would say, in this connection, that the Loup Fork Ferry at Columbus, is the best flat boat ferry in the west, and that the shortest route to California, Salt Lake, Fort Kearney and the Cherry Creek mines, is via Columbus.—Omaha Nebraskanian.

Market Reports.

Below we give the current prices of provisions, groceries, &c., at retail in Auraria and Denver market, though these rates are subject to material fluctuations from week to week, owing to increased demand or supply:

Flour, states,	$14@16	100 lbs.
Flour, Mexican,	10@15	"
Corn meal,	12	"
Bacon, sides & hams,	35 cts.	10 lb.
Sugar,	20 @ 25	"
Coffee,	25	"
Saleratus,	35	"
Salt,	15	"
Beans,	15	"
Onions,	25	"
Potatoes,	25	"
Rice,	25	"
Butter,	75	"
Cheese,	60	"
Lard,	25	"
Crackers,	15	"
Bread,	12@15	"
Fresh beef,	$1 1/4	quarter.
Veal,	10 cts.	10 lb.
Milk,	$2.50	100 gal.
Molasses,	3.00	"
Whisky,
Lumber $100	$1,000	feet.
Nails $25	$100	lbs.
Glass $16	$100	box.

The Warsaw Democrat of the 22d inst. comes to us with the following statement, furnished by Mrs. Walters, a resident of Benton county, in this State, who is spoken of as a widow lady of the highest respectability:

In the spring of 1852, I found the enclosed piece of gold, which has been tested by Mr. James Preston Beck, or which he says was tested in Warsaw, by the citizens of that place, and proved to be gold. I also found at the same place, and at the same time, two other pieces of the same material. In the year 1856, near the same place, I found five more pieces, on an average all nearly as large as the piece given by me to Mr. Beck to be tested. During last week, I visited the same place, and took therefrom a bunch of the same metal, which was tested by the citizens of Warsaw, or which Mr. Beck says was tested and pronounced gold. The said bunch of gold, when tied up in a piece of cloth or calico, was as large as a small spool of sewing thread usually sold by merchants. I believe that I can collect from the same spot as much of it as can lay on the bowl of a tea-spoon, in a short time, from the surface without digging for it. I will show the spot within fifteen days where the said gold was found by me, and where I believe more can be found, and sooner if I receive returns from my brother in Louisiana, before the expiration of that time. I have sent specimens of the gold to my brother in Louisiana, and wish to hear from him before I disclose the spot. Drawn up by my wish and dictation, this 21st day of June, 1859, county of Benton, and State of Missouri.

ANN WALTERS.
Attest: James P. Beck, Milly A. Heath,
Margaret R. Land.

The specimen referred to is on exhibition at the Democrat office. Where now is Pike's Peak?

Political Intelligence.

MATERIAL FOR THE NEXT PRESIDENT.—The following named gentlemen are at the present time the most prominent among the hundreds who are willing to serve their country for four years, commencing on the 4th of March, 1861, in the White House in Washington:

DEMOCRATS.
Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois; Henry A. Wise, of Virginia; R. M. T. Hunter, Virginia; Daniel S. Dickinson, New York; Horatio Seymour, New York; James Guthrie, Kentucky; Albert Gallatin Brown, Mississippi; Jefferson Davis, Mississippi; Howell Cobb, Georgia; John S. Reid, Louisiana; Joseph Lane, Oregon; John C. Breckinridge, Kentucky.

REPUBLICANS.
William H. Seward, New York; Nathaniel P. Banks, Massachusetts; Salmon P. Chase, Ohio; Simon Cameron, Pennsylvania; John C. Fremont, California; John McLean, Ohio.

KNOW-NOTHINGS.
John J. Crittendon, Kentucky; John Minor Botts, Virginia; John Bell Tennessee.

OLD LINE WHIGS.
Edward Bates, Missouri; Edward Everett, Mass.

SOUTHERN PRO-SLAVERY OPPOSITION.
Wm. L. Goggin, Va.

SUMMARY.
Democrats 12
Republicans 6
Know Nothings 3
Old Line Whigs 2
Opposition 1
Total number of aspirants 24

The Emperor of Austria issued on the 8th ult. the following order of the day:

The army recollecting its ancient reputation, showed in the battle fought at Magenta against a superior force what heroism and devotion for me and for the country are capable of.

I thank the army in my own name, and in the name of the country, and have given orders that the names of those who were the bravest among the brave shall be made known to me. FRANCIS JOSEPH I.

A NEW TRIAL GRANTED.—In the Court of Common Pleas a new trial has been granted in the breach of marriage promise case of Carstang vs. Shaw.

As much interest has been recently excited by the discussions which have arisen, both in this country and Europe, on the politico-economical relations of the increased supply of gold, we have thought that the statistics showing the gross product of that precious metal from domestic sources in the United States might prove instructive to the intelligent reader. According to the annual report of the Director of the Mint at Philadelphia it appears that, from the commencement of its operations to the 30th of June last, the gross product has reached the sum of $443,127,921, of which, as the following table shows, more than ninety-five hundredths have been drawn from the mines of California:

California	$424,464,240
Georgia gold mines	6,708,910
North Carolina gold mines	8,729,994
Virginia gold mines	1,510,400
South Carolina gold mines	1,247,856
Alabama gold mines	191,855
Tennessee gold mines	84,880
Oregon gold mines	63,486
New Mexico gold mines	48,397
Other States	78,819

Total $443,127,921

As the total coinage of the United States during the same period has amounted to $851,639,069, it results that of this sum $208,511,168 have been derived from foreign gold.

As showing the comparative operations of the mint at Philadelphia and its different branches, under the lead of the coinage derived from both domestic and foreign sources, we append the subjoined statement:

Total coinage of the U. States	Deposits of American gold
$443,127,921	$237,292,937
$411,886,963	92,543,133
91,333,072	22,200,415
63,680,415	4,663,273
4,641,629	5,925,914
5,925,914	80,504,457
74,102,096
$851,639,069	$443,127,921

From the annual Treasury Report for 1858 we learn that the total coinage of the last fiscal year has been as follows:

Comparative cost of coinage	Total annual expenses
1.20 per cent.	$188,000
1.70 do	78,000
1.10 do	215,000
8.00 do	8,000
4.50 do	8,000
0.32 do	69,000
	$566,000

Coinage from June 30, 57, to June 30, 58.
Philadelphia $15,427,699
New Orleans 4,257,000
San Francisco 19,423,598
Dahlgren 100,168
Charlotte 177,970
New York assay office 21,970,652
Total $61,357,088

WASHINGTON, July 1.

Captain Van Vleet, United States Assistant Quartermaster, has submitted to the War Department a reply to the charges recently preferred against him for alleged misconduct in connecting with the purchasing of mules for the use of the army; and the Secretary of War, after mature deliberation of the same, has decided that the explanations and testimony render any further notice of the charges unnecessary and unnecessary and uncalled for.

MAXIMUM HEAT.—We are advised by Dr. Logan that his standard thermometer, at 3 in the afternoon yesterday, read 102 degrees, being the highest reading on record during the observations extending through seven years. There was, during yesterday, a light breeze from the north west. The next hottest period on record was in July, 1854, the day of the great fire, when the maximum was 101½ degrees. It appears from the record that the maximum of summer has occurred in July, whence it may be assumed that we have to "suffer some."

SAN FRANCISCO NEWS.—By telegraph to the "Union" of yesterday, we learn that Mr. Broderick declines the challenge of Mr. Perley, on account of the disparity in their relative positions as citizens. Perley has published a card in the "National," in which he states that Mr. Broderick is "as devoid of courage as he is of principle, and that he has no longer any right to call himself a gentleman."

THE PUBLIC.—When the unhappy Charles I., of England, affirmed that to pass the bill of attainder against the Earl of Stafford was to do offence to his conscience, the accommodating Archbishop of York demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt that there were two kinds of conscience—public and private; that his public conscience as a king might dispense with his private conscience as a man. Sherlock, another subtle reasoner, in explaining the manner in which the nobles of England might discharge themselves of their oaths to James II., discovered that there were two rights as well as two consciences—one a providential, and the other a legal right; according to which doctrine, one man might righteously claim and take a thing, and another righteously hold and keep it; but that whoever got the better, had the providential right by possession; and that he who had the providential right, necessarily had the legal right. Squatters and politicians should raise a monument to that Sherlock, and chisel the Archbishop's name in brass.—Golden Era.

The following is a description of Giribaldi, given in a communication from Lombardy:

"He is of lofty stature, broad-shouldered, the head of a lion upon the shoulders of an athlete. His long, black, grizzled, uncombed beard; his eyes flashing with lightning glance; his black felt hat ornamented with dark plumes; his scarlet mantle tied round his throat, present to you a personage of no ordinary stamp. I am everywhere assured that he is really a gentleman; gallant to ladies, severe to men, more severe to himself, sober to excess, animated and cold at the same time. He inspires in his little army a confidence only equalled by the terror he inspires in his enemies. Ever the foremost in the fight, urging his charger into the thickest battalions, dismounting now to seize a musket, sharing with the meanest follower the labor of the march, he gives an evidence alike of courage that astonishes all."

It is said that he issued the following address to his soldiers.

"My children you are one to five. Before you is death, behind, the muskets of your comrades, who will shoot like a dog the first who retreats. We have no cannon; we will take them. Let us die; what matters it? Italy must be free. Behold your real recompense."

HOTTEST.—At a town in Yuba county, rightly named Timbuctoo, the thermometer indicated, on Saturday last, 126° in the shade!

NOTICE.

THE PUBLIC are informed, that in addition to the brand "U. S." on all mules reserved for the use of the army in Utah, an additional mark of a round hole punched in the left ear, will hereafter be made on all these mules.
G. H. CROSSMAN,
Deputy Q. M. Gen'l U. S. A.
Camp Floyd, Aug. 2d, 1859. n38-1f.

GLOBE.

AT the solicitation of many of my former patrons I have concluded to meet the demand of a FIRST CLASS BOARDING HOUSE, and will shortly make arrangements for sleeping apartments, thus making the house complete.

TERMS:

BOARD PER WEEK $10 50
SINGLE DAY 2 50
SINGLE WEEK 14 00
SINGLE MEAL 1 00
Strangers without baggage will be required to pay in advance.

Restaurant.

Gentlemen and Ladies wishing meals at any hour can be accommodated either with private rooms or at the stated hours.

BILL OF FARE.

Porter House Steak,
Mutton Chop,
Ham & Eggs,
Tripe,
Oysters, &c.
Vegetables and Fruit to their season.

Every attention paid to guests and those wishing quiet, punctuality, and the best of the market affords, are invited to give the "Globe" a call.

PRICES OF THE RESTAURANT will be as low as any house of a similar style.

BUSINESS MEN

will find superior accommodation as to time and style of meals furnished.

HOURS OF MEALS.

Breakfast, at 7.
Dinner, at 12.
Dinner, if a number so register 4.
Regular Supper, at 6.
WARM SPRINGS OMNIBUS
will call at the house all hours of the day, particularly on the arrival of the stages.

REFERENCES:

To all who have tried the house formerly.

CHOICE WINES AND CIGARS.
BALLS AND PIC-NICS
furnished as low as any one when a good article is wanted.

A FRUIT STALL.

I have made arrangements with the principal fruit growers for a regular supply of Apples,
Peaches,
Laricots,
Nectarines,
Grapes.

Orders accompanied with the cash will be executed with dispatch.

Shaving Saloon.
A first rate artist engaged. Satisfaction guaranteed.

STABLING PROVIDED.
DAVID CANDLAND.

Information Wanted!
OF WESLEY KLIPSTINE, who left Kansas Territory in May 1859, for Salt Lake City, or California, and has not been heard of since. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his brother.

ISRAEL KLIPSTINE,
Nevada City, Nevada Co., Cal.

(74-81)

THE VALLEY TANNER.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1859.

NUMBER 39.

ABSTRACT OF

Remarks Made by Elder Heter C. Kimball, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Afternoon, August 7, 1859.

A preacher ought to speak to the hearts of the people, and will do so if he is truly called to dispense the word. The principles of his creation are akin to those upon which we elect our representative to Congress. To him is delegated the power to speak for the people—his electors—who elect him for that purpose. Upon this same principle, God has elected me to represent him in this world. I represent God in my calling, the same as a Washington represents a nation. I speak in his name. "Go thou and teach all nations." It is his will that I should be an organ of God. It is not the fiddle that dictates the player, but the player that dictates the fiddle. I am as clay in the hands of the potter. [Here the Elder related the circumstance of Jeremiah and the potter; in which he took occasion to remark that the "Gentiles would soon have to go down to hell and be ground to powder;" after which the following expression was made use of, but there was so much noise that we lost the connection: "Christ was born in a stable and cradled in a manger. Well, now, in Missouri they make mangers out of hollow logs, and hollow logs make good cradles."]

I once joined myself to the Close Community Baptists—that was three or four weeks before I heard Mormonism; not because they had the fullness of the gospel, but because they were nearer right than others. The minister who baptized me said, "in thy profession of the faith, I baptize thee in the name of the father, of the son, and of the holy ghost," after which, I was received in the church in full fellowship. I was baptized by a Mormon Elder some 28 years ago, but under quite different influences. Bro. Geo. Watt there was the first man who was ever baptized in a foreign country, and his mother the first woman. When I baptize I do it in this way, taking brother Watt for example. I go with him to the water, and kneel down and pray for him and myself too. Then I ask, "brother Watt, do you feel to forsake the world and all its evils?" Then I baptize him with the words, "by authority of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the father, of the son, and of the holy ghost. Amen." As there may be some strangers here who do not know the meaning of baptism, I would remark that it signifies to overwhelm in the water—to cover up with water—and then the laying on of hands for the gift of the holy ghost. I first baptized in Genesee county, N. Y. I went over there with a Methodist minister. He said to me, "brother Heter do you lay on hands. I don't believe in the gift of the holy ghost; I don't believe in laying on hands." I baptized on this occasion eighteen. I did not know what words I should use in the laying on of hands, and trusted to the spirit of the Lord for manner of utterance. I laid my hands upon their heads, and said, "in the name of Jesus, receive the gift of the holy ghost." Immediately upon the ending of the ceremony, twelve out of the eighteen began speaking in tongues—in twelve different tongues—crying and shouting in the fullness of happiness. My Methodist friend, though an eye-witness of it all, still disbelieved, or appeared to disbelieve. When I went to Jefferson City, Mo., to petition for the removal of Joseph Smith from the prison in Liberty to a place where his person would be secure from violence, I met this minister on the road. He wept freely when he saw me, and said, "Mormonism is a truth, and I know it, but I never can live it."

When I was baptized, I didn't at first feel anything peculiar—a sort of calm serenity came over my spirits, which was the only unusual sensation; but shortly after, the spirit of the Lord came to me, and it seemed as if my body and soul would be consumed. People said I was crazy. I got the gift of tongues and of prophecy. I prophesied that this work would stand forever—that the church of God would continue to increase in strength until it would overshadow and fill the whole world. My brother Solomon, a strict Baptist in religion, told me when I first joined the church that it would stand but a few months. "Where will I find you?" he asked. I told him he would find me as close to the Baptist church as possible. He afterwards extended the time, and told me that two years would use it up. That was about twenty years ago. The prophets of old prophesied concerning this people, and their prosperity, and I myself bear witness, in the face of men and angels, that the day is close at hand when all the genuine religion of the world will be at the shrine of Mormonism. In 1837, I went to England, and was instrumental in bringing 10,000 into the church. Many of them are now scattered abroad throughout the world, "without purse or scrip," making converts to Mormonism. Since that time, the book of Mormon has been printed in seven different tongues, and is in circulation in every quarter of the globe and the Isles of the sea.

When they broke us up in Kirtland I went to England. Then they told me that Mormonism had received its death-blow; still I went to England, and in about two months I baptized 2,000. Brother Watt then prophesied that we would be gathered together in America—that this was the land of promise. I have worked and toiled, through hardships and persecutions of all kinds, and been broken up five times. In Kirtland,

Ohio, I still own property. I own a house and orchard there. They drove me away from that property, and I'm glad of it. I don't want it anyhow. Then we went to Missouri, and were driven from there; but not until we had laid the foundation of the temple in Far West. In doing this, we were carrying out a revelation, which instructed us to lay the foundation of the temple at that place, and then preach the gospel to the nations of the earth. The revelation was fulfilled; and as true as I have a living soul, the time is close at hand when we will have a temple in Far West and in Independence, Missouri, and in Kirtland, Ohio, and all the devils of hell combined cannot prevent us. If ever I spoke the truth I speak it now. ["Amen" resounding from every quarter.]

Send on your armies; they can do no harm. God will look after the welfare of this people, and shield them from all injury. Let your armies do their best—their "partisan"—they can't effect anything.

I respect officials who will perform their official duties as they should, and leave the Mormon people alone; but how can I respect my enemies? How can I respect a Judge who does his best to injure innocent people? I know what they want—they want to nab Brigham Young, and then they want me, and others. They will nab him, too, when God wants them; but God won't let them nab him, and they can't nab me. [Laughter.] I fear them about as much as a pig; not quite so much, either, for a pig-ant will bite my leg once in a while. I am the son of a revolutionary sire, who struggled for the liberty of this country, and am going to have religious freedom. I have always observed the laws, and mean to be protected by them in my religious belief the same as the people of New England are. As they treat us they will be treated. The United States will see something worse than we ever saw before fifteen years—see it from the head of the government down. Famine upon famine, mob after mob, civil discord from one end of the country to the other, terrible whirlwinds, and swift destruction, will be their certain doom.

This country has done some big fighting, but it can't beat Mormonism. There are 4,000 elders in foreign lands preaching Mormonism—nearly all foreigners. There are 40, or 50, or 60 organized quorums of Seventies. Suppose they kill all the members of this church that are elders. From that small seed our principles would again be given to the world, and our cause prosper like the Canada thistle. When they persecute us, it is like breaking a mustard stalk—the stroke only causes an increase, by more thoroughly scattering the seeds.

Speaking of thistles, reminds me of a bright idea of Greeley's. He thought it would be a wise notion to sow Canada thistles all along the plains, between here and the States, to feed stock upon. Why that would kill all the cattle with the bloody murrain, and prick us to death. So much for Greeley's judgment. What a fruitful imagination he must have! He is the greatest liar on the face of the earth. Why, bless your souls, he is the father of all liars. He will go to hell, and be the father of liars there. Amen ["Amen" sounding throughout the congregation.]

The Rich Gold Discoveries at Washoe Valley and Truckee River.

NEVADA, July 8, 1859. Agreeably to promise, I forward the latest intelligence from the gold-hunters of Washoe Valley. Since the first company started, some weeks ago, companies of two and more have been departing, nightly as well as daily, and without the first accounts being corroborated by any arrivals from there. A party has just returned, and have answered the question of "What's the news from Truckee?" which, for some days past, has been the leading question.

It appears that in this excitement there is something substantial to back it. My informant states that there is plenty of gold and silver: that the few who have water to work are making several hundred dollars per day; and that a miner over there, in speaking of his claim, said: "If I only had water, I believe I could fill my sluice half full of amalgam of gold and silver."

The lead, as spoken of, appears to be a mistake, as there is no regular defined lead as yet discovered, but the material (such as brought down to Nevada, and which assayed $980 a ton) is to be found in quantities, on the surface, among the boulders and gravel. But now comes the trouble: there is no water or timber for 20 miles around—consequently, getting the gold is a hard matter. But the fact that such rich deposits are there, will get water—water being only a question of money and time. A party leaves to-morrow morning for the express purpose of surveying the country with the view of bringing it in. I have little doubt but that there will be a regular rush from Grass Valley, Nevada, Downieville and the many other towns within a few days ride of the diggings. The returning party being men so well known, and of such reliability, their statements will cause more to go than otherwise would be the case, were the reports brought in by mere strangers.

As some of the readers of the Bulletin may be a little curious to know its particular locality, and the way to get there, I will add some remarks on that subject. The place is situated in the first range of mountains beyond the Big Meadows, and bordering the Truckee river. These mountains are high, rugged and perfectly barren. To get there the best route, (to have as little rough traveling as possible,) is by Nevada, and through Bear Valley, on the old Truckee route made by the '49-ers coming into California. From Sacramento to Nevada it is one day's travel—fare $10. From Nevada, to the diggings it is three or four days ride, and may be set down at from 80 to 100 miles, as to distance, however, there are various estimates; some say it is only 50 miles, more or less. The trip has been made in three days. It is necessary to pack out provisions, as there is no dependence to put in their being any out there; all who have left here have done so. There are several ranches on that way, and no doubt but plenty of provisions will be on the way soon.

Now, if you want to know what I think about this business, I will tell you. There is no doubt but that there is gold, and it may be that there is great abundance of it; but one thing is certain, there is no water, and as it is impossible to make mining pay without water—and a good deal of it at that—and as it may take six months or a year to get it there, the question is, will it pay to go and wait for water? There may be some provision made in the mining laws, so that claims could be held by record till water was got in. In that event, it might prove profitable to have a claim secured. That any one can go there for immediate profit, there is only one way in which I see it could be done, and that is in picking up these pieces of ore and constructing a rough arastra, and setting your horse or mule to work. There is no doubt but water enough may be found for arastra purposes.

I would remark to any who might entertain the idea of going, that I would not be in any great hurry, if pecuniary gain is the object. Several other parties will be in here in a day or so, and I will then give you some further accounts. GOSMUS.

Later from British Columbia and Oregon.

By the mail steamer-Pacific we have dates from Victoria, V. I., to the 9th and from Portland, Oregon, to the 7th July.

The U. S. steamer Massachusetts, Com. W. H. Fauntleroy, from San Francisco, arrived at Victoria on the 8th July. On the landing of the U. S. officers, they were saluted by the guns of the fort. The Gazette says, Maj. Gen. Harney, of the N. W. Department U. S. A., came in the steamer from Stellacoom. He will go hence to Olympia, and proceed overland to Coywitz.

Another party of adventures, ten in number, accompanied by three northern chiefs, had started for Queen Charlotte Island on a prospecting tour and still another company was being formed for the same object.

There has been considerable rain in Victoria recently.

The Americans at Victoria celebrated the Fourth, but the firing of Chinese crackers was suppressed at an early hour.

OREGON NEWS.

The returns of the election for Congress had not been received.

The Portland Democratic Standard has suspended publication.

Lieut. Williams and party left Walla Walla, on the 23d June. A man known as Aleck—a mulatto—belonging to William's party, was killed on the 23d by a man named Carr.

It is feared that the wheat crop of Oregon will prove a failure this year. The farmers of Willamette Valley complain much of the dry weather, which is parching the wheat in the ground to a great extent.

It is reported that the heat has been so great in some portions of Oregon as to burn the apples on the trees.

We learn from the Dalles Journal that a rumor is rife among the Indians of Walla Walla, and in quarters likely to be well informed, that the Snake Indians are concentrating to meet and fight Captain Wallen's command, as soon as it descends the Blue Mountains. How likely, a Snake Chief, is said to be at the head of this combination and movement. It will be recollected, from the same source from which these rumors come, we have always had a fore-shadowing of all the occurrences of a hostile character among the Indians of this region, since 1836.

Another iron mine has been discovered in Oregon. It is situated near Darham mill, in Oswego county.—W. National, San Fran.

Later from the Sandwich Islands.

By the arrival of the bark Felix, last evening, we have received files of Honolulu papers to June 18.

The Polynesian, of June 11, publishes the sections of the civil code which refer to the new tariff.

In memory of the battle of Bunker's Hill, the 17th of June last was celebrated by the American residents at Honolulu by hoisting the flags generally, and firing a salute at noon from on board the American brig Josephine.

At the Circuit Court of the Fourth Judicial District for the June term, complaints were heard against Mr. Opupahi, the District Justice of Puna, and Mr. Kahale, the District of Kolan, for malfeasance in office. The complaints against the former were found to be in part groundless, and in part of a trifling nature; but those against the latter were of such a character, and sustained to such an extent, that the Court removed Mr. Kahale from office.

The Polynesian discusses the question of female education in the Islands. The moral condition of young girls is confessed to be lamentably low. It was a happy day, remarks the Polynesian, when the queen, looking round about with her mind's eye, saw on the surface of society indications of something deep-lying, the reverse of superficial, and the result of the experiments she made has been the institution of a society for the erection of hospitals, with funds derived from the liberal contributions of all sorts and classes of persons. Whilst this was going on the Sisters of the Sacred Heart arrived—those ladies whose advent has been so anxiously waited for, during two years or more, by those who having young daughters, with more or less native blood in their veins, could find no school where they could be trained by women to become in time true women themselves. It is about two months since the Nuns arrived, and all their arrangements being now in a forward state of preparation, they this day issue their prospectus.

Among the passengers by the Frances Palmer, we notice, says the Polynesian, Mr. Tiffany, who visited us a couple of months ago, and made preparatory arrangements for erecting that modern adjunct of civilization, electric gas-works, in our city. Mr. Tiffany, having obtained a charter from the government on his last sojourn here, now returns with all the materials, fixings, pipes, etc., even to chandeliers, for starting the enterprise into operation. As soon as the location has been selected, the erection of the new works will be commenced, which will enable them to be thoroughly finished and ready to shed their light through private stores and public places by the commencement of the fall season.

On Monday, June 6, the Fire Department of Honolulu held its annual election for Chief Engineer and first and second Assistant Engineers. The late officers of this Department having retired, the competition was entirely between new men and consequently warm. The Department including the two Engine and Hook and Ladder Companies, numbers 115 active members, of which 84 were present voting. The elected candidates were: Chief Engineer, R. Gilliland, 43; First Assistant Engineer, G. Clark, 44; Second Assistant Engineer, R. B. Neville, 44.

To the retiring officers, and the late Chief Engineer particularly, A. J. Carlwright, Esq., Honolulu is much indebted for the present effective and creditable condition of its Fire Department.

A meeting of the subscribers to the Queen's Hospital was held, June 9, at which a draft of the charter was presented and approved, and committees appointed to select a lot upon which to erect the Hospital, and also to provide a temporary one.

HUNTING OF THE SEA OTTER IN CALIFORNIA.—The Hesperian, for July, in a sketch of the life of Isaac J. Sparks, one of the first American pioneers in California, speaking about his employment for many years in the business of hunting the sea otter on this coast, says:

He began at first with a single rifle, shooting the animal from the shore, himself swimming out to secure the prize. He soon became able, however, to hire a swimmer to perform this duty for him, and in about a year and a half forcibly felt the need of a boat. He accordingly set to work and built a small light one, suited to his purpose, and then went out to sea after the otter. His business continued to increase, and he soon found that his little boat was not sufficient, and he now, with his men, formed a company of three boats, and the business became lucrative. Sparks followed this business with different hunters from the years 1832 until 1849.

Perhaps a brief description of the mode of hunting the sea otter may not be inappropriate. To carry on the business successfully there are necessary three small boats, in each of which are three men, a "shooter" and "two pullers." They have also a large boat to carry provisions, having on board two men—a cook and a camp keeper. They generally start out in the month of April, and make a cruise of from six or seven months. One small boat is always kept in advance on the "look-out" for otter. When a shoal is discovered, if the weather is fine, the hunters approach and the work of destruction begins; if not fair, they land on the beach and remain quiet until it becomes so, when they again take to their boats, and the excitement of the chase begins. The fastest canoe pulls right through the shoal, without attempting to shoot, the other two come up, one on each side, and, as it were, corral the otter, and then shoot among them right and left. When the shoal scatters, which it will, in a short time, they attack them singly, taking care to select a large one, the boats forming a triangle around him, and as often as he appears he is greeted by musket balls; so that, if not killed, he is again obliged to dive. In this way he soon becomes exhausted, for want of air, and rises within gunshot, when he falls an easy victim to his pursuers.

This business is very profitable; hunters frequently take from seventy to one hundred and thirty otters in a season; sometimes more, seldom less. The skins are worth, on an average, from twenty-five to forty-five dollars apiece.

John Campbell convicted in Philadelphia, of robbing an unknown man of nine cents has been sent to the penitentiary for three years.

THE LUXURY OF CENTRAL AMERICA.—One of the surveying party of the railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, recently wrote to the Salem (Mass.) Register, the following description of the country he is in, and the life he enjoys, and the many luxuries he daily and hourly shares:

Deprived of every comfort, subject to every possible annoyance, almost nothing that a hearty man can eat; nothing at all that an individual can relish, warm water from a half dried bark to drink, dry, parching heat, for it is the height of the ten months dry season, and no relief in anticipation for I don't know when. Have been for weeks almost a cripple, with ulcers all over my legs, not able to wear shoe nor stocking, nor even a bandage; but they are now nearly healed. I have had the intermittent fever, but am convalescent. You may try to imagine how I fared in camp. Half of my party have been in camp once, and disabled from field duty. I pine for home, I am wasted and thin, more so than ever I was in my life. The wild beasts are nothing. We are most anxious to see them than they are—and occasionally we are gratified at the sight of a tiger, pampa or American lion, tapir &c., crossing the path and hastily retreating, or reposing in his lair in the wild recesses of the rocks, whither our line of survey takes us.

But the insects are intolerable—lizards, scorpions, tarantulas, garrapatos, nijuas, mayasculis, fleas, etc. I could fill a page with their names. They give us no peace day or night. The party come in from the woods covered with fleas. They fasten themselves to the skin, bury their heads, and when pulled off leave their heads in. The chigoes insinuate themselves under the skin, generally about the toes, under the roots of the nails, lay their eggs, and ere you are aware of it there is a sackful of eggs, as large as a pea, which must be carefully extracted or you have an ulcer. It is necessary daily to examine the feet with great minuteness, and you never see a native or a group of them but they are picking out chigoes. The mayascul is a worm which eats its way to the bone, and if not discovered, grows to the size of your little finger, and loses a leg, perhaps. But the fleas are bad enemies to peace. You fight them in vain; you scratch and irritate, and tear your flesh; you go to bed and get up again; all night in bed and out again—you are distracted, crazy.

Army Movements.

The two companies, E and K, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, Capt. Garnett commanding, now at San Bernardino, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to march to San Pedro, on their way to Fort Yuma, which is now garrisoned by two companies of the third artillery, Capt. Nauman commanding, which, it is supposed, will repair to San Francisco.

The commissioned and non-commissioned officers of Capt. Burton's company of artillery was lately ordered from Fort Yuma to Old Point Comfort, to the school of artillery practice.

The camp at Beale's Crossing of the Colorado has been made a permanent post, by the name of Fort Mojave, and is garrisoned by two companies of the Sixth regiment of U. S. Infantry, under the command of Major Armistead.

IMMIGRATION ARRIVING.—A dispatch from Genoa, Carson Valley, to the Sacramento Standard, says that the first immigration wagon through this season from the States arrived at that place on Sunday last. The names of the persons who have arrived are as follows:

Mr. Hathaway, from Ohio, with three other men, five horses and one wagon; J. C. Reed, Britton and another, from Illinois, with a span of mules and one wagon. They left the frontier on the 11th of April. A large train is expected to arrive shortly.

THE DESERT.—That great bugbear, "The Desert," which has been such a terror to immigrants, and about which so much has been said, we are informed, by Superintendent Crandall, who passes over it every few days, is only 34 miles wide, about midway of which there is a fine well of excellent water. The mail company drive mules in their coaches across it, the road over which is as good as elsewhere on the route, and the trip across it can be made in four hours and a half.—Territorial Enterprise.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE GOVERNOR.—The Governor has appointed Allen Rutherford, Commissioner of Deeds for New York, to reside at the city of New York; Ira Scott, Commissioner of Deeds at Chicago, Illinois. Also the following Notaries Public: George D. Fisher, for Los Angeles county; Samuel Cross, Sacramento county; Marcus Katz, San Bernardino county; William G. Wood, San Francisco county; Alexander Montgomery, Sacramento county; L. C. Bartlett, Sierra county; Alex. Dearing, Mariposa county; James R. Beals, Monterey county.—Sacramento Union.

The late Joseph Charles, had insurances on his life to the amount of $22,000, in various offices.

The Hon. D. F. Robinson, ex-member of Congress from Pennsylvania, died Friday from disease contracted at the National Hotel at Washington in the spring of 1857.

We trust that we have not been misinformed as to the decision of the Attorney General; and if we have been, we hope that every one in this Territory who has any in-

MONDAY, August 10, 1914.
The case of Francis J. McNEIL vs. William Yund and others, for false imprisonment, was called.
His honor observed that in all personal actions the plaintiff must show the truth of the party.
Mr. Williams, counsel for plaintiff, said that the jury is decided on the day on which the action is to have been tried, and did not see why they could suffer all the loss, and be killed, and be so far as accidents were concerned, his honor remarked there was a special statute, as in the case of accidental accidents, in which the friends of the deceased could sue for the loss, but in personal actions the case died with the person.

DECEASE OF CONGRESSMEN ELECT.—Three of the members of Congress elected to the House of Representatives have died, viz.:—Hon. Thomas L. Harris, in the sixth district of Illinois; Hon. Cyrus Spinck, in the Fourth district of Ohio, and Hon. William D. Goode, in the Fourth district of Virginia. Messrs. Goode and Harris were representatives in the last Congress.

any instrument, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeited, with intent to defraud the United States, or any body politic or corporate or any other person or persons whatsoever; or if any person or persons shall alter any indent, certificate of the public stock or debt, treasury note or other public security of the United States, or any letters patent, assumed or granted by the President of the United States, or any bill, check, or draft for money drawn on the United States, or any other public officer or agent of the United States, duly authorized to make, draw, accept, or pay such bill, check, or draft, or if any person or persons shall pass, utter, or publish, or attempt to pass, utter or publish, or utter and unaltered, any such falsely altered indent, certificate, treasury note, or other public security, letters patent, or bill, check, or draft, knowing the same to be falsely altered, with intent to defraud the United States, or any body politic or corporate or any person or persons whatsoever, every such per-

The influence of such words as those to which I have drawn your attention, coming from such a source tend directly to evil. They carry their influence into the jury box, into the Legislative Hall and break down the executive power of the government. I derive no pleasure in speaking of this thing, but it is of no use to mince matters. We know the state of the community here, and that they have a peculiar organization, and that no complete consolidation of power in certain matters by the community of such sentiments by its acknowledgment must work directly against the legitimate operation of the law, and it becomes me to warn you against them.

You have taken an oath, gentlemen, diligently to inquire into and true presentments make of all such matters as may come before you, both under the laws of the United States and under the laws of this Territory, which are found consistent with the laws of the United States.

Remember that you do not sit to try the issue of any case before you, but to decide from the evidence of the witnesses, if there is sufficient proof to put the accused upon his trial. Were you to try the case upon its merits, you would in fact contrary to the spirit and intent of the law, put the party in the jeopardy of his life; you stand moreover as the protectors of the innocent, against malicious and frivolous charges.

You are charged to inquire into crimes of every character that may have been committed in this district.

Let me urge upon you the importance of dispatch. You will meet upon your own adjournments, subject to the order of the court. In all cases in which the United States are a party, you will have the witnesses sworn in open court; but in cases arising under the statutes of the Territory, your foreman will administer the proper oath to the witnesses.

The Attorney for the Territory, appointed under the authority of the United States, will assist you.

You can retire.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Post Office has been removed to the corner of East Temple and Second South street.

We publish to-day the charge of Judge Sinclair to the Grand Jury, as revised and corrected by his Honor.

On our first page will be found a truthful transcript of a sermon preached last Sunday afternoon, by Heber C. Kimball. We have arranged to give our readers abstracts of these discourses from time to time.

One company of 2d dragoons, under the command of Lieut. Gay, passed through the city to-day, en route for the northern part of the Territory. Dr. Moore and Lieut. Ryan are attached to the command.

THE WEATHER.—From 9 o'clock A. M. to 4 P. M. old Sol poured down his scorching rays to quite an oppressive degree, but all the time before and after these periods is agreeable as a fastidious taste for pleasantness could wish for. If pleasant dreams refuse to visit the sleeper upon such nights as we are now enjoying, his conscience must trouble him indeed.

The Messrs. Dyers have opened their new stock of goods, one door south of the Post Office, on East Temple St.; owing to their experience here they are eminently qualified to select a stock suitable for this market, and we have no doubt will give general satisfaction as to quality and prices. Call and examine.

There will be a heavy emigration to California this season, the vanguard has already reached Carson Valley, for some weeks it has been streaming along here, and while it still continues there are said to be large numbers yet on the road. Moreover, the emigration by the Northern route which does not pass here is said to be unusually large.

We trust to get information before long from Capt. Simpson, in regard to the merits of the Southern trail, as an emigration road.

Farmers are now busily engaged in harvesting their grain. The yield is universally spoken of as most abundant, and forbidding the "great famine" that we hear so much talk about, for a year or two longer at least. If Utahites do not waste too much wheat for bread—oh, whisky we mean—we prophesy in the face of prophecy that they will not starve to death for some time to come.

The canyons are now thronged with parties of pic-nickers, who repair thither in large numbers daily, to enjoy the refreshing influences of the mountain air, and gather supplies from the abundance of service berries now ripe. Preparations are made generally for a stay of near a week, during which time every comfort of the city is enjoyed, besides the wild novelties of the mountains.

There was a painful rumor, on Saturday last, that the Indians had murdered some women and children engaged in one of these excursions; but happily, subsequent intelligence contradicted the rumor.

It strikes us that either the Common Council has been remiss in making the necessary laws to sustain the peace and good order of this city, or else the police department fail to see the same enforced. Every hour in the day, pistol reports can be heard on almost every street, and a law-despising spirit is manifested to a greater or less extent, at all times. We would like to see the fact thoroughly impressed upon the minds of all, that we have a legitimate corporation here, and that they have the nerve to compel compliance with its ordinances.

In this connection, we would inquire whether or not there is an ordinance in existence—as is usual, and highly necessary and right in all town organizations—for bidding the blockading of the streets, to the detriment of pedestrians, and the unsightliness of the city. If such an ordinance there is, its enforcement would be a blessing.

SHOOTING AFFAIRS.—This city of Saints is fast acquiring a wide reputation for crimes of the highest degree, and rowdiness of every type. Some three murder cases are pending in the District Court now in session, and this week we are called upon to record another. On Wednesday night last, a pistol was discharged near the canvas of the circus during the performances. Two men, named Rhodes and McNeil, it was soon ascertained, were involved in an altercation, hence the pistol report. Nothing definite could be arrived at concerning the matter; Rhodes charging McNeil with the firing of the pistol, and vice versa. There was no convicting proof on either side. On Friday night last, under the screen of darkness, McNeil received a mortal wound, in the agonies of which he lingered until last Sunday morning, when death came to his relief.

The man Rhodes fled immediately after the infliction of the wound, which fact, in addition to other strong circumstantial evidence, seems to fasten indelibly upon his skirts the blood of McNeil.

According to the affidavit of McNeil, "an articulo mortis," he testifies that after he had retired, he had occasion to go down upon passing on to the street, he met Lot Huntington, with whom he passed salutations; that immediately afterwards a person walked towards him with, as he supposed the intention of shaking hands; that when within a yard of him the person, to him unknown, shot him. Upon the individual starting off he drew his revolver and fired twice in the direction his assailant was proceeding. He describes his assailant as a short, stout man.

Lot Huntington was examined before Judge Sinclair, and acquitted on the charge of being implicated in the murder, but held to bail as a witness.

The coroner was very dilatory, several hours having elapsed after the death of McNeil before the inquest was held. We have not yet learned what the verdict was.

The coroner refused, and the city authorities failed to take any steps towards the burial of the murdered man, which was, from the circumstances, a case demanding immediate attention; and a subscription was raised, and the unfortunate stranger buried by the exertions of Thomas S. Williams, Esq.

McNeil was a resident of Fairfield, and had come to the city to attend to a case in court, in which he has a suit against some of the heads of the Church, claiming damages to the amount of fifty thousand dollars, for false imprisonment in the winter and spring of '87 and '88. We understand that he has a wife and child living in Fairfield.

We do not know where his native place was, but hear that he has a brother who has been for many years comptroller of the city of New Orleans.

Dr. J. FORNEY, SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS: Sir—At your request, I herewith transmit to you a statement of a report made to me by a Shoshone Indian, on the evening of July 30th, concerning a massacre of some emigrants, at or near the Goose Creek Mountains, U. T., about the 24th of July last, by a party of Shoshone and Flat-head Indians.

The Indian said two Flat-head Indians went to the emigrants' camp to trade, and the emigrants killed both of the Indians, and immediately a party of 20 Shoshones and Flat-heads attacked the train, and killed 5 men and 1 woman; that 2 men on horses made their escape, and that two women belonging to the train were not killed. He further stated that the Indians took the animals belonging to the train, and such things belonging to the wagons, as they pleased, and then fled with the spoils.

The Indian had a neatly executed daguerreotype likeness of 1 man and 3 ladies in his possession, which was gotten from the massacred company, and which I bought of him for your inspection. The animals were branded "S" on the left shoulder.

Very respectfully,
J. H. TIPPETTS.

Brigham City, Box Elder County, U. T., August 6th, 1859.

Four Days Later from Europe.

THE GREAT BATTLE OF SALFERINO.

FARTHER POINT, (below Quebec,) July 8, 1859.

The steamer Hungarian, from Liverpool, 29th ult., has passed this point bound for Quebec. She will furnish four days' later advices from Europe.

There have been no movements reported by the Allies since the battle of the 24th. The details of the action have not been received.

The Austrian and Sardinian accounts report extraordinary heavy losses in killed and wounded.

The dispatches from the Emperor Napoleon, report the capture of 6,000 prisoners, three flags and thirty cannon.

The Austrian troops have recrossed the Mincio.

Gen. Hess has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian forces.

The latest dispatches from the seat of war, report that the French troops have crossed the river Mincio.

A dispatch dated June 25th, from the Emperor to the Empress Eugenie, says that the enemy withdrew last night, and that he slept in the room occupied in the morning by the Emperor of Austria.

The Austrian troops had crossed the Mincio for the purpose of attacking the French with their whole force, but were obliged to abandon their position and withdraw to the left bank of the river after blowing up the bridges at Gorta. The Emperor also says we took 30 cannon and 7,000 prisoners.

A private dispatch says that the Austrians had 35,000 of their men placed hors de combat, and lost 26 flags and 75 cannon. There has been no circumstantial account of the battle published at Paris. Private dispatches intimate that the French army has suffered so severely as to be unable to resume the offensive.

Vague rumors also put the French loss in killed and wounded at 12,000. The battle was fought at Salferino.

The Austrians are preparing for another great battle under Gen. Hess, who has already displaced Gen. Schlick as Commander-in-Chief.

The Emperor Napoleon issued a stirring address to the army after the battle of Salferino.

Napoleon was constantly in the hottest part of the battle, and Gen. Larry, who accompanied him, had his horse killed under him.

The attack on Venice was expected to commence on the 28th.

One hundred and seventy-five thousand troops from the Austrian reserves were on their way to Italy. They are called the flower of the Austrian Army, every man having served upwards of eight years.

Five French Generals were wounded at the battle of Salferino.

It is rumored that an English fleet of twenty-five sail was arriving off Venice.

The Gazette de France says that preparations are making to raise, within two months, an army of 450,000 men.

Great naval preparations are going on at Cherbourg.

Prussia has made a proposal to the Federal Diet to place an army of observation on the Rhine, under the superior order of Bavaria.

The proposal was referred to the military committee.

It was reported that the Emperor of Austria would soon have an interview with the Prince Regent of Prussia.

The following is the order of the day, published by the Emperor Napoleon, after the battle of Salferino.

SOLDIERS: The enemy who believed themselves able to repulse us from the Chiasso have recrossed the Mincio. You have worthily defended the honor of France. Salferino surpasses the recollection of Sonato and Castiglione. In 12 hours you have repulsed an overwhelming force. Your enthusiasm did not rest there. The numerous artillery of the enemy occupied formidable positions which you carried. Your country thanks you for your courage and perseverance and laments the fallen. We have taken 3 flags, 30 cannon and 6,000 prisoners. The Sardinian army fought with the same valor against superior forces, and worthily is that army to march beside you. Blood has not been shed in vain for the glory of France and the happiness of the people.

The following is the Austrians' official account of the battle:

VERONA, June 25. The day before yesterday, our right wing occupied Pozzolunga, Salferino and Cariana, and the left pressed forward as far as Guiliola and Cas Cioffeds, but were driven back by the enemy. A collision took place between the entire armies at 4 a.m., yesterday. Our left, under Gen. Wimper, advanced as far as Chi ze.

In the afternoon there was a concentrated assault on the heroically defended town of Salferino. Our right wing repulsed the Piedmontese, but on the other hand the order of our centre could not be restored, and our losses are extraordinarily heavy.

The development of powerful masses of the enemy against our left wing, and the advance of his main body against Villa caused our retreat, which began late in the evening. The London Advertiser asserts that Louis Napoleon has made up his mind, at the first favorable opportunity, to make a descent on the shores of Ireland.

VIRGINIA ASPIRANTS FOR THE PRESIDENCY.—The old Dominion is always on hand with candidates for the Presidency. For 1860 she offers R. M. T. Hunter, Henry A. Wise, John Minor Botts, William L. Goggins and John Letcher.

Boston, July 14th.

Death of Rufus Choate.—A private dispatch from Halifax states that Hon. Rufus Choate died there on Thursday afternoon. No particulars have yet been received.

Affairs at Fort Yuma and Beale's Crossing—Hostages Killed.

A letter to the "Bulletin," dated June 22d, gives the following. It will be seen that the travel on the Stockton route, from Missouri, is still doomed to be interrupted by Indians:

"They had quite a lively time at Fort Yuma the other day. It will be recollected that Col. Hillman sent down to the commanding officer at the Fort nine Mohave Indians as hostages. It seems that these Indians were under the impression that they were to be kept here for thirty days only, and the old chief kept a string around his leg, in which he tied a knot every day; and since the completion of the thirty days they have been quite desponding. It is said that some days ago, one of them begged one of the guards to kill him, as he would prefer that to being confined in the prison room at night. Day before yesterday, about three o'clock in the afternoon, when they were all outside of the guard house, under the charge of a sentinel, they made a break, four going down the east side of the ridge upon which the guard house is built, and four to the west, passing in rear of the officers' quarters—the old chief, with heroic devotion, standing by the sentinel, and seizing his gun as soon as it was brought down, and before it could be made to bear upon his companions, amongst whom he had a son some eighteen or nineteen years of age. A member of the guard seeing the scuffle between the sentinel and the chief, ran up and thrust the latter through with his bayonet, inflicting a mortal wound. Upon this the chief started to run towards the party going east, when the sentinel, whose gun he had been holding, shot him through the head, the ball coming out through his face.

By this time, the guard began to fire quite rapidly, and in a few moments the entire command, officers and soldiers, were in pursuit. The day was comparatively cool and pleasant, the mercury standing 105°. The bottom to the westward being tolerably bare, while some were running down the hill, others were firing over their heads at the Indians beyond. This ceased, however, as the Indians reached the bushes near the river. Those who had fled to the east took the river, and coming down with the rapid current, keeping well in towards the south bank, afforded targets for the men on the opposite shore. Three men pushed out in a boat—none of them with arms, however—and got up close to one, striking him repeatedly with their oars, but the Indian, by diving, eluded them.

It appears from all that can be learned, that six Indians were killed, and one or two of the remaining three wounded. Two or three were killed in the river, and is supposed to have died in the junction between the Colorado and Gila rivers since; and, one was killed at the coal pit about a mile from the Fort.

What effect this may have upon the Indians above, it is very difficult to foretell. It is probable, however, that any ill-feeling it may engender, will show itself by attacks on small parties, and away from the immediate vicinity of the military posts. It is to be hoped that nothing more serious may be apprehended.

An officer came down from the post at Beale's Crossing, the other day, in a small row boat, to try to get a steamer to go up with clothing and supplies; but the steamboat company are unwilling to attempt it with so much water to contend against in the canyons. The Lieutenant went on to San Francisco by the last stage.

Lieut. Mowry is at Hermosillo, and is expected here soon.

Last week we had a specimen of summer weather—the mercury rising up to 115° and 116° in the shade. I understand that at the hospital at the Fort it was 118° one day, and 117° the next, and remained above 110 for some time after sun-set. No one can say that Uncle Sam's troops don't stand fire first-rate.

H. T.

Latest from Washington.

Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, July 10, 1859.

Jefferson Davis has returned to Mississippi to define his position and confront Senator Brown and other rivals, who are holding him to a practical assertion of his former ultraism.

Douglas is here on private business, and has not dined with the President.

WASHINGTON, July 11.

The President goes to Bedford Springs next Monday, accompanied by his usual suite.

The number of agents and owners of firearms and factories collected here is considerable, competing for the appropriation of the $100,000 made for that object last session in the Navy. Various newspapers are freely enlisted, and other influences, on the one side or another.

WASHINGTON, July 12.

The Cabinet had Mr. McLane's project of a treaty with Mexico under consideration to-day, but made no progress, in consequence of the difficulty of furnishing money, which is a sine qua non with Juarez. None can be raised on any negotiation made here, because the Senate may reject, and the House will not probably make an appropriation if it is ratified. The means for equipping and sending volunteers cannot be procured without advances here, and the force named by Juarez is wholly insufficient, even if it could be sent. The upshot of the matter will probably be that Mr. McLane will come home, abandoning the experiment he has taken in hand as useless.

To the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 13.

The War Department has adopted a regulation fixing the pay upon sutlers, at posts occupied by one or more companies, at ten cents a month for each commissioned officer and enlisted man belonging to the command in each regiment. The fund accruing to it as above, or as much of it as may be necessary, will be appropriated to the maintenance of the band.

Dates from El Paso to the 25th of June state that the Apaches had stopped and robbed the mail coach near Tucson. They had also robbed the Patagonia Mining Company of several thousand dollars worth of property. Other minor depredations had also been perpetrated by them, and they had committed one murder at the copper mines. A detachment of troops was ordered out by Col. Bonneville, but he had not men enough at his disposal to make an effective campaign. He recommends the erection of four new military posts in Arizona.

There was much consternation at Sonora at the rise of the Opata and Yague Indians, who are defeating the Mexican Government troops, and advancing on the settlements.

A bitter contest is anticipated in New Mexico between Mr. Otero and Judge Watts, for the Delegateship.

Since the capture of Mazatlan by Pasquera, there has been shipped to San Francisco from Mazatlan, Guaymas and Manzanilla, silver to the amount of $11,000,000, while half as much more has probably been smuggled away by the British war vessels on the coast.

NOTICE.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between the name and style of Williams & Jackson, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by J. Jackson, THOS. S. WILLIAMS, and PARMENIO A. JACKMAN.

To the Traveling Public. STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily stage running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers, therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through to six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents. All packages, baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All packages weighing under 40 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each. All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route. A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. PARMENIO A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. Dyer, Bro's, & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business. R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us. 23-11 GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors.

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY.

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive. 37-11

MULES FOR SALE.

40 MULES are for Sale. Apply to JOHN HARTNETT.

Information Wanted!

OF WESLEY KLIPSTINE, who left Kan. Territory in May 1858, for Salt Lake City, or California, and has not been heard of since. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received by his brother. Address: ISRAEL KLIPSTINE, Nevada City, Nevada Co., California.

NOTICE.

THE PUBLIC are informed, that in addition to the brand "U. S." on all mules reserved for the use of the army in Utah, an additional mark of a round hole punched in the left ear, will hereafter be made on all these mules. G. H. CROSSMAN, Deputy Q. M. Gen'l U. S. A. Camp Floyd, Aug. 24, 1859. 238-11

THE VALLEY TIAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1859.

NUMBER 40.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

BATTLE OF SOLFERINO.

The entire force of the enemy amounted to from 250,000 to 270,000 men. The new artillery produced a terrible effect. Its discharge reached the enemy at a distance whence their guns could not reply, and covered the plain with their dead. The loss of the French is 720 officers placed hors de combat, including 120 killed, and 12,000 privates killed and wounded. Among the killed are seven Colonels and six Lieut. Colonels.

Among the wounded are five generals. The French commander, to whom the credit of the day is entirely due, whether it be Nél, McMahon, or the Emperor himself, sent forward the Imperial Guard and a strong division of the infantry of the line against the Austrian center, and succeeded for a time in breaking it. Instead of bringing up their forces to repel this formidable attack, the supports were sent to the left and right wings, which did not need them.

Desperate attempts were made to recapture Solferino, but the French strongly held it and the bugles began to sound a general retreat. An attempt was made by the cavalry to pursue them, which led to an encounter between the French Chasseurs and the Austrian Husars, in which the former were rapidly put to the right about. It is stated that not a single Hungarian regiment was allowed to take part in the battle, and that the Italian regiments had all been previously sent to the Tyrol.

Twenty thousand corpses are said to have been buried, and many men are yet lying in the ditches and corn fields. The Berlin and Vienna letters confidently speak of negotiations having been opened by Prussia with England and Russia, for the purpose of establishing, if possible, a basis for combined mediation.

VIENNA, July 1.

Austrian correspondence says that the loss at the battle on the 24th ult., as far as has yet been ascertained, is 15,000 killed, and 8,000 wounded. Further information will be published.

VERONA, July 1.

Since the 24th of June, there have been merely unimportant skirmishes between the outposts.

An Austrian Detachment taken Prisoners by a Railway Engineer.

Among the many lighter passages of the war with which the Parisians amuse themselves, we find in the Sport the story of the capture of a detachment of Austrians who were taken prisoners by the engineer of the railway. It appears that the Austrians were en route for Peschiera to reinforce General Urban, when the engineer, whose sympathies were naturally on the Italian side, "switched off," and conveyed the Teutonic heroes into the middle of the allied camp. Here they were politely escorted from the railway carriages by the French soldiers, who, with that amiable politeness for which the nation is distinguished, saluted their enemies with "All those who are going to France will please change cars!" The feelings of the Austrians, at finding themselves taken prisoners in so ignoble a manner, may be imagined but not described.

GERMANY.

The Independence Belge says that the new English Ministry had addressed counsels of moderation on the German States, cautioning them against the danger of encouraging a policy which might lead to a general war.

The War attitude of Germany—Strength of the Prussian Army and Policy of the Federation.

But another armed giant is preparing to step in among the combatants. Prussia has at the present moment 410,000 men in arms. Of these she proposes to send 31,000 to the Rhine, under the orders of Bavaria. From the beginning of the war Bavaria has exhibited the most hostile feeling towards France, and there can be little question that the war will extend in that direction if Prussia places her troops under the orders of his Bavarian Majesty. One thing is certain. If Prussia does take an active part amongst the belligerents, it is not without the knowledge and countenance of Russia. The two Courts have ever been on the most intimate terms. Russia owed to Prussian diplomacy the treaty of Adrianople, which placed Turkey at her mercy, and four years ago Prussia did all she was enabled to do to protect the Czar. It would be quite in consonance with the traditional policy of Prussia were she to have encouraged France to commence the war, and yet allow Germany to unite with Austria. The presence of 13 line of battle ships belonging to Russia, at present in the harbors of Cherbourg, cannot be directed against Germany. Very probably Russia feared the intervention of England, and gladly made a compact with France against her. It was a deep game, to punish Austria for her desertion during the Crimean war by letting loose the legions of France—to weaken France by the loss of her bravest soldiers and the exhaustion of her people—and to lessen the prestige of England by appearing to coerce her into neutrality.

But if Prussia is about to interfere, she must not delay. Germany—whether right or not, matters little when national instincts are concerned—believes the Mincio to be natural line of demarcation between Italy and herself. Germany looks upon France as her enemy, and it requires more than the honeyed words of the Monitor to reassure her; while, on the other hand, Austria is a German Power, and, for the security of Germany, must not be too much weakened. We English may be right in believing that all Italy should be free from the Austrian dominion. We think Austria would become more powerful by concentrating her force and energy with her German possessions, but Germany does not think so. At all events the passage of the Mincio by France must bring matters to a crisis as far as regards the interference of Prussia in the name of Germany. If France is permitted to seize Venice, and to storm the great fortresses of Venetia, the sooner Austria comes to terms with the Emperor the better for herself. In a little time it will be too late for Germany to aid her.—Liverpool Courier, June 29.

ENGLAND.

In the House of Lords on Friday, Lord Brougham called attention to the war in Italy, and asked if there was any truth in the report that the government intended to reduce the navy estimates.

The Duke of Somerset denied the truth of the report.

Earl Hardwick eulogized the late Government for the effort to strengthen the navy, and gave various statistics to show that it was even yet not what it ought to be.

Earl Ellenborough fully recognized the necessity of placing the navy in a proper condition, but trusted that some attention would also be devoted to the army.

In the House of Commons, on Thursday, Lord Palmerston announced the intention of the new Ministry to pursue a policy of strict neutrality with reference to foreign affairs. He also announced that a Reform Bill would be introduced immediately on the meeting of the next session of Parliament.

Mr. Baxter gave notice of an inquiry into the advisability of canceling the contracts of the late Government with the Galway line of steamers.

FRENCH NAVY.

NEW YORK, July 15.

The British colonial newspapers continue to exhibit alarm at the movements of the French Navy along the fishing coasts. The Halifax Sun, of July 6th, says French men-of-war in unusual numbers are making their appearance in the straits of Belle Isle and on the coast of Newfoundland; and it is quite apparent that what the Emperor regards as essential to the extension of his naval power is to be obtained by a demonstration. Rifle companies are forming in various parts of Nova Scotia, similar to those of England. A number of sailors are volunteering for the English navy under the bounty offered by Government.

What will result from the Battle of Solferino.

What next? is the question which every one now is asking. Even at this moment the military position is scarcely changed; for we have as yet no reason to conclude that the French have advanced far in pursuit of their enemy. The Austrian is where he was in the early part of last week, with this exception, that he has suffered a defeat, lost several thousand men, a certain number of flags and cannon, and that his military prestige is lowered in proportion to his losses. The system which looked so well on paper has broken down, but the war is not yet concluded. The Austrian still possesses his fortresses; and even if Napoleon III. be as successful in the difficult work of besieging fortified towns as he has hitherto been on the battle field, there is still the Tyrol to fall back upon. Meantime, the Austrians are in their own country, close to their own fortresses, within easy reach of their own resources. The French, on the other hand, must pay in hard cash for everything they require. They are already in need of reinforcements—thinned as they have been by the sword and by disease—and each day that passes becomes, in one respect, a gain to Austria and a proportionate loss to France. Up to the point at which we are arrived, then, it cannot be said that any decisive triumph has been achieved by the invading army. Louis Napoleon has, indeed, "covered himself" with that glory of which his countrymen are chiefly proud; he has proved that he can command an army no less successfully than he can govern a people; and it may be that he "who runs may read" a lesson therein for other nations beside Austria.

To all appearance the Italian question is not less difficult of solution, not less embarrassing, not less complicated than it was ten months ago. We have Swiss soldiers sacking Perugia with barbarous cruelty; the King of Sardinia, not so much accepting a temporary protectorate, as indulging in visions of a future kingdom over States in Italy, some hitherto independent, some intimately connected, if not actually allied, with Austria. On the other hand, the news of the battle of Solferino is not likely to calm the agitation that exists in Germany, where the same mad cry is raised for war as was raised by the fathers of those who are now shouting to be led against the Third Napoleon. Had Lord Malmesbury been still in power, we could have asserted—as it is, we can only express a faint hope—that Prussia will not be induced to go to war by any expectation of support from England. The danger, indeed, is rather the other way. It is more to be feared that Prussia will rush wildly into the struggle, from the fear that the present Ministry in this country are entangled by an alliance which is not with Austria.

For our own parts, we can only repeat our former counsels, viz:—that England should maintain a firm neutrality, and, prepared for any emergency that may arise, should watch for a moment when her powerful mediation may be worthily proffered in the cause of peace.—London Herald, June 23.

By the arrival of the clipper ship 'Challenge,' 46 days from China, we have Hongkong papers to the 14th May. The U. S. Minister Gen. Ward and suite had arrived at Penang on their way to Peking, and embarked on the steamer Powhattan. It was reported that the steamer Hongkong had been chartered by the U. S. Government to accompany Gen. Ward on his journey to the north. She left Hongkong on the 14th for Canton, towing the body of Yeh, for interment, in that city, and would be immediately fitted for sea on her return. Commodore Tainall was seriously indisposed on board the Powhattan.

The Russian squadron arrived at Singapore on the 26th April from Cronstadt. The squadron was daily expected at Hongkong via Manila. It consists of three war steamers, 14 guns in all.

The French had sustained a repulse at Saigon (Cochin China). One thousand French troops were attacked by twenty thousand Cochinese, and having no artillery, were obliged to retreat with a loss of 19 men, including two officers.—National.

FROM THE BALLOONISTS.

AUTHENTIC REPORT OF THE VOYAGE.

Special Telegraphic Report of Mr. Hyde to the Republican.

ADAMS, N. Y., July 2.

Wise, Lamontain, Wager, and their passenger landed on a farm in Jefferson county, ten miles from this place, at twenty minutes after two o'clock this afternoon, all safe. They traveled over the whole of Lake Erie from Toledo across Long Point, passing below Buffalo and the Niagara Falls at twelve o'clock.

After they had passed Buffalo, a violent wind carried the Balloon with great velocity over Lake Ontario.

Before reaching within sight of the Eastern shore of Ontario, the aerial ship lost her ascending power, and rapidly sank towards the water; the ballast had entirely given out, and the provisions, water, supplies, and some of the clothing of the passengers were thrown overboard, still the balloon neared the lake with great velocity, when it was found necessary to take off the propeller machinery, and pitch it overboard.

These results still not being sufficient, the oars and seats of the boats were given to the waves. All hands then left the boat and clambered into the car, sixteen feet above.

Despite of all exertions, the air vessel skimmed to within thirty feet of the water, and actually darted the boat into the lake. It righted itself, however, and the balloon went on with a speed of two miles a minute.

Providentially, the balloon reached the shore, having traveled over fifty miles; just above the waves, which were rough and boisterous; but a terrific peril now appeared. The balloon rushed into a thick forest, and tearing down trees, and breaking branches, pursued its resistless course for upwards of a mile, dashing the occupants of the car to and fro against trunks and limbs, till at last it caught a tall sycamore, and the silk rent into ribbons, when the apparatus at once came to a halt; leaving the voyagers suspended twenty feet in the air.

Mr. Lamontain was slightly injured about his limbs, but all of the others reached the ground safe.

The distance, from twelve to thirteen hundred miles, accomplished in nineteen hours.

MORE ABOUT THE BALLOON.

LANCASTER, PA., July 5.

Prof. Wise returned to this city last evening. He publishes a full account of the late voyage in the balloon Atlantic in this evening's Express. He concludes his sketch with the remark that he is now willing and anxious to attempt a voyage across the Ocean, with an outfit that will not cost more than $6,000, and will do so as soon as he can raise the means.

NEW YORK, July 5.

The Albany Argus has the following concerning the balloon Atlantic:

Mr. John Wise, the celebrated aeronaut, arrived in Albany at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. He reports that from St. Louis to Medina, Orleans county, from which place the last telegraphic dispatch concerning its progress was received, the voyage was highly successful, the balloon working to their entire satisfaction, and justifying the hopes with which they set out that they would be able to reach the seaboard east from this point. Finding they were somewhat out of their course, and could not possibly make New York, being too far north, they determined to proceed to Boston or Portland.

Before taking that direction it was concluded to land at Rochester, there drop Messrs. Gager and Hyde, and then proceed on their journey eastward. In carrying out their intention they dropped down gradually, and finally struck a hurricane, perfectly frightful in its force, which hurried them along at terrific speed towards Lake Ontario. They were driven down to the very surface of the water, where the balloon was lightened in every possible way.

They were carried with fearful speed and violence towards the shore and through a piece of woods, into which they finally managed to land. This was in Henderson township, Jefferson county. The entire distance traveled was 1,150 miles in 19 hours and 50 minutes. One of the incidents of the voyage was an oversight which came near proving disastrous to Mr. Wise. He was in the wicker basket, and being overcome with fatigue, laid down and fell asleep.

The rest of the party were in the boat below and it being necessary to advise with him on the course of the balloon, they called to Mr. Wise several times, but receiving no response, Mr. Gager went to him by climbing up the ropes and found him breathing spasmodically from the effects of the escaping gas which was slowly suffocating him. He was immediately aroused by Mr. Gager and soon recovered his senses. The greatest altitude attained was two miles.

TROY, New York, July 5.

The Daily Whig learns from Mr. Gager, one of the passengers by the Atlantic, who arrived in Troy this morning, the following particulars:

SATURDAY, 1:30 P. M.—(St. Louis time.) We were abreast of Rochester, over Lake Ontario, where the altitude was changed on the increase of the wind, which was blowing a perfect hurricane; unaccompanied by rain. The supply of gas was small, consequently the balloon did not reach an altitude above the storm and the vessel was immediately headed for shore. When the storm was highest, the vessel was only about thirty feet above the level of the lake. We reached land in a few seconds in the town of Henderson, Jefferson county with all hands on board. We landed in an edge of woods, with the basket swinging to and fro, making rapid evolutions among the highest branches of the trees, the passengers cling to the rigging. The strength and general excellence of the arrangement of the balloon basket probably saved the party. The balloon was left in a high tree, swinging above the boat and much damaged. The whole distance traveled is 1,150 miles. We started at 6:40 P. M. on Friday from St. Louis, and landed at Henderson, Jefferson county, at 2:20, Saturday, P. M.

Loss of the Steamship Argo.

INTERESTING PARTICULARS OF THE WRECK.

Safety of the Passengers.

ST. JOHN, N. F., July 1.

All of the passengers who were aboard the steamship Argo, which was wrecked in Trepassy Bay a few days since, have arrived here safe. The steam-tugs left again to-day to bring up the crew, and what was saved from the wreck. The following are the particulars of the disaster.

Between three and four o'clock on Tuesday morning the Argo made Cape Pine, bearing twelve miles distant from the coast. The pilot, captain, and all the other officers and the crew, were called on deck at the sight of land. The course was then changed, and made S. E. by E. This should have cleared her fifteen miles from Cape Race.

At about a quarter past four o'clock a very dense fog came on. At half-past five the captain spoke a fishing schooner. He stopped the engines, reversed them and hailing the schooner, he asked "Where are you fishing?" Answer—"On the eastern side of Trepassy Bay, a mile and a half or two miles off." The captain ordered the helm to be put hard aport, the engines to go on in full speed and the vessel to be kept S. S. E. by the standard compass. This should have taken her clear of the land. The captain and all the officers were on deck. The officer in charge at the wheel gave the order "steady" as the ship brought up to her S. S. E. course. At that moment breakers were seen and the engines were stopped and reversed at full speed. Before the ship got asternway upon her she grounded her bow upon the rocks at Fresh-water Point, eight miles from Trepassy.

The boats were lowered and got ready, when the passengers disembarked with but little confusion. The women and children being cared for first. The anchors were then passed out of the stern, the coal thrown overboard, the forward boilers blown off and every exertion made to get her off, but without avail. The Captain now sent off the Pilot to Trepassy to get assistance, when the steamers Dauntless and Blue Jacket were dispatched to the wreck. The sails, etc., were sent ashore and tents made to protect the passengers, and when the provisions and luggage could be got at they were also sent on shore. The fishermen plundered the ship. About one hundred of them came around her on hearing the signal guns. They cut away her masts and completely skinned her. At four o'clock, p.m., the ship filled with water, fell on her beam ends and sank in six fathoms of water. The baggage belonging to many of the passengers was lost.

There was no house within eight miles of the shore where she struck. At five in the afternoon a boat returned from Trepassy with assurances that two steamers were on their way from St. John to assist them. Tuesday night was passed by the passengers and crew in tents, with a tolerable degree of comfort. On Wednesday, the steamers arrived and brought off the passengers, and a part of the baggage. They will return this afternoon for the crew, taking with them soldiers and police officers to recover what portion of the property stolen from the ship they can find. Divers also go to get out anything that can be recovered from the wreck. The passengers are all quartered and provided for here. They will be sent on as soon as arrangements can be perfected.

ARMY NEWS.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

The following is a list of the promotions and appointments in the army of the United States, made by the President since the publication of "General Orders" No. 5, of March 15, 1859:—

PROMOTIONS.

Corps of Engineers.—First Lieutenant Edward B. Hunt to be captain, July 1, 1859, having served "fourteen years continuous service as lieutenant."

Second Lieutenant Wm. P. Craighill to be First Lieutenant, July 1, 1859, vice Hunt, promoted.

Corps of Topographical Engineers.—First Lieutenant Wm. F. Smith to be captain, July 1, 1859, having served "fourteen years continuous service as lieutenant."

Second Lieutenant Charles N. Turnbull to be First Lieutenant, July 1, 1859, vice Smith, promoted.

First Regiment of Dragoons.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Richard H. Brewer, to be Second Lieutenant, March 29, 1859, vice Evans, deceased, company A.

Second Regiment of Dragoons.—First Lieutenant John Buford, Jr., to be captain, March 9, 1859, vice Givens, deceased, company B.

Second Lieutenant Francis C. Armstrong, to be first lieutenant, March 9, 1859, vice Buford promoted, company C.

Brevet Second Lieutenant Solomon Williams, to be second lieutenant, March 9, 1859, vice Armstrong, promoted, company C.

First Regiment of Cavalry.—Second Lieutenant Eugene W. Crittenden, to be first lieutenant, May 4, 1859, vice Perkins, cashiered, company A.

Brevet Second Lieutenant Andrew Jackson, Jr., to be second lieutenant, May 4, 1859, vice Crittenden, promoted, company E.

Fourth Regiment of Artillery.—Brevet Second Lieutenant George H. Weeks, of the First artillery, to be second lieutenant, February 10, 1859, vice Roane, deceased, company K.

Brevet Second Lieutenant James Hallonquist, of the Third artillery, to be second lieutenant, February 24, 1859, vice Bennett, deceased, company G.

Second Regiment of Infantry.—Second Lieutenant Alfred E. Latimer, to be first lieutenant, April 18, 1859, vice Paige, deceased, company C.

Brevet Second Lieutenant Wm. G. Robinson, of the Seventh infantry, to be Second Lieutenant, April 18, 1859, vice Latimer, promoted, company G.

Sixth Regiment of Infantry.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Charles E. Jessup, of the Tenth infantry, to be Second Lieutenant, May 31, 1859, vice Lee, resigned, company F.

Seventh Regiment of Infantry.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Geo. N. Bascom, of the Ninth infantry, to be Second Lieutenant, April 23, 1859, vice Potts, deceased, company C.

Tenth Regiment of Infantry.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Oliver P. Gooding, of the Fifth infantry, to be Second Lieutenant, Feb. 5, 1859, vice Reed, deceased, company K.

APPOINTMENTS.

Quartermaster's Department.—First Lieutenant Fredwell Moore, of the Second infantry, to be Assistant Quartermaster, with the rank of Captain, May 21, 1859, vice Page, deceased.

Medical Department.—Kirtley Ryland, of Missouri, to be Assistant Surgeon, April 28, 1859, vice Henry, resigned.

Richard G. Lay, of the District of Columbia, to be Second Lieutenant, June 20, 1859, vice Lee, resigned, company L.

TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER NEAR ROME.—The Swiss troops sent from Rome to Perugia to suppress the rising, had a desperate encounter with the people, whom they shot down indiscriminately.

Another account says a sanguinary collision had taken place at Perugia between the soldiers of the Pope and the inhabitants.

THE BALLOON EXPRESS BAG.—Oswego, July 5, 1859.—The express bag sent by the United States Express Agent from St. Louis for New York, in the balloon Atlantic, was picked up yesterday on the lake, six miles west of this city. It contains over forty letters to New York correspondents, amdg which is a draft of $1,000 on a New York bank. The package will be forwarded by express this afternoon.

MAIL ROUTE TO PIKE'S PEAK.—In speaking of the routes, the Rocky Mountain News, of the 11th ult., published at Denver City, says: "Mr. Williams (of Jones & Russell's Express,) informs us that he has made an entire change in the location of the mail route. The company having purchased the stock and route of the Salt Lake and California mail, (which leaves St. Joseph every Saturday,) will now move their whole force to the Platte route, by way of Fort Kearny, to the South Platte crossing, from whence one line will continue up the North Platte to Laramie and the South Pass, the other diverging following the South Platte to this place. Mr. W. gave the necessary order for the removal of all the stations to the Platte as he came up, and on the Thursday, the 9th inst., the first coach left by that route under the personal direction of Mr. Williams.

THE VALLEY T. AN.

Wednesday, Aug. 17, 1859.

THE MASSACRE OF EMIGRANTS ON THE CALIFORNIA ROAD.—We are pleased to see that prompt punishment has been meted out to the Indians, who were engaged in the attack on the emigrant train, which was noticed in our last.

Lieut. Gay, who had been sent by Gen. Johnston to look up the perpetrators, of that that massacre, by making a forced march during the night, fell upon the Indians about daylight on the 13th. The Indians had chosen a place and were waiting to give the soldiers battle, but did not expect such unusual promptitude.

Owing to the nature of the ground where they were surprised, the Dragoons were not able to use their horses, except in the first charge; they then dismounted and fought them on foot for about two hours, when the Indians fled over the mountains. Being obliged to leave a guard for his wagons, Lieut. Gay had only 42 men with him, and the savages numbered about 150. On the part of the soldiers, six men were wounded, and some of the horses. The Indians are said to have had twenty killed.

The Dragoons captured twenty horses, among them one of the horses which was taken from the emigrant party who were killed by these Indians, showing that if not the perpetrators, the party were in league with the murderers. The Mormon guide who was mounted on a troop horse, rode off, and turned the animal over to an Indian boy, who rode him into the fight, and was shot as an enemy. It is hardly worth while to mention an indignation meeting which was held by the people of Box Elder on this account. First, the people of Box Elder (Brigham city) are very officious sending expresses here on account of the massacre of the emigrants, and then very indignant if a redskin happens to be killed.

An express from Lieut. Gay went down immediately to Gen. Johnston, who has sent reinforcements to Lieut. Gay, who expects the Indians to combine and give him another fight, consisting of one company of 2nd Dragoons, and two companies of Infantry. A depot will be established on Bear river, and the pursuit of the Indians continued, with that station as a centre. Two companies of Major Lynde's command will also reinforce the party.

Maj. Wallen, with an escort of twenty-five men, has passed through the city on his way to Camp Floyd.

He was in command of the surveying party from Walla Walla to the City Rocks on the California emigrant road. The majority of his party were left on Raft River to recruit their stock, preparatory to their return to the Dalles. The party left the Dalles on the 4th of June. They have been surveying the road with the view of improving it if possible. We understand that the report on the road will be very unfavorable. The party met with no obstruction from the natives on the road; in fact, which is rather unusual, they did not see any. They met Maj. Reynolds, who is en route for Oregon, with the battery, and his command were getting along well.

DELEGATE TO CONGRESS.—The Election returns have not all been received, but sufficient have been received to show that W. H. Hooper is elected as Delegate to Congress, a result of which we had no doubt, from the first. Thirteen hundred and forty votes were polled in Salt Lake City and county.

The Western Metropolitan, Kansas City says, the wheat harvest is almost over in the surrounding country, south and west of us, and accounts from all quarters speak of the yield as being heavy, and excellent in quality.

RICHMONT, Va., June 15.

Messrs. O. Jennings Wise and P. H. Aylett, met this morning in North Carolina. Mr. Aylett shot at Mr. Wise, but without effect, and the latter fired into the air. Mr. Aylett then withdrew his challenge, and asked for a reconciliation, which Mr. Wise refused.

INDEPENDENCE, June 20, 1859.

The malicious prosecution of H. Clay Faye for larceny of his negro man Austin, ended on Saturday night about 12 o'clock, at Westport.—Capt. Pate was triumphantly acquitted, and the decision was received with vehement applause. The prosecution failed to prove a single point alleged, and the indignation of the people is great against Dr. Morris, the prosecutor. The crowd in the court room could not be restrained from applauding Messrs. Hovey & Claiborne, attorneys for defense. Dr. Morris, on oath, denies that he had anything to do with the article in the Missouri Democrat of the 11th May, charging negro theft upon Pate.—[Missouri Republican.]

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOTICE

To California Emigrants and Citizens of Utah Territory.

The undersigned is informed that there are many persons at Salt Lake City, destined for California, who are in doubt as to the route they should take. He would inform all such, that by direction of Gen. Johnston, he has within the past three months, explored and surveyed two new routes to California, either of which is about 300 miles shorter than the Old Humboldt, or St. Mary's river route; and from all he can hear and has read, incomparably better in respect to wood, water, and grass. Indeed, by this route the Great Salt Lake desert is entirely avoided, and grass and water may be said to abound, except at few points.

The best route is that from Camp Floyd through Gen. Johnston's Pass, and thence along the rim between the Great Salt Lake desert and the Sevier Lake desert, keeping generally from 25 to 40 miles south of the General Johnston and Hastings's Pass road.

Mr. John Reese, of Genoa, and his son, have just come over the route with me, and will be enabled, and are ready, to conduct any parties of emigrants or herds of animals which may be tending towards California. The young man will be doubtless in the city at the time this notice appears, and Mr. John Reese in the course of about 12 days, as soon as he returns from an expedition under the direction of Lieut. J. L. K. Smith, topographical engineer, who has been charged by General Johnston with the duty of improving the direction of the road within the last one hundred miles, and establishing troughs at a particular spring.

The undersigned is confident that this route will be found from 25 to 50 per cent better than the Old Humboldt River route, and particularly fine for stock driving. It has also the advantage of being a later fall and earlier spring route.

He will, as soon as Lieut. Smith returns, have an itinerary of the route prepared, setting forth the distances between the camping places, and where wood, grass and water can be found, and will send it to the papers of the Territory for publication. This itinerary it would be well for emigrants and others interested in the route to procure and keep.

J. H. SIMPSON,
Capt. Corps Top'l Eng'rs.Camp Floyd, U. T.,
August 7th, 1859.Camp Floyd, U. T.,
August 15, 1859.

Great excitement was caused in Camp last Wednesday evening, by a report that 3 or 4 soldiers had been shot in Great Salt Lake City by the Mormons; this happily turned out to be incorrect, one only was shot, which was one too many. After the clemency shown to these (to use a very mild term) misguided individuals, it seems that mercy to them is entirely misplaced.

Only one week previous Frank McNeil was shot dead in the streets in the most cowardly and dastardly manner while in the city attending to his legitimate business, viz: prosecuting the Mormon authorities for false imprisonment; the murderous assassin of course escaped. Now this seems that the police business of the city must be conducted in a very loose manner, or else that the officials connive at a murderer's escape, one of these conclusions must be arrived at. Query.—Which is it?

Have not the Mormons profited largely by the presence of the troops? as an instance, numbers of them did not even know the current coin of the United States at Upper Camp Floyd in July last, now they are able to buy Government mules, &c.

Have not the troops conducted themselves in a most orderly and peaceable manner?—Any one of common sense would think that the profits accruing to them would make them behave themselves; but it appears close fisted as they are, even self-interest is not sufficient to prevent these infuriated people from aggravating the troops; forbearance cannot be carried too far.

On Sunday afternoon, about a quarter to four o'clock, a disastrous fire occurred at the store of Miller, Russell & Co., in this Camp. Mr. Tracy, one of the firm and Mr. Thompson, a clerk, were in the store at the time. In less than five minutes from the first alarm being given, the flames shot through the roof with the most fearful violence: the devouring element progressed with such rapidity that in a quarter of an hour the whole building (which was framed) was in one mass of flames; from the inflammable nature of the material of which the bulk of the stock was composed no efforts could have saved it;—the books alone were saved. The stock was valued at $15,000.

[For the Valley Tan.]
"The London 'Advertiser' asserts that Louis Napoleon has made up his mind, at the first favorable opportunity, to make a descent on the shores of Ireland."

MA. EDITOR: The above quotation appeared in the foreign news of your last week's paper. Though bearing a somewhat unauthentic origin, it challenges attention, as being indicative of the primary intentions of Louis Napoleon;—as reflecting his most probable policy relative to those who at the onset of the campaign embraced the neutrality course. Enthusiastic over the signal successes which the French arms have thus far achieved, he boldly asserts a determination to accomplish what has very likely been the leading theme of his ambitious aspirations since he mounted to the altitude of a monarch, viz:—to retrieve the honor and nonpareil reputation for chivalry which France lost upon the field of Waterloo. He casts aside all apprehensions of future reverses, and boldly looking over probable exigencies, fastens his over-reaching gaze upon the cynosure of his hopes:—the subjugation of nations untrammelled by alliance obligations, and the compulsory drawing of the same into his own line of policy, or reducing them to a condition of non-interference. He undoubtedly considers Austria already brought to the one or the other of these alternatives. Subdue, and then use, as with his uncle before him, is the motto of Louis Napoleon.

The life of a monarch generally passes away like a black cloud passing over our heads, which refuses to pay the toll of its passage by showering fertilizing drops to earth, or in any way compensating for the gloom which it creates. What cares Napoleon how many of his brave countrymen bleed, so long as there be enough left to carry him on in his career of blood? What cares he if all those majestic vessels of war concentrated about Cherbourg be sent to the bottom of the sea, laden with human freight, if such a disastrous consequence is necessary in the carrying out his designs? Not to foster a spirit of fraternity among his people, and through diplomatic wisdom abroad, and just and liberal laws at home, secure to his country peace—the first boon of heaven—prosperity and happiness, are Napoleon's exertions bent; but to further incarnadine the already disgracefully blood-blotted pages of French history, and win for himself a name and fame that will sound with an undying voice through coming time, as have the names of the Caesars, the Alexanders, and the Napoleons, who preceded him. History goes to show with very few and far-between exceptions, that this has been the general character of rulers of monarchies, and so long as

"Those pag'd things of sable sway,
With fronts of brass and feet of clay,"
are the objects of men's adorations, instead of the heaven-granted rights of man, so long it will be so.

Napoleon is a shrewd tactician. In what more effective spot could an army of conquest strike old England than to direct first operations at Ireland? To Louis Napoleon, this plan of a campaign against her is particularly promising. France is the best European friend that Ireland ever had. How long would it be after the landing of a French army upon that isle, till the Irish people—every mother's son of them able to enter the ranks—would rise in revolt against that damnable tyranny which has ground them down in poverty and servility for centuries? Fighting against the wrongs which their fathers' fathers groaned beneath, and on the side of a religion which is in concurrence with their own heart-felt sentiments,—instead of for a Church which they were compelled to pay tribute to, although it be diametrically opposed to their mother faith,—who would dare to put a limit upon the stubbornness with which they would maintain themselves in such a revolution? Has England, in her full age of a thousand years, received as terrible a shock as this would probably be?

Alliance obligations—what are they to the impetuous, fame-seeking Napoleon? Although he made them bands of steel in the Russian campaign, when, by so doing he promoted his own individual interests; yet, when they interpose themselves between himself and his ambitious desires, they are ropes of sand. "Waterloo must be blotted out," or Napoleon's opinion of his own destiny is fabulous.

The Postmaster General has ordered of G. F. Nesbitt, the contractor, one million of stamped envelopes, with the new self-ruling improvement. They will be furnished to the public at five cents more a hundred than is charged for the present pattern.

The wheat harvest in Kentucky is rapidly progressing, and will soon be over. The yield is generally fine, and the quality of the grain most excellent. We have no doubt the crop of 1859 is the largest and best ever raised in Kentucky.—[Louisville Courier.]

DISTRICT COURT.

WEDNESDAY MORNING,
Aug. 10, 1859.

The marshal called the court to order. In the case of Williams vs. Hennefer it was sincerely stated to the court by Mr. Williams that he had lost his journal containing the particulars of that year, and asked leave to withdraw his papers to annul them. Request granted.

Mr. Blair gave notice that at an early day he would file a motion for the discharge of Thomas Colbourn.

The case of Charles M. Brown vs. Wm. A. Hickman was called, and tried without a jury.

Joshua Arnold was sworn and examined on the part of the plaintiff, and Wm. and Louis Hatch, Morris Mechem and Terry for the defendant.

The defense claimed that the note had been paid in California, and that plaintiff had neglected to destroy the note on his return to G. S. L. City. Judgment for the plaintiff.

Mr. Blair moved for a severance of trial in the case of the people vs. Henry E. Phelps H. Spiers and that Spiers be tried that afternoon.

Court directed a venire to be issued for twelve qualified persons to serve as jurors, returnable at 2 1/2 p.m., to which hour the court took a recess.

2 1/2 p.m.

Court resumed its session.

The case of Bradford Leonard vs. John Bair, argued on yesterday, was called up, and judgment rendered as per prayer of the petitioner.

Mr. Blair gave notice that he would file a motion for a new trial in the case of Brown vs. Hickman; he also withdrew his motion for a severance of trial in the case of the people vs. Phelps and Spiers.

The prisoners Henry E. Phelps and Henry Spiers were arraigned for trial, charged with robbing Charles F. McCarty in Oct. last of $165 dollars.

The court then proceeded to impanel. Court issued an attachment for Mr. McCarty, the prosecuting witness in the case before the court, he having wilfully neglected to appear.

Marshal Dotson brought Mr. Louis Simmons, who, after being sworn, stated that he had heard Mr. Williams tell McCarty to go away to some place south of where he was then standing in Main street.

On hearing the foregoing statement the judge expressed himself indignant at Mr. Williams' unwarrantable proceeding. To the gentlemen accepted as jurors his honor remarked:

Gentlemen of the jury, you have not been sworn or impaneled, but the prisoners have been arraigned, and you will not be wanted till to-morrow at 10 o'clock. The marshal will take custody of the prisoners, and deliver them over to the jailer of this county to await the order of this court, and meantime the court will enter a rule against Thos. S. Williams, returnable to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, to show cause why he should not be disbarred.

At this juncture Mr. Williams came into court, and wished to know what was before it.

His honor replied, the court has acted upon the case, and will show you the affidavit on which the rule has been entered. You will be served with a rule, and then you can answer.

After examining the affidavit, Mr. Williams denied the charge, and said he was amply able to defend himself; he then proceeded to state his case, but the judge ordered him to take his seat.

His honor said he did not prejudice the case, but he felt it to be his duty to protect the dignity of the court.

Mr. Williams asked the court to allow the old recognizance to stand for the prisoners till to-morrow morning, but the court refused, the prisoners having been arraigned.

The court required the witnesses present for the prosecution to enter into recognizance for their appearance to-morrow morning.

Mr. Williams preferred to enter into new recognizance for the prisoners till to-morrow, but his honor refused to take it, stating that he intended to have them taken care of in such a way that he would know where to find them to-morrow.

Court adjourned till to-morrow at 10 a.m.

THURSDAY MORNING, 10 a.m.

Pursuant to adjournment, court convened.

On the motion to disbar Mr. Williams, he (Mr. Williams) stated, under oath, to the effect that he could substantiate the fact that he had assisted not in getting Mr. McCarty away from the city; that he would have given from his own pocket something had the witnesses appeared as instructed.

The court expressed satisfaction in the explanation, excused Mr. Williams, and fined Mr. McCarty the cost of issuing attachment against him.

Traverse jury impaneled, and instructed relative to the case before them. Mr. Williams introduced the case for the defense, and Hosea Stout followed in behalf of the prosecution.

Recess for half an hour.

2 p.m.

Court resumed its session, and the case last before it. Messrs. Miner and Williams addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoners, and Mr. Stout for the prosecution.

Two bills of indictment presented by the Grand Jury.

Jury was most succinctly and clearly charged by his honor relative to the Phelps and Spiers case, when they retired about 7 o'clock, and shortly returned for further instructions from the court.

At nearly 11 o'clock the jury was called into court, and stated, through their foreman that they could not agree upon a verdict, and again retired.

FRIDAY MORNING, 10 o'clock.

Court came to order pursuant to adjournment.

Answer filed by Mr. Ferguson in the case of Burr vs. Young and others.

Grand jury came into court, and his honor addressed them explanatory of his remarks yesterday. Stated that he had understood that his remarks then were taken as a reproach. Such was not the case. "I intended to give the grand jury information regarding the occurrence; but I did not intend to impute anything to them, for they have discharged their duties with great assiduity and dispatch, and have kept proper relations with the court."

"The circumstances were extraordinary, and went to show the condition of things outside this house, and my remarks were not intended for any other purpose, for you could not possibly have instituted an inquiry into the subject that I then addressed you upon; but I did think it a proper occasion, in a public charge, given publicly, to throw the influence of this court in favor of law and order. That is exactly what I meant, and nothing more. I said that a man that you yourselves had found a bill against had been brought here, and that he had been shot down in the street; that all the rights of the law had been overridden. I did not make these remarks vindictively towards any one, but to vindicate the common forum of justice, which under our government ought to be understood."

Mr. Wells said, in explanation for the grand jury, we did not come into court on yesterday with the expectation of being discharged, and we think the court is laboring under some mistake.

His honor replied, the report was that you had no further business.

Mr. Wells answered, it was a mistake; the grand jury did not wish to make that report.

The grand jury retired, after which the traverse jury were called; all present, and returned a verdict of "guilty" in the case of Spiers and Phelps—assessing the former's penalty at two years in the penitentiary, and the latter's, three.

Jury discharged.

Motion made by Mr. Blair for a new trial in the case of Brown vs. Hickman.

Leave granted to withdraw the suit of Halliday vs. Dyer.

Recess till 3 o'clock.

3 p.m.

Court resumed.

Motion filed for a new trial in the case of Spiers and Phelps. Leave granted to have the prisoners brought into court.

Motion argued for a new trial—argument based upon the fact that Henry Phelps was indicted by the grand jury, but that Henry E. Phelps was the person found guilty.

Upon testimony of Morris Mechem and D. W. Sirrine, it was shown that Mr. Miner had been tampering with the jury, for which conduct he was disbarred by the court with the following words:

"Well sir, I intend to disbar you; no man shall practice at this court that will do such things while I preside here. You shall have an opportunity to defend yourself at the proper time."

Mr. Lewis Robinson testified that he had seen Mr. Williams at the window of the jury-room.

Mr. Williams wiggled considerably under this testimony, and with all the adroitness at his command, endeavored to exonerate himself from the charge. His ingenuity had no further effect than to draw from the court the following remarks:—"I have no right to deny you a hearing by counsel, but I will take this case under advisement and give my decision in the morning. The dignity of courts must be protected, and its whole process must not be brought into mere chicanery. Law is law and it is not a mere system of tricks."

These remarks are not intended for you personally, but they are intended for this case; it is an extraordinary case, and after having listened with care, I perceive that there is an extraordinary string of affairs in connection with this case, an attempt to put that jury in such circumstances as would ensure a good chance for a new trial. God knows it is a fact, and every body here knows it is a fact, and I, sitting here to represent the government, cannot and I will not allow such conduct."

His honor expressed his opinion that there had been sufficient irregularity in the case to grant a new trial, and said he, "In the meantime Mr. Clerk, issue a rule against Aurelius Miner and Thomas S. Williams, returnable to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, to show cause why they should not be disbarred."

Court adjourned till to-morrow at 10 a.m.

SATURDAY, 10 a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment. Motion made by Mr. Smith to quash the indictment in the case of Utah Territory vs. Ralph Pike, for assault, with intent to kill Howard Spencer. Court elected to take time to consider the motion.

In the case of Wallace vs. Jeter Clinton, Miner asked for perpetual prohibition. The court entered a prohibition against Mr. Clinton proceeding further in the case. Members of the petit jury, absentees, were ordered for non-attendance upon the court. The rule disbarbing Messrs. Miner and Williams, was called up, and, after hearing the case his honor said, Well, gentlemen, I do not intend to enter a prohibition order to disbar you, but I will say that you, as lawyers, have no business with the jury; and while I myself have often felt interest in clients, and while I know the interest that attorneys feel in cases, yet there could be nothing that could justify you in taking the steps you took; your conduct was highly reprehensible, and I will say that I shall expect that you will in your future conduct show that you have benefited by this reproof that I find it my duty to give you. You are not disbarred. Court took a recess till 3 p.m.

Court resumed its session. MONDAY, 10 a.m. Pursuant to adjournment court convened. Robert Scholes was admitted as a citizen of the United States. Court adjourned until to-morrow at 11 a.m.

TUESDAY MORNING, 11 o'clock. Court met in concurrence with adjournment last evening. Court over-ruled the motion of Mr. Blair to discharge Thomas Colbourn, and took time to consider the propriety of admitting him to bail. Messrs. James, Swart, and Spencer, for failing to attend regularly, were fined the amount due them for their services as petit jurors, respectively. The case of John Hartnett, agent for Farmington, Johnson & Co., of St. Louis, against Enoch Reese, in chancery, was next called; and to the asking of Messrs. Blair & Appleby as to what the ruling of the court would be in filing an answer. His honor directed an answer to be filed immediately, and set the hearing of the case for Thursday. Court took a recess till 3 p.m.

Court resumed its session. Respecting the adjournment of this court to give place for that of the first district, his honor said he should adjourn for two or three weeks to give the attorneys a chance to arrange their business; then he would resume the term and, if necessary, sit till the first of November. It was not his intention to leave parties in prison; if the territory neglected to get up the evidence for the prosecution, he should give the parties a trial. He also informed the members of the bar that Wednesday, Thursday and Friday would be occupied with civil cases, and that the court would adjourn on Friday evening to allow two days to go to Nephi. By the court was the marshal instructed to report to-morrow morning relative to the progress they have made in the business before them.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Another Assassination.

One week had not elapsed since we were startled by the murder of McNeil, at midnight, and now we are called upon to record another cold blooded murder, committed at mid-day, in the most thronged street of this city, and in the presence of at least one hundred persons, and strange as it may appear to those outside of this city the perpetrator escaped, and we have heard that it has been openly stated that the author of the crime, cannot be taken within the valley of Salt Lake, that his friends are too numerous to tolerate his capture.

So long as the actors in these bloody tragedies, are suffered to go unpunished, the community who screen the offenders will bring "deserved odium upon itself." Last Thursday, about noon, as Mr. Ralph Pike, sergeant in Co. 1, 10th Infantry, from Camp Floyd, in company with four or five of his comrades, was walking down East Temple Street, when in the vicinity of the Salt Lake House, he heard his name spoken, which induced him to turn to see from whom the salutation came; he saw a man approach him whom he did not recognize until quite close, when he recognized him, as Howard Spencer, who immediately drew his revolver, and as the sergeant turned "he heard the report and felt the shot." The ball struck the hilt of his belt knife, passing through the handle, and entered his body on the right side, and glancing upwards was extracted from the right breast.

One of the comrades of Mr. Pike leveled his pistol at the retreating assailant, and demanded him to stop, which he would probably have done, had not a peace officer knocked the hand holding the pistol out of shooting position, with the declaration that the peace and good order of the city should be preserved. We do not know such to be the case, but presume members of the police were in the vicinity at the time of the transaction; if not, they should have been, as it is a place demanding more attention from them than any other part of the city.

The circumstances leading to the act, as we have been told, were as follows: Mr. Howard Spencer was herding stock in Rush Valley, with others, upon the army reservation grounds. Sergeant Pike was ordered to remove these infringing herdsmen from the reservation, as all the pasture was needed for government stock. All obeyed the demand of the Sergeant but this Spencer, who tenaciously and overbearing refused to comply. The Sergeant insisted upon enforcing his instructions. Spencer seized a pitch-fork, and presenting it at the Sergeant in a menacing attitude, defied him and his men to arrest him. At this juncture, the Sergeant would probably have been justified in shooting him down; but not wishing to take his life, but determined to secure his own from assault, and carry out his orders, he struck him with the butt of his rifle breaking in twain the pitch-fork which Spencer held up to ward off the blow, and felling the refractory young man to the ground, with his skull fractured.

Sergeant Pike ordered one of his men to raise Mr. Spencer from the ground, and carry him to quarters; went himself and told his superior officer the details of the circumstance, and then took a horse, and hurriedly went and brought an army surgeon. Having recovered, in a great measure, from the effects of the blow, Mr. Spencer came to this city, and instituted a suit against Sergeant Pike. The Sergeant answered to the warrant, and was here, with his witnesses, to meet, and endeavor to answer the charges preferred against him by Mr. Spencer, and while under arrest, and on his way from the court room, to his dinner, he was shot by the man who had instituted the suit against him.

These, so far as we learn, are the facts of the case. The unfortunate man lingered in great agony, until the night of Sunday, when he expired. He retained his faculties to the last, and is said to have borne his severe sufferings with remarkable fortitude. In his statement, made under a full consciousness of his approaching dissolution, he affirms that Howard Spencer was the man who shot him.

A WARNING TO EMIGRANTS.—A young man named Pike Jones called upon an emigrant train, on Thursday last, and representing himself as the agent of a laundry, obtained an extensive collection of clothes most of which were of an expensive kind, promising to return the same the next afternoon, washed and ironed. The next afternoon arrived punctually, but with it not the clothes, when our sojourning friends began to get their eyes open to the fact that they were not in the U. S., but in Salt Lake City. Pike Jones was, after protracted search, ferreted out, when it appeared that he had been promoting himself to the honorable calling of a ready-made clothing merchant, or with more propriety, perhaps, a clothing merchant ready-made—and had disposed of a large proportion of his booty; "quick sales and small profits" having been his motto. Pike is a queer fish—but rather unlucky—in attempting to hook he got hooked. He will expiate, probably, for his mercantile turn of mind, in the walls of the calaboose.

Justice to all parties compels us to say that Pike Jones is not a member of the honest Jones family, but the other one. Are the Joneses satisfied? Further, that our local police were not guilty of arresting him—he was taken by the emigrants whose confidence he betrayed.

Deloss Gibson, the man convicted of murder by the Probate Court in this city, and whose conviction was set aside by Associate Justice Sinclair of the District Court—on the ground that the Probate Court had not legally criminal jurisdiction, and who subsequently was arraigned before the 3rd judicial district court, and plead not guilty, escaped some time last week from the custody of the Sheriff of Salt Lake county, who is the common jailor, and has not yet been retaken.

Among the other wonderful things in this country, we would class this escape. It could only have been accomplished by the most culpable remissness, or the connivance of his keeper. There were no chains filed apart, no walls dog through, or any doors broken open, as is usually the case in an escape from a prison. The prisoner simply vanished. The sheriff, however, offers three hundred dollars for the apprehension of Gibson.

We trust that he may be secured, and the sheriff relieved from his peculiar position.

Our market is now choked with vegetables of all kinds incident to this season. Melons, apricots, potatoes, &c., exist in abundance. Peaches and apples promise to be equally profuse in due time.

CORRECTION.—In the charge of Judge Sinclair to the Grand Jury, published last week, the plan was one which could not have originated with an "experienced person," should have been "inexperienced person."

The young men of Camp Floyd have no intention of suffering such. In addition to their corps theatrical, they have just organized a local circus, for their further education, which promises to be unsurpassed in this region.

"COMPETITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE."—We would call the attention of the public to our new advertisements of Messrs. Dyer & Bro., and Hord & Dickson. Freight trains are arriving every day, and there are said to be one hundred and ninety freight wagons between here and Fort Bridger. Prices have been so reduced as to insure rapid sales.

We would call the attention of emigrants and others desirous of moving to California to the communication of Capt. Simpson U. S. A., whose report of the route to California, surveyed by him, is highly favorable.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Forney, Sup't Indian affairs, left here on Friday last, on a trip to the Indian farms south and to Ruby Valley. It being about harvest time the Dr. is desirous of giving his personal supervision to the condition of the farms.

ABSTRACT OF

Remarks Made by Elder Orson Pratt, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Forenoon, August 7, 1859.

In the forenoon of Sunday last, our reporter visited the Tabernacle, for the purpose of noting down, and giving to our readers, the substance of the sermon, or sermons, which might be delivered. Orson Pratt spoke, and the gist of his discourse was as follows:

That in the beginning, God established theocracy—that as the creator of the universe, and governor of all, he had a right to establish theocracies—and that as those ruled by the laws which He laid down were inferior to Him, the creator of those laws, they ought to be subject to them. But man lost sight of his divine origin, and became self-confident and mistrustful, and concluded to create rules of government for himself. From the iniquitous proclivities of man God allowed to do this. What was the consequence of this grant upon the part of man's ruler? The sequel of it was, that mankind, preferring to be left to the agencies of their own judgments, for about 6,000 years fell into all sorts of governmental imperfections. No two nations could be found agreeing with each other. Governments were as diverse as opinions.

This order of things prevailed until Christ came, when He repudiated the presumption of mankind in asserting their right to govern themselves, and pointed out the doctrine of theocracy—the subjection in temporal matters (where is free agency now?) of mankind to the government of heaven. Although, mostly, from the beginning of the organization of human power upon earth, mankind ruled themselves—that is, that most of their concerns were under the influence of, and governed by, their own ideas of prudence and correctness. Christ, in his coming, denied and swept from existence all such presumptuous doctrines. The political renovations, which Christ taught, never were nationalized, but were believed a d acknowledged, by individuals, in all the existing nations of the earth, until about the close of the second century of the Christian era, when theocratical, as well as all apostolical, influences, were lost in the Eastern hemisphere.

Christ appeared upon this continent after his resurrection in the Eastern World, and here appointed disciples as he had there. They went forth among the aborigines of this country, laying down the laws of Christianity, and teaching the people in all godliness. Theocracy was taught by the disciples and recognized by the people; great was their prosperity under the government of God. They extended themselves, and all the adjuncts of civilization, from the frigid seas of the north to Cape Horn in the south, and from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west. Central America and the northern portions of South America were where the principal works of their energy and enlightenment were established. The history of this people will be found in the Book of Mormon, since the publication of which, extensive vestiges of their arts and sciences have been discovered by antiquarians. They were blessed with this order of things for a period of near three centuries, when they fell from their happy, God-given policy, assumed self-government, and soon fell into dissensions, followed by exterminating wars. From that time unto this their career has been retrogressive.

Columbus was an inspired man, though probably himself unaware of the fact. God strengthened his heart, and enlightened his mind, to perform a great work—establish an important link in the chain of his providence. Shortly after the discovery of this continent, the reformation took place. Dissensions from the mother church increased in number, as has been the case in modern times, the more they suffered persecutions. The rack, the knout, &c., served as spurs to hasten on the cause of Protestantism. Nations withdrew from that religion which had been their established faith for centuries, and "the harlot of harlots" received a shock from which she has been in a declining condition ever since. Many there were who fled from their homes, their kindred, and all that they held dear and dear upon earth, and braved the perils of the sea, and came to the wilderness of the New World, where they might worship God according to the dictates of their consciences, with none to molest or make them afraid.

The migration from Europe began about the beginning of the seventeenth century. Colonies were established; laws for their government created; and religious rites universally and strictly observed. Notwithstanding, however, the fact that our early ancestors fled from the old countries to live a life of liberty here, and escape the despicable proscriptions there, they themselves established laws the most unrelentingly tyrannical and oppressive. The death penalty was executed against supposed witches, and offences the most trivial met with punishments the most inhuman. The old "blue laws" of New England were an example of these intolerances.

As time passed on, the colonies grew stronger in numerical strength. The tyranny of the mother country followed them to their wild, western home, and became more and more insupportable. At length, in the year 1776, we in our ancestors boldly asserting to the "monarchs, potentates and rulers of the earth" that man was created free and independent, with the inalienable rights of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and that, in maintaining these rights, they (our ancestors) would risk their "lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor." Thro' a trying war of seven years' duration the freedom of this country was achieved. How plainly is the finger of God seen in these things! The new continent opened to the "oppressed of the world" at the very time that the asylum was needed; and afterwards a population of only 7,000,000 inhabitants, all told, meeting upon the field, and conquering the most powerful nation upon the face of the earth; and as we progress, we will further see the directions of heaven in the history of this government.

Victory crowning the struggles of the revolutionists, it became necessary to establish a chart of governmental policy—to meet in mature deliberation and wisdom and settle upon those principles which would make the birth of another nation of the world complete, and be the guarantee of permanency through coming time. Through the inspiration of God, the Constitution was framed. Could God have given the new nation a theocracy? No; the revolutionary heroes were unprepared to receive one authorized to say, "Thus saith the Lord." To this point they must be brought through a school of liberty and freedom—they must become divested of those mind-shackling traditions of bigotry and ignorance which had been matured through dark centuries; for theocracy is more liberal, and certainly productive of more happiness to those living under it, than any government of human wisdom ever created.

The principles of the Constitution of the United States combine in making as good a government as could be expected without the direct agency of God. The majority rule is a fundamental principle in that document. Now, if the majority of the people should commit errors, the minority would have to suffer as much from those errors as the majority who brought them into existence. A true system of theocracy would remedy this, as it always points to the best interests of one and all—retaining all the advantages of republicanism and doing away with the disadvantages.

After the new nation had been in existence a half century, God concluded that it was prepared for the change. Now, said he, I will give the people a Prophet. When Joseph Smith was about 15 years of age, as he was out in a grove, engaged in religious devotions, a blaze of glory descended towards him from heaven. All other objects were obscured. As the halo of light approached in close proximity, two forms, like unto human beings, appeared in the center thereof, and one extending his hand towards the other, said, "Behold God's favorite Son!" Such instructions and injunctions as necessary were given to the young prophet, and in 1830 the Church of God—the order of Latter Day Saints, composed of six members—was organized in a village of New York; now it numbers thousands.

The fact that a theocracy can exist in the center of a republic is fast gaining ground. The fulfillment of Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream is near completion. The "little stone cut out of the mountain without hands" is rapidly growing. Woe to the nations of the earth when it shall smite the image upon the feet and the toes; and crush the same in powder so fine that the winds of heaven will waft the particles off like chaff. We do not wish to be aggressive, but if the Church of God is too much infringed upon, as it most probably will be, the little stone must fall. With Jehovah as our captain, and our prophets as our counselors, we will rise up in our might against the combined opposition of the whole world, and with a sword invincible, go on from conquering to conquering until all nations shall lie prostrate at our feet, supplicants for mercy, and the kingdom of God be established, for ever and ever, as prophesied of old: Amen.—[An uproarious yelling of "Amen!!"]

ANNEST FOR FORGIVEN.—About two o'clock yesterday, Nathaniel Childs, Jr., was arrested on a bench warrant, charged with the forgery of a check for some $270, drawn in the name of P. Crow & Sons, upon the banking house of Wm. H. Barksdale & Co. As the case has been brought before the Grand Jury, together with another of similar character, it is not necessary to go into particulars. The alleged forgery of the names of P. Crow & Sons, was committed some days since, and immediately after payment it was discovered; but, the Teller being a new resident in this city, it was doubtful whether he would be able to identify the person who presented and received payment of the check. Childs, however, was suspected, from the fact that he was seen in the banking house only a short time before, and asked for a check on the house, a sharp look-out was kept for him, but the Teller was not able to meet him until yesterday, when he at once identified him, and the accused promised to take up the check. Even if this had been permitted, which would not have been done, the officers of justice were too fast for the operation, and Mr. Childs was taken into custody, and is now in jail.

The public will at once associate Mr. Childs' name with the celebrated robbery of the Bank of the State of Missouri, some years since, of about $120,000; for which he was arrested, tried and acquitted, and afterwards recovered damages against a portion of the Directors who were instrumental in his arrest.—(Missouri Republican, July 8.)

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—The War Department has directed that the following officers shall be assigned to duty, as follows:—

Pay Department.—Paymaster Hiram Leonard to duty in the department of California; paymaster A. J. Smith to report for duty at the War Department.

Medical Department.—Surgeon J. B. Porter to duty in the department of Utah; Surgeon W. S. King to duty in the department of New Mexico; assistant surgeon P. A. Quinan to duty in the department of California; assistant surgeon P. G. S. Ten Broeck will report for duty to the Surgeon General of the army.

A leave of absence has been granted to Lieutenant J. S. Saunders, Ordnance Department.

An extension of leave of absence for three months has been granted to Lieutenant E. J. Brooks, Seventh Infantry.

A Board of Officers are directed to assemble at Fort Monroe, Virginia, on the 12th instant, for the trial of such rifled cannon as may be presented by the Ordnance Department. The Board will consist of Brevet Colonel H. Huger, Ordnance Department; Captain J. Vooges, First artillery; Brevet Major H. J. Hunt, Second artillery; Captain A. B. Dyer, Ordnance Department; Captain A. A. Gibson, Second artillery; Brevet Major T. T. S. Laidley, Ordnance Department, and Lieutenant R. C. Drum, Fourth artillery. Upon the completion of the experiments, a detailed report will be made for the information of the Secretary of War. Captain F. Gardner, Tenth Infantry, is appointed Recorder of the Board.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of which, to her with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at COST, and TWENTY CENTS freight.

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements this hold-out, as we are determined to sell on the terms a fourth above.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

NOTICE!

HAVING removed our Store to Camp Floyd, we are desirous of settling up our outstanding accounts in this city. All persons indebted to the undersigned will please call on Mr. Thomas Adams, who is authorized to collect the bills now in his hands. RADEFORD, CAROT & CO. The undersigned can be found at the office of the Valley Tan, during business hours. Prompt settlements are solicited. (40-11) THOMAS ADAMS.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, in Hord & Dickson's lot, not all the things in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, whole and retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, cornmeal, salt, pepper, madder, indigo, powder, lard, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, rosy, ginger, nut-tard, cassia, saucers of every kind, brandy, fruit, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twines, pipes, and kettles, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of lemon, blacking, and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, but one high and another low. We also have a lot of Amos' celebrated sugar cure hams, put up expressly for this market. Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase. We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen. 40-11 HORD & DICKSON.

STRAYED

FROM the herd at the Hot Spring Brewery, two BLACK COWS, branded with S on near shoulder, and R II on near thigh. Supposed to have gone towards Salt Lake City. $20 reward will be paid for their delivery to the subscriber at the Brewery. 40-11 ROBT. HERFORD.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the City. We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants, and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. 40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEETIRON for sale by DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce. 40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

CHEAP GOODS

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL. GEO. CRONYN & Co., two doors north of G. A. Perry & Co's store, have purchased the stock of Groceries of Sprader & Funk, and are offering them at wholesale and retail, at very reduced prices. Call and examine before purchase no place where. 40-11

FOR SALE.

200 YOKE WORK CATTLE, 25 WAGONS, 15 MULES. SHRAPER & FINE, at the store of Geo. Cronyn.

Gen. James' Rifled Cannon.

A board of officers of the Ordnance department, consisting of Brevet Major Thornton, of the Ordnance department, Capt. Marcy, of the 5th Infantry, and Major Anderson, of the 2d Artillery, have been making some experiments at Chicopee Falls, Mass., with General James' rifled cannon. The guns used were not new ones made expressly for the purpose, but old ones, constructed as all other cannon are. These were grooved or reamed out, as General James required, to adapt them to his balls. In the same manner that common rifles are, which grooving being around the bore of the gun, gave the projectile a rotary motion. Such a motion, as all familiar with the rifle know, gives a ball more force and greater precision.

The guns submitted for examination were bronze six and twelve pounders, the former weighing 880 pounds, the latter 1,200 pounds. The projectile designed by Gen. James for these guns is a cast iron cylinder, surmounted by a solid conical head. The diameter of the cylinder is slightly less than the bore of the gun—its length nearly equal to the calibre of the gun. The cylinder is so constructed that when the charge is fired the gas evolved by the burning of the powder, in its effort to expel the projectile, aid to escape from the gun, is forced into the central cavity of the cylinder, the sides of which are pressed into the grooves of the bore, and by its firm hold in them, the rifle motion is imparted to the projectile. The construction of the ball or projectile, which is very peculiar, is original with Gen. James, and is adapted to the cannon described.

The report of the examining board of officers is accompanied by a table of mean distance obtained by firing the bronze six and twelve-pounders, rifled as before stated. The cannon, six-pounder field guns, with one and a quarter pounds of powder, without any elevation, will throw a ball 318 yards; at an elevation of one degree, 674 yards; and at an elevation of 5 degrees, 1,523 yards. This same gun, when grooved by Gen. James, as before described, and charged with the same quantity of powder, 4 lbs, is capable of throwing a missile weighing 124 lbs, point blank, a distance of 334 yards, or sixteen yards farther than the common gun can throw a six pound ball. Elevating the gun one degree, the heavy missile was thrown the same distance as the six-pound ball; while at two degrees elevation the former was thrown 867 yards, and the shot imbedded five feet deep in the hill side. But these facts do not present the full capabilities of the rifled cannon, as the several projectiles, when reaching the hill where the target was placed, struck far above it, which shows that, but for the hill, they would have reached a much greater distance.

An elevation of five degrees was next tried. At this elevation a common six-pounder gun will throw a ball 1,523 yards. With Gen. James' rifled piece a thirteen pound shot was sent at least four miles. These results, says the Providence Journal, were not derived from single experiments, but many. With the first missile thirteen shots were fired and the result stated above was the average of these firings.

The board in their report express themselves with entire satisfaction in the great superiority, not only of the rifled cannon of Gen. James, but of the projectiles used, and the peculiar mode of loading the guns. It should also be stated that new guns are not required for these projectiles, as is the case with the celebrated Armstrong gun, but that any common piece may be rifled, as we have stated, to adapt it to the weight of the several missiles.

The Expenditures of the Government.

The amount of expenditures of the government within the fiscal year, ending on the 30th ult., were in round numbers $86,400,000, while the appropriations of that year were $83,000,000. But, as in practice, a portion of what is appropriated for a fiscal year is not expended until after its expiration, the only way of determining what real expenditures is by taking the yearly appropriations by Congress. These are expended first or last, be they great or small.

As before stated, the appropriations for the last fiscal year were $83,000,000, while the receipts have been considerably less than $60,000,000. Those from customs for the last three quarters of the year have been $37,000,000, or just about the figure estimated by Gov. Cobb. That he was not quite as exact in his estimates during the panic of 1857 is not strange, since that he was fresh in the position of Secretary of the Treasury, and of course could not foresee all the disasters to trade precipitated by a general explosion of paper money institutions.

As the receipts from customs for the last fiscal year are $50,500,000, it is reasonable to suppose that they will be for the fiscal year now entered upon at least $55,000,000. Sales of lands, &c., will carry that sum up above sixty millions, leaving from fifteen to twenty millions applicable to the redemption of treasury notes, since that the appropriations, definite and indefinite, for the present fiscal year are not above $42,000,000.

As it has been generally stated through reports hence, that salaries of postmasters throughout the country, and of their clerks, with other expenses, would be defrayed from accruing postages after 30th June, ult., it is proper to say that no such view is countenanced at the Department. On the contrary, it is held that not a dollar can be legally expended until Congress meets and makes appropriation on post office account. What is received by postmasters after the 30th ult. is held to be in the treasury, and cannot be paid out for any purpose. They were in effect treasury officers, and the amount that will accumulate in their hands before January next will be at least $5,000,000 in specie.

THE JAPAN AMBASSADOR.—The coming of the Japanese Ambassador, for whose accommodation the Mississippi was sent out by the United States government, has been postponed for six months or a year. There is said to be some difference among the Japanese Grandees upon the policy of sending an ambassador, and more time is wanted to think upon it.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 14; The Constitution of this morning, contains a copy of the dispatch from the State Department recently sent to our Minister at Berlin, on the subject of naturalization. The case is that of a naturalized citizen of the United States, who is a native of Manover, and who, when he left his native country, was neither in actual service in the Hanoverian army nor had been drafted to serve in it, but who has yet, upon his return to Hanover, been deprived of his liberty and compelled to perform military service.

The President and Cabinet concur in the views expressed, taking the ground that the moment a foreigner becomes naturalized his allegiance to his native country is severed; he is no more responsible for anything he may say or do, or omit to say or do, after assuming his new character, than if he had been born in the United States. Should he return to his native country, he returns as an American citizen, and in no other character. In order to entitle his original Government to punish him for an offence, this must have been committed whilst he was a subject and owed allegiance to that Government. The offence must have been complete before his expatriation; and it must have been of such a character that he might have been tried and punished for it the moment of his departure. Our Minister is instructed to demand the release of the naturalized citizen in question.

J. J. Springer, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed United States Consul at Dresden.

WASHINGTON, July 14. While the gunners' crew were engaged in their usual battery practice at the Washington navy yard to-day, a sixty-four pounder gun, which it is said had been thoroughly tested in 1851, burst. Two of the gunners—James H. Wilson and Wm. Nokes—were instantly killed, a part of their heads being blown off and their bodies thrown a considerable distance from the gun platform, besides eight men were severely, and two others slightly, wounded.

WASHINGTON, July 14. Charles John Gardner, a brother of Dr. Gardner, of the Mexican claim notoriety, and who was indicted for false swearing in his brother's case, and forfeited his bail by absconding, having recently returned to Washington, was to-day arrested by the Marshal and is now in custody.

We are credibly informed from various sources that the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles has become entirely reconciled with his wife, and is now living with her in martial relations as before the death of the late Philip Barton Key. We are also assured that in taking this remarkable step, Mr. Sickles has alienated himself from most if not all of those personal and political friends who devoutly adhered to him during his recent imprisonment and trial.

The reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Sickles was consummated, as we are informed, while Mr. S. was residing at the house of a friend on the Bloomingdale Road, about half a mile from the former house of Mr. S., which for some time past Mrs. Sickles has occupied, either alone or with some of the members of her own family. The suspicions of his host were excited by the repeated absence of Mr. S. at unusual hours; and when he came in very early one morning he was interrogated by the host and another friend who was present, and on his positively denying their right to question him, and refusing to give an explanation, they shook hands with him for the last time and he withdrew. It is said that he has since addressed letters to his former intimate associates, notifying them formally of the resumption of conjugal relations between himself and Mrs. Sickles.—N. Y. Herald.

NOTICE.

The co-partnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Williams & Jackman, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by Mr. Jackman.

THOS. B. WILLIAMS,
PARKMAN A. JACKMAN.

To the Traveling Public.STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS*NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a. m., and arriving at 5 p. m.

He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers, therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds, will be charged at the rate of 6 cents per pound. All packages weighing under 40 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipts for 15 lbs agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

PARKMAN A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. Dyer, Gilbert, & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to carry on their business. R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GREENSHU.

NOTICE.
WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Greenish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;
—ALSO—
OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY.

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd,
Fort Bridger, Fairfield, and
Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE
Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a
BAKERY
where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread, Crackers, Cakes, Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS, CONFECTIONERY, SODA WATER, & SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath 75 cents.

Five Baths $3 00.

Ten do $5 00.

37-3m E. REESE.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE

Pare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175.

Meals furnished at the different stations at reasonable rates.

No responsibility assumed for baggage.

For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City.

63-4f

Sixty Dollars Reward!

IS OFFERED to any one finding, and bringing to P. K. Dotson, five mules and a blue roan horse, or ten dollars per head for each of the above animals.

They are branded "H. O. & Co." on the left thigh.

The animals strayed from the herd ground at the point of the West Mountain.

Apply at the store of Hockaday & Burr, G. S. L. City.

63-7-3t

CITY BREWERY.

MR W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully

calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added

to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt

mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments.

63-4f

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd.

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and

15th of August, the largest Stock, and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale

in this market; and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, flattering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates.

63-4m

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER D. PILLET.

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron

work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, and all kinds

Screw and Brass and Iron Castings of every description.

Circular Saw Mills of the Patent and Childs Patents.

20-4f

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods, Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing, Hardware, Outfitting Goods, Harness, Saddles, & Bridles,

which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will sell for them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,

75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one dark MALTESE JACK; on the STATION. For sale by C. A. PERRY & CO. [35-4f]

Hockaday & Burr, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Have opened in their

NEW STORE ROOMS,

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDIZE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants.

34-4f.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS.

DEALERS IN

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

IMPORTING

WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Wholesale Importing Druggists,

DEALERS IN

DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Paints, Oils, Brushes, Camphene, Lamps, Machine and pure Lard Oil, Hops, Brewers' Materials, &c.

139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for

the following valuable preparations:

Jarvis' Alterative, Bep-Corant, Hair Tonic Vermifuge and Pills

Sando's Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Eucalyptus, Clove, Anodyne, and Bismuth Eye Salads

Dr. Moffatt's Pills and Mitters

Ayer's Pectoral and Pills

Witch's Balsam Wild Cherry

Green's Oxygenated Bitters

All of which we offer for sale at very near New York prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.

WE are agents for the celebrated

Perfumery House of Jules Hugel & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS!

WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1858 hops, to which we invite the attention of

Brewers.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.

THERE is no longer any doubt

about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr.

Marshall's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and

valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment

of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars, for

sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, No. 139 J street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rates, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received

from the Chemical Laboratory of Power &

Welchman Philadelphia:

400 bottles Strychnine

75 ounces Nitric Silver, pure

500 ounces Sulphate Morphine

100 ounces Iodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.

ALSO

200 ounces Quinine

75 pounds Iodine Potassium

80 pounds Chloroform

750 pounds Spts Nitric, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,

000 superior Soda Corks, 60,000 superior Wine

Corks, 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Keg

Corks, &c., for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

THE VALLEY TANT

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 41.

A Mistake Corrected.

The Star of Empire Westward takes its way.
Sail Bishop Berkeley: since the Bishop's day Four scores of years, in waves of surging rhyme,
Swell the world's wake, and mark the Sea
of Time:
While kings have perished in the changing
tide,
And thrones, like sea-weeds, strewn the ocean-side:
Still floats a banner from the blue unfurled—
The Stars of Empire crown the Western world!
Our very skies this regal right attest,
Born in the purple, hail, O kingly west!

Yet, music now, methinks instead of star,
The good old Bishop should have written
For the car still westward takes its way,
Outstrips the wind, and dares a race with
day,
And, not long hence, perhaps a train shall run—
Start moments late, and overtake the sun!
Even now, close-linked by tie, and chain and band,
The night and morning journey, hand in hand,
And, sweeping nearer with their trailing fold,
The skirts of evening brush the gates of gold.

The wren-wonder of a weaver's dream,
A shuttle thrown across the world by steam;
From eastern looms the flying beam is sped;
It weaves the prairies with an iron thread,
And deftly spun, among the flowers, behold
A cloth of iron—and not a "cloth of gold."

The Car of Empire Westward takes its
way,
The God of Steam pursues the God of Day;
The prairies tremble with his clanging
train,
And shuddered forests start aside in dread.
Still Westward, Westward—Mississippi's
tide
In vain essays to stop the mighty stride—
He clears the rushing waters with a bound,
Far on the plains his danc'ing plumes are found,
Oh, on he breast the dark Missouri's wave,
And finds his rest where planets find a grave.

Here, in this valley, where the cedar's plume
In green remembrance keeps the red man's tomb,
Alone, of erst, the Indian lover strayed,
And breathed his passion to the dusky
maid;
The listening stars heard but the lovers'
sigh,
The low confession and the soft reply;
How strangely changed within the valley
hurl'd
A bomb comes bursting from the outer
world;
The clang of iron, the maddened shriek of steam,
Tear the way that silence held supreme;
And echo starts it, wonder from her cave,
To find a life above her sister's grave.

The Iron Horse! he stands before our sight,
Harnessed, yet free—rejoicing in his might;
His name floats far in scorn, and pride, and wrath,
What cares he for Lyons "in the path?"
With ribs of brass, each sinew tripple-steel—
Earth's bosom groans beneath his iron heel;
His breath of fire, his heart of throbbing
dame,
Each pulsing vein can love's own lineage claim—
What, yoke the Gods! unbind him from the cars,
To join his brother planet—flaming Mars!
And now
A hush is he indeed,
Who shirks his bumper to our fiery steel—
The Iron Horse! when bolts would block the
way
Of Progress, may we give a ringing neigh.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Our South American dates are to the first of June from Chile, and to the 12th from Peru.

CITILE.—The revolution is entirely at an end. Copiapo is in the hands of the Government, and the last of the insurgents, about 500 or 600 strong, crossed the Andes and reached San Juan, where they laid down their arms before the authorities of the State.

A number of political prisoners have been tried by courts martial and sentenced to death, but in all cases the Government has commuted the punishment to imprisonment or banishment from the country.

In consequence of the pacification of the country, business has materially improved, and in Valparaiso considerable activity exists. The northern and southern markets, so long closed, are again opened, and buyers are occupied in supplying the stock of goods they have so long been deprived of.

A treaty of commercial reciprocity between Belgium and Chile has been published. —From Peru we again have accounts of a revolution. Col. Leballos, with 2,000 men, has pronounced against the Government at Cuzco, and it is reported that Cuchibamba and Gallima had followed the example. Castillo, Echenique and Ureta are reported at the head of the revolution.

Meanwhile President Castilla endeavors to make it appear that the Government is perfectly safe, in his address to the Senate and House of Representatives.

RIVER PLATTE PROVINCES.—The long pending difficulties between Gen. Urquiza, President of the Confederation, and the Government of Buenos Ayres, seem likely to result in a war. Urquiza reckons on the support of Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, and is determined to compel Buenos Ayres to join the Confederation.

BOLIVIA.—This Republic is progressing in her new career of political consolidation.

In Cobia a new pier is about being constructed, probably of iron. The contractors are American citizens, as usual among the foremost in industrial enterprises. A project is on foot to open the southwestern provinces, along the branches of the Parana and Paraguay, to foreign immigration, on the most liberal terms. Altogether, the country is decidedly going ahead.

GUAYAQUIL.—The latest dates are to the 15th June.

The revolution which broke out in Ecuador, proclaiming Garcia Moreno as Supreme Chief, appears to have assumed colossal dimensions. Gen. Robles and Urbana have left Guayaquil for the interior to put down insurgents. Prior to reaching Arohato, a strong force from Riobamba attacked the Government division. The battalion "Reserva" and the squadron "La Muerte," belonging to the latter, went over to the revolutionary party, and in the encounter took part against the few who remained with Robles. In this engagement Col. Robles, Commander C. G. Pizarro, and a chief called "El Mulato," were killed.

The Peruvian fleet continues to blockade the port of Guayaquil, and it is said that they are assisting the revolutionists with arms, money, etc.

SINGULAR MARINE DISASTER.—The Panama Star and Herald says:

Our Panama correspondent, under date of June 11th, writes: "Whaling bark William
Lee, W. E. Slocom, master, of Newport,
Rhode Island, put in here for repairs on the 5th instant, having been twice run into by a sword fish—the first time in January, on the starboard bow, about two feet under water;
put into Tacoma and repaired damage; and,
when ten days out, on the 7th of May, in lat.
1:35 N., lon. 83:3 W., on going into the fore-hold, found about five feet water; bore to,
and sent some Kanakas over the side, who discovered the place about seven feet under water. Both pumps were kept constantly at work till six o'clock; broke out the fore-hold, cut away the ceiling and discovered the leak; drove in plugs and partially succeeded in stopping it with blankets and the cotton out of comforters; pumped about two hundred strokes every hour till her arrival here, when she was hauled ashore in t'e mud, and the damage repaired. The sword of the fish penetrated about eight inches through copper and sheathing oak plank and ceiling."

PANAMA.—Our dates from Panama are to the 30th of June.

Our city, says the Star and Herald, continues healthy and the weather generally favorable. Two smart shocks of earthquakes were experienced on the night of the 27th, but no damage was done. The United States sloops-of-war Vandalia and St. Marys are the only vessels of war in port.

We learn from the Panama Star and Herald that the United States steam frigates Merrimack and Saranac; the British frigate Ganges and the French steamer Megere were at Callao on the 12th of June. A medical survey had been held on Flag Officer Long, of the United States Navy; he had been condemned, and will return home immediately. Commodore Long will probably come up on the Saranac to Panama.

H. B. M.'s frigate Ganges has been ordered home. Admiral Baynes will change his flag to one of the British steamships now at Vancouver Island.

TRIAL OF WILLIAM WILLIAMS FOR KILL-ING CAPTAIN JUNIUS OTIS.—On Tuesday last, says the Star and Herald, the trial of William Williams, alias Teal, for killing Captain Junius Otis, on board the railroad train, on the 10th of June, took place in the sala of the Cabildo, before Senor Coreoso, the criminal judge. The facts of the case are still fresh in our reader's memory: Williams, who was in liquor, was conducting himself in a rowdy manner towards some natives; the deceased remonstrated with him, words and blows were exchanged, and Williams drew his knife, inflicting a wound on Otis, of which he died in a few minutes.

Williams, who appeared dejected, presented a written document in which he stated that previous to the event he had been drinking freely, that he did not know the deceased, and was not aware that he had killed him, and was conscious of nothing until he found himself in jail.

The counsel for the prisoner regretted that no lawyer could be found to take up his (the prisoner's) case, and that the duty devolved upon one who was not a professional lawyer.

The jury, after a long consultation, found a verdict in accordance with the charge of the prosecuting attorney, namely: "Guilty of violent homicide in the first degree." This would subject the prisoner to from four to ten years in the chain gang.

It was rumored that the prisoner would appeal to the national authorities against the legality of the tribunal before which he was tried.

M. FELIX BELLY'S NEW TOWN.—A letter written from Nicaragua to Paris states that M. Felix Belly has obtained the complete ratification of his grant of lands, and on the 29th of March ground was broken with great ceremony for the digging of the inter oceanic canal. He has decided to build a town on the site of Fort San Carlos; the streets are already traced out, and houses in course of construction.

No doubt, says the Star and Herald, many readers of the foregoing paragraph in Europe will place implicit faith in the above statement. We can assure them, however, that both the ceremony and the town building are as great humbugs as everything else connected with Monsieur Belly and his canal scheme, as they will find out before long if they happen to have invested capital in the stock.

CHANGE OF GOVERNOR.—Obaldia resigns
as officer of Governor of the State of Panama, says the Star and Herald, owing, as he asserts, to ill health; the Vice Governor and Sup. entes being absent, the Prefect, Francisco Jimenez, consequently falls heir to the vacant seat. This change throws the Liberals, who elected Obaldia to office, out of power.

Items by California Mail.

RATTLESNACK DICK.—The Placer Herald
thus refers to the death of this desperado, which has been mentioned in the Union:

He was found lying on a "machete" on a pile of brush—a saddle blanket partly covering him. He had a pair of kid gloves, in the right of which was a slip of paper, on which was scrawled with a pencil the following:
"Rattlesnake Dick dies, but never surrenders, as all true Britons do."

On the reverse side of the same paper was written:

"If J. Boggs is dead I am satisfied."
There was also found upon the person of Dick another letter; as we perused it, it sent a thrill of sorrow to our very heart, to think that such a being could be allied to the Christianity who penned it.

SWEET HOME, March 14th, 1859.

MY DEAR BROTHER: I can scarcely believe, or rather realize, that I am again indulging in the privilege of addressing you with the hope of being heard or understood.
And tremblingly I ask that you, my much loved brother, the guide of my infant joy, the long lost friend of my childhood, will allow a renewed correspondence to open between you and your good old home. Oh how our hearts have ached for a word from your own pen. Years have passed away since your last letter reached us—years that now seem to be lifetimes. I have grieved, but never despaired—for I have prayed the Father that he would restore you to the paths of rectitude; but if he has not already, you will say, Ah, me! He will never save me!
But I say faithfully, He will. Oh, brother, will you not be saved? God sees your heart while you read these words. He knows if there is a secret wish there to be a better man; if there be but the bad of a resolution
He knows—hear Him say: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all things shall be added thereto." Jesus will raise your head and make you a new man. Go to Him,
Oh my brother!

Will you not write a few words to your own home? It may indeed be a bitter task, but may it not prove a blessing? Do try to overcome every obstacle; look down deep into your heart and see if there is not a wish to remember your sister.

HARRIET BARTER.
P. S.—Please do write, dear brother, and I will then tell you so many things that will interest you.

To Richard A. Barter.
Unfortunately there was no envelope to the letter to indicate to us where it was written and mailed, but Deputy Sheriff Stewart informs us that while "Dick" was in jail here, previous to his escape some months since, he used to get letters from Canada, and it is thought his family reside somewhere in that country.

The general court martial, which convened at Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory, for the trial of Lieut. J. W. Sill, Ordnance Department, charged with contempt and disrespect to his commanding officer, Brigadier General Harney, is dissolved. The court acquits the accused, but does not wish the verdict to be understood as conveying entire approval of the communication referred to in the specification. The War Department confirms the verdict and concurs in the censure of the court on Lieut.
Sill's letter, and admonishes him to use a different style hereafter in his official correspondence.—[Oregon Statesman.]

FROM FORT YUMA.—There is no news of importance from Fort Yuma. The Colorado had fallen to its usual stage. The artillery companies stationed at Yuma were preparing to leave for San Francisco.—[San Diego Herald.]

THE DUEL IN ARIZONA.—The San Diego
Herald says, as to the duel at Tucson:

From Capt. J. C. Bogart, who came from Fort Yuma by the last Overland stage, and who was permitted to read a letter from Lucas, received at the Fort, we learn that on the 10th June, as the stage passed through that place, a duel was being fought between Lieut. Sylvester Mowry and Mr. Cross of the Arizona. Distance, 40 yards; weapons, rifles. Three shots had been exchanged, but without effect, and the matter still remained unsettled when the stage left.

It was reported at the Fort that Lieut.
Mowry shot Mr. Cross through the ear, at the fourth round, and the parties became satisfied.

ABORTIVE REVOLUTION IN LOWER CALI-FORNIA.—The San Diego Herald says, of date Friday, 22d July, 4 p.m.:

While our paper is at press, we learn from
R. K. Porter, [correspondent of the Bulletin,] just arrived from Sausal de Camacho, Lower California, that the late attempt of one Juan Mendoza to kick up a revolution, was a signal failure. As soon as Don Feliciano Es-parraza, who is Cefe-entini during the absence of Col. Castro, received a letter from Mendoza, informing him that the latter had documents which entitled him, Mendoza, to the office filled by Esparraza, he sent a peremptory order to Judge Vidal that said
Mendoza must appear before him, in Santo Domingo, near the port of San Quentin, within eight days, with all said papers. If voluntarily, all right; if not por la fuerza.
It is generally hoped and expected, says our informant, that Mendoza will be sent out summarily from the lower country, and that a worse fate will probably befall him if he does not "hurry up his cakes."

PAVING OUT.—Mr. Rogers, clerk to the Paymaster, was in this district during the week, for the purpose of paying off the troops. Mr. Buchanan, of Wells, Fargo and Co.'s Express, was in charge of the treasure. The troops at Fort Tejon, San Bernard, or those at the San Pedro, awaiting transportation, also, those at Fort Mojave, and Fort Yuma, have been paid off.
In our immediate district, over $30,000 were disbursed.—[Los Angeles Star, 23d July.]

THE SETTLERS OF SONOMA AGAIN IN ARMS.—"THE MARION RANGERS."—The Petaling True Democrat says:

It having been whispered about Petaluma last Sunday, 17th July, that A. W. Thompson, the agent of Dr. Gwin's ranch, the Rob-lar de Misericordia, intended on Monday morning to execute a writ of restitution, obtained some months since against one of the settlers on said grant, word was conveyed to the Rangers, about sixty of whom, well armed, started for the place of the expected scene of operation, where they arrived by 8 o'clock on Monday morning. Not meeting with any one there to enforce the writ, as they expected to have done, they waited until 12 o'clock, and no one still arriving, they passed the following resolutions, and then proceeded to Petaluma, under command of Capt. Allen, for dinner and refreshments, after which they were disbanded and started for their homes.

ROBERT'S RANCH, Petaluma Township, 7
July 18, 1859.

MR. THOMPSON:—You were expected at this place for the purpose of dispossessing
Mr. Robert. You have failed to meet your engagement, and not wishing to be called from our homes to be disappointed again, we have therefore

Resolved, That if you attempt to disposses or interfere in any manner whatever with any person living on the Roblar grant, before there is a final settlement of all disputes in regard to the title or boundary, we will deal with you in such manner as we may hereafter determine your conduct deserves.

Resolved, That you are hereby requested to desist from further harassing the settlers on said grant, a d if this reasonable request is not complied with, you will most assuredly have to abide the consequences.

Resolved, That we will defend our rights to the end, come what may.

Resolved, That the above proceedings be published in the Sonoma County Journal and True Democrat.

MARION RANGERS.

LATER FROM OREGON.—Last night the brig Francisco arrived from Portland. She brings the Daily Advertiser, of July 14th, containing the official vote of the State.
Stout is elected by 45 majority.

Gov. Stevens has been elected a delegate to Congress for Washington Territory.

Reports from the Colville gold mines state that miners were doing remarkably well, making from $15 to $20 a day.

From Walla Walla we learn that Indian Agent Cain has gone out to the Nez Perces country to have a talk with the Chiefs.

Great fears exist at the Dalles that Indians will attack Captain Walling's command.
The Blackfeet are hostile and threaten war with the Bosons.

The news from Okinagan is highly encouraging for miners.

Crops at Walla Walla are promising.—
[Sac. Union.]

GREELY'S RECEPTION.—We understand that Horace Greeley will arrive in Placerville by the Overland Stage to-day, and will be received by the citizens in front of the Cary House.—[Placerville Observer, July 30.]

The Japanese Prize Ring.

No spectacle in Japan is complete, or even possible, in which both spectators and performers do not make several changes of costume. On the stage this is a matter of course with actors and actresses, but it is also extended to the audience. Ladies who go to play are accompanied by numerous servants and a magnificent wardrobe; and in the course of the spectacle, which begins in the morning and ends late at night, they retire several times, and when they return, it is in new and gorgeous attire.

The wrestlers are dressed and led out for show, and then they are undressed again;
and a space being prepared, and a ring formed, they are divided into two opposing parties. These parties stand in the ring glaring at one another; then they tramp heavily backward and forward so as to show their points, and enable spectators to make up their betting books.

After this they retire; and all, with the exception of two, are again clothed in full dress, and take up their position on the front seats around the ring. The two who have been reserved now come forward, with the simple cloth bound round their loins, and walk with slow and deliberate steps into the centre of the ring. They stand eyeing each other with a wary look, glaring with a ferocious ferocity, each watching a chance to catch his antagonist off his guard. And as a savage nature comes more and more to the surface, they assume the look and even the movements of two wild, fierce bulls.

As they continue to eye each other, they stamp heavily on the ground, pawing the earth, as it were, with impatience, and then they stoop, grasp handfuls of earth, and fling it with an angry toss over their backs.
They crouch down low, still keeping their eyes fixed one on the other, and watching each movement; then in a moment there is a sudden spring, a great shock as the massive frames strike each other, a rebound, and then the two monsters become one monster, with many limbs, heaving and struggling,
with great muscles rising in distinct outline, with bloated faces, and gushes of purple blood.

Prize fighting in Japan is very much like prize fighting in England. But perhaps in Japan they recognize the nature of the exhibition more truly than we do, and it is quite in character with the rest of the scene, and a legitimate demonstration, when the next antagonist covers his head, and rushes at his opponent following like a bull. Let us leave the wrestlers; they will all struggle in succession, and with a like result, and then the man who can give and take the most will stand panting and victorious, and will be led off in triumph. The spectators meanwhile, instead of talking slang and looking disreputable, like the frequenters of English prize fights, will go home to music, and poetry and water parties.

Perhaps in the evening of the same day
we shall find them in the company of ladies, sitting by a cool running stream or in a shady grove, each with a book. The book may be of poetry, or containing religious and moral apothegms.—[Household Words.]

WHO IS TO BE SPEAKER OF THE NEXT CONGRESS?—Two great political factions are already hard at work upon the subject of who is to be the next Speaker. From the peculiar complexion of the next House, so far as it can be understood from the elections already had, it seems that the conflict will be as close and exciting as that which resulted in the election of Mr. Banks. Upon the republican side, the names of Mr. Grow, of Pennsylvania; Mr. Sherman, of Ohio; and Mr. Blair, of Missouri, are named. Upon the democratic side the principal men named are Mr. Boccock, of Virginia, and Mr. John Cochrane, of New York. The election of Mr. Cochrane would be especially welcome to all classes of the people. He is the most active, hard working and capable member of the New York delegation, and is thoroughly well fitted for the Speaker's chair.

Perfectly au fait to all the rules of the House, and a strong man with the people,
Mr. Cochrane would make a capital Speaker from every point of view.—N. Y. Herald.

GOING UP AND DOWN STAIRS BY MACHIN-ERY.—In describing Parson Stevens' new hotel in New York, the Journal of Commerce says:

A luxurious car or ladies' carriage is provided, which will glide from the lower floor to the uppermost story, easily conveying eight or ten persons at a trip. This car is propelled by steam, and passes up and down upon a revolving spiral shaft nearly 100 ft.
long and about 10 inches in diameter; and so perfect is this invention that under no circumstances is there a possibility of accident. Even should all the machinery above be removed, the car cannot descend any faster than usual, owing to an ingenious hydraulic arrangement at the base; and independent of this, the revolving shaft may be stopped at pleasure by any person inside or outside of the car. This is the invention of Mr. Otis Taft, of Boston, and seems to be of great value.

APPOINTMENT FOR MOUNT VERNON.—The
Alexandria Gazette states that the Ladies'
Mount Vernon Association have appointed
Union H. Herbert, Esq., of Fairfax county,
Va., the General Superintendent of Mount
Vernon, when it shall have been vacated by Mr. Washington, which will be done, probably, this summer or fall.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1859.

The division of the "South Pass Wagon Road," under the superintendence of Col. F. W. Lander, having completed the work contemplated, the party has been disbanded, a portion returning to the States, and a portion under Col. Lander going on to California. The new road leaves the old route at the last crossing of the Sweetwater, and strikes it again at or near Fort Hall. The road is said to be shorter and much better than the old road in respect to grass, wood and water. Some fourteen hundred wagons are said to have passed over it this season.

Fort Hall being the point where the California and Oregon roads divide, the route was followed by persons emigrating to both places. The road has been improved by clearing out timber, making side cuts in hills, and bridging the water courses. We believe that it is the intention of the Government to have a free road half the way through. It was the intention of Col. Lander, to collect the Indians who reside in the vicinity of Fort Hall, and on Snake River, to have a talk with them and make them a present of goods brought for that purpose. The Indians were to have met him at the mouth of Raft River, but there was not many present at the council.

We had the pleasure of greeting, a few days ago, our old friend Maj. Brookie, who has just returned from the Pike's Peak gold mines. The major, although he did not work any himself spent some time visiting the different mining localities. The "Gregory Diggings" appear to be the richest; four hands are working at that point, taking out to the man, some three hundred dollars per day, of the dust. Other claims are making from ten to one hundred and upwards. There are about five thousand persons now at the mines, including a considerable number of families.

It began to rain there about the first of July, and owing to the insufficient shelter, and being constantly wet, while out of doors, there was a great deal of sickness prevalent among the persons there.

Although there are many at the mines who are inexperienced gold hunters, the generality of the diggers are doing well; the mines being far above the average of California. The gold is found in quartz—a pink quartz—similar to that of California, which is very friable. Maj. Brookie verifies the reports of others, that the cry of "humbbug" was raised rather inadvisably; that the migration to the mines was too early, and then they left before the snow was sufficiently melted in the mountains to allow of a thorough examination.

Parties are prospecting in every direction, and our informant saw a lump of pure gold weighing two pounds, four ounces, which was obtained at a certain place south of the Pike's Peak, by a lad who had been a prisoner among the Indians, and from whom he escaped.

Cherry Creek is totally abandoned, as well as other localities on the low grounds; the gold is found in the mountains, and is most plentiful in the spurs which make out from the main chain. The "Gregory Claim" is some seventy miles from "Pike's Peak."

Some parties have crossed the mountains on to the Grand River waters, and found good "prospects," but were driven off by the Indians, and had returned to make up a large party. The dust is worth in the mines sixteen dollars per ounce.

Having been long in the California mines the statements of Maj. Brookie are worthy of credence.

We have not received any further reports concerning the Indian difficulties in the Northern part of the Territory, further than that the different commands had met on Bear River. We publish this week the official account of the engagement between Company G, 2d Dragoons, under Lieut. Gay and the Indians.

We learn from Maj. Porter, that "the Indians just off the Territory north, are very bold, and ignorant that a collision had taken place, arrayed themselves against a small party, coming from Capt. Wallen's command, stating that if they (the soldiers) wanted to fight, to come on.

The guides, through the Snake Indians, say the chief stated the Mormons told them the Dragoons were coming up there to wipe them out, and they were prepared for them now. This was near the Goose Creek mountains. By this time Maj. Lynde is informed of all the acts of the Indians, and taken steps accordingly."

Rumors are in circulation that the report, that some white men were engaged in the massacre of the emigrants on Raft River will be corroborated. We trust that a strict investigation will be had in the matter. In such cases white Indians deserve severer punishment than red ones.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[For the Valley Tan.
Box Elder, U. T.,
August 13th, 1859.]

Sir: I have the honor to report that, having arrived yesterday within six miles of this place, I went into camp, and two hours afterwards had reliable information, that a large body of Indians were probably encamped somewhere in the canyon leading from this valley to Cache Valley. I was informed, at the same time, that within five or six days past they had stolen a number of animals from this and the adjoining settlements; and that they were the same party who had murdered and robbed an emigrant train on Sublett's Cut-off.

I immediately resolved to attack them. At 10 o'clock, p.m., I broke up camp and moved quietly to this village. Here I left my wagons with a guard, and proceeded with a command of forty-two men, taking with me four pack mules with four days rations in order to be prepared, if necessary, to pursue them in the mountains. By 2 a.m., I had everything prepared for the march, and having procured a guide, who professed to know the Indian encampment, entered the canyon. After a rapid march of two hours the encampment was indicated by a number of ponies grazing, and in a moment afterwards by the Indians jumping up from their beds under the bushes, and running up the mountain sides, which were here covered with undergrowth. I immediately formed my men and charged upon the main body of them; in the charge several of the enemy were killed and wounded.

They then scattered and took positions behind rocks, &c., &c. Here they were charged and driven up precipices beyond the reach of men on horses. I then dismounted my men and kept up a fire for at least an hour and a half, which for an hour was briskly returned by the enemy, but he gradually ceased to fire. The precipitous nature of the ground rendering it utterly impossible to pursue him, I drove off his horses and returned to this place. The attack commenced just before the dawn and continued until after sunrise.

I am satisfied, that the encampment was selected with a view to defence, and for this purpose they probably could not have found a more admirable place in the whole Wahsatch range of mountains. (It is known as Devil's Gate Canyon.) As soon as the Indians were discovered my Mormon guide "slid" quietly from his horse and was seen no more, until on my return near this town I overhauled him. He was unable to give any satisfactory reason for his desertion. I have since learned that he came into town during the action, and reported "that we never would get out of that place." The horse he rode was one I had furnished him, and strange to say was found with an Indian on his back; the latter was shot and the horse taken. If my guide had desired to lead me into a fatal ambushade he could not have taken me to a spot better adapted for the purpose.

The guide and many others estimated the Indian force at from 150 to 200 warriors. The number killed was about twenty as near as we can calculate. I had no men killed, but four severely, though probably not mortally, and two slightly wounded. Nine of my horses were wounded.

The number of horses taken was twenty, nearly half being American horses.

It is a source of great satisfaction to me to know that one of the horses captured proved to be one which the Indians had taken from the train on Sublett's Cut-off, at the time of the massacre of July. Probably more belonging to the same train would have been captured, had not the Indian animals stampeded during the action, which could not be prevented, owing to the small guard which could be spared from the company for the purpose of securing property.

I am much indebted to Lieutenant Ryan, for his services on this occasion, which were performed with a masterly intrepidity, and coolness during the whole action.

Assistant Surgeon J. Moore receives the heartfelt thanks of myself, as well as the soldiers under my command, for his immediate and kind attentions to the wounded on the field during the action, and his continual personal attendance since.

The company behaved nobly on this occasion. I have the honor to refer the General Commanding to the list of wounded accompanying the report.

It is rumored to-day that 200 Bannack Indians arrived in Cache Valley yesterday. These, with the number of Indians already there will make probably about 500. A large emigration is near a point on Bear River twenty miles from this (Cache) Valley. I shall wait here long enough to care for my wounded and recruit my horses, when I shall proceed to Bear River in order to prevent the Indians from interfering with emigration.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) E. GAY,
2d Lieutenant, Company G,
2d Dragoons, Commanding.
Major F. J. Porter,
Asst. Adj. Gen'l, Dep't of Utah.

COMPANY G, 2d Dragoons.
List of men wounded in an action with Indians in Devil's Canyon, near Box Elder U. T., on the 13th of August, 1859:
1st Sergeant Thos. J. Durnion, slightly.
Corporal R. F. Cordua, severely.
Bugler Henry Winterbower, severely.
Private Jacob Eggersteat, slightly.
Samuel Smith, severely.
Michael Tierney, severely.
(Signed) E. GAY,
2d Lieut., 2d Dragoons,
Commanding Company G.
Box Elder, U. T.,
August 13th, 1859.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal.,
July 4th, 1859.
EDITOR OF THE "VALLEY TAN":
Sir:—Feeling that the nature of the case makes it justifiable, I ask you to excuse the freedom which I, a perfect stranger, take in addressing you, and in asking the liberty of addressing the public through your columns.

I have seen, lately, in your "little sheet," and in other papers, several articles on the subject of that notable tragedy, generally known as the "Parrish murder," in which my name is mentioned in such a way, and in such connections, as to make it likely to leave upon the public mind the impression that I had something to do with that "bloody affair."

Of that affair I have some little knowledge, which, if you will give it a place in your columns, I will faithfully, and truly, according to the best of my recollection, give to the public.

I will also, on the same conditions, give to the public my knowledge of some other matters in Utah.

Well, now for my statements.

At a certain time, during the notable "Reformation," which in the winter of 1857, I was, as one of the Bishop's counselors, presiding and speaking in a ward meeting, at the house of G. G. (Duff) Potter, where a brother counselor, N. T. Guymon, came to the door, and said, "Brother Stewart, please to cut your remarks short; the Bishop wishes to see you." I did so, and went with him to the Bishop's council room, an upper room in his dwelling house. As this was in the night, our movements were, perhaps, observed by but very few.

The Bishop (Johnson), Guymon, and myself, and some few others whom I cannot now identify composed this council.

After all had assembled, and were orderly seated, the Bishop stated the object of the meeting, which was, that we might hear a letter which he had just received from "President Young." He there read the letter, the purport of which was about this:

He, Brigham, had information that some suspicious characters were collecting at the "Indian Farm," on Spanish Fork, and he wished him (Bishop Johnson) to keep a good look out in that direction; to send some one there to reconnoiter and ascertain what was going on, and if they (those suspicious characters) should make a break, and be pursued, which he required; he "would be sorry to hear a favorable report;" "but," said he, "the better way is to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen."

He then admonished the Bishop that he (the Bishop) understood those things, and would act accordingly, and "keep this letter close," or safe.

This letter was over Brigham's signature, in his own peculiarly rough hands, which we all had the privilege of seeing.

About this matter there was no counseling; the word of Brigham was the law, and the object was, that we might hear it.

Early one morning, during the week succeeding this council, Parrish and Durfee called at my house (office), for I was the precinct magistrate, when Parrish, under oath, said his horses were stolen the night before from his stable, and required a warrant giving authority to search for them. I could find no law in Utah, making it the duty or the privilege of a justice or any other officer to grant a search warrant, yet I considered that there could be no harm in it, and therefore granted it, directing it to the sheriff, his deputy, or any constable of Utah county, requiring him to search diligently in Utah county for such property. Parrish wished me to deputize Durfee to search, but I refused. It was at this time that Durfee aimed, as I afterwards understood it, to give me a hint of his situation. In private he said, "You know how I stand." I replied, "Yes," supposing that he alluded to his apostasy, which he had made as public as he dare; when he replied, "All's right in Israel." I did not understand him.

The next Saturday night there was a council, which I attended by special invitation. In this council were, as well as I remember, Bishop A. Johnson, J. M. Stewart, A. F. McDonald, N. T. Guymon, L. Johnson, C. Lanford, and W. J. Earl. I am pretty certain there were others present, but I cannot now name them. O yes! Potter and Durfee were present. They came in with blankets wrapped around them.

In this council there was a good deal of secret talking done by two or three individuals getting close together, and talking in suppressed tones, which I, being dull of hearing, did not understand. I did not try to understand, but some things I could not help understanding. I understood when Potter requested of the Bishop the privilege to kill Parrish wherever he could find "the damned curse," and the Bishop's reply, "Shed no blood in Springville."

During this council, to the best of my recollection, I scarcely spoke a word. I understood that blood would probably be shed, not in Springville, but out of it.

I did in my heart disapprove of the course, but I was in the current, and could not get out, and policy said to me, "Hold your tongue for the present." This was Saturday night, and, as well as I remember, I heard no more of the affair till the next (Sunday) night, one week, that is eight days, which made it Sunday night.

I knew nothing of the plan, nor of the deeds having been done, until near midnight, when I was awakened, and requested to go and hold an inquest over some dead bodies. W. J. Earl, one of the city aldermen, and my predecessor in the magisterial office, made this requirement of me, and undertook to dictate me in the selecting of a jury. I considered my position for a moment, and concluded to suffer myself to be dictated to, unless an attempt should be made to lead me to the commission of crime. In that case I felt that I would try "mighty hard" to back out.

I obeyed my manager, W. J. Earl, in selecting the jury. Having summoned a part of the number requisite for a jury, and being told by Earl that the jury could be filled out after we got there, we proceeded along the main road, south, about one mile from the public square, to the corner of a field known as Childs' corner. Here laid the bodies of Wm. R. Parrish and G. G. Potter, (Duff Potter.) They had evidently been killed in the road and dragged to the place they then occupied. Not to be tedious, I proceeded to fill up and qualify the jury. The examination took place under my own observation. It was a protracted one; a minute record being kept by A. F. McDonald, foreman. Before we got through with young Parrish, Beason (so called) was discovered dead, at a distance from the other bodies of about 15 rods, in a south-east direction. The verdict was, "That they came to their deaths by the hands of an assassin, or assassins, to the jury unknown."

The bodies were hauled to the school-house, by George McKenzie, who, by somebody's direction, as I suppose, was on the ground with his team and wagon. The bodies were guarded through the night by the police. The next morning the Bishop sent word to me to bury the bodies, which I did, and made out the bill according to the charges of the men employed. I was told to take charge of the goods, chattels, and clothes of the murdered men; which I did, and in due time delivered every article to their families, except a butcher knife claimed by Mrs. Parrish, which I did not suppose belonged to her, and which I would not give to her (professing ignorance of its whereabouts) till I could get directions from the Bishop. [She never got the knife; it was subsequently lost in my family.]

The law of the Territory made it my duty to make returns of my proceedings, in this case, to the County Court, but the Bishop told me not to do it, and I obeyed him.

Some considerable time, I don't know how long after the murder, I spoke to Bishop Johnson concerning the above named knife. I supposed, from the fact that when the knife came into my possession it was all over bloody, that it had been used by the assassin; but the Bishop thought differently. During our chat about the knife, and the murder, the Bishop asked:

"Do you know who done that job?"
I replied, "No." He then asked, "Have you any idea?"
"No."

"Can't you guess?"
I answered, "I guess I could."
He then said, "Well, guess."
"I guess William Bird."
He replied, "you are pretty good at guessing."

I know nothing which would naturally have caused me to suspect Wm. Bird, even as much as some others, but there was an internal prompting right at the moment, and I spoke accordingly.

I suppose I had as well say something about the Notorious "Court" in which Durfee and O. Parrish were tried, for the murder of Potter and the Parrishes.

H. H. Kearns, Captain of the Police, came to me on Monday, the next day after the murder, and told me that I must hold Court sometime that afternoon, and examine Durfee and young Parrish in regard to the murder, as he had them prisoners on that account. I understood that it was only to be done as a show, or kind of a "put off."

I ordered the prisoners before me, and, as I was directed, swore them to tell "the truth," &c., in the case then under consideration.

Durfee made his statement first, which was about what has hitherto been revealed. He, of course told what he had been instructed to tell. Parrish, as might have been expected, chose not to know anything of consequence. It was certainly wise in him to be ignorant.

He would have been in order, while on the subject of the "knife," to state that which I will now state:

Before the Bishop and I had got through with our chat, Bird came in sight, and the Bishop called to him; he came to us, and during our conversation, coolly and deliberately made the following statement:

"When Potter fell, I clinched Parrish, and killed him with my knife."

I know that Parrish was killed with a knife. Potter was killed with what appeared to be one shot of four balls from a shot gun, entering just under his left breast. Beason Parrish was also killed by one or two shots in his body, the particular locality not now remembered.

Thus I have written all that I can think of of that tragical affair.

I am perfectly aware that that portion of community who have no knowledge of the under-currents and wire-workings of Mormonism will consider me a "poor concern," for suffering myself to be swayed in my official duties by ecclesiastical dignitaries; for suffering myself, in the case above mentioned, to be governed by the Bishop. But I perfectly understood that to act without counsel, or to disobey counsel, was to transgress; and if I had never understood it before I could not help but understand it then, by the example of the three dead bodies right before my eyes, that "The way of the transgressor is (was) hard."

I might make some revelations, but they would not be very important, concerning the case of Mr. Forbes. I may make them at some future time.

I am, &c., your humble servant,
J. M. STEWART.

From the Gold Mines.

Capt. L. Nuckolls reached home yesterday, (July 8.) He left the mines on the 25th ult. Consequently he made the trip in about thirteen days, and brings the latest news yet received from the mines.

In regard to the Gold Mines Capt. N. lost no opportunity of obtaining all the reliable information possible. His extensive acquaintance with the pioneer gold seekers, and his frequent intercourse with them, gave him unusual facilities for acquiring correct information. Being entirely disinterested, we feel satisfied his statements are nearer the truth than anything yet published.

He says it was estimated that 20,000 persons were at the mines. Of this number, not more than one in every five hundred was making good wages. The majority were not paying expenses. The number who are making extraordinary wages is limited to a very few. He does not think the entire amount of gold taken out this season, thus far, exceeds twenty thousand dollars.

Between Cachela Poudre and the crossing of the South Platte, he passed about 700 teams returning home. Most of the persons accompanying these trains had visited the mountain diggings, but failed to meet with sufficient encouragement to induce them to remain.

The statement of Horace Greeley and others was undoubtedly made in all candor and honesty, but was greatly exaggerated, in consequence of impositions practiced upon these gentlemen by interested parties. He thinks, in a very few instances $150 to $300 have been taken out of certain claims in a day, but these instances are exceedingly rare.

His advice to all who contemplate emigrating to the mines is to wait further developments. Next spring will be time enough to start, if the news should continue favorable. Those who go now will in all probability have cause to regret it.

The soldiers at Fort Kearney have all been ordered to Salt Lake, and that post is now deserted.

A company of soldiers, stationed beyond the Fort, for the protection of emigrants, lost 90 horses by a stampede a few days ago.

He confirms the reports of the Indian hostilities, and the burning of the Pawnee village.—Pacific City Herald, July 9.

M. Blondin's great feat of walking over Niagara River on a rope, engrosses much interest in the States.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Maj. Wallon's command left here on Monday, on their return trip to the Dalles.

NEW PAPER.—We have information, from the most authentic source, that a new paper is about to be issued in this place, from the office of the Deseret "News." It will be Anti-Gentile-politico-Mormon in politics, we suppose, and will indulge in matters of an earthy nature—the object of the "News" being solely to build up the Kingdom of God. Selah.

T. S. Williams, Esq., requests us to state, in justice to him, that the report in our last issue, relative to the business of the District Court, in regard to his tampering with the jury, was incorrect. He assures us that he didn't "wiggle" at all.

We offered, and still offer, to Mr. Williams, the use of our columns for a rectification of our alleged misstatement.

We would again call attention to the advertisement of M. Gerard B. Allen, of St. Louis, as one of the most reliable gentlemen with whom we are acquainted.

Mr. Allen has a foundry, and manufactures all kinds of machinery, and will give satisfaction to all who may deal with him.

About 1,000 emigrants, converts to Mormonism, from various parts of the world, but mostly from England, we believe, are expected to soon arrive in this city. The number of "apostates" who they have met returning to their old homes, probably outnumber them 4 to 1. Extremes meet, as the dog said when the bee stung him on the tail.

DISTRICT COURT.

Wednesday morning, August 17, 1859. Pursuant to adjournment Court convened. John Wade indicted for stealing a mullet, &c. Defendant entered into recognizance to appear, and answer the charge, on the 12th day of September next. In the replevin case of A. B. Miller vs. T. S. Williams, jury was sworn and retired, and returned with verdict for defendant, which was set aside by the Court "as contrary to the law and evidence presented to the jury. New trial granted. Court adjourned.

Thursday, August 18.

The complaint in the case of F. E. McNeil vs. Brigham Young, Sr., and others, was ordered by the Court to be abated, on account of the death of the plaintiff.

Henry Phelps and Henry Spears, indicted for robbery, entered into recognizances to appear and abide judgment on the 12th day of September next.

A letter from the U. S. Attorney, declaring the President's pardon of Brigham Young, Heber Kimball, and others, indicted for treason in the First Judicial District, was presented, and ordered to be put on record.

In the case of Gilbert B. Smith vs. Thos. and Wesley Wheeler, (civil,) jury returned a verdict for defendants.

Leave granted for plaintiff, in the case of Bradford Leonard vs. S. H. Goddard, (civil,) to amend complaint.

Adjourned till to-morrow.

Friday, August 19, 1859.

In the case of Gilbert B. Smith vs. Thos. and Wesley Wheeler, on promissory note, Court ordered that the defendants recover the amount awarded them in the verdict, with costs of suit.

In the case of J. F. Kinney vs. John Blair, defendant failing to appear, judgment was rendered for plaintiff.

In the case of John Robinson vs. James Hennifer, on promissory note, defendant, though present, making no answer to petition of plaintiff, judgment was awarded in favor of latter.

Yoads, the Indian indicted of grand larceny, appeared, and entered into recognizance to appear and answer charge on the 12th day of September next.

In the case of Bradford Leonard vs. W. L. Jolly, John Gosling and John M. Moody, on promissory note, the defendants, though present by their attorneys, saying nothing, judgment was awarded plaintiff.

Writ of injunction granted in the case of J. E. D. Jester vs. Jeter Clinton and R. N. Allred.

Court ordered that in all cases docketed for trial at the present term of the Court, answers to complaints be filed, if not already, on or before the 12th day of next September.

His honor, Judge Sinclair, adjourned Court until the 12th day of September, to give attorneys an opportunity to arrange their business, and attend the session of the Court in the 1st Judicial District, when the term will be resumed, and continue, if necessary, till November.

ABSTRACT OF

Remarks Made by Elder Heber C. Kimball, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Forenoon, August 21, 1859.

I do not wish to add to the able remarks of the speaker who has just preceded me; he handled his subject with consummate ability, and I can make the subject none the more lucid.

There are things, though, to which I wish to direct your particular attention—matters of the deepest importance to you all. I refer to your tempo al welfare. Now, we are in a period of the greatest plenty—a period of abundance, yet right at the threshold of famine. Take warning, and provide yourselves for the future. I know by inspiration what is in store for us. Do not allow the merchants of this place to further impose upon you as they have heretofore done. What have I done with my wheat? Have I disposed of a single grain of it? No; with the exception of what I gave a New York friend to carry him to California, it is all lying in my grainery and my mill; and there it will lie until that day of awful desolation arrives—now right at our doors—when I will have it to feed myself, my wives, and my children on, and some of you, who will then come to me, lank-jawed and famishing. It is within the power of you all, however, to have enough and to spare. But will you do it? No, you won't. Thousands in this church will hear the warning, and allow it to pass by unheeded. Soon, very soon, the inhabitants of North and South America will be writhing in all the horrid agonies of starvation. One universal wail of sorrow will ascend from famine-stricken millions, and the hand of deliverance will not be extended. In that terrible time, where will the Saints be? Will their lamps be filled and trimmed for the occasion? The wise will have an abundance and to spare; and, as I before said, thousands of others will beg from their more prudent friends.

Am I dependent upon these Shylock merchants any longer? I say to you all, that I will never again allow them to have a penny from me. I have plenty coming to me, and instead of my sugar costing me sixty-five cents per pound, it shall no longer cost me to exceed ten or eleven cents; my coffee not over twelve or fifteen; my tea—the best of tea—not more than seven shillings; my factory not above twelve or thirteen cents per yard; and everything else in the same low proportion. I can buy sugar in St. Louis for six and seven cents per pound, and all other articles in the same ratio. Now, how much will it cost me to bring my articles here? I will do like the merchants here do—buy my teams on the Missouri river, use them to haul my freight over the plains, and when they arrive here, sell them for the original cost; which money I can send right back; and again buy teams for the next trip, and the next, and as often as I desire so to do.

Remember, as true as the Lord God liveth, the evil hour is close at hand. When, for successive years, the farmer labors, but nought is brought forth—when mother earth refuses to supply from her bosom millions of her dependent tenants—will your graineries and flour bins be empty? Even now, the dark period begins to dawn. The New York friend of mine before referred to, told me that in the Genesee wheat country, New York, the wheat raised of late years had been continually growing inferior in quality, from year to year; and that the prospect for this season is that there will be none at all, owing to the ravages of insects. The Genesee section of country has always been classed as the richest wheat district in the Union.

[Here the Elder related the trials and privations which he had passed through, and again recited the terrible retributions awaiting those who had opposed the Church of God, in language similar to that published in the abstract of his sermon week before last; and continued.]

I am looked upon by some as rather hard upon this generation. [Instead of the adverb "rather" and adjective "hard," the Elder used a noun expressive of his character, which was so completely original with himself, foreign to our vocabulary, and singular in its sound, that it escaped our memory almost simultaneously with its utterance.] I don't deny the charge. I am rough with the people of this age of the world, and expect to be as long as I live; and when I die, I will rise up and be rougher than ever. I am not partial, either, in my denunciations. I acknowledge, openly and above-board, that all the persecutions which this Church has undergone, have been brought upon it through the iniquities of its Elders and its members. But the debt will soon be paid. Then will come a settlement with the persecutors. As they measure to us, it will be measured back to them; and the measures which they will receive will be overflowing, too.

They haven't got brother Young yet, have they? No, and they won't get him, either, till they take my life, and when they take my life, they will seek to take the lives of all the members of this church. But never mind—God has got a bit in the mouths of our enemies; they are bridled, and He holds the reins.

About the devil being chained in that "bottomless pit," which brother Pratt was talking about. Is that pit without a bottom? If it is, the devil will come out at the other end. [Laughter.] Many would call this language vulgar, but I don't believe in doing like most of the preachers in the East, who put on faces as long as a wheelbarrow, when, at the same time, they are as full of hypocrisy as they can be.

The Elder concluded by again vividly reminding the congregation of the season of scarcity approaching, and the importance of providing therefor; and, upon requesting all the Bishops present to congregate at the north door of the tabernacle, to hear what he termed secrets, took his seat, receiving the usual encore of "amens."

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The steamship Africa, Captain Shannon, which sailed from Liverpool at three o'clock on the afternoon of the 9th inst., arrived at New York on Thursday morning.

The City of Manchester from New York, arrived at Queenstown at six o'clock on the evening of the 7th, and the Fulton reached Southampton about eight o'clock the same evening.

Armistice between France and Austria.

On the 7th inst., the Emperor of the French telegraphed to the Empress that an armistice had been concluded between the Emperor of Austria and himself, and that Commissioners had been appointed to settle the clauses and duration of the armistice.

The Paris Moniteur, in publishing the official despatch, appends the following remarks:—"It is necessary that the public should not misunderstand the extent of the armistice. It is limited merely to a relaxation of hostilities between the belligerent armies, which though leaving the field open for negotiations, do not enable us for the present to see how the war may be terminated."

BATTLE OF SOLFERINO.

The battle of Solferino, as it was the grandest, so it was the last battle of the campaign. It was fought on the 24th of June. It appeared to be the final and desperate move of the Austrian army to recover its position. They crossed over to the western side of the Mincio, and offered the Allies battle. The offer was accepted. The Austrian army formed a line of battle extending, according to Napoleon's despatch to the Empress, five leagues in length. Their force was estimated by the French generals at from 250,000 to 270,000, but it did not exceed 200,000. The force of the French and Sardinians was nearly equal. Both Emperors were at the heads of their respective armies. The fight commenced at five o'clock in the morning, by an attack of the Austrians on the corps of McMahon and d'Hilliers. One after another the various corps of both armies were brought into the field, so that there were some 400,000 men engaged. At half past six o'clock in the evening, after a series of brilliant manoeuvres and hard fighting on both sides, the Austrians were in full retreat along the whole line, a spectacle at which Francis Joseph is said to have wept bitterly. They made an orderly retreat, and were not pursued. During the engagement a terrible storm raged, which drove the Sardinians from positions which they had won. The loss of the French was given at 750 officers and 12,000 privates, in killed and wounded. Of the officers, 120 were killed, including seven colonels and six lieutenant colonels. Among the wounded were five generals. The total loss of the Allies was about 18,000. The Austrians do not admit their loss to be over 15,000. The Allies captured 6,000 prisoners, 30 cannon, four colors, and a great number of ammunition wagons. It was a brilliant victory, though dearly won.

THE ARMISTICE.

The Austrians recrossed the Mincio to seek the refuge of their fortresses in the celebrated quadrangle. The Sardinians invested Peschiera, and the French, being reinforced by 35,000 men under Prince Napoleon, approached Verona to lay siege to it. While the world was awaiting news to the progress of events in the famous square, an armistice had been agreed upon between Napoleon and Francis Joseph. This was not entirely unexpected. It had been predicted that the French Emperor would, at the proper moment, offer an armistice. He did so, and it was accepted. It was signed at Villafranca on the 8th of July, and was to extend to the 15th of August. According to its terms the belligerent armies were to keep the positions they occupied, and the railways to Verona, Peschiera and Mantua were to be used for carrying provisions to those fortresses—the works offensive and defensive of Peschiera to remain in their then condition. Here is Napoleon's order of the day announcing the armistice:—

VALLEGIO, July 10, 1859.

SOLDIERS.—An armistice was concluded on the 8th inst., between the belligerent parties, to extend to the 15th of August. This will permit you to rest after your glorious labors, and to recover, if necessary, new strength to conclude the work which you have so gloriously inaugurated by your courage and resolution. I am about to return to Paris, and shall leave the provisional command of the army to Marshal Vaillant; but as soon as the hour of combat will have struck, you will see me again in your midst to partake of your dangers.

NAPOLEON.

The London Times Vienna correspondent says that it was believed there that the British government had brought about the armistice. Another authority says that the Prince Regent of Prussia took the initiative in suggesting the armistice. But the Vienna Gazette says of the armistice, that an autograph letter addressed by the Emperor Napoleon to the Emperor of Austria led to the negotiations, the result of which was a five weeks armistice.

It is stated in a Verona telegraphic despatch that the armistice was concluded after repeated requests from the French, and after their consent had been obtained to all the conditions asked by Austria.

PEACE CONCLUDED.

FARTHER POINT, July 23.

The steamship North Briton, from Liverpool on the 13th inst., bound for Quebec, has been intercepted off this point, and a most important budget of news obtained.

The steamship Anglo Saxon arrived out on the 11th inst.

The advices by the North Briton are four days later than those by the Arago, and of a highly important character, both in a political and financial point of view.

A treaty of peace between Austria and France and Sardinia had already been concluded. The provisions of the treaty are briefly as follows:

An Italian confederation is to be formed under the honorary presidency of the Pope of Rome; Austria concedes Lombardy to France; Napoleon in turn grants these possessions to Sardinia. Austria retains her right of rule over Venice.

The following is a copy of the telegraphic dispatch from Napoleon to the Empress, announcing that peace had been concluded:

VALLEGIO, July 11.

A treaty of peace has been signed between the Emperor of Austria and myself on the following basis:

The Italian confederation is to be under the honorary presidency of the Pope. The Emperor of Austria concedes his rights in Lombardy to the Emperor of the French, who transfers them to the King of Sardinia. The Emperor of Austria preserves Venice, but she will form an integral part of the Italian confederation.

NAPOLEON.

The dispatch of the Emperor announcing the conclusion of peace was bulletined in Paris on the 12th, when the French funds immediately rose 2½ per cent.

The London News says the first hopes and expectations of Italy are deceived.

HONEY LAKE VALLEY.—Maj. Dodge, Indian Agent, has returned to Genoa from a trip to the North. He speaks in glowing terms of Honey Lake Valley. He saw extensive fields of wheat and corn which promise an abundant yield. The valley is dotted over with fine farms under fence. The Major saw large numbers of adventurers between Genoa and Honey Lake, searching for gold and stock ranges. A number of settlers have taken up claims at different points along the road.

BAYONETS.—The Springfield Republican says that when bayonets think their triumph is half secured, and the great difference between the French and Italians and the Austrian soldiery to whom they are opposed, is that their bayonets think, while those of the Austrians do not.

Captain Maryatt, in his American diary, gives an anecdote of a Yankee soldier, who, for the first time, seeing the enemy approach charging bayonets, was, for the moment, somewhat puzzled by the movement, but as soon as he understood the object, exclaimed, "Well, I calculate my piece of iron's as good as yours," and very quickly demonstrated the fact to the satisfaction of his antagonist. Maryatt says that a people who "calculate" in this way, at such a moment, are not to be despised. The Austrians do not seem to have the calculating any more than the thinking faculty, nor to have encouraged themselves by the reflection, that the very assailants who were bounding so furiously upon them had always exhibited a sensitiveness equal to their own when in contact with the British bayonet, which, in its turn, had found its full match among calculating Yankees. [Richmond Dispatch.]

LATER FROM NEVADA TERRITORY.—The Marysville Democrat, through a private source, has news from Carson Valley to the 21st inst. A Convention was in session at Genoa, for forming a sort of Provisional Government for Nevada Territory, it being the intention of the people to throw off all appearance of allegiance to the Utah-Mormon rule. The Convention will likely be in session three or four weeks. It was the general belief that John Mercer, of Downieville, would be the Governor of the Provisional Government.

The stage from St. Louis, with the mails of June 30th, reached this city at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m. The following is the time table of the trip:

Left St. Louis..... June 10th, at 9 p. m.
Arrived at El Paso..... July 10th, 3:10 p. m.
Arrived at San Francisco July 22d, 5:40 p. m.

Time to El Paso..... 10 5 10
Detention..... 00 1 35
Time from El Paso..... 12 0 35

Whole time..... 22 8 40
—[Weekly National, San Fran.]

ELECTION OF JUDGE CRANE AS DELEGATE FOR NEVADA TERRITORY.—Genoa, July 27. —The Committee appointed by Convention to canvass the vote for delegate to Congress, have just reported that the whole number of votes cast is 817—for Crane, 439; for Dodge, 378—Crane's majority, 61. The election will probably be contested.

FROST EL PASO.—Correspondence to the San Diego Herald, dated El Paso, 8th July, says:

The Rio Grande is still very high, and much difficulty is experienced in crossing; the bottom roads are very bad, almost impassable.

The news from the city of Chihuahau brings us information of the non-occurrence of the Liberals of that city in the mild measure of the treaty with Mario Zuloaga, at Coalitas. Romicito Barillo, the present head of the Yucabayistas, has been thrown into prison, as also Lieut. Ordóñez, a Liberalist, on account of their having signed the obnoxious treaty. Joroso, the head of the Liberals, has also been arrested, and accusation made of his having been bought by Zuloaga. Pablo Miranda, an exile, and Secretary to Zuloaga, crossed the river on the day of the reception of the orders from the capital for their arrests, for the purpose of visiting his mother. A vigorous search was instituted for him, but he happily escaped.

The Texas Boundary Commissioner is in trouble. Lieut. Peck and six officers of their escort, were killed by Comanches, a few days since, about 250 miles from this place. Their escort consists of one company of infantry, from Fort Bliss, yet in spite of this military demonstration, 300 Comanches constantly surround the camp.

Weather very hot, and prospect of the grain crop good.

Henry C. Johnston, a young lawyer of Pike county Ill., was taken from a Justice's office in the town of Milton, while prosecuting some of the members of the Vigilance Committee for rioting, and lynched very severely. He was at first blindfolded, and on refusing to promise not to prosecute, was stripped and seventy five lashes laid on his bare back. It was thought he would die.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from Salt Lake over the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipping Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of:

Brown sheeting	Merrimack Prints
Bleached do	Blue Denims
" shirtings	" drills
Brown do	White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes	Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey	Woolen do
Kentucky jeans	Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking	Alpacas and merinos
Delaines & cashmeres	Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels	Sewing thread
" napkins	Curtain damasks
" table cloths	Satinett & cassimeres
Crash, toweling and doylies	Cottonades and pant stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths
White linen bosom shirts Apron checks
Colored calico do Heavy duck (all widths)
Grey flannel do Blue & Hick'ry check
Red do do &c., &c., &c.
Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress silks	Embroidered sets
Plain all wool delaines	" collars & sleeves
Fancy do	" window curtains
Alexander's kid gloves	" edgings and insertions
Bay state long shawls	" linen handkerchiefs
Stella and merino do	Plain linen cambric
Delaines in dress patterns	Hem stitched " "
White cambric muslin	" cravats and ties

Jacknets Suspenders
Swiss Dress Trimmings
Mull & Namsocks
Plaid Jackonet muslins

Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and gantlets
Lace mits and gloves
Dress lawns and barges

Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY

Is the largest and best assortment on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York. Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-301.

"Secure the Shadow ere the Substance Fades."

LIKENESSES, as cheap as the cheapest, and as good as the best. At the old stand, over A. Taylor & Sons;

Sign of the Cannon!

Having purchased a new lot of superior cases, lockets, breast-pins, &c., at the now fashionable price of "cost and freight," I can now sell the various photographic pictures, such as ambrotypes, melanotypes, paper and leather types, at much lower prices than I have during the year past. Call and examine specimens.

M. CANNON.

Scaring a "Green Horn."

The Mobile Advertiser relates the adventures of a countryman who recently visited the city, and one of the incidents is as follows:

He was in the middle of Dauphin street, and near a large music store, in which there a bevy of ladies, one of whom was testing the merits of a new and beautiful piano, which the proprietor had that morning opened. Hoosier hastened to the sidewalk and planted himself in the middle of the door, where, with mouth wide open, he stood, enjoying music which he had never before heard, with the most intense satisfaction.

It was in coming out of the door that he was met by our old friend Dick—"straight back Dick" of yellow fever memory—who had been watching him for some time, waiting for an opportunity to exercise his vocation.

Dick's intention was to see how far he might play up on the hoosier's fears through his apparent greenness—so put on a bullying, swaggering front—and if he succeeded in frightening him, sufficiently, to get up a mock court among his friends and put greeny through a trial for some imaginary offense, convict and punish him, and add another to the list of victims semi-occasionally immobilized upon the shrine of his pet passion. Dick had it all arranged.

As Greeny stepped out of the store he received a tap on his shoulder which would not have allayed a pain had one existed there, and turning around quickly he discovered Dick standing in a commanding position, foot advanced, left hand upon the hip, and right hand extended—palm up—as though waiting for something to be deposited there. Greeny looked into Dick's hand, and then interrogatively into Dick's eyes.

"Your license?" demanded Dick, sharply. "What license?" asked greeny, not a whit alarmed.

"Why, your license for walking on my pavement," returned Dick, waxing wroth. "Darn your pavement," replied greeny, warmly, and looking around as though searching for the pavement. "I haint walked over it, I haint seen it, and I haint got no license."

"Then get out into the streets you scamp. I don't allow persons to stand on the sidewalk who have no license."

"Well, now, I ok a here, stranger, I aint aware of having done nothing wrong, as I knows on, an' I reckon as how if I do get off this sidewalk somebody'll put me off as sure as I'm from Pike!"

"Yes, and I'm the somebody that will do it!" said Dick, who had worked himself up to a special rage. Smiting his movement to his words, Dick turned up his sleeves, and executed a series of manipulations that would have attracted the attention of Aaron Jones himself, all preparatory to a grand "pitching into" the unprotected front of the innocent greeny.

With the utmost unconcern he allowed Dick to circle around him once or twice, when he straightened out a brawny arm, in which was attached a sledge-hammer fist, and as quick as thought Dick occupied a horizontal position upon the moated sidewalk. Hoosier calmly regarded the chop-fallen jester as he slowly regained his feet and started off.

Sticking his fists deep into the capacious pockets of his pantaloons, he watched the retreating form of Dick, who did not get away without hearing the parting admonition of the green 'nute:

"I say, yew—next time you fish for suckers try some other bait will ye?"

Pop.—It seems that a young Missourian went to St. Louis and having fixed up pretty high, stopped in a street and by his noisy demeanor drew a crowd. At last, he proceeded to tell what the matter was with himself, his remarkable parent and others of his family. Before the police could surround and capture him, he had thus addressed his anxious hearers:

"I do allow Pop he's the greatest man ever yet; he's naturally a little backed; but you just take Pop and pile him up some, and that ain't no man as kin talk more nor what Pop kin talk. That is them as thinks it ain't no fun in him, but I tell you he won't allow none of his children to take no advantage onto him, and of they any on fem skil things at his head, thar aint no man as we'd skite 'em back at 'em quicker'n what Pop'll skite 'em back."

"Uncle Ben is some hettier nor what Pop is, and he's a dreaful ugly cuss—that's what's the matter with him. Once he got riled at Pop, and blowed he'd lick him. 'Wal, he pitched round for the old man, and he see him in the woods, and he peered for him, he'd P. P. he kept kinder quiet like, till Ben got close, and then he kitched the back pitch on o Ben, and he throw him bad; and after that, he tied the critter to a tree, and k-p him thar till it got dusky like, a grinnin' at him; and when he was set loose, you never see no man look so I shier nor what Ben I looked. O, not ef ever ye get in on Pop, and try fur the in turn out fur him, thar aint no man as will throw yer cicker nor Pop will throw yer."

"Aunt Bets she tried to skeer the ol' man once. She made up a goss, she did, outen a puller—turnip, hands and bread head, and she put it in Pop's bed, and watched till she got most asleep fur to hear him holler; but he just didn't holler, nary time, so she just peeked in, fur she was afeared he was skeert so bad he couldn't. But the ole man was all right, he was he had eat up the critter's head and hand, and thar he laid, fast asleep on the cuss's chest. Pop-allers allowed he got the best of Pop's and the ole goss, but Bets she kep munn—that's what was the matter with her! You never heed nobody keep no munn about gosses, nor what Bets kep about gosses."

"Wal, thar aint no use a spitten round here. My name's Betloo. P'm Pop's son, I am. I know all Pop knows, and I hev picked up a hap outside, I hev. Thar aint no Pensilvany Dutch about me. I'm hard all the way down—just feel of my back—Whoop-a-whoop! I want a fight! That's what's the matter with me!"

LORD PALMERSTON'S NEUTRALITY.—The following is a reply to a memorial from Llanelli:

Sir:—I am directed by Lord Palmerston to acknowledge the receipt of the memorial from the annual assembly of the independent and Carmarthen, urging the necessity of non-intervention on the part of the country in the war between France, Sardinia and Austria, and to inform you that her Majesty's Government have no intention of advising her Majesty to take part in the present war, and that they do not foresee the probability of any events that would lead them to depart from the policy of neutrality.

C. G. BARRINGTON.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will receive for Fifty per cent of the cost of goods on the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of which, to be herewith their best stock now on hand, they will sell at this time, in this city, by the piece or package, at COST and TWENTY CENTS per cent.

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing the following goods is called to the fact that this sale is for cash, and we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

NOTICE!

HAVING removed our Store to Camp Floyd, we are desirous of setting up our out-standing accounts in this city. All persons indebted to the undersigned will please call on Mr. Thomas Adams, who is authorized to collect the bill in his hands.

RAYMOND, GARD & CO.,
The undersigned can be found at the office of the "Valley Tan" during business hours. Prompt settlements are solicited.

THOMAS ADAMS.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store. It is now open and is not only the best thing in the Grocery line, but also the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, C. flour, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, sugar, alum, cornmeal, potatoes, in shells, indigo, powder, lard, short, eggs, vinegar, vanilla, etc., etc. Also, a large stock of every kind of fruit, berries, etc., etc. Also, a large stock of every kind of fruit, berries, etc., etc. Also, a large stock of every kind of fruit, berries, etc., etc.

We will sell a lot of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, and one high and another low. We also have a lot of American celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market. Come and see the goods and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good eggs. HORD & DICKSON.

STRAYED

FROM the herd at the Hot Spring Brewery, two BLACK BULLS, branded H S on their shoulders, and B H on their hindquarters. Supposed to have gone towards Salt Lake City. $30 reward will be paid for their delivery to the owner at the Brewery.

DOUG. HERFORD.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and putting up next door north of the street, at the corner of Camp Floyd, one of the best stock of merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, cut in the latest style, and which we would be pleased to have them see and select from.

DYER, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by

DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale by

DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE

to sell or exchange for Country Produce.

DYER, BRO. & CO.

CHEAP GOODS

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
GEO. CRONIN & Co., two doors north of C. A. Perry & Co.'s store, have purchased the stock of Geo. Cronin & Co. and are offering them at wholesale and retail, at very low prices. Call and examine before purchase and see what.

40-11

FOR SALE.

200 YOKE WORK CATTLE,

25 WAGONS, 15 MULES.

SHRADER & FUNK,

at the store of Geo. Cronin.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

By R. H. DYER, and GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert & Gerrish, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us.

GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;

—ALSO—

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,

AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort Bridger, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

37-11

NOTICE.

THE co-partnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Williams & Jackson, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by M. JACKSON, 1102 S. WILLIAM ST. PARKMENIO A. JACKMAN.

To the Traveling Public.
STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Stage line of stage running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, an from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point twice a week, and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, and good and comfortable Coaches, and drivers, and for the convenience of his patrons, he has carried passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

It will be ready to receive horses on Every May 10th, for the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his Stage line, between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passengers' baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents a pound. All pack goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cts each.

A 10 pound will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property entrusted, except receipts for by his agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. PARKMENIO A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE

Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,

where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread

Crackers.

Cakes.

Pastery, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS.

CONFECTIONERY.

SODA WATER, &

SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS,

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath..... 75 cents.

Five Baths..... $3.00

Ten do..... $5.00

37-3m

E. REESE.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the

States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo.,

and Leavenworth, Mo.,

Passenger tickets at the reduced price of $7.50.

Meals, furnished at the reduced rate of 10 cents at REASON-

ABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage.

For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt

Lake City.

CITY BREWERY.

MR. W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully

calls the attention of the public to his entering room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added

to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt

mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments.

34-11

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd,

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains on 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest stock, at best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale

in this market, and to which they would invite the attention of their friends, and customers, and purchasers in general, offering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low prices.

33-3m

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron

Works, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard

Presses and Iron Castings of every description, and General Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

20-11

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods,

Liquors,

Hats & Caps,

Boots & Shoes,

Clothing,

Hardware,

Outfitting Goods,

Harness,

Saddles,

& Bridles,

which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in large quantities.

All kinds of Country Pro-

duce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,

75 light Cheyenne WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN

WAGONS; 500 and AMERICAN WAGON CATTLE; one and MALFSE JACK; one fine STATION P. by 35-11

C. A. PERRY & CO.

Hockaday & Burr,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their

NEW STORE ROOMS,

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDIZE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS,

CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

IMPORTING

AND

WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Wholesale Importing Druggists,

DEALERS IN

DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRU-

MENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles,

Pat. to. Oils, Brushes,

Camphene, Lamp,

Machine and pure Lard Oil,

House, Hardware Materials, &c.

139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for

the following valuable preparations:

Jaynes' Alternative, Kap. Crotant, Hair Tonic Vermifuge

and Pills;

Sandoz's Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Febrifuge, Clove Anodyne, and

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1859.

NUMBER 42.

History of the War.

Chronicle of Eleven Weeks, Embracing the Campaign of the Po to the Mincio—The Battles, Encounters, Victories, Retreats, and Peaceful Terminations.

PRELIMINARY EVENTS.

April 19.—Departure of the first body of French troops from Toulon—Austrian ultimatum dispatched from Vienna to Turin.
April 23.—It is received at Turin.
April 26.—The limit fixed by the ultimatum expires—Count Cavour declines the Austrian condition—Statement of the war question addressed to the Corps Legislatif by Count Walewski—French troops first cross Mount Genie.
April 27.—Revolution in Tuscany; the Grand Duke retires; address of Victor Emanuel to his army.

THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR—THE AUSTRIANS ENTER SARDINIA.

April 29.—The Austrian Declaration of War posted at Vienna; the Austrians under Gyalai pass the Ticino; Marshal Canrobert and Gen. Niel reach Turin and assume command of their respective corps d'armee; Gen. McMahon arrives at Genoa; Death of Gen. Boudet; appeal of Victor Emanuel to the Italian people.
April 30.—The Austrians occupy Novara; the French Ambassador quits Vienna; revolt of Massa and Carrara.
May 1.—King Victor Emanuel leaves Turin to take command of his army; the Austrians occupy Mortara; the Austrians occupy the Sardinian ports on Lake Maggiore; three Austrian vessels repulsed on the lake; the Duchess of Parma withdraws from the Duchy.
May 3.—Manifesto of Napoleon III, addressed to the corps legislatif; the Austrians pass the Po at Cambio; they are repulsed in an attempted crossing at Frassinetto; they burn the bridge over the Scrivia at Piacenza; the Austrian vanguard reaches Tronzano.
May 4.—The conflict of Frassinetto continues; the Austrians passing the Po at Vaccarizza, advance to Cassale; a cannonade at Valenza.

THE SECOND WEEK OF THE WAR—THE FRENCH EMPEROR PROCEEDS TO THE SEAT OF WAR.

May 5.—The Duchess of Parma returns to her Capital.
May 6.—Gen. Cialdini, issuing from Cassale; seizes a convoy of the enemy.
May 7.—The Austrians repass the Po at Gerola.
May 9.—Imperial Decree establishing the Regency in France.
May 10.—The Emperor Napoleon III and Prince Napoleon Jerome leave Paris for the seat of war. The Austrians complete a retrograde movement to the left of the Sesia.
May 11.—The Emperor embarks at Marseille; the Austrians pause at Vercelli; and return reconnoitering parties to the right bank of the river; they occupy Rivergaro.
May 12.—The Emperor lands at Genoa; issues an order of the day to the army.
May 13.—The English declaration of neutrality published.

THE THIRD WEEK OF THE WAR—THE AUSTRIAN RETREAT.

May 14.—The Austrians occupy Bobbio; and push their advance posts to Casteggio.
May 15.—The French Emperor arrives at Alessandria.
May 16.—The French squadron of Admiral Jurien Graviere anchors before Venice; the Emperor visits the outposts at Valenza.
May 19.—The Headquarters of Count Gyalai transferred in retreat to Garlasco.

The Fourth Week of the War—The Battles of Montebello and Vercelli.

May 20.—Great speech of M. Kossuth on the war; delivered at London Tavern; Battle of Montebello; the allies numbering 6,300, under General Farey, defeat 25,000 Austrians, under Gen. Stadion; the Emperor visits Casale.
May 21.—The Piedmontese, under Gen. Cialdini, force the passage of the Sesia at Vercelli, routing the Austrians; Garibaldi, with his corps, leaves Biella, and marches for North-western Lombardy; the blockade of Venice established.
May 22.—Death of the King of Naples.
May 23.—Garibaldi, passing the Ticino at Sesto Celende, defeats the enemy and captures Varese.
May 25.—Garibaldi attacked by the Austrians, beats them; Col. Cristofori, with a portion of Garibaldi's force, beats the Austrians near Sesto Celende; the Emperor at Voghera.
May 26.—The Emperor arrives at Vercelli; Garibaldi beats the Austrians at Ma'mate.

The Fifth Week of the War—The Battle of Palestro.

May 21.—Garibaldi marches upon Como; Rapid movement of the French army from the south to the north of the Po; Montebello and Casteggio evacuated by them, occupied by the Austrians.
May 28.—Garibaldi beating the Austrians at San Fermo, occupies Como, Camerlata and Lecco; Austrian vessels bombarded Canobbio, on Lake Maggiore; the Valtellina rises in insurrection.
May 31.—Battle of Palestro; the allies, commanded by Victor Emanuel, attack the Austrians; the Emperor of Austria, attended by Field Marshal Baron Hesse, arrives at Verona.
June 1.—The Allies defeat the Austrians at Palestro; Gen. Niel occupies Novara; proclamation of the Emperor Francis Joseph to the Tyrolese.
June 2.—Garibaldi, retiring before a powerful body of the enemy, attacks Laveno unsuccessfully; the Austrians attack the allied outposts at Bobbio, but speedily retreat; the advance of the allies, under McMahon, enters Lombardy by the bridge of Turbigo.

The Sixth Week of the War—The Battles of Magenta and Malesano.

June 3.—The Austrians hastily evacuate Sardinia; Severe action at Buffalora; Garibaldi again marches upon Varese, beats the Austrians, and reoccupies it.
June 4.—The conflict at Buffalora concludes in a splendid victory of the allies at Magenta.
June 6.—Milan rises upon the Austrians; the garrison retires; Victor Emanuel proclaimed King; Lombardy annexed to Sardinia, Grand Te Deum at Paris for the Victory of Magenta.
June 7.—The Emperor and King enter Milan; the Austrian custom house on Lake Maggiore seized by Garibaldi's corps.
June 8.—Garibaldi pursues the Austrians, who retreat toward Monza; proclamation of Napoleon III to the Italians.
June 9.—Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers attacks the Austrians at Malesano, and after a severe contest, carries the post; on the same day, the Austrian Count d'Urban is beaten by Marshal Canrobert, at Canonic; the Austrians evacuate Laveno, on the Lago Maggiore; the Emperor and King attend mass at Milan.

The Seventh Week of the War—The Retreat of the Austrians.

June 10.—Garibaldi enters Bergamo; the Austrians evacuate Pavia and Piacenza, the Duchess of Parma arrives at Verona.
June 11.—The Austrians evacuate Lodi; they also evacuate Bologna and Ancona; resignation of the Derby Ministry in England; Lord Palmerston invited to form a Cabinet; headquarters of the French advanced to Gorgonzola.
June 12.—The vanguard of the French army passes the Adda at Cassano; the Sardinian army passes the Adda at Vaprio; the Austrians complete the evacuation of the Papal territory, and also withdraw from Modena; death of Prince Metternich.
June 13.—Austrians abandon Pezzighettone; Garibaldi at Brescia; Cremona and Brescia declare for the King of Sardinia; the allied army passes the Sesia; General d'Urban retires from Coccaglio.
June 14.—The Duke of Modena arrives at Mantua; d'Urban occupies Carriana; but evacuates it the same night; Revolt at Venice.
June 15.—Garibaldi repulsed by an overwhelming force of Austrians at Castenedolo; he retreats toward Lonato.
June 16.—Gen. Count Schlick takes command of the second Austrian army, replacing Gyalai; the headquarters of Napoleon III removed to Covo; the Austrian Emperor at Travigliato.

The Eighth Week of the War—Preparations for the Final and Decisive Battle.

June 17.—The Austrians occupy Montebello and Castiglione; Kossuth leaves London for Italy.
June 18.—The Emperor and King enter Brescia; the Austrians occupy the pass of the Stelvio; the Emperor Francis Joseph reviews a portion of his army at Lonato; he assumes Supreme command of the army; the Papal troops having, through the treachery of the priests, captured Perugia, indulge in a ferocious massacre of the inhabitants.
June 19.—The third division of the Adriatic fleet sails from Toulon.
June 20.—The Austrians abandon Montebello, Castiglione, and Lonato.
June 21.—The Emperor and King leave Brescia for the camp; the Austrians re-occupy Montebello and Castiglione; Francis Joseph fixes his headquarters at Villafranca.
June 22.—The French pass the Chiappa at Montebello, and push a reconnoissance as far as Goltio; the headquarters of Francis Joseph at Vallegio; Kossuth arrives at Genoa.

June 23.—The French Emperor and the King urge a reconnoissance as far as Desenzano; Austrians in full force repass the Mincio and occupy Pozzolenigo, Solferino and Carriana; tumults at Milan against the Jesuits.

The Ninth Week of the War—The Battle of Solferino—The Allies Pass the Mincio.

June 24.—The great battle of Solferino; 250,000 Austrians defeated by the Allies, numbering 150,000; the Austrians repass the Mincio; the allied headquarters at Carriana.
June 25.—Prussia proposes in the Diet the mobilization of the French army; retreat of French troops at Brescia.
June 26.—Kossuth arrives at Parma, and after conferring with Prince Napoleon, proceeded to the Imperial headquarters.
June 27.—A portion of Garibaldi's troops, under Major Medici, occupy the pass of Tonai, between Val Camonica and the Tyrol.
June 28.—The allies crossing the Mincio, enter the Venetian States.
June 29.—The vanguard of the allies advances to Villafranca.
June 30.—The Imperial headquarters removed to Volta; the corps of Prince Napoleon joins the main body of the allied army at Vallegio; the Sardinians commence the siege of Peschiera; the new British Ministry declares in Parliament its determination to maintain an inviolable neutrality.

The Tenth Week of the War—Repose After the Battle.

July 3d.—The Emperor moves his headquarters from Volta, and crossing the Mincio, fixes them at Vallegio.
July 4.—Ten thousand French troops landed at Lussin-Piccolo, in the Adriatic; grand Te Deum for the victory of Solferino, in Notre Dame.
July 5.—The Austrians retire from Bormio, after a sharp action, in which they are defeated by Garibaldi.

Eleventh Week of the War—The Armistice and the Peace.

July 8.—Armistice concluded between the two Emperors at Villafranca; Zara bombarded by the French frigate Impetueuse.
July 11.—Interview between Napoleon III and Francis Joseph; the war terminated by the PEACE OF VILLAFRANCA.

The Sickles Reconciliation.

The N. Y. Herald contains some columns of "opinions of the press," pro and con, upon this eventful matter. Some of them are worthy of republication:

From the New York Tribune.

THE GREAT LESSON.

It has been the reproach of our age that it is material—that its triumphs are over the blind forces of nature, not over mind and spirit—that it is objective, not subjective—that it is great in its supremacy of man over his accidents, and not over man himself. We trust we are lucid.

But the reproach is wiped out. It is individuals who make ages. Generations die, but the memory of the man of the generation lives and makes the age. Thus the past has its Moses, Plato, Cromwell, Washington, Napoleon and other representative men. We have Sickles. We trust we do not put too fine a point upon it.

The virtue of semi-barbarism is physical courage—virtue. The crown of Christian civilization is forgiveness and mercy. The highest Christian idea is reached when the strength and valor of man is united with the love and tenderness of woman. This is the true marriage of the human and divine which makes the perfect humanity. It was reserved for us to attain it. Our age has its future in its representative man.

Only a little while ago a frail and fallen woman confessed to her "bosom's lord" that for many months she had been faithless to her marriage and mother. In broad daylight she had gone many times, through an admiring crowd, to the place of assignation, was received in the arms of a paramour, not once, but many times, constrained, not by another's will, not by love, but by uncontrollable lust. What said the husband? The same planet could not hold the partner of her sin and himself.

So, on a "sweet Sabbath," he sought and killed the man whose deed "every negro in town was talking about"—killed him off from the face of the earth, and went joyfully to the prison to answer, if need be, to the offended laws of his country, but bowed down in an unutterable agony over the shame and the sin of conjugal infidelity—the continent and faithful husband mourning the incontinent and faithless wife and mother. A jury of his countrymen approved the deed. It was done in the very spirit of the heroism of the chivalric ages, which conscious of the loftiest and sternest virtue, could not brook even the breath of dishonor and scorn. It was the assertion of that divine justice which the judge, irreproachable and pure, measures out to the guilty and the weak, by a higher law than that embodied in human statutes. He who had never sinned, he whose soul turned pale at the thought of a wrong so horrible, was a fit minister of this divine justice.

But his duty was not completed. Next to divine justice comes divine forgiveness and mercy. There is now but one bosom on which the fallen woman can lay her head, and into which she may weep tears of penitence and shame, and find the unutterable blessing of forgiveness. He calls her thither almost before the worms have begun their feast on the form which she had fondled, and on which he had wreaked his great revenge. The dishonored sheets have been washed in blood; a new love, born of tenderness and forgiveness, waits on the second nuptials. The "negroes" knew before, and death wiped out dishonor. No ministering angels watch around the couch where pardon is sealed, and the world learns the great lesson that "to the pure all things are pure," and that mercy as well as punishment is sublime.

From the Sunday Mercury.

Epithalamium in honor of the re-union of a distinguished couple, who had been parted for a brief period by circumstances over which neither of them had any control.

Hail! matchless pair. United once again in new-born bliss forget your by-gone pain. Hail! turtle doves, returning to a nest defiled, yet dear—determined to be blest! What though the world may say, "With hands all red, Yon bridegroom steals to a dishonored bed!" And friends, estranged, exclaim on every side: "Behold! Adultery couched with Homicide!" What though (in dreams) a bleeding spectre flings Your curtains backward, like a demon's wings,

And howls, exulting, as entranced you lie Beneath the glare of its sardonic eye: "Live on—live on! each other's proper hell; None but yourselves could damn yourselves so well!"

What though the daily prints, O precious pair, Make your shame public—"general as the air."

What though your neighbors, shrinking, pass you by,

And, quoting Hamlet, call your home a "sty,"

What though in every pot-house in the land Your names are bywords—care not for being banned.

"Love rules" you know, "the camp, the court, the grove,"

And love being heaven, your heaven, of course is love.

Smile, gentle bride, upon the public scorn,

And cover not, bridegroom, but "exalt" your horn.

Sport once again the orange blossoms bright,

Though drops of crimson stain their modest white;

Solder and piece the broken marriage ring,

Despite the shame that to each fragment clings;

Lock arms—the arm that clasped a lover's head,

With that same arm that laid the lover dead;

Join lips—the pair that toyed in lawless bliss,

Press on his lips who murder did for this.

Ogle each other—there's no sort of risk—

Neither have optics like the basilisk;

Else when your glances met—no matter where—

Each should have sunk beneath the other's stare.

Play lovers—pretty sport—be gay and free,

Ignore the yellow bug-bear, jealousy.

Laugh at the fools of husbands, who perforce,

Must, when dishonored, sue for a divorce.

Is no intrigue the mother of Ecclat,

And murder much more popular than law?

Should the red purchase of your love renure—

—

Your second bridal sweeter than the first—

Cloud your soft dalliance, thrust the thought away,

Adjourn reflection to some far off day.

From Nemesis to Cupid fondly turn,

And sneer at conscience while the passions burn.

But when decipit, sapless, wrinkled, gray—

In the grim twilight of our closing day—

When death you can't avoid or circumvent,

Then clasp your shaking fingers and repent!

Daniel and Teresa.

It will gratify the lovers of pure moral, and the admirers of vindictive law, to learn that that most excellent man, the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles, and that pure-minded lady, Mrs. Teresa Bagloja Sickles, have settled the little domestic difficulty that for a time interrupted their conjugal felicity. It was a little unfortunate that this difficulty should have led to the killing of a man, and the destruction of a woman's reputation. But the great wrong complained of, when their separation took place, was that Mr. Sickles' honor was destroyed, and that henceforth there was no peace or happiness for him in this world. The intelligence that he is reconciled to his Teresa shows that the honor is all right again, and, as for peace and happiness, they will be the most devoted couple known in history.

acknowledgment of the fact is quite touching, and it is gratifying to have the truth set so clearly before the public eye.

Considering the happy results, in the total restoration of the damaged honor of the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles, the killing of Key, and the excitement and expense to government of his trial were perfectly proper. A good many men ought to be killed, and a great many trials and acquittals ought to take place, rather than to have any damage done to such a precious article as Mr. Sickles' honor. That trial, with its hosts of lawyers, its "clerical superiors," its chambermaids, coachmen and footmen; its fashionable young lady witnesses; its hysterics and fainting scenes; its demonstrations of the virtue, nobleness, and extreme sensibility of the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles; its publication of Mrs. Sickles' narrative of the process by which her husband's honor was damaged; its triumphal celebration at the close—that trial, we say, was a highly proper thing, and it is seen in a peculiar edifying light, no that Daniel and Teresa are reconciled, and consequently must be recognized as quite equal in honor. The world cannot complain of any effect that trial may have had, so long as it had the effect of reconciling the separated man and wife, and enabling her to become once more ornaments of our best society.—Phil. Bulletin.

Judge Edmonds' Experience in Casting out Devils.

Judge Edmonds still continues his communications to the New York Tribune, on Spiritualism, and its phenomena. In his last article he says:

"Casting out Devils.—I take this phrase as I find it in the Scriptures, as indicating that the subject is possessed by an influence which produces violent throes, or, as it is said in Scripture, 'Straightway the spirit tear him, and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming.'"

I have witnessed many instances of this, when the subject was relieved simply by laying on of hands, and sometimes by a mere command to the spirit to depart.

"I was once at a circle in Troy, some twenty persons were present, when a strong man became unconscious and violently convulsed. He beat the table with great force with both fists. I put my hand on his head, a most valiant struggle on his part to prevent it, and in a few moments he was restored to quiet and consciousness. I once had a man similarly affected in my own room, who beat his head violently on a marble top table, and fell to the floor in convulsions. He was recovered by the same means, though more slowly. A man from Chicago called on me, afflicted with convulsions of his arms and legs. He was restored by the mere exercises of the will. Last year, at my house, I found a man lying on the floor, distorted and convulsed. I lifted him up, and compelled him to sit in a chair, and then, with a few words addressed, not to him, but to the spirit that was influencing him, he was at once restored to composure."—Oswego Democrat.

OUR ARMY MEN SENT BACK FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.—The European governments are not disposed to communicate the secrets of the military science and improvement in weapons of war to the Yankees. We learn from the Richmond Enquirer of the 13th, that private letters from the continent of Europe intimate that the American officers who had been permitted by the United States to go to the seat of war, in order to gain military insight into war tactics by observation of the contending powers, have been refused passports to travel thither. They consequently returned to England to await further diplomatic consideration of the matter, and causes of objections.

Nahant was purchased 250 years ago by a Lynn farmer for a suit of clothes, and instead of being a fashionable watering place, it abounded in wolves and deer. Now, the wolves there appear in sheep's clothing, and the "deer" in crinoline and costly silks.

OUT AGAINST DOUGLAS.—Hon. Linn Boyd, of Kentucky, who has been reputed to be of Douglas proclivities, is out in a letter distinctly repudiating the Douglas heresy of Territorial sovereignty. In a letter to the Fa'cah (Ky.) "Herald" he says:

By the legislation of Congress, it is clearly the right and duty of the Territorial Legislatures to give adequate protection to the persons and property (slaves included) in the Territories; and I earnestly and most confidently hope that the duty will be so performed, as that no occasion will ever arise for an appeal to Congress on that subject. If, however, doomed to disappointment in this confident hope, and from bad faith on the part of the people of the Territories, the rights of slaveholders should be disregarded and outraged, I trust that very few will be found to deny that to Congress belongs the power and the duty to offer just protection.

The above position is the one universal at the South among all parties, and Mr. Douglas cannot find a corporal's guard who will uphold or support his views of the powers of a territorial legislature.—N. Y. Day Book.

An Irish paper, describing a late duel, says that one of the combatants was shot through the "fleshy part of the thigh bone."

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Aug. 31, 1859.

Federal Courts in Utah.

The Deseret "News," the organ of the Mormon Church, is now edited by one Elias Smith, who is also Probate Judge for the county of Great Salt Lake. It has recently been decided by two of the Justices of the Supreme Court for the Territory, including the Chief Justice, that the said Elias Smith has assumed in his Judgeship unwarrantable jurisdiction, in taking cognizance of criminal matters as Probate Judge. Under ordinary circumstances, it could not be expected that Elias Smith should personally, officially, or as a member of the Mormon Church, entertain any superior regard for the superior Jurisdiction which has condemned his official acts. But it might have been presumed that controlling a religious newspaper, and aware of his position, he would have had the decency to have refrained from spiteful comments, which, whilst harmless to those aimed at, must, in all sensible minds, damage the cause of those whose servant he is.

The District Judge never writes to the Bishop of a Ward, to know what is the righteous judgment to be given in any cause.

He knows no Theocracy.

Elias Smith, the Probate Judge, the editor, wants to know what has been done during the late adjourned session of the United States Court. He thinks the Judiciary of the country is declining, taking this place as a point of comparison. We can say to him, that more practical business has been done by the present Court for this District, than in any which has convened since the organization of the Territory, and the records will show it.

It has not suited his taste, no doubt, nor does he, perhaps, consider it of value; but it is because he entertains a heretofore concealed, but now uttered, contempt for the authority which is his superior.

The editor and Judge complains of delay, wonderful delay! How much delay has there been for two years past in bringing criminals to justice, when the Hon. Probate Judge was in the exercise of his claimed powers, and his criminal jurisdiction? At the present term of the Court, how many witnesses have been spirited away? and how varied have been the efforts to defeat the aim to administer justice under the authority of the United States? How connived at, and by whom? Look at Phelps' case! See Colbourn's case! Who have been shot down?—assassinated? Who have been drawn by civil process here, emanating from the District Court? and who came there to try their rights, before a Mormon Jury, and to await the action of the Court?

McNeil brought a suit against Brigham Young, and others, for false imprisonment, during the winter and spring of '57 and '58, and whilst the Court was in session, and his case expected to come on, he was murdered, and the action abated.

Serg't Pike, who was charged with an offense against the person of Howard Spencer, having been brought here by a capias, on an indictment of the Grand Jury, was shot on the street, in day-light, and through the inaction of the police, and the inactivity of the citizens, the assailant escaped. Fifty citizens, at least, are said to have been witnesses of the act. Gibson escaped, but we are pleased to learn that he has been re-arrested, and is now in custody in this city. All this might have occurred in other communities, but such a succession of events, pointing in the same direction, no man can misunderstand.

The whole object and design seems to be to throw obstacles, ghastly, deadly obstacles, in the way of the administration of justice. He is a madman or knave who will deny it in the face of these facts.

It is tauntingly asked why do not the Federal authorities prevent these things. We reply that the authorities can do nothing unless upheld by the sentiment of the community, where authority is exercised. Is it so upheld here? Had these outrages been practiced elsewhere, the whole community would have been shocked, and the country would be full of seekers for the perpetrators.

How is it here? Everything goes on as before, and that dark, mysterious agency which seems to permeate and control the community, no doubt chuckles over the crimes, and asks among its coadjutors, Where is their remedy?

Perhaps the remedy is at hand.

[3] We have heard no news from the troops, who were on Bear River when we heard last; but in this connection see that our new friends have had "several communications."

"The Indian War—We have before us

several communications concerning the progress of the war with red-men on our northern frontier. They do not by any means compliment the army. But our motto is "Truth," and we shall say nothing of the matter till we learn the facts.—Mountaineer.

The last three lines of the above item, we concede, something of a palliation of the whole, if the principle set forth in them will be adhered to as promised. "Do not by any means compliment the army,"—most remarkable fact,—wonderful, indeed,—that those who had taxed all their ingenuity and artfulness to decoy our gallant troops into a pit-fall of wholesale slaughter, when those same troops were imperiling, voluntarily, their lives to protect the lives and property of the diabolical connivers, should be uncomplimentary towards them, after finding that none were killed, where a whole company it had been hoped would be massacred—extraordinary, indeed!

Greeley Filibustering.

A Los Angeles correspondent of the Philadelphia "Bulletin," states that a California paper started a canard to the effect that Horace Greeley, of the New York "Tribune," was on his way to California to take command of all the various rag, tag and bobtail filibusters to be found there; that Henningsen and Walker would join him with forces collected in the United States; and that the whole horde, under the supreme command of the aforesaid Greeley, would invade Mexico, and usurp the government of that Republic. A copy of this paper fell into the hands of the commander at Mazatlan, and he at once issued a proclamation informing the people that "one Horace Greeley, a most diabolical, blood-thirsty and unmerciful man—worse than the infamous Walker, or even the minions of Miramon—a man whose very name struck dread to the hearts of thousands in the United States, so many were his crimes and so terrible was his conduct—is now at the head of the most extensive bands of filibusters ever collected, and on his way to Mexico!" He then exhorts the people to prepare themselves for action, and concludes: "This dangerous man (hombre peligroso) is not of the common school of filibusters; they wish for plunder, he for blood and murderous deeds." "Just imagine," says the correspondent, "the mild and amiable philosopher of the 'Tribune' converted into the hardened fiend this bright greaser makes him!"

Affairs in Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 17.

Previous to the preparation of the letter to our Minister at Berlin, instructing him to demand of the Hanoverian government the surrender of Mr. Ernst, Attorney General Black, at the request of the President, rendered an opinion in the case, maintaining the general rights of expatriation as incontestable, and that in regard to the protection of our citizens in regard to their rights at home and abroad. We have no law which divides them into classes, or makes any difference whatsoever between them. A native and a naturalized citizen may therefore go forth with equal security over every sea and through every land under heaven, including the country in which the latter was born.

Either of them may be taken for a debt contracted, or a crime committed by him; but both are absolutely free from all political obligations to every country but their own. They are both American citizens, and their exclusive allegiance is due to the government of the United States.

In Judge Black's opinion the Hanoverian government cannot justify the arrest of Ernst by showing that he emigrated contrary to the laws of that country, unless it can also be proved that the original right of expatriation depends on the consent of natural sovereignty, and this last proposition he is sure no man can establish.

JULY 19.

The President, accompanied by Mrs. Secretary Thompson and Miss Lane, left this m. for Bedford Springs. Gen. Cullum, who is under indictment for malfeasance while Clerk of the House of Representatives, today demanded a trial in the Criminal Court, but this was postponed till the next term, owing to the absence of a material witness for the United States.

The President has recognized Emile Christian Hammar, as Vice Consul of Denmark, for the State of Massachusetts, to reside at Boston.

The British and Spanish Ministers are severally preparing to leave the city for the purpose of visiting the summer resorts of the North.

The Russian Minister intends to visit Sharon Springs for the benefit of his health. The other Ministers have already left Washington.

During the absence of the President, the regular meetings of the Cabinet will be held as usual, on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Indian Bureau contemplates the appointment of a local agent to reside near the Pawnees, in order to enable it to exercise control over them, and prevent future difficulties.

The Court of Claims has adjourned till the first Monday in October.

Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.

WASHINGTON, July 23.

The special Washington despatch the New York Times, says: Mr. McLane's private secretary arrived last evening, bringing from Mexico the treaty negotiated with the liberal Government, embracing the points previously published in the Times.

The Administration is highly pleased with Mr. McLane's conduct in having the special trains released even after Gen. Robles had secured $30,000 for the use of the troops.—Mr. McLane thinks the confiscated church property will amount to $100,000,000, only about one half of which was within the control of Juarez. The interest only can be realized by the Government at present under the act of 1853.

The impression prevails in diplomatic circles here that the European armistice resulted from an unwillingness of Napoleon to encounter Gen. Hess with his fresh troops, if it was to be honorably avoided. It is a singular fact, that when Col. Cypriani, now in Napoleon's staff, was in this city last May, he predicted precisely the battles that have been fought, both as to place and result.

The Secretary of War is at the Hot Springs, in Virginia, and will not return until his health has been restored.

The Secretary of the Treasury is delighted with the practical working of his reform in the New York Custom House. The Collector reports an improvement in all branches.

The Administration is quite confident that Nicaragua will yield the point in dispute.

WASHINGTON, July 24.

The Liberal Government of Mexico, through its agent in the United States, has just concluded contracts for the supply of Minnie and Sharpe's rifles, cannons, and ammunition to Mexico, by September first. It is not yet known whether American volunteers will be accepted, as Lerda has not as yet arrived, and the character of his instructions has therefore not been ascertained.

These war-like strokes may supersede the necessity for exteraneous aid, except as to competent officers, there being a sufficiency of liberals ready to take the field as the rank and file.

Letters have been received here from various quarters, the writers expressing an anxiety to raise volunteers for the service of the Liberals in any numbers desired.

There was an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, called, it is understood, to consider the dispatches just received from Minister McLane, relative to Mexican affairs.

NEW YORK, July 29.

New York Times Washington correspondent, says the draught of the treaty sent here by Robt. McLane to be submitted to our Government contains provisions of the highest importance to this country. I am fortunately enabled to furnish you with a summary of its more striking stipulations, which are as follows:

1st. Rights of way across the States between the Rio Grand and Fortson the Gulf of California, with guarantees for their protection and safety.

2d. Rights of way and valuable privileges of transit secured to the American company holding the Isthmus Tehuantepec.

3d. The privilege of erecting and maintaining ware houses at the terminus of the several transit routes. The right of transporting troops and munitions over such routes and to send troops to protect them in default of Mexico fulfilling that duty.

4th. Free entry and transit of goods, belonging, or consigned to American citizens in Arizona, through the ports of the Gulf of California and across Sonora.

5th. Entire and unquestionable freedom of religious opinion, and religious worship throughout the republic.

6th. A clause indicating the willingness of the Mexican Government to accept a modified form of protectorate at the hands of the United States—in other words, to solemnize another treaty in form; one of alliance, offensive and defensive; but in substance, creating a protectorate, whenever the United States shall signify its willingness to enter into such arrangements.

AN IMPORTANT MOVEMENT IF TRUE.

The Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, generally well informed and careful, makes the following statement:

"I have reason to believe that there is just foundation for the report that the Juarez government of Mexico has at length given permission to Gen. Vidaurri to enlist three thousand American volunteers under his banner.

The intelligence has been confirmed to me from an authentic source.

Henceforth, President Juarez had steadily and uniformly refused all such aid, when proffered. He had men enough, but lacked arms and munitions of war, and energy; and, moreover, the liberal party of Mexico, is a humane and peaceful party, and is sparing of Mexican blood. Besides, President Juarez has had sense enough to see that the American element, if admitted into his army, would soon become predominate, and would equally dominate over friend and foe. The Texan drama would be re-enacted, on a large scale, and the end of the movement would be that the Americans would establish themselves in the "Halls of the Montezumas," and, by arms, commerce and arts, would get possession of the country.

Mexico is the richest country in the world, and if the Americans get into it, they will make this fact apparent. Emigration from the United States must necessarily push in that direction, for the reason that we have already passed the limit of the agricultural region of the Northwest. Between the wilderness of sterility on one side, and the tempting riches of Mexico on the other, our people will not be slow to choose.

If Gov. Vidaurri makes the proposed movement, it will be an eventful one for Mexico. With such an infusion of energy into his force, he would soon become the master of the city of Mexico, and the archives of the Government. But the American force daily increased as it would be, would soon conquer the conquerors, and Mexico would fall under American dominion, even without annexation.

Special Despatch to the Mo. Republican.

Doy found Guilty.

LEAVENWORTH, June 24.

Ex-Gov. Shannon and United States Attorney Black have just reached here from St. Joseph, and report that Dr. Doy, of Kansas, charged with running off negroes belonging to citizens of Missouri, had been found guilty by the jury. Judgement was suspended, in order that an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court, which sits in a few weeks at Jefferson City. The Dr. will begin to find after a while that the philanthropic notions which lead men to assist in despoiling other people of their property is not always attended with the happiest results. The Oberlin "martyrs" in Ohio are already experiencing some feeling of this kind, and the Dr. will hardly get off so easily.

A Bold Outrage.

Doy taken from our Jail by Force.

About 2 o'clock, Saturday night, seven persons appeared at the door of our Jailor's residence, adjoining the jail, and asked the privilege of lodging a prisoner until morning. Mr. W. W. Brown, the Jailor, informed them that he had no authority to admit any one who was not regularly committed to his charge, and at first refused their request. They insisted that they had a notorious horse thief whom they had arrested in Andrew county, after a long and fatiguing pursuit—that they were worn out with the exertion they had made and were unable to guard him; that he was a desperate character over whom too much vigilance could not be exercised. These representations, so well calculated to deceive at any time, could not now, when cases such as the one reported are of almost daily occurrence, fail of success. They were permitted to enter the prison with their man. The Jailor was about to assign him a place in the lower apartment when he remonstrated against being put in with a lot of negroes, and it being suggested that the upper one in which Doy was confined was a safer place, he was taken up to it. When the door was unlocked the mask was thrown over their actions.

They told the Jailor that the change they wished to make in the programme was to turn out one man instead of putting one in. They were after Doy, and with a cocked pistol presented demanded his quiet release. An attempt to give an alarm would be the signal of his (Brown's) death. Under such circumstances resistance was scarcely to be thought of. They took Doy, but refused to let any other one of the prisoners escape, averring that his rescue was their sole object.

A part of the company issued forth with Doy, others remaining to preserve silence until sufficient time should elapse to render escape certain and safe. The night was most favorable for the execution of the plot. The rain fell in torrents and under cover of a darkness as black as Erebus, there was little danger of being detected by any one outside at that hour. The isolated situation of the Jail, too, the nearest house being a square or two distant, favored the clandestine job.

As soon as permitted the Jailor hurried to the residence of the Sheriff, who at once acquainted various of our most active young gentlemen, but it was of no avail. Doy and his rescuers were gone, probably across the river, if not, no one knew where.

It is certain from the acquaintance of the parties with the locality, and the fact that such a night as Saturday was chosen, that the scheme was thoroughly matured, and by parties either living in our city or so near here as to be ready to act at an hours notice. We think it entirely likely the prime movers live in St. Joseph.

This is a most high-handed outrage and one that we fear may prove most unfortunate for the peace of the border between Kansas and Missouri. If the laws are to be thus disregarded and set at naught, it will not be strange if in the future persons charged with negro theft should be hung up to the nearest tree, without the benefit of trial. To such results is this Doy case certainly calculated to lead. Nothing has ever occurred in our city which had created so much indignation, and it is only the prevalence here of a conservatism which has ever been the honor and boast of our citizens, that have prevented the summary and extra-legal ejection of certain parties from St. Joseph.—St. Joseph Gazette, July 25.

INTERESTING ITEM FROM ST. JOSEPH

(Mo.) PAPERS.—The negro who is supposed to have murdered F. M. Wright, last week, was arrested yesterday, the 17th, near Rochester, in Andrew county, and lodged in jail in this city on the evening of the same day. The arrest was made by Mr. Sales and two gentlemen of Rochester. Mr. Sales was on his way to church, and discovering the track of a man in the dust, thought it might be the boy in question, and hurried on to Rochester to procure aid in pursuit. Messrs. Blount and ——— accompanied him. The track soon left the road, when the gentlemen could follow with certainty no longer. Convinced, however, from the shape of the track it was made by a negro and convinced further from its having taken to the woods the negro was a fugitive, they determined to persevere. They hunted about the woods for some time, and finally in the centre of an old field grown up in weeds and underbrush sat themselves down to rest. While setting here they heard a noise as of something walking through the brush, and looking round saw the negro.

The chase was at once commenced, but though very exciting, it was quite a short one. The boy was exhausted from fatigue, hunger, and exposure and fright, and was overtaken at the end of about an hundred yards. He says the murder was committed by a white man, who came to the edge of the bushes, shot Wright and bade him run, which he did. The nature of the wound, however, precludes the possibility of the truth of the story. He is now heavily ironed, and will inevitably meet the penalty of his great crime.—Wrat.

The Annexation Movement.

Dissolution of the Union Cry—Canadians Want Freedom as well as Italians.

HAMILTON, C. W., July 21, 1859.

Permit me to inform you that we Canadians are growing every day more desperate for annexation to the United States of America.

We find that so long as we remain as we are, so long shall we remain poor and spiritless, and be humbugged by the present band of railway chisellers, commonly called Canadian government. We have been humiliated and made miserably poor by these public blood-suckers. We cannot and will not allow ourselves longer to be trodden upon by the heels of our misgoverning robbers.

All we desire is the assistance of Brother Jonathan, who is the rightful owners of the Canadas. Let him send a handful of men with his flag to each of our cities, and there hoist it. We will by thousands rally around it, and support it to the last drop of our blood. Annexation we want, and annexation we will have, if Jonathan with only take what is his own. More than three fourths of the people here are crying for annexation, as much as Italy was crying for liberty. Send along the liberty pole.

AN ENGLISHMAN.

LATER FROM WALKER'S RIVER.—The Mariposa Star of Wednesday says: Mr. J. R. Smith left Nevada Camp, Walker's River, on Tuesday last stopping two days on the way, and arriving in town on Sunday morning. He reports about one hundred men at the camp. Provisions are getting plenty and prices reasonable. No rich diggings have as yet been struck, though some who have their claims open, are making four or five dollars to the man. It is their intention to employ Chinamen, for which purpose Mr. S. came over the mountains. It requires hard labor to make money there, but he is of the opinion that better diggings will be struck during the present season.

A letter had been received in Portland from Lieut. John Mullen, dated, "Camp Palouse, 14 miles from Snake river, 4th July, 1859," in which the writer says:

Moved thus far without accident, and have located and made some 94 miles of our route for the Mission. I shall pass on rapidly for the Mission—shall reach the Cour de Alona tribes by 1st August. We have some 230 men, and fear no attack. The Indians, thus far, are friendly.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY.—The visitors to West Point, after briefly stating the character of the examination made by them, remark:

In conclusion we have to say, in bearing testimony to the value of the United States Military Academy at West Point, as a national institute, that the position of the United States as a first-rate Power requires that she ask nothing by way of forbearance from other nations. Hence it is that the people of the United States should always be prepared to apply to the active service of the army every discovery and invention in the art and science of war. These discoveries and inventions are progressive, and are constantly drawn from the experience of the nations. They are collected and taught at this academy, so that the graduate goes out to his duty as an officer fully instructed in the science and skill of the latest discoveries in his profession. Touching the expenditure by the Government necessary to keep up the most effective order this academy, the Board of Visitors take this occasion to record, individually and collectively, their well assured opinion that it is but a drop in the ocean compared with the advantages resulting, and that resulted, to the United States from this institution.

At this day, without an army, with hardly enlisted men enough to garrison the I dian posts on our frontiers, every intelligent citizen of those States rests assured and confident that in the West Point graduates is to be found, always ready for the occasion, the nucleus of an army, that, with the aid of the sciences and skill of these admirably educated men, would at once spring into the most thoroughly disciplined and effective service.

So that, on the score of strictest economy, the people of the United States could not devise a better nor less expensive plan for military organization and security, in event of war, than this institution affords.

THE MARSHAL OF FRANCE.

General Niel created Marshal of France for his brilliant services on the Minio, is, according to a writer in one of the Paris papers, not more than fifty-seven years old, and looks much younger. He was a student of the Polytechnic school, which he quitted to study engineering at Metz. His early promotion was not, extremely rapid. We find him a lieutenant of engineers in 1827; he became a captain in 1835, and gained his chef de bataillon's epaulette on the field of battle of Constantine (1837). He was made a colonel in 1846, and with that rank he took part in the expedition to Rome in 1849, as head of the engineer's staff. While at Rome, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general, and shortly afterwards was charged with the mission of carrying the keys of the city to the Pope at Gaeta. On his return to France he became a member of the Superior Committee of engineering and fortifications, and was appointed director of the engineering department in the Ministry of War, and Councillor of State on Extraordinary service. As a general of division he commanded the engineers in the Baltic, and took part in the siege of Bomarsund. Subsequently he commanded the engineers in the Crimea. His reputation as a scientific officer has always stood remarkably high. He is a tall, handsome man, and is very distinguished in his appearance and manners. It will be remembered that he was selected, in January last, to go to Turin to make the official demand of the Princess Clotilde's hand for Prince Napoleon.—[N. Y. Post

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Another Shooting Affair.

We do not take pleasure in recording deeds of violence, and this is the third time within a month that we have been called upon to notice such affairs, more especially when the reports are so vague and contradictory that we can vouch for nothing except the fact that on last Saturday night, a house was surrounded and attacked by unknown persons and the resident, a Mr. Drown, mortally wounded, (he died the next morning,) and another, an old settler here named Arnold, who was living with him, was shot through the thigh. We hear that the dying man, (Drown) stated that he recognized the voices of two of those concerned, and this appears to be all the direct evidence there is.

It is said, that Drown had been warned that an attack would be made upon him, yet so far as we can learn, he made no efforts to prevent, or repel it.

Some say that as many as thirty shots were fired; one of the assailed, Mr. Arnold, is reported to have fired five shots at the party; it is not known however, with what effect. We suppose, however, that efforts will be made to bring the matter to light, and the public will then be furnished with all the particulars.

ESCAPED PRISONER RE-TAKEN.—We understand that the escaped prisoner, Delos Gibson, has been re-arrested, and is now in custody in this city. We hear that through the personal exertions of the Sheriff of this county, Mr. R. T. Burton, he was taken near the point of the mountain above Ogden. He was dressed as a female and had a companion with him, who, although fired upon by the pursuers, escaped.

THE "MOUNTAINEER."—We have received the first number of the above entitled paper, published and edited in this city by Messrs. Blair, Ferguson & Stout. Its leader is clear-ideal and somewhat menacing—exhibiting a spirit of docility in alliance with a consciousness of power. The editors "throw down no gauntlet," but in effect say, "knock this chip off my shoulder if you dare!" Considering the haste which we understand attended the issuing of the first number, and the stated obstacles which the printers had to contend with, and the fact that it is another fledgling of the Rocky Mountains, we think it will improve.

¶ We would call attention to the Itinerary furnished us for the benefit of the public, by Capt. Simpson. The emigration for this year has, we think, passed on, but it will be useful as a reference in regard to the best route to California.

¶ We hear that the Pay Master has been busy at Fort Bridger, and that he has, with the recruits and others, probably, by this time, arrived at Camp Floyd. They passed from the Weber by the new route through Provo Canyon.

The advertising columns of a newspaper evince many prominent points in the character and conditions of those who patronize them—that they are enterprising in business, and fair in dealing, and that they stand "high and dry" above fear of competition. Newspaper advertisements form a sort of business thermometer, by which the general reader can ascertain much in regard to the business man's policy—whether liberal or illiberal—and the consequent measure of his prosperity. Those carrying on business, and failing to advertise the same, have been very aptly compared to him who owns a lantern, and is too penurious to put a light inside of it. Requesting the reader to bear these facts in mind, we take pleasure in referring him to the inducements held out to the public through our columns, by Messrs. MILLER, RUSSELL & CO., HOCKADAY & BURR, C. A. PERMY & CO., HORD & DICKSON, DYER, BRO. & CO., LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO., and others engaged in business in this city, who have inserted cards and notices; also to the St. Louis, San Francisco and Sacramento advertisements. Read the advertisement department closely, for rest assured they who are most able to advertise, are most able to sell goods cheaply.

¶ We have a "jour." in our office who is anxious to wager $50 that he can set type faster than any other printer west of the Rocky Mountains. The article in this paper headed "Saul among the prophets" measures over 3,000 m's, and was composed by him in less than two hours—the first hour's work measuring between seventeen and eighteen hundred m's. When this is beat, he will try again.

¶ Nothing has been heard in regard to the proceedings of the District Court at Nephi.

[For the Valley Tan.]

Editor of the Valley Tan,

Great Salt Lake City,

DEAR SIR:—Agreeably to promise, I send for publication the enclosed

Itinerary of my Wagon Route from Genoa to Camp Floyd. Of course emigrants traveling from Camp Floyd to Genoa should read from bottom to top, and "right" for "left" and "left" for "right," wherever these expressions occur.

Respectfully your obedient servant,

J. H. SIMPSON,

Capt. Topographical Engineers.

ITINERARY

Of Return Route of Captain James H. Simpson, Topographical Engineers, from Genoa, in Carson Valley, to Camp Floyd, Utah Territory, between the 24th of June and 5th of August, 1859:

LOCALITIES.	Intermediate Distances.	Total from Genoa.	Wood.	Water.	Grass.
	M.s.	M.s.
Genoa.....	132	132	wood.	w	grass.
Carson City.....	114	254	sage.	w	grass.
China Town.....	26	280	wood.	w	grass.
Ford of Carson River.....	25	305	wood.	w	grass.
Road keeps in valley of Carson River, with slight deviations for 25 miles; Wood, Water, and Grass, can be found at convenient points.....	74	379	wood.	w	grass.
South shore of South Carson Lake; fuel should be brought Junction with Capt. Simpson's outward route.....	23	402	wood.	w	grass.
East shore of Carson Lake; Fuel should be brought. Leave Carson Lake and outward route; take right hand road.....	41	443	wood.	w	grass.
Very small warm spring; very little grass in vicinity.....	01	444	wood.	w	grass.
Sulphur spring; very little or no grass in vicinity.....	21	465	wood.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route.....	74	539	wood.	w	grass.
Middle Gate; at times, running water; at others got by digging.....	23	562	sage.	w	grass.
Cross small branch, and take left hand road; water sometimes running; sometimes in holes.....	12	574	sage.	w	grass.
Cold springs.....	9	583	willow.	w	grass.
Edward's Creek.....	11	594	willow.	w	grass.
Grass and water for 7 miles along creek.....	7	601	wood.	w	grass.
Summit of Pass of Se-day-e, or Look-out Mountain.....	1	602	wood.	w	grass.
Smith's Creek.....	11	613	wood.	w	grass.
Grass and water for 3 miles to Woodruff Valley.....	3	616	wood.	w	grass.
Smith's Creek again; some grass along creek, more at mouth of Canyon.....	31	647	sage.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route.....	31	678	sage.	w	grass.
Fork of road; take right hand road.....	17	695	willow.	w	grass.
Reese's river; fuel to be brought.....	1	696	willow.	w	grass.
Cross Reese's River; fuel to be brought.....	1	697	willow.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route.....	5	702	willow.	w	grass.
Summit of Pe-e-re-eh, or High Mountain Range.....	41	743	wood.	w	grass.
Simpson's Park and Lake.....	5	748	wood.	w	grass.
Water and grass found along Won-a-ho-no-pe Creek to spring, where road forks; take right hand road.....	51	799	wood.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route.....	3	802	wood.	w	grass.
Leave outward route; take right hand road.....	21	823	wood.	w	grass.
Cross Dry Creek; water running 1 mile above the road; grass in canyon.....	12	835	sage.	w	grass.
Cross Saw-wid Creek; water running 1 mile above road; grass in canyon.....	21	856	sage.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route.....	3	859	sage.	w	grass.
Won-in-dam-me, or Antelope Creek.....	11	870	wood.	w	grass.
Leave outward route; take right hand.....	11	881	wood.	w	grass.
Twin Springs; Barri's Spring 1 mile north, grass in vicinity; sufficient for small parties.....	5	886	sage.	w	grass.
Cross outward route.....	2	888	sage.	w	grass.
Fountain Springs; about two acres of rush grass.....	1	889	sage.	w	grass.
Clay Creek; water in holes; grass along creek, above and below.....	64	953	sage.	w	grass.
See's Springs.....	51	1004	sage.	w	grass.
Sink of McCarthy's Creek and Canyon.....	101	1105	sage.	w	grass.
Grass and water along McCarthy's Creek for 64 miles.....	64	1169	wood.	w	grass.
Summit of We-a-bah Range of Mountains.....	12	1181	wood.	w	grass.
Neill's Creek and Canyon.....	1	1182	wood.	w	grass.
Bluff Creek; 8 miles saved by striking from mouth of Neill's Creek more to the right, and intersecting road in mid-valley. In this case this camp not used. Water sinks sometimes below canyon.....	8	1190	sage.	w	grass.
Summit of Too-munty, or Black Head Range; spring.....	324	1514	wood.	w	grass.
Ute Sete spring and canyon.....	1	1515	wood.	w	grass.
Hut's do.....	12	1527	wood.	w	grass.
Summit of Mont-tim Range.....	31	1558	wood.	w	grass.
Spring Canyon; five springs within the compass of one half mile.....	3	1561	wood.	w	grass.
Gate of Hercules to left of road 1 mile.....	31	1592	willow.	w	grass.
Murry's Creek.....	53	1645	willow.	w	grass.
Cross Stephenson's Creek.....	31	1676	sage.	w	grass.
Stephenson's Creek again and canyon.....	71	1747	wood.	w	grass.
Grass and water along creek for 31 miles to spring.....	31	1778	wood.	w	grass.
Summit of Un-go-we-ab or Line Range.....	2	1780	wood.	w	grass.
Water can be found east of summit, at the distances of 1 and 5 miles in branch canyon to right of road.....	14	1794	wood.	w	grass.
Springs in Antelope Valley.....	8	1802	sage.	w	grass.
Turnley's Springs and Canyon.....	2	1804	willow.	w	grass.
Summit of Totts-barh, or High Mountain Range, generally called Goshoot Mountain.....	71	1875	willow.	w	grass.
Un-go-pah, or Red Spring; several also in vicinity.....	23	1898	wood.	w	grass.
Forks of road, take left.....	22	1920	wood.	w	grass.
Cross dry branch; water running above.....	54	1974	g. wood.	w	grass.
Rush spring in Crossman Valley.....	4	1978	willow.	w	grass.
Crossman's Creek.....	101	2079	g. wood.	w	grass.
Plympton's Springs; several within a mile.....	201	2280	g. wood.	w	grass.
Rush Pond; scarcely anything more than a watering place.....	12	2292	g. wood.	w	grass.
Summit of House Range.....	24	2316	wood.	w	grass.
Chapin's Spring, Creek and Canyon; animals driven to creek 1 1/2 miles above.....	153	2469	wood.	w	grass.
Tyler's spring, Creek and Canyon; stock driven to creek 1 mile to north-west of spring.....	17	2486	wood.	w	grass.
Summit of range west of Big Horn Spring.....	31	2517	wood.	w	grass.
Big Horn Spring; water sometimes by digging.....	143	2660	wood.	w	grass.
Good Indian Spring.....	16	2676	wood.	w	grass.
Prince's Creek.....	31	2707	wood.	w	grass.
Porter's Creek.....	51	2758	wood.	w	grass.
Brewer's Spring.....	111	2869	wood.	w	grass.
Junction with outward route; in General Johnston's Pass.....	10	2879	wood.	w	grass.
Meadow Creek.....	181	3060	wood.	w	grass.
Camp Floyd.....

¶ The church merchandise train, under the supervision of Mr. Eldridge, arrived on Monday evening, and at the same time, a long train of new maid Saints, who camped on Union Square. The company number over three hundred souls.

For two or three days since our last issue we had symptoms of Indian summer,—that bright, serene state of weather joyfully hailed by all,—but now, at the time of going to press, the sky betokens rain.

ABSTRACT OF

Remarks Made by Elder Heber C. Kimball, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Afternoon, August 21, 1859.

When I am at home, tending to my business, thousands of things pass through my mind, that I would like to sound to the world, and to this people, as loud as Gabriel's trumpet. I would like for those who preside over God's people in North and South America, Europe, and the Isles of the sea, to hear me. I wish the Latter Day Saints in foreign countries felt as I feel. How do I feel? Why, I feel as if I would come here, if I was in a foreign land, if I had to come without a hand-cart, and pack my provisions on my back. If I felt as they do, though, I would do as they do; and if they felt as I feel, they would do just as I would do. [Laughter.] Wherever the prophet is, there is the government, the keys, the power; and where the prophet is, the people of God ought to be gathered together, because with that high authority all true Mormons are connected.

Elder Pratt said this morning that the main trunk of God's church was in heaven. I know it; and the roots are there, too, for God and Jesus Christ are there. When Peter, James, and John, made Joseph Smith a prophet, a single seed was planted. Joseph transmitted the specie to other men; and they, in turn, to others; and now the stock is spread abroad over the whole world. A single mustard seed will produce a thousand, and the thousand a million, and so on.—This is the way the church of God will go on, and has gone on, increasing in power.—Now, the world don't believe we are God's people, do they? The world, I say, for it is the same with us as it was with Jesus Christ. They who didn't understand him were not of him, but of the world. They were out of the church. They don't believe Joseph Smith was a prophet, or Hyrum a patriarch, either, do they? They don't believe Brigham Young is a prophet. If they'd known Joseph was a prophet they wouldn't have killed him. They wouldn't have killed Jesus if they'd known who he was. Joseph and Hyrum, and thousands of other Mormons, were killed by the people of the United States, and the majority rejoiced over it. Yes, they did; I was in Washington, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati; about the time Joseph was murdered, and the people said amen to the act.

Mary have gone away from here, and many are here now, who are laying the foundation for our ruin and destruction. I feel towards them as Jesus spoke of the sinners in his day. They'd better have mill-stones tied around their necks, and be sunk to the bottom of the sea. They're drunk, fighting and swearing on the streets all the time. Why don't they do as I do?—Stay at home, and mind their own business. All the liquor, ought to go to hell, and they who deal in it, and persuade men to drink it, ought to go to hell along with it. All right, gentlemen. I wish there was more strychnine in the whisky than there is. I wish it would kill all who can't abstain from using it. Is that a bad wish? [An individual on the stand, who was sitting near the one to whom the speaker addressed this question, gave a negative nod, which act brought forth from the Apostle the following rebuke: I didn't speak to you, but to my President.] Is that a bad wish, brother Pratt?

Elder Pratt—I don't know. I wish I could find somebody who'd say no. Well, I would be glad if I couldn't control myself if I was killed.

But everything is working right. God wants a name here on earth, and He'll have it. It's just as God wants it. This looseness never was for you and me. It has been published abroad that they would send missionaries here amongst us.—They want to split us up; that's what they want to do. They want the people to vote differently. Have eight or ten candidates running for Congress, for instance, and divide the people up so they can't unite on anything. You can't do that, gentlemen; you can't divide the Latter Day Saints; they'll vote alike. If the United States will give us a State we will carry the day all the time. There would be a weight here among these mountains that would turn the scale just as we please. That's the reason they drove us from the States.

Our delegate in Congress, Mr. Bernhisel, thought when he got over the polygamy question, that we had let the last cat out of the bag, but there is something in the bag yet;—the cats ain't all out yet. All the cats are going to have kittens, and all the kittens have cats, before they all come out. [Loud laughter.] Some might call that vulgar; never mind, gentlemen, it's all true. It makes no difference about a State. It will be just as God wills. When God gives us a State we will have it. He can change the President, House of Representatives, and Senate, just as he pleases. He handles them all. Buchanan might say one thing to-day, and in five minutes God can change him as quick as I could change a piece of clay if I had a turning-wheel here. I could transform it in one hundred and fifty different ways in a minute. I am a potter by trade. I'll twist and turn you in all sorts of shapes if you say so. Don't find fault. I'm only jovial, sociable, and clever sometimes. If some think I am imposing upon them, I would say to such that it is not you I mean. In going up stairs, you know, we have to step on one step, and then another, until we get to the top. I have to tread on some of you to get to them who need a raking.

God bless you, friends, all of you;—you among the rest, who have brought us sugar, and coffee, and tea, and hoops? [Laughter.] I don't know what to think of them hoops;—the darn things swell so. I've a notion to try 'em myself. I don't believe they'd keep me from bursting. Now, I'll bet there'll be five women wearing hoops to where there wasn't one before. Hand down four or five more hoops, Mr. merchant. [Hearty laughter.]

God bless you, friends, merchants and all;—Amen. [Amen resounding throughout.] If that ain't enough I can give you more.

The Elder again resumed, for the space of a minute or two, in the same strain, when the usual conclusion was again repeated.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOHNS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention

of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory,

and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods

in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and

Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade,

we are enabled to supply an article of Staple or Fancy

Dry Goods at prices as low as they can be purchased at San Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to

this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the market of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting

Bleached do

" shirtings

Brown do

Hickory stripes

Plaid linsey woolsey

Kentucky jeans

Bed ticking

Delaines & cashmeres

Linen diapers & towels

" napkins

" table cloths

Crash, toweling and

doilies

Ginghams and lawns

White linen bosom shirts

Colored calico do

Grey flannel do

Red do do

Blue do do

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress

Plain all wool delaines

Fancy do

Alexander's kid gloves

Bay state long shawls

Stella and merino do

Delaines in dress patterns

White cambric muslin

Jacksonets

Swiss

Mull & Namassoks

Plaid Jacksonet muslins

Plaid cashmere for children

Buck gloves and gauntlets

Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and barges

Plain colored silk Ribbons

Bonnet do

Velvet do

Combs brushes and cutlery

Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY

is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.,

Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York

Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-2a.

"Secure the Shadow ere the Substance Fades."

LIKENESSES, as cheap as the cheapest, and as good as the best. At the old stand, over A. Taylor & Sons;

Sign of the Cannon!

Having purchased a new lot of superior cases, lockets, breast-pins, &c., at the new fashionable price of "cost and freight," I can now sell the various photographic pictures, such as ambrotypes, melaino types paper and leather types, at lower prices than I have during the year past.—

Call and examine specimens.

41-2c.

M. CANNON.

Saul Among the Prophets.

We called attention to some curious prophecies by Faber, who is held up by Protestants as a wise interpreter of the scripture prophecies. He thinks that wonderful period of 1260 years should be reckoned from the year 604, and therefore terminates in 1864. Then, according to him, Louis Napoleon—or the seventh head of the Beast—will fall, after a fierce and bloody war, which will envelop the whole world. This war will end in Palestine. Here are Faber's own words:

Hence it is quite clear, that, if the French Empire be the short-lived and sword-slain and revived Seventh Head—of which, in the present day, there can scarcely, I think, be a reasonable doubt—then we must anticipate his sure and certain destruction along with the long tolerated Roman Empire.

We are distinctly taught, that the Polity, thus triply characterized by Shortness of Continuance, and Death by the Sword of Military Violence, and Revival from the Death thus inflicted, will go, together with the Empire of which it is the Seventh Head, into utter destruction.

1. The time fixed for this destruction is the close of the brief period which immediately follows the expiration of the 1260 years; which is known as the Time of the End; which is the Season of the Effusion of the Seventh Vial; and which, in detail, is described, with wonderful particularity in the last five verses of the eleventh chapter of the Book of Daniel.

2. The geographical region, marked out for this destruction is Palestine.

3. And the particular locality in Palestine, still more definitely specified, is the Vicinity of Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives, and the Dead Sea.

On the whole, we are compelled to draw the following Anticipative Conclusion:

If I have correctly placed the termination of the 1260 years in the year 1864, we may expect, in no great length of time, the commencement of a General War, a War of Opinion, in Europe; and when we consider the careful protection to which the military art of destruction has now been carried, we very readily understand the force of the declaration, that, in the latter scenes of this internecine war which opens out at the close of the 1260 years, and at the commencement of the Time of The End, synchronically with the deliverance of Daniel's people, there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.

Faber's prophecies are terrible and they interest all who believe them in a particular manner, since the enormous horrors, miseries and devastations which he predicts, are all to happen within the present five years. Some may think that the battle of Montebello was the beginning.

But fortunately, all the world is not of the same opinion. Colonel James Watson Webb, of the New York "Courier," is also among the prophets, and he takes direct issue with Faber. Hear this prophet:

Once master of the Peninsula of Italy from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic—Austria fairly stripped of her Italian possessions—the Emperor of France will stay his conquering career, and permit England, Russia and Prussia to arrange a peace upon the basis of his address to France and the world upon his departure from Paris. If Austria will not come to her senses, then will she be made to treat under the walls of Vienna; and notwithstanding the blustering of Prussia, there will be no interference from that quarter. In no possible contingency will England interfere; and knowing this, Prussia dare not carry her idle threat into execution. But suppose she and all Germany were to join Austria. What then? Why, France, Italy and Russia, united with Hungary in insurrection, would overrun all Germany in six weeks, and blot out from the map of Europe the very names of Prussia and Austria. And this they would have a right to do. In good faith Louis Napoleon has declared that the present war is for the establishment of Italian independence, and not to extend the area of the Empire of France; but let Prussia inaugurate a new war—let Germany unite with Austria in a war against France, and from that moment Napoleon III stands released from his pledge. Then, he will not only defend France; but France and Russia, with the aid of Italy, will overrun all Germany, including Austria, and make just such disposition of the conquered country as to them may seem proper and expedient. England knows this; and so does Prussia; and our readers may rest assured, that when the Emperor of France has done his work in Italy, there will be peace; but not till then, and any interference on the part of Prussia or any other power at this time, will be treated with contempt. Even while we write, every vestige of Austrian authority in Italy has quite probably been annihilated. But at all events, that day is close at hand; and then will Napoleon III return in triumph to Paris; and we doubt not, that in the full conviction that his Dynasty is established, that treason has been annihilated, and that he reigns supreme in the heart of the French nation, he will, among other acts of grace, give to the Press of France all the liberty and freedom which are compatible with the peculiar genius of her people.

Well, as between Webb and Faber, all who are fortunate to survive 1864 will be able to determine which of them has hit nearest the mark. We should not be surprised if neither of them had come within one of Napoleon's rifled cannon shot of it. —[St. Louis Herald.]

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE" BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND PRUSSIA.—The Russian Gazette, of St. Petersburg, contains an article on Cuba, which contends that the possession of the colony is indispensable to the security of the United States. The article, however, recommends the Americans to extend their influence in the island solely by means of their superior civilization; which, it says, has thus far been their best auxiliaries in making conquests.

The Russians see that Cuba occupies the same position to us that Constantinople and Turkey do to them. It is gravitating toward us by the force of events and of natural causes. The cause of civilization and the best interests of humanity would be subserved by planting the Russian standard upon Constantinople, and the Stars and Stripes over Moro Castle. The happening of both events is certain, although they be delayed a few years.

A TOAST.—At the late celebration in Ellington, Connecticut, the following was the thirteenth regular toast:

"Woman.—The lover of union and the friend of annexation. Like our country, her manifest destiny is to spread her skirts."

The above toast was responded to by nine cheers and a whoop!

Pat Hearn, the celebrated sporting character of New York, is dead.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.,

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing these family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as they are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. 40-11

NOTICE!

HAVING removed our Store to Camp Floyd, we are desirous of settling up our outstanding accounts in this city. All persons indebted to the undersigned will please call on Mr. Thomas Adams, who is authorized to collect the bills now in his hands.

The undersigned can be found at the office of the "Valley Tan," during business hours. Prompt settlements are solicited. (40-11) THOMAS ADAMS.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HORN & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, and apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spices, alum, copperas, saltpetre, indigo, powder, lead shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, ginger, mustard, oases, sauces of every kind, brandy, fruits, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stoves, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and pickles, sugar of lemon, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cure! Hams, put up expressly for this market. Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen. HORN & DICKSON. 40-11

STRAYED

FROM the herd at the Hot Spring Brewery, two BLACK MILKES, branded H B on near shoulder, and R H on near thigh. Supposed to have come towards Salt Lake City. $20 reward will be paid for their delivery to the subscriber at the Brewery. 40-11 R. B. HERFORD.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. 40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by

40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale

40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce. 40-11 DYER, BRO. & CO.

CHEAP GOODS

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL. GEO. CRONIN & Co., two doors north of O. A. Perry & Co.'s store, have purchased the stock of Groceries of Shrader & Fink, and are offering them at wholesale and retail, at very reduced prices. Call and examine before purchasing elsewhere. 40-11

FOR SALE.

200 YOKE WORK CATTLE, 25 WAGONS, 15 MULES, SHRADER & FINK, at the store of Geo. Cronin. 40-11

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. Dyer, Bro. & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business. R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GERRISH. 39-11

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us. 39-11 GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors; ALSO—

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY, AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville. 37-11

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

NOTICE. THE co-partnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Williams & Jackman, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by M. Jackman. THOS. S. WILLIAMS, FARMINGTON A. JACKMAN. 39-11

To the Traveling Public. STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All pack goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. FARMINGTON A. JACKMAN, Proprietor. 39-11

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE

Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,

where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread

Crackers,

Cakes,

Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS,

CONFECTIONERY,

SODA WATER, &

SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS.

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath..... 75 cents.

Five Baths..... $3 00

Ten do..... $5 00

37-3m E. REESE.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175.

Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage.

For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. 38-11

CITY BREWERY.

MR W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments. 34-11

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd.

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest Stock, and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale in this market; and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, flattering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates. 33-3m LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. FILLIEY

FULTON IRON WORKS,

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet Iron Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard

Screw and Brass and Iron Castings of every description, Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents. 30-11

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF Dry Goods,

Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing, Hardware, Outfitting Goods, Saddles, Harness, & Bridles,

which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, and will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,

75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 one AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one BAY HORSE JACK; one fine STALLION. For sale by C. A. PERRY & CO. 35-11

Hockaday & Burr, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their

NEW STORE ROOMS,

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDISE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 34-11

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS, CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., IMPORTING

WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO., Wholesale Importing Druggists,

DEALERS IN DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Palm Oil, Balm, Camphene, Lamp, Machine and pure Lard Oil, Hops, Breweries Materials, &c. 139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for the following valuable preparations:

Jaynes' Alternative, Exp. corant, Hair Tonic Vermifuge Sandoz Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Febrifuge, Clove Anodyne, and Roman Eye Balsam; Dr. Moffatt's Pills and Bitters; Ayer's Pectoral and Pills; Wistar's Balsam Wild Cherry; Green's Oxygenated Bitters; All of which we offer for sale at very near New York prices. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.

WE are agents for the celebrated Perfumery House of Jules Rouel & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS!

WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1858 hops, to which we invite the attention of

Brewers. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.

THERE is no longer any doubt about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr. Marshall's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and valuable improvement. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.

WE have just received per clipper Interpied, from New York, a large invoice of choice Paints and Oils, consisting in part of superior Boiled and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Paris Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermillion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue, Putty, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Coach Varnish, Japan, Furniture and Damsel Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyk Brown, &c., &c., for sale by R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment of Back Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for sale by R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, No. 139 J Street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rates, by R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power & Weightman, Philadelphia:

400 bottles Strychaline; 75 ounces Nitric Silver, pure; 25 ounces Sulphate Morphine; 100 ounces Iodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.

ALSO 200 ounces Quinine; 75 pounds Iodine Potassium; 80 pounds Chloroform; 750 pounds Spits Nitric, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric Ether. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,000 superior Soda Corks, 50,000 superior Wine Corks; 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Keg Corks, &c.; for sale low, by R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

Oils, Oils, Oils!

PURE Lard Oil, Machine Oil, Sperm Oil, and refined Polar oil, for sale low, by R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists, Sacramento.

NOTICE.

CAME into my camp in Echo Canyon, on the 15th of July, one Mule and one Horse. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges, and take them away. Apply to 27-31 E. W. VAN ETEN

LAW NOTICE.

ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business entrusted to him. Office with Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City. 17-11

JAS. E. D. JESTER, (Successor to D. W. Baylies & Son,) WATCH-MAKER & JEWELER,

HAS on hand a well assorted stock of Materials, Glasses, Guard Chains, Keys, &c., and is ready to repair Watches, Clocks and Jewelry, at short notice and in a workmanlike manner. He hopes by strict attention and superior work to merit a continuance of the old patronage; and a liberal share of the new.

All work warranted to give satisfaction. Office with T. S. Williams, in Salt Lake House, one door north of the Post Office.

N. B. Particular attention paid to work from a distance, and from Camp Floyd. All jobs from the latter, received and returned by express free of risk and expense to the owners.

We take pleasure in commending to the public our successful Mr. J. E. Jester, who has been in our employ during the past winter, and is a superior and skillful workman, and one well worthy their confidence and patronage. From our old friends and patrons, we bespeak him a continuance of their favors. 32-3m D. W. BAYLIES & SON.

DRUGS! CHEMICALS! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH,

MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE

STREETS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,

selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with the latest improvements. He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,

including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MISCELLANEOUS GOODS, and SADDLES BAGS in large, and has been selected with special reference to the

THE VALLEY TOWN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1859.

NUMBER 43.

Crinoline.

Sail on sail on, oh! crinoline.
In all thy majesty and pride,
Three-quarters of the walk is thine,
And I must take the outer side.
Oh! well perchance for ladies' charms
That thou dost ever intervene!
For what's the use of lovers arms
To compass thee, oh! crinoline?

Oh! what would Cleopatra say,
Or Helen fair, of Trojan fame,
Could they but promenade Broadway,
And see a modern lady's frame?
Methinks their ghosts at such a sight
Would make for Hades a bee-line,
For what on earth could more affright
Transcendent shades, than crinoline?

I loved, a few short years ago,
A lady fair, and straight, and slim,
Who ne'er had worn a crinoline
To hide a fault in form or limb.
I loved her as a lover should,
With thought intent to make her mine;
But when the time came that I could,
There came this cursed crinoline.

It boots not to repeat the tale,
How, day by day, expanding, she,
Blown up by Fashion's sickle gale,
Grew more and more apart from me.
It matters not that now no more
We meet, as then, with joy divine!
I only know her heart's best store
Is lavished on a crinoline.

Sail on, sail on, oh! crinoline!
Rome had her day to rise and fall,
And the same fate will yet be thine,
For change comes ever unto all.
Wave proudly still while yet you may,
While Fashion's stars upon thee shine,
Extend thy sphere from day to day,
But leave me mine, oh! crinoline!

California and Oregon Items.

Great Excitement at Victoria.

[San Francisco Herald, August 22.]

The steamship Pacific arrived from Victoria and Portland.

THE BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

The news from Victoria is of an exciting nature. The reports that General Harney had issued orders to transfer the military post from Bellingham Bay to San Juan Island, are confirmed. The U. S. steamship Massachusetts had landed Capt. Pickett and sixty men, with stores, howitzers, and everything necessary to the establishment of a permanent post, in place of that at Bellingham Bay. The island is occupied by both American and British settlers, and both claim it for their respective governments. On the news reaching Victoria, Governor Douglas appointed a Mr. DeCourcy Justice of the Peace for that island, and dispatched the Satellite, on the 7th ult., to take him to the island, and to look after the interests of the British there. The following is from the Colonist, and is rather belligerent in tone:

We learn that a company of United States soldiers, under command of Capt. Pickett, were expected to land at San Juan Island yesterday from Semiahmoo, in order to erect barracks and fortifications. They were ordered there by General Harney when up here a short time ago. We trust our government will call our insatiable neighbors to account for the unwarrantable assumption. The first thing that will follow will be duties and taxes imposed by the United States and Washington Territory on British subjects who may reside there, and serious disputes may grow out of it. When the title of the island is definitely settled in their favor, then it will be time to allow Americans to quietly garrison the island, and not before. It is desirable that the question of sovereignty should be speedily settled; but we hope that in the final settlement imperial politicians will not show such a disregard for British American interests as exhibited in the settlement of the north-eastern and north-western boundaries, by which New Brunswick lost millions of acres of land, and this side, all Washington Territory and Oregon to the Columbia river.

There can be but little doubt, says the Gazette, that ultimately the possession of the island will be adjudged to the United States—such being clearly the interpretation of the treaty. Whether the United States government has become weary of waiting for a final adjustment of the matter by the Boundary Commission, and cuts the Gordian knot of red tape by military occupation, or has taken the action in question for other reasons, are points upon which we can only indulge in surmise. At any rate, there is no danger that this proceeding will lead to any disturbance of relations between Great Britain and the United States, unless it be aggravated by action yet to be taken.

THE AMERICAN FORCE.

The "army" under Captain Pickett consists of sixty-six men, rank and file, including the commissary department, occupy the twenty-one tents, which, while we were there, were being removed from the harbor frontage to a spot across the southern peninsula about a mile distant. The site is an excellent one, commanding a very extended view, and with water convenient. No permanent fortifications will be erected as yet. Since the occupation, Capt. Pickett has issued and caused to be posted the following order:

ORDER NO. 1.

Military Post, San Juan Island,
W. T., July 27, 1859.

1. In compliance with orders and instructions from the General Commanding, a Military Post will be established on this island, on whatever site the Commanding Officer may select.

2. All of the inhabitants of the island are requested to report at once to the Commanding officer, in case of any incursion of the Northern Indians, so that he may take such steps as he may deem necessary to prevent any future occurrence of the same.

3. This being United States Territory, no laws other than those of the United States, nor Courts, except such as are held by virtue of said laws, will be recognized, or allowed on this island.

By order of CAPT. PICKETT.
JAMES W. FORSYTH,
2d Lieut. 9th Infantry, Post Adj't.

The Latest.

The Colonist of August 5, has the following from the seat of war:

The Constitution left San Juan at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, and arrived at Victoria the same evening. H. M. S. Tribune, Satellite, and Plummer, and the U. S. S. Massachusetts, and revenue cutter Jeff. Davis, were in harbor. The three captains of H. M. S. ship came on shore to see Capt. Pickett, just as the Constitution was leaving. It was said the object of their visit was to consult with Capt. Pickett in relation to a joint occupation.

It is currently reported that Gen. Harney is expected at San Juan to-day, (August 5,) that when he arrives a joint occupation of the island will be declared upon, and that no troops will be landed from the men of war till then.

The United States steamer Shubrick is reported at last accounts to be at Olympia waiting to convey Gen. Harney to the disputed Territory.

H. M. S. Plummer arrived at Victoria, August 4, from the seat of war. Before leaving she put her marines on board the Tribune. None had landed.

The excitement concerning the occupation of Bellevue Island by American troops, says the Gazette, of August 6, continues unabated, and forms the all-absorbing topic of conversation. The least important fact, and the most absurd rumors, are eagerly listened to and readily believed. Truly, very little reliable information is in possession of the public, as all attempts on the part of the press to penetrate into the secrets of the State have proved futile. The Satellite returned to Esquimaux harbor yesterday afternoon, but she had little or no communication with shore, except on business with government officials, and what was the purpose of her dispatches has not transpired. The Tribune still retains her position at San Juan, and the Plummer is expected there with a reinforcement of 200 Sappers and Miners from New Westminster. What is to be the denouement of all this war talk is still shrouded in mystery; but the general desire is that no collision may take place, and that matters may be arranged satisfactorily to the honor and rights of the two nations, now assuming so belligerent an attitude towards each other.

THE ELECTION PROCLAMATION.—Governor Weller has issued his proclamation for the general State election, which is to take place on Wednesday, 7th September. In addition to the voting for candidate for office, the voters are required to vote "ay" or "no" upon the calling of a Constitutional Convention; and the voters of the counties of San Diego, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, and a part of Buena Vista, for or against a Territory.

THE MINERS ABANDONING FRASER RIVER.—The Portland Advertiser learns by an arrival from Fraser river, that the miners are leaving there in great numbers—that those who find room to work the mines, are doing well—that the number who went there for mining purposes, was disproportioned to the mining ground; that a company were to leave there for the Colville mines within about fifteen days from the time our informant departed for Oregon; that Gen. Palmer had arrived safely at the Upper Fraser River—that he would be able to realize no more than cost upon his provisions, but that he would obtain from 70 to 80 cts. per pound for all his beef cattle.

Twelve Days Later from China.

By the arrival of the ship Mastiff we have Kongkong dates to the 16th June. Previous advices were to the 4th of that month. It seems to be the impression that the Chinese will not permit the English to go to Peking. It is rumored that the Japanese have refused to make a treaty with the Chinese. The Governor of Nagasaki ordered the British steamers to leave the inner harbor and anchor at the Papenberg as he did not know her flag. Twelve Japanese merchants were arrested and thrown into prison for having sold gold kobangs to foreigners. There has been another charge in Ministry at Yedo. From Macao we hear that the Portuguese steamers Shamrock and Inveindo, destroyed four piratical junks. It is reported by the Portugues, that a British ship, supposed to be the Jeremiah Garnett, has been taken outside of Macao by pirates. —[San Francisco National.

The Difficulty between Mr. Mowry and Mr. Cross.

TUESDAY, ARIZONA TERR.

July 24, 1859.

Editor of the San Francisco Herald:—
I see by the last issue of your paper that reacted this place, that you manifest some interest in the result of an affair of honor that was to take place between the Hon. Sylvester Mowry and Edward E. Cross, Esq., of Tubac.

I am happy to be able to say, that the affair has terminated without injury to either party. Although not without the burning of gunpowder.

The parties went on the field on the 8th inst., after having with some difficulty arranged the preliminaries. The weapons were Burnside's rifles, chosen by Mr. Cross—distance sixty yards; the rifle being accepted by Mr. Mowry, against the remonstrations of his friends, supposing it to have been practiced with by Mr. Cross, and at any rate an unusual weapon, one not recognized by the code. Mr. Mowry then insisted upon his right to reduce the distance, and proposed forty yards, instead of sixty; which was for some time strenuously opposed by Mr. Cross, but finally agreed to. The ground being measured, the parties took their stand. Mr. Mowry's friend having the word. The first shot was fired without effect, but coming so near Mr. Cross as to cause him to flinch, and to remark that it was an uncomfortably close one. The second shot was fired also without effect, both parties having fired too quick, consequently losing their shots by overshooting. The third shot was fired, and again without effect, although very cool and deliberate upon the part of Mowry, who fired between the words two and three. The fourth shot was fired by Mr. Cross alone, Mowry's gun missing fire. Mr. George D. Mercer, the friend of Mr. Mowry, contended that Mowry was entitled to his shot, to which Mr. John Donaldson, the acting friend of Mr. Cross demurred. The question being referred to authority, was decided in favor of Mr. Mowry, and courteously acquiesced in by Mr. Cross. The parties were again replaced, and the word given, when Mowry discharged his weapon in the air.

Notwithstanding the bad shooting, I have never seen in my life a greater display of gallantry, coolness and courage, on an occasion of the kind, and but for the fact that there was at the time blowing almost a hurricane across the line of fire, the affair, without doubt, would have had a more serious result.

Mowry went on to the ground accompanied by a host of friends, and carrying with him the approbation and good wishes of the entire community. Mr. Cross was alone, and unattended by a single friend, save his second, who was also the declared friend of Mowry—a very striking argument against the assertion of Mr. Cross, that "Mr. Mowry had no friends in Arizona."

The Arizona has changed hands, and will in future be published in Tucson, and will be devoted to the promulgation of Democratic principles, as well as the interests and welfare of the Territory generally. The name of the Hon. Sylvester Mowry will be found at the masthead for Delegate to Congress. He will be elected without opposition.

From Oregon.

It is conceded that Stout (Dem.) has been elected to Congress by 16 majority. All the returns are official except from Coos.

A contemplated affair of honor between Dr. J. L. Coombs and Lieut. Garber, of the army, was prevented at Corvallis, July 30, by the arrest of the parties by the Sheriff.

Lieut. Bonnycastle has returned to Portland from camp on Crooked river, where he left Capt. Wallen. He reports the road excellent from that point to the Columbia river, which is between John Day's and Deschutes rivers. Capt. Wallen is now en route to Utah, by way of what is termed "Meek's Cut off." No doubt exists in the mind of the Lieutenant that a good wagon road will soon be opened from Crooked river to the Columbia.

An Indian near the mouth of Snake river, known as the "Dreamer"—evidently a cunning knave—has caused much excitement among the Indians, even as far as Colville, by the character of his dreams, and has become an object of much interest with his ignorant and superstitious fellow-savages. Already he had gathered quite a number of followers, and his dreams all tending to increase his influence and aggrandize his suite, were also of a character unfavorable to friendly relations with the whites. Hearing this, Colonel Wright, in command at Walla Walla, directed his arrest, and the "Dreamer" is now in the guard house at that post, as we are informed by Mr. Seymour, of (Seymour & Co's Express) to whom we are also indebted for the information that Antoine Ravet, a well informed and reliable person in such matters, had come into Walla Walla with the news that the upper Nez Perces are disposed, if not indeed resolved, to attack Lieut. Mullan.

Col. A. P. Dennison, Indian Agent for the Eastern District of Oregon, left July 27, for Walla Walla. He goes for the purpose of taking the preliminary steps in the organization of the Umatilla Reservation. The Reservation is intended for the occupancy of the Cayuse, Walla Walla and Umatilla tribes of Indians. By the terms of the treaty, concluded with them on the 9th day of June, 1855, they are to receive yearly a certain sum in the shape of annuities, and to have built for them one: a saw and one flour mill, dwelling houses, blacksmith and carpenter's shops, etc. There will also be on this Reservation a resident physician, two school teachers, and such mechanics and laborers as shall seem necessary to insure to the Indians the full benefit of the treaty stipulations. It is proposed to concentrate these Indians upon the Reservation early in the ensuing spring.

Father De Smet wrote a letter at Mission St. Ignatius in the Bitter Root Valley, on the 26th of July, which reached Portland, says the Advertiser, on the 1st of August. He reports the Indians peaceably disposed in that section, and says that the Black Feet are very friendly. He was to start forward for Fort Benton and St. Louis forthwith.

The crops in Walla Walla valley are very promising, and the crops generally bid fair to furnish a good yield. The season is nearly a month earlier there than here. Green corn, ripe tomatoes and ripe melons have been produced and enjoyed there for some time.

Dead cattle are said to be piled three or four deep at the crossing of John Days river. The intense heat on the other side of the mountain, coupled with the dust and long stretches to water, has proved very fatal to stock. An intelligent gentleman just in from that country, thinks that the loss thus far from causes above enumerated, will amount to five hundred head. He thinks fifteen hundred head are now in and on their way to Walla Walla valley.

A gentleman direct from Colville, informs the Advertiser that the miners were doing comparatively nothing when he left; that the $8 and $16 diggings talked about a few weeks since in the papers, existed only in the imagination, so far as was known at the time of their publication. He thinks, $3 and $4 is an average of the diggings in that quarter, though many miners were confident of striking much better pay when the water got down.

The hanging of Geo. M. Brown, convicted of murder at the last Circuit Court in Jackson county, is to take place on the 19th of August.

J. M. Vansyckle, Esq., for a long time the efficient and gentlemanly agent of Wells, Fargo & Co., in Portland, has been recalled by the company, and his place will hereafter be filled by E. W. Tracy.

MULLEN'S EXPEDITION.—The Indians east of the Walla Walla country are strongly opposed to the location of the military road through their country, now in progress of being located by Lieutenant Mullen, U. S. A. It is feared that Lieut. Mullen's party will come in hostile collision with the numerous tribes along St. Joseph valley. —[Dalles Journal.

DEATH OF MASON.—Charles H. Mason, Secretary of Washington Territory, died at Olympia, after an illness of three days.

ARMY ITEMS.

A detachment of one hundred and thirty recruits for the regiment of Mounted Rifles, left Fort Leavenworth on Saturday for New Mexico. The following officers accompany the command:

Major Caleb C. Sibley, 3d Infantry, Commanding.
Lieut. Dabney H. Maury, R. M. Rifles, Adjutant and Quartermaster.
Dr. E. J. Bailey, Assistant Surgeon.
Lieut. Col. Andrew Porter, R. M. Rifles.
Lieut. Edward Tracy, do
do E. P. Cressy, do
Capt. Wm. B. Johns, 3d Infantry.
Lieut. Andrew Jackson, do do R. V. Bonneau, do do Thos. K. Jackson, 8th Infantry.
do Royal T. Frank, do
Three hundred and nine horses for the mounted service in the Department of New Mexico, were sent with above command.
The families of Col. Porter, Major Sibley, Captain Johns, Lieuts. Maury and Bonneau, and Doctor Bailey, went out with the detachments. —[Leavenworth Herald.

THE MULE.—A traveler out west thus describes the antecedents of the mule:

"An unbroken mule has got more devils in him than were cast out of the swine that we read about in the scriptures." We had one the other day that turned a backward somersets clean out of his harness, and then one again into it, lighting both times fair and square into the same tracks, and in the last revolution such was the rapidity and force of the vault, that while in the mid-air one of the shoes of his hind feet came off, flew more than twenty yards into the prairie, and came near killing a long-billed plover.

MARRIAGE.—Two persons who have chosen each other out of all the species, with the design to be each other's mutual comfort and entertainment, have in that action bound themselves to be good-humored, affable, discreet, forgiving, patient, and joyful, with respect to each other's frailties and imperfections, to the end of their lives.

If that is the case, how much of the angel should be in the composition of the man who has ten or more wives?

Douglas, Forsyth, and the Cincinnati Platform.

Mr. Forsyth, late Minister to Mexico, has written another political letter to the Mobile "Register," of which he is the editor. It is made a grave charge against him that he is not opposed to the nomination of Douglas for the Presidency in 1860, and that he does not insist upon slave legislation for the Territories. In his answer, which is important just now, in view of his having control of an influential Southern press, he says:

My solemn conviction is, that the Southern mind has been led astray on this question, and that its leaders are hurrying it on to a point where our vital interests, in the Union, are to be jeopardized, and our rights compromised. I ask you as a man, if, having these convictions, I should not be a political coward, unworthy of my post on the watch-tower of the press, did I fail to raise my voice against such a career of madness, because to do so is unpopular, and as you say, "will injure my paper in the country."

The chief risk I run in assuming my position is from the clamor I knew would be raised against me of being a "Douglas man," and his advocate for the Presidency. I am in favor of the nominee of the Charleston Convention, and I am in favor of the harmonious action of that Convention. The Democratic party is now the only barrier to the designs of the Abolition party. Break that down and we are all at sea, and good and patriotic men will not know where to turn for succor and the public safety. A scrub race for the Presidency, its final decision by the House of Representatives of Congress, and the election of an Abolitionist will be the sequel. I am unwilling to risk this fearful future for an abstraction. If it is answered that this abstraction is a principle, and we are bound to stand to it, I answer, granted that it is so, but it is a principle which the Democracy of the Northwest claims that we agreed in the Cincinnati Platform to yield up for the sake of harmony and the public good, and for a valuable consideration faithfully paid down by them, and that consideration was the yielding up of another principle on the part of the North, to wit, that Congress had the power to intervene and settle the question of slavery in the Territories, and to unite with us of the South in preventing the Black Republicans from enforcing that principle in the prohibition of slavery in the Territories. And, I answer further, that if every department of the government, and the unanimous voice of the North, were to yield to us our principle, it would not possess the value of a pin, for it would not make one foot more or less of free or slave Territory. For these reasons I am in favor of standing on the Cincinnati platform, of re-adopting it at the Charleston Convention, and of leaving the question of slavery in the Territories where we agreed to leave it—to wit: to the laws of climate and of geography, and to the judicial tribunals of the land, and to the executive authority to enforce their decisions, and to the political communities of American people who are to be affected by it. Except by this course, I see no escape from the greatest political calamities, and in this course I am utterly unable to see how the South is to suffer even an infinitesimal loss, even in honor or profit.

JOHN FORSYTH.

End of the Pawnee War!

Surrender of the Indians—The Whites Returning Victorious!

We are glad to learn from the St. Joseph Journal of Saturday, that the Pawnee war, which broke out about two weeks ago, and threatened to give a good deal of trouble, has been ended by a grand coup on the part of the whites. The whites, it will be remembered, under Governor Black, of Nebraska, went in pursuit of the savages, to chastise them for their depredations on the western settlements.

The Indians, about one thousand strong, were overtaken on Shell Creek, Nebraska. The whites did not number, all told, more than 330 or 40. These were commanded by Governor Black in person, assisted by Major West, U. S. Marshal, and Lieut. Robertson, with 20 or 30 regulars, of Ft. Kearny; the remainder were volunteers. The Americans had 1 mounted cannon, and on overtaking the Indians three charges were made before the savages surrendered. A number of Indians were killed and wounded. Major West knows of two he killed himself. None of the Americans were killed, and but few slightly wounded. On the third charge, the Indians ran up a flag of truce, and immediately surrendered, grounded arms, and gave up their stock, provisions, ammunition, &c.

Major West states that just as the Indians surrendered, a huge, brawny, half-naked savage raised up out of the grass, fired at him, and then ran. The Major put spurs to his horse and made chase. After pursuing him about one hundred yards, and getting within shooting distance, he discharged his revolver, the shot taking effect. He says he thinks the Indian bounded about ten or fifteen feet in the air, and alighting, he again started on a run, when the Major made pursuit and fired four balls into his body, before he made the savage "bite the dust," and thus, by the forfeiture of his life, pay the penalty of his prowess and daring.

Wednesday, Sept. 7, 1859.

Indian Difficulties.

We were visited last Thursday by a trader named Porter, who had been engaged trafficking with Indians up to within a short time of his call upon us. His post was about 175 miles distant from here, on what is known as Kinney's Out-off. He gave us the following particulars of an attack upon emigrants by the Indians: About the middle of week before last, a company of emigrants, mostly from Louisa county, Iowa, were attacked by a band of Shoshonees near Mr. P.'s trading post, and one man killed, and three more seriously wounded—one of the wounded probably being dead ere this, as our informant gave us a most heart-sickening account of his injuries: stated that he had an arm and leg so badly shattered that they were hanging to the body merely by dint of the outward skin and delicate fibres, besides other agonizing lacerations. The emigrants' stock was driven off, and their wagons plundered, and then destroyed, by these fiendish "Lamanites," of whom it is prophesied by their friends that they are soon to become "a white and delightful people!" The wounded are being taken care of at the military post on Bear River, whither the entire company repaired for protection and assistance. The commanding officer there immediately despatched a body of men to the scene of the outrage.

Mr. P. further stated that he was visited by a chief of the Shoshonee tribe, and ordered to leave the country within three days, which he did, traveling night and day, and saved all his stock.

Mr. P. could give us no other reason for this outbreak, than that the pent up devilry of the Indians had to have vent somewhere. There had been no communication between the emigrants and the savages whatever—nothing to engender bitterness in the breasts of the former had been perpetrated by the latter—the first warning given was the war whoop. Mr. P. said that an Indian called upon him just before the attack, and asked if the emigrants had any powder and lead; upon being answered in the negative, the attack immediately began.

It is supposed that a horse train was attacked the morning previous to this difficulty; somewhere in the same canyon, but nothing definite has been ascertained in regard to that; Mr. Porter expressed his opinion that if such had been the case, the Indians had been worsted.

The emigrants were from Iowa, Louisa county, and Linn county, Mo. Mr. A. J. Root was killed, and Jacob W. Paulin, Wesley Forcum and Thomas Blunt wounded. Mr. Paulin badly wounded.

A portion of the party proceeded to California, viz: Dan'l Bales, Hugh and Henry Warren, Rowland Dover, Charles Morris, Frederick Baker, Samuel Bassett, Compton Farris, Wm. Jones, wife and child, Thomas Blunt, Jacob and Solomon Dusher, Wesley Forcum and Harrison Logue.

Mr. Milton Carpenter, Buren Hungerford, and Miss Marion Hungerford and Nathan Fish, came on to Salt Lake, whence they intend to proceed to California.

The Indians took sixty-eight head of cattle, and one mule, and burnt five wagons, with their contents.

The Indians were about sixty in number as near as could be judged. The party of whites returned to the camp of Mr. Porter on Marsh Creek.

After the above account of information derived from Mr. Porter was in type, a friend handed us the following:

A party of gentlemen just returned from the North, where they had been prospecting for a silver mine, report that whilst in the vicinity of "Marsh Valley," they stopped at a trading-post kept by a person of the name of Graham, who informed them that about August 20th a train of five wagons was plundered and burned four miles from his station; that one man was killed and one wounded, (his leg and arm broken.) They latter he had conveyed to a camp of the military, some fifty miles distant—name forgotten, but he was from Burlington.

The Eastern mail stage arrived on Tuesday, bringing a heavy two weeks' mail. The news from the States is not very exciting; the State elections seem to engross much attention. There is the usual amount of murders, rows, and railroad and steamboat accidents.

The California papers are full of election news, and the speeches of the opposing candidates.

Kirk Anderson arrived in New York on the Star of the West.

Horace Greeley has been stirring the Californians up to the importance of a railroad across the continent. When the lamented Thos. H. Benton, during the administration of Mr. Fillmore, was energetically advocating this measure in Congress, this same Greeley dubbed the proposed enterprise as "a railroad to the moon." Times and men will change.

KENTUCKY ELECTION.—The vote of Kentucky for Governor, in eighty counties, officially reported, stands as follows:

Magoffin, (Democrat,) . . . 62,497

Ball, (Opposition,) . . . 59,114

Magoffin's majority . . . 3,383

The President has tendered the Central American Mission to D. M. Barrington, of North Carolina, formerly a Member of Congress, and subsequently Minister to Spain.

A Mormon's Description of Heaven.

Elder Middlemas delivered himself in the Tabernacle, on last Sunday forenoon, of the following description of heaven:

I do not believe heaven is that fairy, airy place of fancy that most people think it is. It is a bona fide place of materiality, much resembling this earth, only, of course, it is thousands of times larger, and everything there exists in greater perfection than the things of this earth. It is a globe just like this planet we inhabit. It is the home of God and the angels. That passage in the scriptures which reads, "a day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years are as a day," clearly establishes the fact that heaven is a planet, a rotating globe, governed by the same natural laws and astronomical principles that this earth is governed by; but it is so much larger than our little star, that it takes 365,000 times longer to make a revolution upon its orbit than the earth. So ye see that is a fact that one of God's days, or a day in heaven, is a thousand of our years.

They eat and drink and sleep in heaven the same as we do here. Earth is emphatically a miniature heaven. I believe they have a printing-office in heaven, and electric telegraphs, and short-hand reporters. Why not? Are they not greater than we on earth? I believe there is a channel of communication extending from my mouth to the home of the angels, and probably an angel at the telegraph office in heaven is now waiting for the news from here, and as soon as he gets it he will take it right to the hands of the printers; they will set it up in type, and print it in newspapers, and then boys, or men, will jump on horses, and ride around giving the inhabitants of heaven the latest news concerning the kingdom of God on earth. There are more than two reporters here—more than brother Long and brother Watt! I believe there is a reporter here from heaven to find out who is speaking, what he is speaking about, and everything else of interest. He sends the items, as fast as he gets them, right up to heaven, and there they are printed.

This logical Elder, who is so strenuously opposed to "a fairy, airy heaven," said that he was "a native of an Isle of the sea, upon which he was so filled with the spirit of God, that when he turned his face to the West he blowed it off like steam!" In describing the locality of the aforesaid Island, his reverence used what he specified as "technical words," after which he explained to the congregation some of his ambiguous expressions. "Longitude," said he, "means a straight line west of London."

We would like to have had the full sermon, but the learned divine used so many "technicalities" that our reporter's conceptions were so slow to follow him all the way through.

What Bishop Keeler says in the Tabernacle:

"The Saints who have emigrated here this season could clean out what few soldiers there are here before breakfast."

Augusta, Ga., July 26.

John J. Jones has been nominated to Congress by the democratic convention, in place of Hon. A. H. Stevens, resigned.

A fire occurred in Jacksonville on the 17th, destroying property to the amount of $20,000. The Buffington House, and nearly an entire block of buildings, were burnt.

Philadelphia, July 26.

The New York Herald, in an editorial upon the effects of the peace upon the commercial interests, says they may be of serious import to this country if we do not meet them calmly and with foresight, viewing the results of war and its sudden termination on the same aspect with the result of the Crimean war, attended as they are with failures in the breadstuffs and provision speculations, and with a reckless speculation in imports, they are not without menace to our commercial affairs. The close of the present war leaves us in imminent danger of another panic if we do not exercise the utmost caution.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[For the Valley Tan.
CAMP FLOYD,
27th August, 1859.]

On Saturday, the 20th ult., a circus was opened for the first time in this Camp, with the performers consisting wholly of soldiers. The gymnastic feats were the best part of the performance, which was repeated on Friday last—on both occasions to good houses.

On Sunday, the 21st, the "Germania" Singing Club opened their Social Hall, for dramatic representations and chorus singing.

The hall has been built entirely by the members of the club (and is a very neat building) on the ground of the 7th regiment of Infantry, capable of holding about 150 persons. The scenery is well painted and appropriate—the proscenium especially—an eagle with out-stretched wings in the center; on one side the American, and on the other the German flags; the drop-curtain is taken from the Royal Theater in Hanover, and consists of Helios, the God of time and news, driving a chariot with four horses in the clouds, surrounded with twelve nymphs, which represent the twelve hours. The whole is executed with a degree of taste and finish which is highly creditable to the members.

The performances commenced with the farce of "Why Don't you get Married?" After a chorus, "Box and Cox—Married and Settled," in two acts; then another chorus, and concluded with "Mr. Carollee."

The whole of the performances were in the German language, and appeared to give the greatest satisfaction to the audience; among whom were Col. C. F. Smith, Commanding Officer Post; Col. Morrison, 7th Infantry; Col. Howe, 2d Dragoons; and Col. Ruggles, 5th Infantry, besides numerous other officers from the different regiments, invited guests.

As the building was erected by the members for their own amusement, and intellectual improvement, no charge is made for admittance, which can only be obtained by an invitation ticket.

Taking these circumstances into consideration, Col. Morrison headed a subscription list, which was liberally responded to by the officers of the 7th Infantry, and the amount, $150 presented to the club to carry out their designs.

This graceful tribute is alike creditable to the recipients, for their design of rational enjoyment, and to the donors for their generous assistance to enable them to carry it into effect.

We understand it is probable that the Military Dramatic Association will open their new house on Saturday next, so that the inhabitants of the camp and neighborhood can have a variety of amusement for the ensuing winter.

"DRAMA."

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
August 31st, 1859.]

MR. EDITOR:

I drop you a few lines to insert in your columns in reference to the Circus Company, lately organized at this place, under the direction of the energetic managers of the Company, Messrs. Willis and Crawford. They gave their first performance on Saturday, the 20th inst., to a good audience, who went away satisfied that pork and beans had not seriously affected the activity of the soldiers, who, by the way, did some good things in the acrobatic and gymnastic line; and, considering the time for preparation, and the means at their hands, their equestrian performance was also good. But then the fountain-head from which all the amusement was drawn was the inimitable comicality of Willis and Crawford, the clowns of the Company. Their tricks and witticisms invariably brought down the audience in roars of applause; but the capping of the climax was in the burlesque on Mormon emigration, which was rendered to the satisfaction of all who were present.

Willis' personification of the Mormon Bishop was rendered so well that it afforded material for laughter for days afterward; and Crawford was at home in the taking off the character of a [Mr. Johnny Bull, just arrived from Hold Hengland, at Echo Canyon, or some other point of reception, by the Mormons, who, on finding out his poverty, respectfully send him to another settlement, where his poverty will be better appreciated.

They have gained a name among the soldiers for comicality and "side-splitting laughter" that will always ensure them a good house.

It is the only place of amusement in Camp Floyd worth going to.

There is no news in Camp.

Yours in haste,

OBSERVER.

To the People of Nevada Territory.

Resolved, That we the members of this Convention submit the Constitution by us framed and adopted to the people of Nevada Territory, and earnestly recommend its favorable consideration and final adoption by them, on the first Wednesday after the first Monday in September next, 1859.

DECLARATION.

WHEREAS, We the citizens of the proposed Territory of Nevada, considering that we have suffered from a series of internal and external evils of so grave a nature as to render forbearance a virtue no longer; and believing that the time has now arrived for us to take some prominent action upon our future well being as a people. And believing further that a plain statement of the causes which have impelled us to pursue this course, will convince a candid and unprejudiced public; we would, therefore state,

That a long train of abuses and usurpations on the part of the Mormons of Eastern Utah, towards the people of Western Utah, evinces a desire on their part to reduce us under an absolute spiritual despotism.

Such has been our patient suffering, and such is now the necessity for dissolving all political relations which may have connected us together, and we deem it not only our right, but also our duty to disown such a Government and such a people, and to form new guards for our future security.

We would charge upon the Mormons, a gross violation of the organic act, creating the Territory of Utah.

They have declared themselves hostile to the constitutional government and institutions of our country;

They have declared war against the government of the United States;

They have refused to submit to its laws. While they have when ever it suited them claimed protection under these laws;

They have denied to the Judges of the United States a right to try in their courts, the violators of the law when such violators were Mormons;

They have so managed by their legislation as to defeat justice, protect criminals, and render the laws and the authority of the United States in Utah, Territory void and of no effect;

They have conferred powers on their Territorial Marshals so extensive as to render void the authority of the Marshals of the United States in all cases.

They have conferred upon Probate Judges the right to select juries in civil and criminal cases, in violation of all law, and all precedent. They have also given to said judges and justices of the peace absolute jurisdiction in all civil and criminal cases;

They have made all laws existing under the people of this Territory and in defiance of the laws of the United States;

They have by an act of the Legislature, declared all unmarried men ineligible as jurymen unless they have resided in the Territory two years;

They have inured their hands, in the blood of our citizens while they were peaceably pursuing their way across the continent, and have deprived them of their property without due course of law;

They have poisoned the minds of the Indians against us and forced us frequently to open war with them.

We have petitioned to them to redress and to protect us in our right. But our appeals have ever been treated with disdain and neglect. To continue the connection with Utah longer we fear would involve us in treason and rebellion to our country.

We further consider that the dangerous difficulty of transit and expense of communication with the seat of the Territorial Government of eastern Utah of themselves valid reasons to induce us to form a separate Territorial organization.

We have applied for assistance to California but she has declined to aid and protect us because we were without the jurisdiction of the State.

We have for the last two years invoked Congress to erect for us a Territorial Government and that body has been deaf to our appeals.

Therefore, believing in the rectitude of our intentions and believing the time has arrived, we make known and declare our entire and unconditional separation from Eastern Utah.

To provide for and secure our future protection, we pledge to each other our sacred obligations, to erect for ourselves a Territorial Government founded upon the Republican principles of the Constitution of the United States. And that we will maintain and defend it to the best of our ability, and we look to the support and protection of the Federal Government and our fellow-citizens in every part of the Union.—Territorial Enterprise, Carson Valley.

Big Indian Meeting—8,000 Warriors Encamped.

The last Emporia (Kansas) News has the following:

We learn that there are now encamped on the little Arkansas, some seven or eight thousand warriors, of the different tribes of Kansas. What their object is cannot be ascertained. Some of them say they are going to have a grand buffalo hunt, while others give various other reasons for their present warlike preparations. We have heard it stated that it is the intention of these Indians to attack the settlers at Pike's Peak sometime during the summer or fall. But we are inclined to think that this is a mistake, as most of the tribes in Kansas are sufficiently acquainted with the white race to know that such a move on their part would be followed by the destruction of thousands of their warriors, and the final abandonment by them of their present hunting grounds. It will be well enough, however, to watch the manoeuvres of these treacherous redskins.

It is rumored that silver mines have been discovered in Northern Utah.

Through in Six Days and Twenty Hours.

The Salt Lake Stage with the overland mail and passengers arrived at this place Tuesday morning, 9th inst., at half past 9 o'clock, being just six days and twenty hours from Salt Lake City. Ben Holiday, clerk and servant were the only passengers, Mr. Holiday having chartered the coach on the occasion for his individual purpose. There was a delay of one day on the trip, caused upon the indisposition of Mr. Holiday, besides numerous minor delays at the various stations, occasioned by the animals not being in readiness, which in the aggregate reduced the traveling time occupied in completing the trip to about five days and a half, which was accomplished—says Mr. Holiday—without any extraordinary exertions.

It will be remembered in this connection, that the stations on this route are from 15 to 40 miles apart, and at an average distance from each other of 25 miles, from which it will readily be seen, that were the distance between the stations reduced to, from 10 to 15 miles, as is the case on the Butterfield line, the trip could be made regularly with ease in 4 or 5 days from Salt Lake to Placerville. That with the same system and perfection of management, on this route, which is the secret of success of the Southern route and which is to be liberally paid for out of the national treasury, the mail can be transported from St. Joseph Mo., to Placerville Cal., in fifteen days, no reasonable man can doubt, a fact which can and will be satisfactorily demonstrated, when the time shall have been reduced, and the pay increased to an equality with the Butterfield line.

The stage passed Judge Cradlebaugh on the evening of the 4th inst., with an escort of about 18 soldiers, 200 miles this side of Salt Lake. He will probably arrive at this place about the 20th. The road between here and Salt Lake is said to be literally awarming with emigrants the entire distance.—Territorial Enterprise Aug. 13.

The French Press on the Peace.

Peace has been made, and what a peace! We assert, without fear of contradiction, that the peace of Niffrafrica is the most glorious that has ever been signed by a French sovereign. In confirming all legitimate interests, it secures the repose of Europe for a long period, and thus crowns the most generous and the most exalted policy that could do honor to any age or to any country. The Emperor Napoleon III, already so great in the eyes of Europe, assumes a place so great before posterity that all glory becomes pale before that which he has acquired. The captain who commanded at Magenta and at Solferino might gain other battles. He has known how to stop short in his force and his triumph—a virtue more rare than military valor. Such a spectacle is perhaps the most noble that could be presented to the world. It is worthy of him who so lately pronounced those eloquent and deeply-felt words: "When, supported by the wishes and the feelings of a people, a man ascends the steps of a throne, he rises by the extreme importance of his responsibilities above the regions where vulgar interests are discussed, and has for his first springs of action, as for his final judges, God, his conscience, and posterity."—[Paris Pays.

DAMAGES INCURRED BY THE TROUBLES IN KANSAS.—A commission appointed by the Kansas Legislature has been investigating the claims for damages incurred during the disturbances of 1855-56. A correspondent of the Boston Traveler gives the following summary of the result which has been reported to the Constitutional Convention:

"The total amount of the claims filed before the Boards amounts to the sum of $1,250,990 65. The amount awarded is about $500,000. The remainder of the claims were either fraudulent or presented by citizens of Missouri. The total number of cases is between 40 and 500; of these the free State men have 335; pro-slavery 65. The value of crops destroyed, 149,552 62; horses stolen, 340; cattle, 405 head. Fifty-three houses and saw-mills were burned.—The largest amount awarded is to Col. Elridge, proprietor of the Free State, who received $40,000. The smallest was to a person who claimed over $2,000, and was awarded $9."

THE NAPOLEON GUNS.—A letter describing the battle of Solferino says:

"The new artillery decided the day. Their hollow balls can be found with complete precision at two miles distant; fourteen seconds is required to travel that distance. When they strike they burst with frightful effect. This artillery completely demoralized the Austrians, and they profited by the storm to retreat."

DISCHARGED BY DEATH.—F. A. Maffitt, a son of the celebrated John N. Maffitt, deceased, and one of the parties arrested last week on the charge of attempting to victimize the Banking House of Barksdale & Co., by means of forged drafts, and who was on Saturday committed temporarily to jail, died in his cell on Sunday night at nine o'clock.—[St. Louis Herald.

A FATHER'S VENGEANCE.—We learn from a private dispatch from Marysville, that the father of Miss Hattie May, the young girl who lately made the strange excursion to San Francisco and Alameda counties with a male companion, followed the fellow who was in company with his daughter, one Wm. P. Wilkins, a married man, into Sutter county, on Monday night, and shot him as soon as he overtook him. The verdict will be, "served him right."—San Joaquin Republican.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

ARRIVAL OF A HAND-CART TRAIN OF CONVICTS.—Great Turn-out of Citizens to Witness the Entrance.—Early on Sabbath morning, it became rumored throughout town that the long-looked-for Hand-Cart Train was approaching near the home of the particularly favored of heaven—viz, Salt Lake City—where the missionaries had caused them to believe, most probably, that they would find profits for the body, as well as prophets for the soul; and they have our sincerest wishes that they may be consoled with the former, if they are duped in regard to the existence of the latter.

After the conclusion of the afternoon services at the tabernacle, a heterogeneous mass of pedestrians, equestrians, and Jehus generally, thronged the road between the city and the mouth of Emigration Canyon, all on the quiet to get a glimpse at the coming object of curiosity. At about 4 p. m. the train emerged from the mountains onto the plateau overlooking the city, where it was welcomed by several cheering airs from a brass band, and met by a few kind-hearted team-owners, who took the most wearied female members of the company into their wagons, while there were an abundance of gallant young men who harnessed themselves into the carts thus vacated. A sort of systematic procession was formed just out of the city, by placing the wagons containing the baggage and bedding of the hand-carters in the van, the music next, and then the persevering, bold-spirited cart-drawers themselves, the whole followed and surrounded by hundreds of men, women and children, on foot, on horseback, in wagons, carriages, &c. In this order, and under these circumstances, the procession passed through the city to the Public Square, where, we understand, they were supplied with all manner of desirable refreshments.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF WALKING.—Mr. Grow, a cousin of Hon. Wm. Grow, of Pa., started from this city about the 1st of August, 1858, and walked to California, and returned on foot to this place in the ensuing October. Early this Spring, accompanied by his son, of fifteen years, Mr. Grow departed from here and walked (son also) to the Missouri River, and from that point, a goodly part of the distance to Washington, D. C.; they remained in the capital but a short time, and started on the return trip; reached the Missouri from Washington in the same way that they went from the former place to the latter, when the son got an opportunity to ride and drive a team to within four or five hundred miles of this city, and came in on foot the remainder of the distance; the father returned on foot the full distance from Atchison, Kansas. We know of but few, if any, instances on record wherein men have voluntarily subjected themselves to such lengthy, harassing journeys on foot as Mr. G. did in these cases; and the fortitude of the youthful son draws forth mingled admiration and astonishment from all.

PROGRESS OF THE HOOP MANIA.—A bouncing specimen of femininity, of perhaps sixteen summers, made a call upon our printers the other day for—what?—raw hide hoops. After the types had recovered from the embarrassment consequent upon this attack upon their modesty—which must have been great, as most of them never were within ten feet of a woman wearing hoops, the "devil" himself declaring his inability to get closer—they interrogated "sweet sixteen" relative to where she got her information of the change of business upon their part; she replied that "somebody told her this was a 'fun'-shop, and that they must make raw hide hoops here." She was handed a copy of our last paper, and directed to brother Kimball's remarks upon "them darned hoops." She carried it, together with a countenance of despair as black as a spirit of evil omen, from the office, pointing her romantic nose for the "Moon?" distillery, whither some wicked person sent her, we suppose, under the assurance that that was another "valley tan"-shop. Vive le raw hide hoops; sic transit gloria crinoline.

We regret to hear that Archy Williams, a brother of T. S. Williams, Esq., was shot, and seriously wounded, while at a dance in Provo, a few nights ago, by one of his companions of the name of Wheeler. We have not yet heard the particulars.

HAD A FIT.—A middle-aged man, of the name of Duffin, was, in the tabernacle last Sunday afternoon, attacked by a fit. Prompt and kind attention was given the unfortunate man, and, after apparently suffering anguish indescribable for near half an hour, he recovered to consciousness.

ANOTHER VICTIM.—Josiah Arnold, who was shot through the thigh, the ball grazing the bone, at the time that Drown was killed, has since died. He was removed from the city to his residence on the Jordan, and died on the morning of the 30th ult.

We notice that ripe peaches are appearing in our market; also, apples, tomatoes, and other kinds of fruit incident to the season and climate.

BY THE EASTERN MAIL.

FROM WASHINGTON.
WASHINGTON, August 11.
The Chevalier Massone, Charge d'Affaires of the Sicilian Majesty, has presented his credentials in this character to the Secretary of State, and Mr. Edward Blondell yesterday delivered his credentials to the President, and was received as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of his Majesty, the King of the Belgians, to this Government.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.
The steamer Arabia's mails arrived here this evening. At Goodwood, on Friday, the 29th ult., Ten Broeck's American horse stake won the stake of $1,000 sovereigns. Prior to the race, fifteen horses ran. Mr. Ten Broeck is said to have won $25,000 on the Goodwood stakes. His colt Umpire, by Lecompt, won the Nursery stakes, also, on Friday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.
The Atlantic Telegraph Company have decided to make the conductor of the next cable consist of six wires twisted—about six times the size of the old cable. There will be no outside covering of iron wire, except a few hundred miles of each end. The new cable is to be laid down, guaranteed in all respects, and it is expected to be in order for business early next summer. Cyrus W. Field, Esq., occupies two columns of some of the New York evening papers with a full statement of the affairs of the Company.

We understand the American public will have an opportunity to subscribe to the new stock, which is guaranteed by the British government.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 12.
The steamship City of Baltimore, bound for New York, has been intercepted off Cape Race by the news yacht of the associated Press, and five days later advices from Liverpool obtained. The Liverpool and London dates are to the 3d inst., by mail; to Thursday evening, the 4th inst., by telegraph to Queenstown.

The steamship Asia arrived at Liverpool on the 31st ult.; the steamer Hungarian on the 1st inst.; the steamer Adige, at Cork, on the 2d, and the Etna at Liverpool on the 3d inst.

The following brief summary of her news comprises the more important events of the week.

There had been no further developments as to the Peace Conference.

The continental news is of a pacific character.

France was preparing for a general disarmament.

The Paris Bourse closed on Wednesday at 69 1/2.

The French Rhine army had been dissolved.

A new Indian loan of £5,000,000 has been announced.

The American Minister at Rome had obtained £400 as compensation for the loss sustained by Mr. Perkins and his companions during the sacking of Perugia by the Swiss troops.

LEAVENWORTH, Aug. 10.
An express arrived here yesterday from the mines. It brought nineteen hundred dollars in gold, consigned to Smoot, Russell & Co. The gold is of the finest quality, some nuggets weighing fifteen dollars. Provisions have been cheap at the mines, and no sufferings heard of. This express brought no mail.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE MISSOURI REPUBLICAN.
LEAVENWORTH, Aug. 11, 1859.

The overland Express arrived to-day from the mines of Western Kansas, bringing dates from that region to the 3d inst.

No Express Messenger came through this time with the coach, consequently there is no receipt of gold dust to announce.

The amount of mail matter brought by this arrival is small, and only one or two passengers came to this city.

The news brought, though brief, is very interesting.

A convention was in session at Denver City, its purpose being to take the necessary steps to form the country about the mines into a Territory, to be called Jefferson Territory.

The attendance was large, there being no less than one hundred and sixty-six Delegates present.

It is the intention, it is ascertained, to apply to the next session of Congress for its recognition as a regular Territory of the United States, and for a Territorial Government.

The reports lately received here that rich diggings had been discovered on the head waters of the Colorado river are confirmed. Numbers of men, said to amount in all to eight hundred, left Denver city on the 2d inst., to go to the locality of the new discoveries.

From the old mines the accounts received by this express are, generally, of favorable character.

CENSUS APPOINTMENT.—M. Joseph C. Kennedy has been appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to the charge of work preliminary to the eighth census under the act of March 3d, 1853.

Col. Stombaugh, Surveyor General of Utah, accompanied by Capt. Wentz, an exceedingly clever gentleman, of Lancaster, Pa., and a corps of employees, arrived in this city Sunday evening. They are stopping at the Kenic. The Col. expects to leave for his distant field of labor on Wednesday.—[Leavenworth Herald.]

GENERAL DISSATISFACTION AT THE RESULT OF THE WAR.—A tone pervades the intelligence brought by the Europa which is indicative of considerable discontent and misgiving respecting Louis Napoleon's abrupt conclusion of the war in Italy. There is even an intimation that matters there may not be so easily arranged, upon the basis of the Villafranca treaty, as the two Emperors seem to have taken for granted they would be. A rumor prevailed that Garibaldi and his legion would refuse to lay down their arms, but would continue a guerilla warfare, the object of which would be the further annoyance of Austria. The prevalence of such a rumor indicates a general impression that the terms of peace are not generally satisfactory to the Italians. Reports were also prevalent of active dissatisfaction in Venice, in Tuscany, and even at Milan; and also that Victor Emanuel had warmly expressed his dissatisfaction. The latter reports, however, would seem disproved by the cordial reception given to the King of Sardinia at Milan, and by the language of Victor Emanuel's proclamation to his army.—[Washington States.]

A WOMAN SHOT IN BROADWAY.—An abandoned woman was shot in Broadway, on the steps of the Brandreth House, on Saturday afternoon, by her paramour. Her name—or the name by which she is known—is Virginia Stewart; his is Robert C. McDonald, and both are from Mobile, Alabama. She is said to be the keeper of a house of prostitution in Mobile, and has been his mistress. McDonald, who has been a cotton broker, and is of a respectable Kentucky family, had abandoned her, or she had abandoned him, which is not certain. They met accidentally at Taylor's Saloon, and he followed her and had some words with her. According to the report, she refused to return to him, and threatened to call an officer, when he followed and shot her through the head, and then attempted unsuccessfully to shoot himself. The woman was taken to the hospital with a bullet in her brain, but still living, and he was lodged in jail. He has been living, while here, a life of dissipation, and was frenzied, when the act was committed, with drink as well as passion. The woman was still living at the last accounts, but was not expected to recover. It is said she is a native of Massachusetts. Up to the time of our going to press she is still lingering, but the chances of her recovery are very small.—[N. Y. Tribune.]

The Emperor of the French has put forward his estimate of his own peace, and Count Cavour, the leader of the national party in Italy, had made known his opinion of the same work by resigning his ministry. There could be no doubt as to the course which that high-spirited minister would take. It was with appeals and promises to Italy that the war was commenced, and it is before Italy that the pacification must be justified. Count Cavour declines to say that this is a righteous peace.

The war of Italian independence is terminated for the present, without securing the objects for which it was undertaken. The Allied armies are marching homeward, leaving the noble work at most only half done. Italy is not free from the Alps to the Adriatic. The Austrian vulture, though beaten off from the right side, still plants his cruel talons in the left side of that long-suffering promethene. This abrupt and disappointing termination of the noble struggle has naturally filled both the covert and avowed enemies of freedom and progress with unwonted exultation. The friends of despotism and intolerance, the aristocratic partisans of Hapsburg rule, the supporters of the Holy Alliance and the Papal throne, are almost beside themselves with sudden joy. It is a jubilee for Austrian grand dukes, Italian cardinals, French Priests and English peers. All this is natural enough. But there are others besides the avowed and real enemies of progress who regard the peace with a certain kind of satisfaction.

Many sincere friends of the Italian cause look upon it with a kind of Sardinian pleasure, as the fulfillment of the gloomy prophecies they have uttered ever since the commencement of the war. Such an alliance, they had always said, would never prosper, and could produce no good result. The peace is no doubt a very bad one; but they are not disappointed, as they never expected anything better, and can only marvel at the ignorance or credulity of those who imagined that the Italian cause would be really served by a selfish and arbitrary ruler like Louis Napoleon. Looking at the conditions of the peace, they turn with an air of triumph and exclaim, "He has betrayed the cause, as we always said he would."

An ingenious invention has just been adopted by the French Minister of War, for the better feeding of cavalry horses when on the march. It consists in compressing the food for the journey into small tablets, like those already in use composed of vegetable food for the army. The hay and straw are chopped fine, the oats and corn crushed, and then mixed in proportion to the nutritive qualities afforded by each. Upon the mixture is poured a mucilaginous residue of linseed, and the whole is pressed and comes out in a hard cake, only requiring to be dried in the oven.

LIFE IN TROPICAL AFRICA.—The daily life of a "black fellow" has been described in a few words: He gets a large melon, cuts it into, and scoops out the inside; one-half he puts on his head, he sits on; the other half, and eats the middle.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

One Negro Burned and Two Hanged by a Mob!!

Tuesday, the 19th of July, 1859, will long be remembered in the annals of Marshall. This was the day fixed by his Honor, Judge Hicks, for a special term of the Circuit Court, for the trial of John, the murderer of Hinton, in the month of May. The opening of the Court was awaited with intense interest, and an unusual crowd convened in and around the court-house. The public mind had been kept in a state of intense excitement, since the attempt to take John, some time ago, and burn him. Mr. Durrett had been stabbed, and dangerously wounded, and made a cripple for life, since that time. On last Wednesday morning, a negro had rudely assailed Mrs. Habecot, and excited still more the public mind, and the atrocious crime at Arrow Rock influenced it to an uncontrollable pitch.

His Honor, after the Grand Jury was empaneled, delivered a charge suited to the occasion, and addressed the crowd upon the propriety of submitting to the regular execution of the laws, and the disgrace and injury that would result from violent measures, stated that it was his determination to do his sworn duty, though in its discharge limb should be torn from limb. He concluded by hoping no resort would be had to violence.

John was put upon trial, found guilty, and was convicted of murder in the first degree. He was then remanded to prison, and Jim was brought into Court to be tried for rape. When John was being retaken to jail, the mob followed.

An exciting address was made by an old man, and we believe, a Justice of the Peace (?) The jail was entered—the private room of the jailor's family rudely invaded—the jail door was forced—the jailor first being rudely treated, the prisoners were brought forth amidst the infuriated cries and shouts of the mob, and being joined by Jim, who had been wrested from the custody of an officer in the court-house, they were hurried along to the place of execution, amidst the yells and cries and blows of those next them.

John was made fast by a chain to a tree, and burned to death amid most cruel pangs. The other two had ropes placed around their necks, the ropes thrown over a limb, and were suddenly drawn up, and their sufferings soon ended.

We stood aloof from such disgusting scenes, though we heard the ribaldry and profanity of the excited multitude.

Thus passed a day set apart for the trial of criminals, by a regularly constituted tribunal of the land; but a day in which the wholesome admonitions from the bench were totally disregarded, and the laws of the country trodden under unhallowed feet, and a rule of anarchy inaugurated that bodes ill to the permanency of our institutions.

God grant that such scenes may never be re-enacted in our midst, and that lasting reproach may not rest upon our beautiful country, for the sins of a few misguided men, who do not realize that one of the great duties of a good citizen is to obey the laws of the land.—[Saline County Herald.]

SLAVERS FITTING OUT IN MASSACHUSETTS.—A special dispatch from Boston to the New York Times says:

There are at this time two vessels fitting out at Salem, in this State, for the slave trade on the coast of Africa. The principals in the affair are a Spanish firm in New York, and the pecuniary equipment of the vessels has just been sent in the form of $20,000 in hard specie. If the Government wishes to stop this infamous trade, it must look North as well as South, and to these small New England ports as well as to New York and New Orleans. There will be no difficulty in identifying the craft of Salem, and this is not the first instance in the last three months.

DEATH OF VIRGINIA STEWART.—The Inquest.—The young woman Virginia Stewart, shot at the corner of Canal street, on Saturday afternoon, July 23d, by Robert C. McDonald, expired at the City Hospital this morning, a little before four o'clock. She is said to have struggled violently, and to have been in violent convulsions several hours. Her dying wish was that her assassin should escape with impunity.

The last religious rites were performed by Rev. Dr. Quinn, and she is said to have died in a state of hopeful impatience.

The remains were taken in charge by Coroner Jackson this morning, and a post mortem examination held by this order. The bullet entered on the left side of the skull, about two inches from the eye, and passed along the frontal lobe of the brain, to the right side, a little above the temple. A large quantity of pus had been deposited around it before death. The viscera were also subjected to examination. The inquest will be held 11 o'clock to-morrow.

As Miss Stewart died in communion of the Roman Catholic church, her body will be buried in the Calvary Cemetery. Rev. Dr. Quinn will perform the sacrifice of the Mass.—[N. Y. Post.]

Mynheer Drinkenoff makes a distinction thus: "Too much whisky is too much, but too much lager beer is shoost right."

In a grave yard in New Jersey, there is a tombstone on which is the following simple, yet touching epitaph: "He was a Good Egg."

"So there is another rupture of Mount Vesuvius," said Mrs. Parlington, as she put up her spec; "the papers tell us about the burning lather running down the mountain, but they don't tell how it got a fire."

NOTICE.

ANOTHER SALE OF PUBLIC MULES, WAGONS AND HARNESS.

ON TUESDAY, 20th instant, will be sold, at Public Auction, at Camp Floyd, U. T., to the highest bidder for Specie or Government Funds, about 400 head of mules.

Draft & Saddle Mules; and also a number of Wagons, together with harnesses for the same, &c. &c. The mules are all young, sound, and thoroughly broken, and in good condition, and the Wagons, and Harnesses are in complete repair, with all the equipments for immediate use, &c. The sale will commence on the day above mentioned, in lots of one or more, and will continue from day to day until all are sold.

G. H. CROSWAN, Dep'ty Q. T. C. Camp U. S. A. Camp Floyd, 21 Sept. 1859.

George Cronyn & Co., HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of U. S. Landred & Co., consisting of

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, &c., &c. beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at George Cronyn's Old Stand, near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail. They are the public they have paid for, and at a low figure. The stock consists in part of STAPLE DRY GOODS, Groceries, Hardware, Oil, Turpentine, Alcohol, Window Glass, Hay and Manure Forks, Shovels, Spades, Scythes and Snaths, Cotton Yarn, Dye-Stuffs, &c.

Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of all kinds received. [11-11]

WM. A. NICKMAN, ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW.

Will practice in the Courts in this Territory. OFFICE—East Temp's Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s Store. 43-11

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c. Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having a superior facility for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The following facilities for transportation from San Francisco to our store at the route from St. Louis, we are enabled to offer goods at such prices as will actually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style in goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints
Bleached do Blue Denims
" shirtings " drills
Brown do White & cold blkts
Hickory stripes Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do
Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking Alpaca and merinos
Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread
" napkins Curtain damasks
" table cloths Satinett & cassimeres
Crash, toweling and Cottonades and pant
doylies stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths
White linen bosom shirts Apron checks
Colored calico do Heavy duck (all widths)
Grey flannel do Blue & Hick' check
Red do do Blue & Ec., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Sale room contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered sets
silks " collars & sleeves
Plain all wool delaines " window curtains
Fancy do " edgings and lin-
Alexander's kid gloves " sections
Bay state long shawls " linen handkerfs
Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric
Delaines in dress pat- Silk
terns " cravats and tie
White cambric muslin " Suspenders
Jackonets " Dress Trimmings
Swiss
Mull & Namassoks

Plaid Jackonet muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and gantlets
Lace mits and gloves
Dress lawns and barges
Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, style and quality imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the General Freight Works, and the New England Wharfed Company's Goods. 41-24

Confidence Betrayed.

BY AN OLD CONTRIBUTOR.

It is a miserable thing to find one's self betrayed by the friend in whom one has placed the utmost confidence. It cuts—yes, cuts like a keen-edged knife, to find that what we committed to the sacred keeping of our friend, is now in the keeping of the public, or at least of our public.

It takes people a long, long time to become convinced that there are on earth very few who are worthy of confidence. They go frankly on, trusting to brother and sister and friend, until finding themselves betrayed here, deserted there, "stood from under" in the very moment when they most need firm support and faith, they begin to understand what is the material out of which most men and women are made. Sensitive and irritable natures, becoming victims to this treachery, are almost maddened by it; but it is not worth while. Oh! not at all, if they could but realize it. There is nothing of earth worth going mad about—unless, perhaps, it be our own folly in trusting too much to our fellow creatures. Even husbands and wives are too often false to each other, in respect to many confidences. It is seldom, indeed, that two natures of similar or even approximate depth and fineness are united in the marriage bond.

It is a sight painful as interesting to witness a husband or a wife attempting, with all the warmth and enthusiasm of a refined and noble nature, to call forth answering glows and self-revealings from a soul which is utterly incapable, not only of making any suitable response, but of appreciating the worth of what is spent for its sake. Is it not painful to hear the sacred privacies of a true and loving soul made the subject of obtuse and most unappreciating remark by the very one to whom they were confided? Involuntarily we shrink within ourselves, saying, "How unworthy!"

The sooner one united in any walk of life with one whose feelings are so far inferior and so much more external than his own, becomes aware of it, the better for all concerned. Then he will no more weary and exhaust himself with the vain endeavor to call into exercise in his companion (of what ever name) what is not there, but will school himself to accept him for what he is, not for what he would be glad to have him. He will deceive himself, expose himself, and distress and condemn his companion no more.

Ceasing his demonstrations, he will be more happy, because more in his own power. The deepest and most tender things of his soul he will not continue to throw open to the gaze and touch of one who will but wonder at them, or perhaps laugh, and call upon the crowd without to come and behold. Few, few indeed on earth are of a faithful or trusty nature. Most persons do not even understand what it is to be faithful—finesse and depth of feeling they do not know. It is not safe, nor well, to open your heart to their eyes, (no matter what relation they bear to you,) unless you are willing that all your instructions to sacred privacy should be disregarded.

People must not be blamed for what they lack; but let no man be so foolish as to pour out his richest and strongest love, or his utmost confidence, upon any mortal.

There is but one that deserves so much at our hands. He will never betray. He will not wound by rough touches the tenderness and the delicacy of our unveiled souls—to him the most sacred confidences of our lives and hearts are sacred, and beside him there is not one of whom so much can be with truth be said.

Hold the veil over your heart even in your secret chamber; but when you enter your closet you may safely cast it aside.

Thus, from the anguish of their own often betrayed hearts, speak the middle-aged to the frank and young.

The same nature that was in us is in you, ye youthful brothers and sisters; we know many of your circumstances; we can well divine what is before you, and we entreat of you to be wary, be watchful, be not too demonstrative—God alone is worthy to have human hearts placed unreserved in his hands.

Trouble and bitterness, such as you can know in no other way, will be saved you if you attend this warning; if you think you need it not, if you will not accept it, go your own way; by and by—pierced, torn, transfixed, and bleeding—you will stagger towards those arms and to that bosom of Eternal Love and Unchanging Truth that longs now to receive you, before your heart is wounded to the core, but which will not reject you even then.

Roger A. Pryor, formerly editor of the "South," at Richmond, Virginia, and more recently of the "States," at Washington, has consented to become a candidate for Congress in the Petersburg District, vice Wm. O. Goode, deceased.

DEATH OF THE KING OF SWEDEN.—Our foreign journals brought by the Africa announce the death of Oscar, King of Sweden. He was born July 4th, 1799, and was the son of Bernadotte, whom he succeeded as King of Sweden and Norway on the 8th of March, 1854. He has been a good and popular sovereign. His health and mental powers failed some years ago, and since September, 1857, he has not administered the government, having left it in the hands of his son, Prince Charles, who succeeds him under the title of King Charles XV. The new King was born May 3d, 1826, and was married June 9th, 1850, to a Dutch Princess, by whom he has several children.

FASHIONABLE WORSHIP.—An Ohio editor asks: "What can be more captivating than to see a beautiful woman, say about four feet eleven inches high, eleven feet four inches in diameter, and thirty-four feet in circumference, passing along the aisle just as divine worship commences."

Since the war of extermination against the canine race commenced, Marshal Gano has been the recipient of several letters, all of which threaten revenge against the Marshal's troops of dog-slayers, and in several instances he has himself been notified, that satisfaction will at some distant day be demanded, for the loss of a favorite "Towzer," or a much endeared "Nero." The last we subjoin, the writer, unlike most of the others, disdains to be anonymous, but over his own signature, and unmistakable terms, informs Mr. Gano what opinion he holds of him. Outside of the subject it treats upon, it is well worthy presentation as a piece of nondescript literature. We append it verbatim et literatim:

"Cincinnati June 22^d 59.
Mr. Marshal of the City and of the Police, you is one one Dam Raskel, you sends your Mens to Mine house and kills mine dogs.—Mi dog Gacke and Mi dog Kate, he was full of Bupes You kill all of mi nabors dogs to, i is got no dogs now, to watch mine House, no doge to ketch mine Rates, no dogs to Blay mit mine children, no Doge For nothing. Mine frow is so mad like ter Dyvil mit you, all the doges in Fifteenth Ward goes ded.

A STALEMAN"

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
GOODS AT COST

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps,

which, together with their well-selected stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at COST and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducement thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

NOTICE!

HAVING removed our Store to Camp Floyd, we are desirous of settling up our outstanding accounts in this city. All persons indebted to the undersigned will please call on Mr. Thomas Adams, who is authorized to collect the bills now in his hands.

The undersigned can be found at the office of the "Valley Tan," during business hours. Prompt settlements are solicited.

(48-17) THOMAS ADAMS.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HOBBS & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to the market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spices, alum, confectionery, macaroni, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, ginger, nutmeg, mustard, oysters, saucers of every kind, brandy, fruit, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stoves, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmings and cloves, pickles, sugar of lemon, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City; and every thing alike, not one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market.

Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen.

HOBBS & DICKSON.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the City.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine.

DYER, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by

DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale by

DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE

to sell or exchange for Country Produce.

DYER, BRO. & CO.

CHEAP GOODS.

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

GEO. CRONIN & Co., two doors north of G. A. Perry & Co.'s store, have purchased the stock of Groceries of Shrader & Funk, and are offering them at wholesale and retail, at very reduced prices. Call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

40-17

FOR SALE.

Yoke Work Cattle,

25 WAGONS,

15 MULES,

SHRADER & FUNK,

at the store of Geo. Cronin.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

Dyer, Bro. & Co. at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business.

R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us.

33-17

GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;

—ALSO—

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,

AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd,

Fort Bridger, Fairfield, and

Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

37-17

THE co-partnership heretofore existing under the name and style of Williams & Jackson, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by M. Jackson.

THOS. S. WILLIAMS,
PARMENIO A. JACKMAN.

T the Traveling Public.
STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS
NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a. m., and arriving at 2 p. m.

He has now four changes of horses on the road, and good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All pack goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

PARMENIO A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,
Fresh Bread
Crackers,
Cakes,

Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS,

CONFECTIONERY,

SODA WATER, &

SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS,

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath..... 75 cents.

Five Baths..... $3 00

Ten do..... $5 00

37-3m

E. REESE.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the

States every Friday morning for St. Joseph, Mo.,

and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175.

Meals furnished at the different stations at REASON-

ABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage.

For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt

Lake City.

CITY BREWERY.

MR W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully

calls the attention of the public to his

eating room, recently fitted up in connection

with his establishment, and having added

to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt

mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments.

h34tf

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd,

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and

18th of August, the largest Stock, and best selection

of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale

in this market; and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, guaranteeing themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates.

33-3m

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

GERARD B. ALLEN.

OLIVER B. FILEY

FULTON IRON WORKS,

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet Iron

Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard

Screw and Brass and Iron Castings of every description,

Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

30-17

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods,

Liquors,

Hats & Caps,

Boots & Shoes,

Clothing

Hardware,

Outfitting Goods,

Harness,

Saddles,

& Bridles,

Which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

—ALSO—

75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN

MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one and a half SEWING MACHINE; one fine STALLION. For sale by [35-17]

C. A. PERRY & CO.

Hockaday & Burr,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
MERCHANTS,
Have opened in their
NEW STORE ROOMS,
ON MAIN STREET,
A large Assortment of
MERCHANDISE,
Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 34-17.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS,
CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
IMPORTING
AND
WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,
Wholesale Importing Druggists,
DEALERS IN
DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRU-
MENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles,
Paints, Oils, Brushes,
Camphene, Lamp,
Machine and pure Lard Oil,
Hops, Breweries Materials, &c.
139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.
WE are Agents for California for
the following valuable preparations:

Jaynes' Alternative, Expurgator, Hair Tonic Vermifuge
and Pills
Sander's Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Pebrifuge, Clove Anodyne, and Roman Eye Balsam;
Dr. Moffat's Pills and Bitters;
Ayer's Pectoral and Pills;
Wistar's Balsam Wild Cherry;
Green's Oxygenated Bitters;
All of which we offer for sale at very near New York
prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.
WE are agents for the celebrated
Perfumery House of Jules Hugel & Co., Pail-delphes, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS!
WE are now receiving a fine lot of 1858 hops, to which we invite the attention of Brewers.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.
THERE is no longer any doubt
about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr.
Marsh's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and
valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.
WE have just received per clipper
Interpre, from New York, a large stock of choice Paints and Oils; consisting in part of superior
Boiled and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Paris Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermillion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue,
Cerulean, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Couch Varnish, Japan,
Furniture and Damar Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyke
Brown, &c., &c., for sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.
WE have on hand a large assortment
of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.
FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for
sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, No. 139 J Street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.
ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at
the lowest market rates, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.
PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power &
Wightman, Philadelphia:

400 bottles Strichnina;
75 ounces Nitric Silver, pure;
25 ounces Sulphate Morphine;
100 ounces Iodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.

ALSO

200 ounces Quinine;

75 pounds Iodine Potassium;

80 pounds Chloroform;

750 pounds Spis Nitric, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric

Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J Street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.
JUST received from New York—100;
000 superior Soda Corks, 50,000 superior Wine
Corks; 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes; Beer Keg
Corks, &c., for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1. GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1859.

NUMBER 44.

How the Lawyers got a Patron Saint.

A Legend of Bretagne.

BY JOHN G. SAYS.

A lawyer of Brittany, once on a time, When business was flagging at home, Was sent as a legate to Italy's clime, To confer with the Father at Rome.

And what was the message the minister brought? To the Pope he preferred a complaint That each other profession a Patron had got, While the lawyers had never a Saint!

"Very true," said his Holiness, smiling to find An attorney so civil and pleasant— "But my very last Saint is already assigned, And I can't make a new one at present."

To choose from the Bar it were fittest, I think; Perhaps you've a man in your eye?— And his holiness here gave a mischievous wink To a Cardinal sitting near by.

But the lawyer replied, in a lawyer-like way, "I know what is modest, I hope; I didn't come hither, allow me to say, To proffer advice to the Pope!"

"Very well," said his Holiness, "then we will do The best that may fairly be done; It don't seem exactly the thing, it is true, That the Law should be Saint-less alone!"

To treat your profession as well as I can, And leave you no cause of complaint, I propose as the only quite feasible plan, To give you a second-hand Saint.

To the neighboring church you will presently go, And this is the plan I advise: First say a few acres—a hundred or so— Then, carefully bandage your eyes.

Then (saying more arse) go groping around, And, touching one object alone, The Saint you are seeking will quickly be found, For the first that you touch is your own."

The lawyer did as his Holiness said, Without an omission or flaw; Then, taking the bandage off from his head, What do you think he saw?

There was St. Michael (figured in paint) Subduing the Father of Evil; And the lawyer, exclaiming, "Be thou our Saint!" Was touching the form of the Devil!

From the New York Tribune.

An Overland Journey—The Plains—The Mountains.

DENVER, June 18, 1859.

I know few greater contrasts than that between the region which stretches hundreds of miles eastward from this spot toward the Missouri, and is known as The Plains, and that which overlooks us on the West, and like by its abrupt and sharp-ridged foot, hills seeming just at hand, and its glittering peaks of snow in the blue distance, vindicates its current designation, The Mountains. Let us elucidate:

The Plains are nearly destitute of human inhabitants. Aside from the Buffalo range—which has been steadily narrowing ever since Daniel Boone made his home in Kentucky, and is now hardly two hundred miles wide—it affords little sustenance and less shelter to man. The Antelope are seldom seen in herds—three is the highest number I observed together, while one, or at most two, is more common. One to each mile square would be a large estimate for all that exists on the Plains. Elk are scarcely seen at all, even where they have hardly ever been hunted or scared. Of deer, there are none, or next to none. For the plains are the favorite haunt of beasts and birds of prey—the ravenous and fearless gray wolf, of the coyote, the raven or hawk—the first hanging on the flanks of every great herd of buffalo, ready to waylay any foolish calf or heedless heifer that may chance to stray for water or fresher grass beyond the protection of the hard-headed and chivalrous patriarchs, behind whose vigilant ranks there is comparative safety, and counting as their property any bull, even, whom wounds or disease or decrepitude shall compel to fall behind in the perpetual march. For, while a stray buffalo, or two, or three, may linger in some lonely valley for months—for all winter, perhaps—the great herds which blacken the earth for miles in extent cannot, afford to do so—they are so immensely numerous and find their safety in traveling so compactly that they must keep moving or starve. Avoiding, so far as possible, the wooded ravines of the slender water-courses, where experience has taught them to dread the lance-like arrow of the lurking Indian, they keep to the high "divides," or only feed in the valleys, while they have these well covered by sentinel bulls to give warning of any foe's approach. Take away the Buffalo and the Plains will be desolate far beyond their present desolation; and I cannot but regard with sadness the inevitable and not distant fate of these noble and harmless brutes, already crowded into a band of country too narrow row for them, and continually hunted, slaughtered, decimated, by the wolf, the Indian, and the White man. They could have stood their ground against all in the absence of firearms, but "villainous salt-petre" is too much for them. They are bound to perish; I trust it may be rather by sudden shot than by slow starvation.

Wood and Water—the prime necessities of the traveler as of the settler—are in adequate though not abundant supply for a hundred miles and more on this—as they are throughout on the other side of the Buffalo range; a length they gradually fail, and we are in a desert indeed. No spring, no brook, for a distance of thirty to sixty miles (which would be stretched to more than a hundred if the few tracks called roads were not at all run so as to secure water as far as possible)—rivers which have each had fifty to a hundred miles of its course gradually parched up by force of sun and wind and its waters lost in their own sands, so that the weary, dusty traveler vainly digs for hours in their dry beds in quest of water for his thirsty cattle—rivers which dare not rise again till some friendly brook, having its source in some especially favored region, pours in its small but steady tribute, moistens the sands of the river bed, and encourages its waters to rise to the surface again. In one case, an emigrant assures me that he dug down to the bed rock of one of these rivers, yet found all dry sand.

I know not that I can satisfactorily account even to myself, for the destitution of wood which the plains everywhere present, especially the western half of them. The poverty of the soil will not suffice, for these lands, when sufficiently moistened by rain or thawing snow-drifts, produce grass, and are not so sterile as the rocky hills, the pebbly knolls, of New England, which nevertheless produce wood rapidly and abundantly. On the prairies of Illinois, Missouri and civilized Kansas, the absence of wood is readily accounted for by the annual fires which in autumn or spring, sweep over nearly every acre of dead grass, killing every tree-sprout that may have started up from the timber in the adjacent ravine beneath the matted grass. But here are thousands of acres too poorly grassed to be swept by the annual fires—on which the thinly scattered reed stalks and bunch grass of last year abide dryly in the fierce night winds—yet not a tree nor shrub relieves the tawny expanse; the desolation of thousands after thousands of acres, not a twig, a acorn, gives promise of trees that are to be. For a time the narrow ravine or lowest intervals of the frequent streams were fairly timbered with Cottonwood and low, sprawling Elm, with a very little Oak or White Ash at long intervals intermixed; but these grew gradually thinner and feeble until nothing but a few small Cottonwoods remained, and these skulking behind bluffs or in sheltered hollows at intervals of twenty to forty miles. Once in ten or twenty miles a bunch of dwarf willows, perhaps two feet high, would be found, cowering in some petty basin washed out by a current of water many years ago; but these, like the Cottonwoods, are happy if able to hold their own; indeed, I have seen much evidence that wood was more abundant on the Plains a hundred years ago than it now is. Dead Cottonwoods of generous proportions lie in the channels of dry brooks on which no tree nor shrub now grows; and at one or more stations of the Express Company near the sink of the Republican they find dead Pine eight miles up a creek, where no live Pine has been seen for generations. I judge that the desert is steadily enlarging its borders and at the same time intensifying its barrenness.

The fierce drought that usually prevails throughout the summer, doubtless contributes to this, but I think the violent and all but constant winds evince a still more disastrous potency. High winds are of frequent, all but daily, occurrence, here, within a dozen miles of the great protecting bulwark of the Rocky Mountains, while, from a point fifty miles eastward of this, they sweep over the Plains almost constantly, and at times with resistless fury. A driver stated on our way up, with every appearance of sincerity, that he had known instances of tires being blown off from wagon wheels by the tornadoes of the Plains; and hard to swallow as that may seem, I have other and reliable assurance that, when the Missouri's camp on the Express Road was swept by a hurricane, five or six weeks ago, so that, after the wreck, but three decent wagons could be patched up out of their six; as I have already narrated, one of the wheel tires was found not only blown off, but nearly straightened out! There is almost always a good breeze at mid-day and after, on the Plains, but, should none be felt through the day, one is almost certain to spring up at sunset, and blow fiercely through the night. Thus, though hot days, or parts of days, are frequent on the Plains, I have experienced not even a moderately warm night. And thus trees are not, mainly because the winds uproot or dismember them, or so rock and wrench them while young that their roots cannot suck up even the little nourishment that this soil of baking clay resting on porous sand would faintly afford them. Thus the few shrubs that cleave the surface of the earth soon wither and die, and the broad landscape remains treeless, cheerless, and forbidden.

But the dearth of Water and Wood on the Plains is paralleled by the poverty of shrubbery and herbage. I have not seen a strawberry leaf—far from me be the presumption of looking for a berry!—since I left the Missouri three weeks ago; and the last

Blackberry bramble I observed grew on Chapman's Creek—at all events, the other side of Buffalo range. A Raspberry cane has not blossomed since these three weary weeks, nor ought else that might be hoped to bear an old-fashioned fruit, save the fair-off Blackberries aforesaid, and two or three doubtful grape vines on some creek a great way back. The Prickly Pear, very rare and very green, is the only semblance of fruit I discovered on the Plains; a dwarfish Cactus with its leaves close to the ground, the Spanish Nettle—a sort of vegetable porcupine—a profusion of wild sage, wild wormwood, and other such plants, worthless alike to man and beast; relieved by some well-gnawed grass in the richer valleys of winter water-courses (the flora usually very scanty and always coarse and poor)—such are my reflections of the 300 miles or so that separate the present Buffalo range from the creeks that carry snow water to the Platte and the Pines that herald our approach to the Rocky Mountains. And now all changes, but slowly, gradually. The Cactus, the Spanish Nettle, the Prickly Pear continue, even into, and upon the mountains, but the Pines, though stunted and at first scattered, give variety, softness and beauty to the landscape, which becomes more rolling, with deeper and more frequent valleys, and water in nearly all of them; the cotton woods along the stream no longer skulk behind bluffs or hide in casual hollows; you may build an honest camp-fire without fear of robbing an embryo county of the last stick of wood, and water your mules generously without drying up some long, pretentious river, and condemning those who come after you to weary, thirsty marches through night and day. The cotton-woods, as you near the wind-swept range of protecting heights, which rise rank above rank; to the westward, the more distant still white-robed with snow, grow large and stately—some of them sixty to seventy feet high, and at least three feet in diameter; the underwood soil ceases to be desert and becomes prairie on a wave; but still in the main a sandy, thinly-grassed region, which cannot compare with the prairies of Illinois, of Iowa, or eastern Kansas. There seems to be as rich and deep soil in some of the creek bottoms, especially those of the South Platte, as almost anywhere; and yet I fear the husbandman is doomed to find even this belt of grassed, and moderately rolling land, which stretches along the foot of the mountains to a width of perhaps twenty miles, less tractable and productive than fertile. It lies at such an elevation—from 5,000 to 6,000 feet above the ocean level, that, though its winters are said to be moderate, its Springs cannot be early. There was a fall of a foot of snow in this region on the 26th of May, when ice formed to a quarter inch thickness on the Plains; and when Summer suddenly sets in, about the 1st of June, there are hot suns by day, and cool strong winds by night, with a surfeit of petty thunder, squalls, but little or no rain. The gentle rain of last Thursday in the Mountains fell, for a short time, in sheets just at their feet—say for a breadth of five miles—and then ceased. Hardly a drop fell within five miles west; or for any distance east of this place, though the earth was soaked ten miles west of this. Hence the enterprising few who have commenced farms and gardens near this point tell me that their crops have made no progress for a week or two, and can make none till they have rain. I trust Wheat and Rye will do well here whenever they shall be allowed a fair chance. Barley and oats, if sowed very early on deeply-plowed land, may do tolerably; but corn, though it comes up well and looks rank at present, will hardly ripen before frost, even should it escape paralysis by drought; while potatoes, peas, and most vegetables will probably require irrigation, or yield but sparingly. Yet, should the gold mines justify their present promise, farming, in the right localities at the base of these mountains, even by the help of irrigation, will yield, to those who bring to it the requisite sagacity, knowledge and capital, richer rewards than elsewhere on earth. Everything that can be grown here will command treble or quadruple prices for years; and he who produces anything calculated to diversify and improve the gross, mountainous diet of salt pork, hot bread, beans and coffee, now necessarily all but universal in this region, will be justly entitled to rank with public benefactors.

And the Rocky Mountains, with their grand, aromatic forests, their grassy glades, their frequent springs and dancing streams of the brightest, sweetest water, their pure, elastic atmosphere, and their unequalled game and fish, are destined to be a favorite resort and home of civilized man. I never visited a region where fiscal life could be more surely prolonged or fully enjoyed.—Thousands who rush hither for gold will rush away again disappointed and disgusted, as thousands have already done; yet the gold is in these mountains, and the right men will gradually unearth it. I shall be mistaken if two or three millions are not taken out this year, and some ten millions in 1860, though all the time there will be, as now, a stream of rash adventurers heading away from the diggings, declaring that there is no gold there, or next to none. So it was in California and in Australia; so it must be here, where the obstacles to be overcome are greater, and the facilities for getting home decidedly better. All men are not fitted by nature for gold diggers; yet thousands will not realize this till they have been convinced by sore experience. Any good phenologist should have been able to tell half the people who rushed here so madly during the last two months that, if these Mountains had been half made of gold, they never would get any of it except by minding their own proper business, which was quite other than mining. And still the long procession is crossing the Platte and Clear Creek, and pressing up the "Hill Difficulty," in mad pursuit of Gold, of which not one fifth will carry back to the States so much as they brought away. New leads will doubtless be discovered, new veins be opened, new "diggings" or districts become the rage—for it were absurd to suppose that little ravine known as Gregory's, running to Clear Creek, the sole depository of gold worth working in all this region—and in time the Rocky Mountains will swarm with a hardy, industrious, energetic white population. Not Gold alone, but Lead, Iron, and (I think) Silver or Cobalt, have already been discovered here, and other valuable minerals doubtless will be as the mountains are more thoroughly explored—for as yet they have not been even run over. Those who are now intent on the immediate organization and admission of a new State may be too fast, yet I believe the Rocky Mountains and their immediate vicinity—say between Fort Laramie on the north and Taos on the South—will within three years have a white population of One Hundred Thousand, one half composed of men in the full vigor of their prime, separated by deserts and waste places from the present States—obliged to rely on their own resources in any emergency, and fully able to protect and govern themselves. Why not let them be a State as soon as reasonably may be.

Mining is a pursuit akin to Fishing and Hunting, and like them, enriches the few at the cost of the many. This region is doubtless preordained to many changes of fortune; to-day, giddy with the intoxication of success, to-morrow, in the valley of humiliation. One day, report will be made on the Missouri by a party of disappointed gold-seekers that the "Rocky Mountain humbug" has exploded and everybody is fleeing to the States who can possibly get away; the next report will represent these diggings as yellow with gold. Neither will be true; yet each in its turn will have a certain thin substratum of fact for its justification. Each season will see its thousands turn away disappointed, only to give place to other thousands, sanguine and eager as if none had ever faded. Yet I feel a strong conviction that each succeeding month's researches will enlarge the field of mining operations and diminish the difficulties and impediments which now stretch across the gold-seeker's path, and that ten years hence, we shall be just beginning fairly to appreciate and enjoy the treasures now buried in the Rocky Mountains. H. G.

From the Missouri Republican.

Reliable Letter from Pike's Peak.

It is Sunday morn, July 3d, and as I promised to write you when I got in the mines, and my religious principles forbid my working to-day, I thought the best way of employing my time would be in writing home. We made the trip handsomely in fifty days, all our party fat and saucy, and in good spirits: I have just returned from a prospecting tour up in the mountains; have visited Gregory's, Russell's, Jackson's, the Illinois, Chicago, Buckeye and Spanish diggings. They are all paying to those that work. You have doubtless heard of some big licks being made out here; parts true, and parts not; the largest day's work that ever was made in any of the mines was $500, to four men, with a sluice, that never but one day. There are some, however, that have claims and are working them, that are averaging $10 per day to the man. The whole country here for miles is staked off in claims, 50 by 100 feet.

The general opinion here is that there is plenty of gold, but have not the facilities for working. There have been some rich quartz leads struck, but as there are no mills for grinding it up, they can of course do nothing with them. Besides that, the water is giving out, with the exceptions of the claims on Clear Creek. There are six of us in company. We have six claims in the Spanish diggings for which we have refused $10,000, one half down, the other as it comes out. There are three claims below us that cannot be bought at all; one man ran a sluice one hour and cleaned out $8, but he took that out of the lead and did not wash anything but big paying dirt.

Now for the way most of the emigrants become discouraged. They come to Denver City at the month of Cherry. One company of twenty-one persons came in the other day, one of whom picked up a handful of sand, and, washing it out did not get anything of course. "There," said he, "I told you so; there is no gold here;" and in less than one hour nineteen out of the twenty-one were on their way home. There are thousands of persons come out here with the expectation of shoveling it up the same as they would dirt or coal, and when they find out their error, they become discouraged and break for the States again. We met about two thousand teams on their return when we were coming out. For two days ours was the only wagon going West, while there were at least 300 each day returning to the States. It was rather discouraging, I assure you, but we had started, and were determined to "put her through," which we have done, and all are very well pleased with our prospects.

Now for the prospects of a city in the Rocky Mountains. Denver City is situated at the mouth of Cherry Creek, or very near it. There are about one hundred houses, two-thirds of which are vacant and half finished. Auraria, directly opposite Denver City, contains about fifty houses. Arrapahoe, situated in the prairie, is a place of little importance, and never will amount to much. Golden City comes next. This place, I think, is going to be the principal business point in this part of the country. It is yet in its infancy, but there will be one hundred houses put up this fall. Our company have two lots, and intend putting up a house on each immediately. It is situated fourteen miles from Denver, on Clear Creek, and about one mile from the foot of the mountain, and has every show of making a good-sized inland town. There is still another place up in the mountains, named Mountain City, which cannot succeed in amounting to much, owing to the difficulty in getting freight to it, six hundred pounds being a full load for the best of teams. Its principal articles of trade—whisky, cards and tobacco—are carried up on pack mules.

There was considerable excitement created here last week, caused by the Indians killing a couple of whites. A party of three went out prospecting up the Snowy Range. They met a party of five Ute Indians, who motioned them back, but paying no attention to them they pushed ahead and camped in a gulch. Next morning they started out each in a different direction, when they were fired upon by Indians from behind the rocks; two out of the three fell mortally wounded, the other made his escape by hiding in a cave until dark. It was doubtless the intention to kill all of them as has been the case heretofore. Several parties have gone out into the mountains and never have been heard of since—others have started and been sent back by the Indians. Yesterday morning a party of 75 or 100 men started out in pursuit of them, which is certainly the height of folly, for what could a few men but poorly armed do against a tribe of 12,000 or 15,000 warriors—a tribe that holds all other tribes around here under their thumb, besides being armed right up to the notch, and having perfect knowledge of the country; anybody with common sense could see it was only, or worse than insanity, to attempt such a thing.

There is, without a doubt, some very rich deposits up on Snake River at the head waters of the Colorado, as some of the Indians have brought some very fine specimens down and traded off for goods, but it is evidently their intention to keep it themselves, as Kit Carson is their leader and they worship him as a God.

The Salt Lake Mail.

Greeley, writing from the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains, says:

A word on the Salt Lake Mail. Of the seventeen bags on which I have ridden for the last four days and better, at least sixteen are filled with large bound books, mainly Patent Office Reports, I judge; but all of them undoubtedly works ordered printed at the public cost—your cost, reader!—by Congress, and now on their way to certain favored Mormons, and franked (by proxy) "Pub. Doc.—free. J. M. Bernhisel, M. C." I do not blame Mr. B. for clutching his share of this public plunder and distributing it so as to increase his own popularity and importance; but I do protest against this business of printing books by wholesale at the cost of the whole people for free distribution to a vast only. It is every way wrong and pernicious. Of the $190,000 per annum paid for carrying the Salt Lake Mail, nine-tenths is absorbed in the cost of carrying these franked documents to people who contribute little or nothing to the support of government in any way. Is this fair? Each Patent Office Report will have cost the Treasury four or five dollars by the time it reaches its destination, and will not be valued by the receiver at twenty-five cents. Why should this business go on? Why not "reform it altogether?" Let Congress print whatever documents are needed for its own information, and leave the people to choose and buy for themselves. I have spent four days and five nights in close contact with the sharp edges of Mr. Bernhisel's "Pub. Doc."—have done my very utmost to make them present a smooth, or at least endurable surface; and I am sure there is no slumber to be extracted therefrom, unless by reading them—a desperate resort which no rational person would recommend. For all practical purposes they might as well—now that the printer has been paid for them—be where I heartily wish they were—in the bottom of the sea.

General Houston, in a published letter, expresses the opinion that the attempt to revive the African slave trade is an attempt to bring about disunion, and that, if successful in the efforts to re-open the trade, the south would be overrun by African barbarians, and our lives, and what is worse, our homes and our families, would be subjected to their barbarities, and it would in no possible way advance our general or national prosperity.

Court Martial.

New York, Aug. 4.

The Court Martial upon Major Osborne Cross, of the United States Army, late Quarter Master at San Francisco, who is charged with misapplying and embezzling the public money, commenced in this city yesterday.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Sept. 14, 1859.

Nothing positive has been heard from the Emigrant Road, north, since our last. Several rumors have come to us to the effect that quite a number of Emigrant trains had been attacked, and destroyed; we have room to hope, however, that the accounts have been very much exaggerated.

PERSONAL.—Our Post Master, Mr. Morrell, arrived from the States, in the Mail Stage on Monday last.

At last accounts Mr. Williams, the young man shot at Provo, last week, was doing well; his wound is not a very serious one.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs for Utah, has returned to the city. He has been to the different Indian farms, south and west. He is much pleased with the crops, both as to quantity and quality. The feeling among these Indians toward the whites is amicable. He reports a scarcity of water on the route he traveled—a portion of Capt. Simpson's road.

Lord Grosvenor, of England, arrived in this city on Tuesday the 6th inst., and departed yesterday morning. He is en route for China, via Pacific Ocean. He will sojourn in California for a few months.

A huge grizzly bear was shot, we are informed, a few days since, on what is known as the West Mountain. His weight was between fourteen and fifteen hundred.

Nothing of local interest has come to our knowledge since our last.

On last Sabbath we had the pleasure of listening to the ablest and most refined sermon we have yet heard delivered by a Mormon. It was an effort of Orson Pratt, one of the Apostles of the Church. It was agreeably free from that disgusting vulgarity and senseless braggadocio which some Elders cannot preach without, and calculated to edify and instruct all.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR. EDITOR:—In your paper of the 7th instant, I noticed an editorial of the late massacre of Mr. Carpenter's train, which I perceive is incorrect. You say you "was visited last Friday by a man named Porter who had been engaged in trafficking with the Indians up to within a short time of his call upon us." This, sir, you will please correct, as I did not trade with the Indians, directly or indirectly, and was not there for that purpose. You further say, that "the wounded are being taken care of at the military post on Bear River, whither the entire company repaired for protection and assistance." This is incorrect. I told you I brought in with me five persons, one wounded man I left on Bear River with the army surgeon, by the name of Jacob Paulin, and the balance of the company went on with other trains to California.

Further you say, "an Indian called upon Mr. P. just before the attack and asked if the emigrants had any powder and lead, and being answered in the negative the attack immediately began."

Sir, allow me to correct you in this. I told you an Indian came in Camp and asked me if I had any powder and lead; the answer was, I had none. The question then was asked if the company then camped some half mile from my trading post were emigrants, and were answered that they were. This was about 8 o'clock on the 20th of August. Also gave me 3 days notice to leave.

[For the Valley Tan.]
CAMP FLOYD,
September 9th, 1859.

MR. EDITOR:—Our Camp has received new life since the arrival of Paymaster Hunt, U. S. Army, who dispensed the "one thing needful" to the soldiers, since when, "Valley Tan" (not making reference to the title of your Journal) has been discussed in all its various modes and forms.

The various places of amusement have also received an impetus from the repleted pockets of the soldiers.

The "Soldiers' Circus Company" have secured a canopy for their pavilion which makes the arrangement far more comfortable; and I am happy to say are steadily improving in their style of performance. In a few days they will secure some good horses, when the Equestrian department will be more interesting. Mr. Willis, the Prince of burlesques and jokers, at this camp continues to entertain the folks in his inimitable style.

Messrs. Murrill, Greiner, Paul and a host of others of the company are also good in their part of the performance.

The "Military Dramatic Association" having their building refitted and repaired, are giving entertainments to good houses nightly. The costume of the Association is complete, and the rendition of the pieces now produced on the stage are excellent and well sustained.

A detachment of soldiers discharged and furloughed, left this Camp on the 8th inst., under the command of Col. Ruggles, 6th Infantry, for Fort Leavenworth. A few days previous the command of Col. Chapman, 6th Infantry, arrived here, composed of recruits for the various regiments and corps. Col. Chapman relieved Col. Ruggles in the command of the 6th regiment of Infantry.

Should the readers of your Journal in the States see these communications, they will understand that notwithstanding we are serving in the most God-forsaken country in the habitable globe; yet with the "Soldiers' Circus," with Willis as clown, the "Military Dramatic Company," and the "Valley Tan" to drink, and the "Valley Tan" to read, we are all right.

Yours in haste,
"OBSERVER."

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

MONDAY, Sept. 12, 1859.

Court met pursuant to adjournment. Judge Sinclair presiding.

The room in the Council House, in which the Court met previous to adjournment, having been since that time occupied, Court was opened in one of the rooms of Secretary Hartnett.

In the case of Jarvis vs. Woodmance et al, on a foreign judgment, Court sustained plea of defendant, to the jurisdiction of District Court in Iowa. The case now comes up, de novo in chancery.

The same Grand Jury were recalled, and venire issued for Petit Jury, returnable on Wednesday, until which time the Court was adjourned; also to give time to find a more suitable place for the accommodation of the Court.

FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

NEXT, Aug. 26, 1859.

Case of Turnley vs. Watson, dismissed on motion of complainant.

Croaman vs. Mogo, do.

John Andrews admitted as a citizen. Deputy Sheriff Eli Whipple produced the body of Joseph Bartholomew; court ordered prisoner into the custody of the Marshal and the rule to continue against Mr. Wall, Sheriff of Utah county, for not producing prisoner.

Recess.

Court resumed at 3 p. m.

Grand Jury came into court. Roll called; two absent.

The foreman presented bills agreeing that Court should amend them in form, but not in substance.

Mr. De Wolf entered a nol. pros. on two bills of indictment presented yesterday, Nos. 11 and 12.

Court ordered subpoenas for witnesses in new cases to run.

Court adjourned till to-morrow, 8 a. m.

SATURDAY, Aug. 27, 8 a. m.

Court resumed.

McKenzie, indicted of forgery, was brought into court, and took his seat at the bar.

Prisoner's Attorney, Mr. Thompson, filed a motion to discharge his client, planting his position on the fact that the indictment against him read, "of Cedar county," whereas he never there resided.

Motion overruled.

The following is the bill of indictment vs. McKenzie down to the second count. Four counts we omit, on account of repetition and lack of space:

TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.

District Court of the United States in and for the First Judicial District, Hon. Delana A. Eckles presiding. August term, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine.

The United States of America vs.
David McKenzie.

The Grand Jurors, empanelled, charged and sworn to inquire for the United States, in and for the first Judicial District of Utah Territory, upon their oath, present, that David McKenzie, engraver, late of Cedar county, in the Territory aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of this District court, for the First Judicial District of said Territory, heretofore, to wit: on the eighth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, did feloniously and falsely make, forge and counterfeit a certain written and printed paper, in imitation of, and purporting to be a check drawn on the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, at St. Louis Missouri, which forged check is partially written and partially printed, and is in the words and figures following, viz:

"CAMP FLOYD, U. T., January 31, 1859."

No 1286.

Assistant Treasurer of the U. S., St. Louis pay to Alexander Foster or order, three hundred and sixty-seven dollars and sixty-five cents.

G. H. CROSMAN,
Deputy U. S. General.

Treasury of the U. S., $367 65."

Which said check the aforesaid David McKenzie feloniously, did falsely make, forge and counterfeit with intent to defraud the United States, and against the statute in such case made and provided.

The traverse jury having been duly sworn and empanelled, heard the full testimony, the counsel's arguments, and the clear, comprehensive instructions of the court, and after a retirement of one hour, returned with a verdict sustaining the indictment.

The court chose to defer judgment until Monday, the 29th, on account of the illness of prisoner's attorney.

MONDAY, 29th a. m.

Motions called for.

Mr. Thompson moved that in the case of McKenzie, the verdict be set aside and a new trial ordered. The ground of the motion being that "during the trial the jury had scattered, and one juror had singly been in custody of an unworn officer. Also the prosecuting attorney had, in an unlawful manner, communicated with the jury."

The court ordered affidavit made of the facts set forth.

Mr. Thompson moved that in the case of C. A. Perry & Co. vs. McNeil and Gemmel a scire facias be issued to compel the heirs of McNeil (deceased) to appear in cause.

Mr. DeWolf moved a discharge of recognizances of all witnesses in the case of the People vs. McKenzie, which discharges were entered by order of the court.

Edward Oakley and Mr. Findlay were made citizens of the United States.

2 p. m.

Thomas Midgley sen. and Jonathan Midgley were admitted as citizens of the United States.

Mr. Thompson renewed motion "that the verdict be set aside in the case of the people of the United States vs. McKenzie."

Mr. Thompson filed affidavits of Mr. W. Wallace, on "separation of jurymen," during the trial, etc., of Mr. J. Bigler and Marshall Kirk on "jury being in charge of an unworn officer," and "irregular communication of Prosecuting Attorney with the jury," etc.

Motion argued and overruled by the court.

Sentence pronounced as follows:

"It is therefore considered, that, for the offence for which you have been found guilty, you be imprisoned at hard labor in the Penitentiary of this Territory, for the term of two years, and make your fine to the United States, in the sum of $50 00, and that you pay the costs of this prosecution, taxed at — dollars and — cents; and I order that the Marshal for the Territory carry this judgment into execution, with as little delay as practicable, by delivering, into the custody of the keeper of the Penitentiary, the said David McKenzie, there to be by him kept and detained for the period aforesaid, and that the plaintiff have execution for the fine and costs assessed."

R. Ballantyne was made a citizen of the United States.

Traverse jury were discharged from further attendance on the court during the present term.

The grand jury were brought into court, and in like manner discharged.

The court ordered that witnesses already under recognizance should renew them to appear at next term of court.

Court adjourned till to-morrow, 7 a. m.

TUESDAY, Aug. 30, 8 a. m.

The recognizance of L. Wood was discharged.

The judge announced that as the grand jury had been discharged, he would now sit as "committing magistrate" to examine witnesses.

He then proceeded to examine witnesses during the day and adjourned to Friday, Sept. 2, at 8 a. m.

CINCINNATI, August 11.

At one o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the wholesale liquor establishment of S. S. Boyle & Co., which was entirely destroyed; loss about $100,000, insured for $50,000. The fire extended to the warehouse of S. N. Pike, wholesale liquor dealer, which was partially destroyed, loss $30,000, insured $10,000, and to Crane & Breed's manufactory of metallic burial cases, loss about $40,000.

Our reporter furnishes us with an abstract of Kimball's sermon, at the Tabernacle. He can hardly be accused of taking any of "the music" out of it.

ABSTRACT OF

Remarks Made by Elder Heber C. Kimball, at the Tabernacle, Sunday Afternoon, September 11, 1859.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS.—I sometimes lay on my bed in the very greatest of sorrow, considering what is in store for this people. I tell you that you may look for a famine immediately. I have talked about this to you time and again, but you don't believe it. Brigham Young has talked to you till he is ashamed to say anything more about the matter. Let your fineries go down to hell where they belong; and they who wear them are going to hell with them sooner or later. Are you women any better than me? Who are you that you can't wear a good pair of calf skin shoes. I wore calf skin shoes when I first came to these valleys. Do without your fine bonnets and ribbons and shoes. Don't coax your husbands to sell the last bushel of grain, to feed them on who want to cut your throats, and when we will soon be plunged into a famine. Have I or Brigham Young sold our wheat? No, not a grain, and I assure you that if Brigham would be offered $10,000 per bushel for his wheat to-morrow, that he wouldn't sell a peck of it. The army with all of its followers, the whole amounting to about 6,000 men, must be fed. They must eat. Let them get their flour from the States. You have no wheat to spare, especially to them who want to kill you. Your wheat will whip the world yet. Nations will flee to us to escape starvation. Our wheat will whip them a great deal worse than we whipped the United States government two years ago, and we whipped the soldiers without losing a man. We just stopped them out on the road here a piece and kept them there till they got cooled off. Wonder if there is a Lawyer here? If there is I would like to know if I have committed treason; I was just going to pull my coat off and go into it in earnest—and I would if I hadn't a calico shirt on. Don't get mad friends, because we whipped the United States—you can't blame us for it. They were coming to burn our houses, kill the men, and ravish the women. Well, we just stopped them till they got cooled off, and when they got tame and quiet we let them come in, and didn't loose a man—I believe a horse was shot in the hoof. We will let them stay here as long as they behave themselves; but they must understand that the United States government and all hell combined can't drive us from the tops of these mountains. I know you would say, "hold on Mr. Kimball, you'd better hold your tongue." Well, I will—when I please.

The United States will have to answer for the blood of the Prophets and of the Saints. Earthquakes, famines, volcanoes, bloodshed and hideous pestilences will visit them from one end of the country to the other. Then will the American people prostrate themselves before the independent Saints of Deseret, and beg for food and protection; then will the nations of the earth bow themselves down to our prophets, and in humiliation ask from our hands deliverance. They will then be as meek and humble as the soldiers were when they came. They hung their heads and looked like sheep-stealing dogs. May be some of you don't like this language. If you don't like it, you can lump it, and if you don't want to lump it, turn it over and thump it, for all I care. I won't gain any friends by this talk, will I? I will gain the friendship of every good woman and man in this house, and of my Father and Angels in Heaven.

Are these Federal officers here our masters? No they are not. Brother Bernhisel, where are you? [Looking around, and seeing Bro. Bernhisel had evacuated, the speaker commanded in a tone of authority, "Come in here, Bro. Bernhisel, out of that vestry.—You always run when I get at it. Did we send you to Congress, Bro. Bernhisel, as our master, or as our servant?"]

Bro. Bernhisel.—As your servant. That's what these Federal officers are sent here for, to wait upon us, to be our servants; and if they had done their duty they would have hung forty before this time for committing treason against Deseret—for violating the laws of this Territory. When we go to the States we obey their laws, and when they come here they ought to obey our laws. They ought to go to the polls and vote for the man who we want to elect to office. They ought to do as Romans do when they are among Romans. But do they do it? No, they are traitors to Deseret.

When we were in the States they murdered us, and rejoiced over it. Now, the time has come when they will have to gnaw the file. When we were in Missouri, old

Tom Benton said, 'Give the Mormons hell.' Old Tom Benton is now snuffing sulphur in hell, where he ought to be. [Tremendous yelling of Amen.]

Well, what are you going to make of it?—Can you help it? No, you can't. It will be just as God wants it to be. He holds us all as clay in the hands of the potter.

Now, I want you to give me a right lively tune.—Amen. [Amen throughout the congregation.]

Washington Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.

WASHINGTON, July 14, 1859.

The entire Black Republican press of the North have seized upon a late letter of your "Camp Floyd" correspondent to reiterate the charges therein contained against the present distinguished Secretary of War, who it seems is to be the peculiar mark for attack by the Opposition. Your correspondent at Camp Floyd wrote under an evident misconception of all the facts surrounding the "flour contract," as he is pleased to term it; and in justice to Secretary Floyd, I beg briefly to give you the true version of this "monstrous fraud" upon the public treasury.

At the commencement of operations against the Mormons, a contract was entered into with Messrs. Russell, Majors & Waddell for the transportation of all the subsistence and other supplies needed for the army in Utah. It was stipulated that such a price per pound should be paid them, and on receiving notice that the Government required subsistence to be forwarded, these parties should make immediate provision for the transportation of the same. If, after preparations were made, the Government failed to furnish the amount of transportation mentioned in notice, then the contractors were to be indemnified against all loss, by the Government taking off their hands, at cost, all the stock, wagons, &c., provided for the train or trains.

It was well ascertained that flour purchased at St. Louis by the Government and forwarded to Utah, became more or less injured and a great part of it was totally unfit for use by either man or beast. The humid atmosphere in the month of April, at which time the trains had to leave, not only soured the flour but caused it to bake and become unfit even for the animals, and it then became a question of serious importance with the Government how the difficulty could be overcome. Notice had been given the contractors to prepare for transporting 835,000 lbs. of flour, and they had incurred an outlay of $135,000. To buy the flour in St. Louis and transport it would certainly involve the loss of a large portion spoiled. While considering this state of facts, the contractors, Messrs. Russell, Majors & Waddell, voluntarily came forward with a proposition to furnish flour and deliver in camp at their own risk; provided the Government would allow the same compensation to which they were entitled under the existing contract. They would oblige themselves to deliver a fresh, sweet and merchantable superfine article, subject to inspection on delivery at the garison at St. Louis prices, with the cost of transportation under present contracts added.

The proposition was submitted to Quartermaster General Jesup, who came to the following conclusion, as endorsed on the papers:

"When troops are in the field they should be supplied by means of Government trains, but when posts have been established permanently, their Garrisons should be supplied with subsistence and all other articles readily damaged by the weather, by contract for the season, as a contractor who is at the risk himself will furnish a better article. By the measures proposed, the public will save at least the loss of all damaged supplies, as well as the transportation on them. April 8, 1859."

Such was the recommendation of General Jesup, an officer whose escutcheon has never been tarnished by the breath of suspicion during an official life of half a century. Not only did Russell, Majors & Waddell release the Government by the proposed change in their contract, from all liability for indemnity already amounting to $135,000, but in the opinion of General Jesup, the Government would actually save the heavy losses resulting from damaged supplies; as well as the heavy transportation on the same.

Such was the state of the case when it came before Secretary Floyd for his official action on the 23d of the same month (April). It was not an ordinary case of letting out a contract for flour as was supposed by your Camp Floyd correspondent. It was rather an attempt to compromise a hard bargain with those who already held the contract for transportation, and who had the Government in their power. The difficulty in the mind of the War Department was, as I have already stated, an uncertainty in securing wholesome supplies for our troops in Utah, and to ascertain by what means this uncertainty could be avoided. The proposition of Messrs. Russell, Majors & Waddell, seemed to meet the difficulty fully, and Secretary Floyd in approving General Jesup's recommendation, says:

"As this proposition will result in a certain and large saving to the United States, to wit: the amount of all damages to flour and the price of transportation on the stores damaged, the proposition is accepted. April 23, 1859."

Such are the plain facts involved in this grand flour "speculation" in which it was charged that Secretary Floyd would realize $100,000. No candid reader can do otherwise than laugh at the folly of such a charge against the distinguished head of the War Department. It was perhaps a work of supererogation to defend him against it, but your correspondent deemed it due to the cause of truth, to possess himself of all the facts and to place them succinctly before his readers. The records of the "Quarter Master General's Office" are responsible for the above statement. It is due to Governor Floyd, who is now absent, to say I have not spoken to him on the subject of these charges against his official action.

The Pilgrim Monument.

the lantern could be kept burning under water for three hours. The same principles which govern at a depth of sixteen feet, will prove equally successful at a depth of 90 or 130 feet. This lantern, in connexion with a submarine armor, is destined to open up a new field of enterprise in submarine explorations for lost treasures."

WM. A. HICKMAN,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW,
Will practice in all the Courts in this Territory.
OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s Store. 43-11

NOTICE.
ANOTHER SALE OF PUBLIC
MULS, WAGONS AND HARNESSES.

ON TUESDAY, 20th instant, will be sold, at Public Auction, at Camp Floyd, U. T., to the highest bidder. for Specie or Government Funds, about 400 excellent
Draft & Saddle Mules;
and also a number of Wagons, together with Harness
for the same complete.

The mules are all young, sound, and thoroughly broken on, and in good condition; and the Wagons and Harness are in complete repair, with all the equipments for immediate service.
 The sale will commence on the day above mentioned in lots of one or more, and will continue from day to day till all are sold.

G. H. CROSMAN,
 Deputy Q'r. M'r. Gen'l U. S. A.

Comp. Execd. 24 Sept. 1858. 43-2t

George Cronyn & Co.
HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Eldridge & Co., consisting of
DRY GOODS,
GROCERIES,
HARDWARE, &c.,
 beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at 101, Strand.

George Cronyn's Old Stand,
near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail.
The public they have put prices at a low rate. You are invited to call and examine.
The stock consists in part of
STAPLE DRY GOODS,
Groceries, Hardware.

*Oils, Turpentine,
Alcohol,
Window Glass,
Hay and Manure Forks,
Shovels, Spades,
Scythes and Snaths,
Cotton Yarn,*

Dye-Staff, &c.
Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of all kinds received. [1-11]

WHOLESALE DRY-GOODS
BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.
TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,
Corner of Front and Sacramento streets
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention
of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory
and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Woolen & Staple Dry Goods

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, is a great advantage, and such prices as will enable draw us to other goods we had to draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer a full assortment of

Brown sheeting
Bleached do
Merrimack Prints
Blue Demims

de-	shirtings	" drills
Ha-	Brown do	White & cold blk
r im-	Hickory stripes	Canton flannels
a for	Plaid linsey woolsey	Woolen do
de-	Kentucky jeans	Quilts & comforta
s and	Bed ticking	Alpacas and mer
	Delaines & cashmires	Spun yarn
		Sewing thread

will ne is—
ED.—
records

Linens	diapers & towels	Sewing thread
"	napkins	Curtain damasks
"	table cloths	Satinett & cassimere
Craash.	toweling and doylies	Cottonades and stuffs
Ginghams	and lawns.	Carpets and oil cloth
White linen	bosom shirts	Apron checks
Colored calico	do	Heavy duck (a)

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains a full assortment of the Newest patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks,

such as
Bk and fancy dress
silks
Plain all wool delaines
Fancy do
Alexander's kid gloves
Bay state long shawls
Embroidered set collars and sh window cur edgings an sections linen hand
Plain linen comb

Stella and Marino Co
 Delaines in dress patterns
 White cambric muslin
 Jacksonets
 Swiss
 Mull & Namssoka
 Plaid Jacket muslins

light Plaid cashmere for children
Also Buck gloves and gauntlets n so as Lace mits and gloves objects. Dress lawns and bargee six feet Plain colored silk Ribbons
g sunk Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY
Is the largest and best assorted on this coast, a prices all the various manufactures, styles and ties imported from Europe, together with Am manufactures. Orders promptly filled.
TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, 300 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the England Worsted Company's Goods.

FOR SALE,
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots
to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.
CHARLES HOGG.

THE VALLEY TANT.

THOMAS ADAMS, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1859.

NUMBER 45.

HEAD QUARTERS, DEPARTMENT OF UTAH.
Camp Floyd, U. T., September 9th, 1859.

GENERAL ORDERS.

No. 21.

By direction of the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, the following lands, indicated on the maps of the surveys at CAMP FLOYD and FORT BRIDGER, are set apart and reserved for military purposes:

I. . . At CAMP FLOYD: The entire of Cedar Valley to the highest crests of the limiting mountains and hills, exclusive of the two settlements Cedar Fort and Fairfield, the cultivated fields pertaining to them, and, at the former, the grazing grounds west of the acequia, and extending two miles south and east of the settlement.

II. . . At FORT BRIDGER: The lands bounded as follows, viz: Commencing at a point five miles due north of the north-east corner of Fort Bridger, running thence due west seven miles, thence due south twenty-five miles, thence due east twenty miles, thence due north twenty-five miles, and thence back to the point of departure.

III. . . On SULPHUR CREEK OF BEAR RIVER: About twenty-six miles from Fort Bridger, a tract embracing one hundred acres, containing coal, and comprised between the Creek on the west, and lines on the north, east and south, passing through points marked respectively, M. R. No. 1, 4, 3, and 2.

These reserves are placed: The 1st under the immediate control of the Post Commander, the 2d and 3d under that of the Commander of Fort Bridger, and will be governed by such regulations as they may establish subject to the approval of the Department Commander.

By ORDER OF BREVET BRIGADIER GENERAL JOHNSTON:
F. J. PORTER,
Ass't Adj't General.

HEAD QUARTERS, CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
September 12, 1859.

GENERAL ORDERS.

No. 71.

The following directions given pursuant to

By the California Mail.

LATER FROM THE NORTH.

The brig Mary F. Slade arrived from Puget Sound, Aug. 24th, bringing copies of the Seaside Herald of the 12th inst., with later news about the state of affairs at San Juan Island. Our previous dates from Victoria were to the 6th inst.

SAN JUAN ISLAND.

A correspondent of the Victoria Gazette writes thus from San Juan under date of August 10th:

This morning the U. S. steamers Active and Shubrick, and the mail steamer Julia steamed simultaneously into the harbor. The Julia had on board an express from Gen. Harney, at Vancouver, and a portion of three companies of U. S. troops, under command of Lieut. Col. Casey, which, with some fifty tons of munitions of war, stores, &c., with two howitzers, were duly landed. The American force upon the island at present consists of Lieut. Col. Casey and his Aids; Lieut. Kellogg, of the Artillery; Lieut. Reynolds, and Lieut. Conner, Adjutant; Co. D. Capt. Pickett; Co. H. Capt. English, of the 9th; Co. A, Capt. Malony; and Co. C, Capt. Hunt, of the 4th Infantry, making in all about two hundred rank and file in occupation of the island.

I understand the instructions of Gen. Harney were to maintain the occupation of the island at all hazards.

I have no hesitation in saying that the landing of British troops, if attempted, will be considered a hostile measure and resisted. At noon H. M. S. Saltire steamed into the harbor, and shortly after, Captains Prevost and Hornby, and Commissioner Campbell, from the Shubrick, paid together an official visit to Lieut. Col. Casey. The interview was said to be of a most amicable and friendly nature, and I really cannot see how any discordant element can intervene except through such persons as will take care to prevent jeopardy of person to themselves.

The Steilacoom Herald condenses other letters from San Juan Island under date of the 8th and 9th, thus:

Notwithstanding the very frequent arrivals and departures of steamers from and to Victoria, with dispatches to the commanding officer of the Tribune, (Capt. Hornby) no definite or extreme measures have thus far been adopted; and I am pleased to learn that all intercourse between Captains Pickett and Hornby has been marked by the most courteous and gentlemanly feelings. The American officers speak in the highest terms of Capt. Hornby and his brother officers, and attribute the continued harmony to the discreet and able manner in which he has discharged the duties devolving upon him. It is generally understood that Gov. Douglas has it in his power to preserve peace or involve in war by the course which he may pursue in the premises. Capt. Pickett is, of course, acting under the orders of a superior—it is immaterial whether that superior be Gen. Harney or the Secretary of War—in the occupation of his present position, and any one who knows his character for decision and bravery, and the nature of duties as an officer, must feel that any attempt to land

"GENERAL ORDERS No. 21 Department of Utah," dated on the 9th inst., having been approved by the Commanding General of the Department, are published for the information and government of all concerned, to wit:

I. . . No wood for fuel, or timber of any description, for building any structure or inclosure, shall be cut on the Public Reservation, in this valley, except by direction of the Commanding Officer for public purposes; with the proviso, that, the actual residents of Cedar Fort and Fairfield, and the Sutlers and Citizens, permitted to reside at the Post, may cut from time to time, limited quantities of either, sufficient for their actual wants, but not for sale.

II. . . No person whatever not in the public service, or not permitted to reside at the Post, shall be permitted to squat on the public reservations in Rush Valley, or in this Valley, outside of the limits of Cedar Fort and Fairfield.

III. . . Private animals of non-residents, travelers excepted, are not permitted to graze upon the public reservations.

By ORDER OF BREVET COLONEL C. F. SMITH:
CLARENCE E. BENNETT,
2d Lieutenant & Adjutant 10th Infantry,
Post Adjutant.

AN ACT—To protect the timber growing upon Lands of the United States, reserved for military and other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress Assembled: That if any person or persons shall unlawfully cut, or aid, assist, or be employed in unlawfully cutting, or shall wantonly destroy, or procure to be wantonly destroyed, any timber standing, growing, or being upon lands of the United States, which in pursuance of any law, passed, or hereafter to be passed, have been, or shall be, reserved or purchased by the United States for military and other purposes, every such person or persons so offending, on conviction thereof before a Court having competent jurisdiction, shall for every such offence, pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, and shall be imprisoned not exceeding twelve months.

Approved, March 3d, 1859.

writing from Fort Mohave, New Mexico, Aug. 6th, states that Major Armistead left that place on the 4th, with a command of 25 men, for the "lagoon," 15 miles below the Fort; that on the next morning at about 5 o'clock he commenced reconnoitering down the left bank of the "lagoon," and had not proceeded more than a quarter of a mile, when he found himself surrounded by an immense number of warriors eager for fight. Returning to the head of the "lagoon," he took a position for action. Here he fought them for three quarters of an hour, against overwhelming numbers, which were increased every moment by the arrival of fresh warriors from the more distant places, when Lieut. Marshall arrived with a reinforcement of 25 men. The Lieut. heard the firing when yet some four miles from the scene, and hurried his men up at double quick time. The Indians upon the extreme right were taken very unexpectedly by the arrival of the party in the rear, which Lieut. Marshall immediately charged, driving them from their position.

Major Armistead, believing the Indians to have given up the fight, ordered the command to fall in, and commenced the march back to the Fort. The command had not proceeded far, when the Indians again rallied, crossed the lagoon at the position just left in great number. Major Armistead, anticipating the attack, halted the command, faced by the rear rank and deployed them on the bank of the lagoon, which was here wide and deep. The whole body of Indians came running up yelling and whooping, and charged fearlessly upon the command, the bravest of them coming up to within ten and fifteen yards of the muzzles of the rifles; these, however, paid dearly for their temerity, the steady and well directed fire of the men held them in check, when after thirty minutes hard fighting, Maj. Armistead ordered the command to charge them, which was done fearlessly. The Indians raised and broke in every direction, perfectly discomfited; not a yell or sound of any kind was to be heard from them after this; the victory was complete. It is supposed that fifty or sixty have been killed. Of the command, three men were slightly wounded. The command returned to the Fort on the evening of the 5th inst.

Correspondence of New York Times.

From the Isthmus of Panama.

See Chiriqui Gold Fields—Intense Excitement at Panama—Fresh Discoveries—Placards at Panama.

PANAMA, July 22.

Our gold excitement is intensifying. On the 20th the brig Josefa, commanded by a downeast Yankee, Capt. Patterson, sailed with a cargo of shovels, lipsores and provisions, and about fifty passengers, for Chiriqui, the grave-diggers' "El Dorado." Among the passengers were half a dozen Americans, a few English and a monte dealer. The accounts that continue to reach us of the wealth of these Indian cemeteries or "huacas" in golden images and trinkets are every day growing more wonderful. A hat has been found made of exceeding fine gold, and of great weight. Also, a "gold woman," but how large a woman is not stated. It is a little curious, seeing with what contempt the Indians generally treated the females; that they should have wasted the precious metal in fashioning one. It must have been a lovely Indian that made that figure.

Most of the passengers who took passage in the Josefa carried silver with them to purchase the gold. It is said it is sold by the poorer class of the people who are turning up the graves, at from three to four dollars per ounce. Yesterday another vessel arrived from Chiriqui with a box of the gold, but of what value I cannot ascertain. It is said that one man at the "grave diggings" has taken out 75 pounds of images, but this is probably an exaggeration.

These tombs, it appears are of great extent, some of them having contained many hundred bodies. The gold is said to be contained in earthen vessels by the side of the body. The ground where the "huacas" are is covered with trees, and it was by the falling of a large tree growing out of the top of a mound that the deposits were discovered. The roots of the tree took with them the earth and mason-work of one of the mounds, leaving the gold exposed, which was accidentally seen by a man when passing close to it. Many persons who have gone down are enthusiastic enough to believe that they shall find the source from whence all this wealth was obtained. They may do so, but it does not follow they will get much gold from it. The Indians only used the article for ornaments, and it is more than likely that they were two or three hundred years in getting together the quarter of a million dollars worth that may have been buried with their chiefs and great men in this Chiriqui sepulchre. Gold has never been found in New Granada in sufficient quantities to pay a California digger, and it is only from the fact that Indians in Choco and Antioquia can be had for a couple of dimes a day that the people of the Magdalena District are now able to export two or three millions of dollars a year.

The following is a specimen of the posters that may be seen on every street corner—
FOR THE CHIRIQUI GOLD DIGGINGS—
The fast sailing clipper-schooner Carolina, Capt. Manuel Delgado, having a large part of her freight engaged, will have immediate dispatch for David, Chiriqui. Only a limited number of passengers and small quantity of freight will be taken, for which early application must be made at the office of the undersigned. Over $200,000 worth of gold images have been taken from one "huaca," many of which images can be seen at Don Maximono Perez, who has received a king weighing 50 pounds, and a hat weighing 25 pounds, and as there are thousands of "huacas" in Chiriqui, many millions of dollars will be dug out of these Indian burial places. Over three thousand persons are now digging there with great success. For full particulars, inquire of the undersigned, at their office near the Taller.

JIMINEZ HERMANOS.

Panama July 21.
The Chiriqui Real Estate Company, of Baltimore, claim that the land on which these "huacas" are situated, are part of its grant.

F. W. R.

More Amalgamation.

A Mysterious Disappearance accounted for—Rich developments among the British Abolitionists.

The Detroit Free Press relates the particulars of a most disgraceful case of amalgamation, elopement and exposure that we have heard of for many a day. It occurred opposite that city on the Canada side. The wife of Mr. Andrew, a wealthy farmer, being the eloper and the disgraced—a black negro being the other party. The parties all lived within four miles of Chatham. The negro having been employed as a farm-hand by Mr. Andrew, a furious Abolitionist, for two years past, and his wife highly esteemed for her intelligence and amiability. Her disappearance was accordingly the more strange, and no effort was spared to discover her retreat, it being generally supposed that she had gone away and secreted herself in a fit of insanity, caused by the vagaries of an "interesting situation," in which she was known to be.

Detroit detectives were employed, and a diligent search instituted, resulting in finding the disgraced woman in Chatham, an inmate of a negro house of infamy, and the mother of a sooty baby, which she held in her arms. Being taken into custody, she confessed the truth without reserve, stating that the cause of her flight was fear of detection in the intimacy which had for a long time existed between herself and a negro named Jones, employed on her husband's farm. The negro, one of the blackest of his race, had lived on the farm for nearly two years, and during eighteen months of that time had been on intimate terms with the wife of his employer.

The negro took her to the house where she was found, which contained five or six negro women of the lowest characters, and in this abode of abomination the evidence of her revolting guilt first saw the light. She was thus ruined and disgraced in the eyes of all mankind, and abandoned herself to the life of the most degrading infamy, by remaining in the company of the negro barlotts with whom she was housed.

The Free Press, from whose account we have made this condensation, goes on to say that "her husband was expected to have been overwhelmed by the discovery. Any ordinary man would have been, but Mr. Arthur Andrew seems to have been proof to ordinary influences—an uncommon man, elevated above the petty annoyances of life, and looking at things in an abstract way. He took the woman to his arms, from the embraces of the defiling vagabond who had ruined him and his family, and but for the indignant interference of his friends, would have carried her home again, which, it is said, he intends doing as soon as he is permitted by the feeling of the community. The dusky evidence of his connubial felicity will probably be adopted also, as a reminder of the happy event which crowned him with the honors."

THE KIND OF MAN.—Andrew is said to be wealthy, in possession of an ample property at present, and of an immense amount in prospective, depending on the conditions of a bequest made by a relative in England. He is an Englishman, and, like most Canadian Englishmen, a red-hot Abolitionist. He also lives in the midst of a red-hot Abolition community, Chatham being famous as being ruled by negroes, and inhabited by whites, many of whom have colored propensities. It is at this place that the cars were invaded about a year ago, and a boy taken from his master against his own will; also, that a negro, named Shadd, was elected to some prominent office shortly after, much to the delectation of newspapers, which copied the announcement extensively throughout the country.

ASHLANE DISTRICT.—Ashlane district—once the home of Henry Clay, and where are those who knew him best and admired him most sincerely—has sent a Democrat to the next Congress, to succeed a Democrat in the last. This is but another evidence to show that the old and best authenticated Whigs in the West, will not suffer themselves to be counted in with the Black Republicans.—St. Louis Republican

A genuine Downeaster was lately essaying to appropriate a square of exceedingly tough beef, at dinner, in a Wisconsin hotel. His convulsive efforts with a knife and fork attracted the smiles of the rest, in the same predicament as himself. At last Jonathan's patience vanished under ill success, when, laying down his utensils, he burst out with: "Strangers, you needn't laugh if you haven't got any regard for the landlord's feelings, you ought to have some respect for the old bull." This sally brought down the house.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Sept. 12, 1859.

During my absence, the editorial department of the "Valley Tan" will be under the control of H. N. MAGUIRE, Esq., until further arrangement is announced.

THOMAS ADAMS.

The editors of the Mountaineer are lawyers. The editors of the Mountaineer quote Judge Story in their last, to prove, as near as we can ascertain, that "offices in a Republican government are established for the highest public good." Certainly, every intelligent youth in the United States is aware of that fact. Offices in a republic are established to give security, tranquility and general happiness to all honest, law-abiding members of society—subject in their creation to the will of the majority. From a necessity arising from unavoidable circumstances, the popular will cannot, in all, or in most cases, exercise itself in a direct way; if it could, it would, as it was the intention of the organizers of this government to rest the whole fabric, directly, so far as possible, upon the common intelligence and discriminating justice of all the white citizens of the United States of America over the age of twenty-one years, through the medium of the ballot-box; where it is impracticable, or impossible, for the masses to assert their sovereignty in this way, the next most feasible method is substituted, which is popular sovereignty by representation. The case of the Territories will illustrate the theory. Territories are States in embryo, going through the regular, constitutional routine of arriving at a point of State independence under Federal regulations—they are the offspring of the expanding power of the Union of States. The whole people of the country, through the agency of their legislative, judicial, and executive authorities, regulate, in essential points, in generalities, the career of the Territories, for the very good reason that they, the people, are the owners of those Territories. To make the matter more lucid in detail, that our position may not be misconstrued, the people, through their representatives, have conceded to the inhabitants of their Territories, the right to regulate their domestic institutions as they please, subject to the constitution of the United States; but so far as the form of those Territorial governments are concerned, and so far as the yet unsevered ties between them and the parent government extend, the de facto owners retain the right of regulating and ruling, on until the Territories progress in strength till they are legally and physically able to cast off their swaddling clothes, and loom up perfect stars in the "galaxy of stars." In the relations which exist between the Territories and the Union, the right of the people of the latter to specify men to fill the offices which they have created in the organic act, by which they brought those Territories into existence, is clear and indisputable. Now, how are the people of the United States to specify those men? Are they to meet in general elections, over all the Union, as if electing a President, and create them through the ballot-box? No, because this would be one of the impracticabilities before spoken of, and here arises the necessity of exercising power by representation: the President of the United States, a creature of the people, representing those who created him, performs this business: here the people exercise their authority indirectly. But were it practicable for the people of the Union to elect directly Territorial officers, of course the inhabitants of the Territories could have no voice in that operation. Our cotemporary propounds a series of questions thus:

"What particular talents, qualifications and patriotism have entitled the present officers of Utah to appointments in preference to our own citizens? Is it right? Is it republican? Is it according to the principles upon which our government is founded? Or is it not the products of an old system of European despotism?"

In regard to the first question, by virtue of the constitutional facts which we have recorded above, we are authorized to tell our cotemporary that it is none of his business whatever—that is a matter wholly, and solely, between the people of the organized States and the Territorial officers whom their representative appointed. The succeeding three questions may be answered categorically thus: It is right; it is American republicanism, if it is not Mormon; it is just exactly in accordance with the principles of the constitution of the United States. As to the last question, our recitation of the relations existing between a Territorial and the general government emphatically shows that "an old system of European despotism" has no more to do with the matter than Mormonism has with Christianity, and the difference between these two latter institutions—God forgive us for putting them abreast!—in the language of Senator Greeley, "is as wide as the space between heaven and hell." Now, we would ask our learned legal friends, as they say that it is "from the mouldering volumes of the dead they are compelled to cull honest opinions of honest government," if any of those antiquated works will show that there ever was a Territorial government under the United States, whose government officers were taken solely from the inhabitants of such Territory? Or is there a Territory in existence anywhere to-day whose government officers were inhabitants of such Territory at the time of their appointment? Perhaps our friends, in speaking of "the mouldering volumes of the dead," which we think most likely, designed the readers' mind to extend back beyond the establishment of our government, to the days when "European despotism" stalked about everywhere, treading with its iron-heel the necks of millions, such must be the case, if our own ancient annals will not carry them out in their statements by reference thereto. In fact, there can be no doubt upon this point, from the following remarks by Orson Pratt, published in a sermon of his in the Deseret News, furnished by their own Church reporter:

"Thus we see that the kingdom of God did not exist, in our knowledge, either on the eastern or western hemispheres of our globe for many generations. It became entirely extinct from the earth about four centuries after the Christian Era."

Oh, yes! now we see the time our cotemporary alludes to:—it was about "four centuries after the Christian Era" that the people had "honest opinions of honest government"—over 1400 years ago! Henry Clay, thou illustrious type of genius, we always thought you erred in many political principles, but when you declared this to be "the fairest fabric of government that ever floated on the stream of time," you did commit a most egregious historical blunder! What though Greece, the "cradle of liberty" of ancient times, has reared a proud marble shaft to your memory, and consecrated every stone with tears of gratitude and veneration; what though your mighty wisdom, manifested in "thoughts that burned and words that breathed," could sway the minds of your countrymen with a power all but irresistible; what though your death plunged a nation, friends and foes, in deepest mourning, and threw a shade of gloom wherever genius received the admiration of the multitude—all this amounts to nothing, for one who is authorized to say, "Thus saith the Lord God," has declared that this "fair fabric of government" is not the tree of liberty, but that it is the fruit of "European despotism," that politically we are despotic, and socially a hot-bed of prostitution and infamy!

Oh! where may the wearied eye repose, When gazing on the great, Where rather gully glory glows, Nor deplorable state?

Not on you, Geo. Washington, nor you, Thomas Jefferson, nor you, Andrew Jackson, but on the immaculate prophet, seer and revelator, Brigham Young!

We make no apology to our cotemporary for quoting from the sermons of the Apostles of his church, for "God's people are one people," just like man and wife are one, back among the heathens of the United States, and the servants of God's servants must do their masters' bidding, and endorse and uphold every word they utter. But you tell us, do you, that it is altogether optional whether you obey the mandates of your leaders? Granted; but just as soon as you become disloyal you become "apostates"—you cease to be Mormons. You are freemen—oh, yes! in the fullest sense of the word you are freemen—because you are free to make yourselves cringing slaves. This is the same kind of freedom that Frenchmen had when they voluntarily bowed themselves to the yoke, and acknowledged Louis Napoleon their despotic ruler—the only difference between you and them is, you have more of that sort of freedom than they had; and the less of it you both have, the more genuine liberty you have both got!

We again quote from the same authority: "The people preserved in their own hands the power to protect their own rights; hence, when the voice of the people are in favor of the guaranteed rights, the whole people enjoy a degree of liberty. If the voice of the people is declared for that which is wrong, then the minority, however very right, has to suffer with the rest. But this, perhaps, was as good a government as could be established, under the circumstances."

No explanation of these remarks is needed to those who reside here, and the language is so clear and unmistakable that to those at a distance it will suffice to simply say that it signifies that the likelihood of majorities committing errors can be obviated by giving Brigham Young the power to make all officers himself, regardless of the opinions and preferences of any one else—just like he made W. H. Hooper the Delegate elect to Congress. The Mormon people pretend to be dissatisfied with the men who the people of the United States send hither as government officers; but when we unmask their hearts, and consider their true proclivities—the doctrines which are taught their children in the school-room, and hurled in the teeth of the fathers and mothers from the pulpit—it is plainly seen that it is not the men at all who they object to, but the principles under which those men act—the principles of Republicanism as applied to the Territories. They want all temporal, as well as all spiritual power, concentrated in the hands of Brigham Young. They want him to be at once the Governor, the Secretary, the Judges, the Marshal, and all. Why not act like men of candor and frankness, and come out clean-breasted and state what you want?—tell the people boldly that you want to put yourselves completely under a condition of vassalage to your master, Brigham Young?—that he owns your very souls, and has a mortgage on your consciences as security for the fee simple? This would be a much more honorable course than by "whipping the devil round the stump" by abusing those who give you the only liberty of conscience and action that you possess.

We will now show the pitiable condition of the Mormon people, the disloyalty they are taught, and the tyranny that grinds them in the dust, by giving a few extracts from the sermons of their leaders—their Apostles:

Brethren, tumble in your interest into this great reservoir, and we will drink up the earth. And if you do not do it, as the Lord lives, the First Presidency of this church and the Twelve will drink you up. If you trifle with me, when I tell you the truth, you will trifle with Br. Brigham; and if you trifle with him, you will also trifle with angels and with God, and thus you will trifle yourselves down to hell.—Heber C. Kimball.

I do have that power and influence here that no other man on this earth has in the midst of his community, with the exception, perhaps, of some whom we call heathen and the members of the church of Rome. And I do not suppose that there can be a bishop or priest in the whole Roman Catholic kingdom who has a people around him that have that implicit confidence in him that this people have in their leaders.—Brigham Young.

In fact, we have lived so long under the priesthood that I, for one, do not want to live under any other government.

However, I will tell you that the Government of God is the only legitimate Government upon the earth.—Orson Hyde.

Now I will prove these things upon natural principles:—This kingdom, this Church, this people are His servants, our Governor is God's servant and he will stand and we never shall be ruled over by any of them again.—Heber C. Kimball.

We have given this subject considerable space, but by so doing obviate future lengthy dissertations in the same direction, as the lawyer editors don't play on a "harp of a thousand strings," but one only. There will be no practical utility in being so verbose hereafter.

Further Indian Disturbances—Another and more Extensive Massacre!

We are again seated to chronicle an event of blood—of hyena-like Indian rapine. Near the scene of the event chronicled by us week before last, viz: to the north of here something over one hundred miles, near Kinney's cut-off, nine more victims have fallen by the unrelenting cruelty of the hopelessly barbarized savages of the Rocky Mountains. The exact time of the occurrence our informant was unable to give us, but it was probably within a week after the first difficulty.

The particulars, as we have received them, are very meagre, but such as they are we give them to our readers, vouching for their authenticity as far as they go.

The ill-fated train was composed of seventeen persons, from Buchanan Co., Iowa. We can only give their surnames:—A Mr. Miltimore and family, (wife and 8 children,) a Mr. Hill, wife, and Messrs. Cline and Marsh, passengers; Mr. Herrington, wife and employee. In the evening of the attack, the main body of the train had advanced ahead of Mr. Miltimore and family, and settled down on a camping-place for the night. The savages took advantage of this separation of the company, and first attacked Mr. Miltimore's detachment, killing him, his wife, six children, and Mr. Cline. Mr. Miltimore's two oldest sons were absent from the family, at the onset, hunting ducks.—Had it not been for this circumstance, there probably would not be a single member of the family left to tell the mournful story of the remainder's fate. Upon hearing the firing and whooping in the direction of their father's teams, the sons hurried to render succor. Arriving near the scene, and seeing from the number of Indians that an attempt of resistance on their part would result in the loss of their own lives, without rescuing those of their friends, they beat a hasty and covert retreat for the parties ahead.

After the Indians had completed their work of murder and plunder with the Miltimore party, they pressed ahead and attacked the remainder of the train. Here they met a warm reception, and were kept at bay by the incensed and determined emigrants, until welcomed darkness closed upon the scene, when the assailed finding further resistance futile, made their escape, leaving the Indians possessors of their stock and goods.—They traveled on foot two days without anything to eat, and finally reached a milita-post. Mr. Herrington discovered an Indian pursuing them during their retreat, and shot at him. He thinks he killed the red-skin.—The survivors are now at Camp Floyd, in a destitute condition.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

From the 14th to the 20th inst.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

The following is Judge Sinclair's charge: GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY:—

You will remember when you reported to me that there was no further business before you, that I dismissed you, subject to be recalled. You are now recalled by a motion of the District Attorney, he conceiving that there was a necessity for convening the grand jury again, and it is your duty to appear. Twenty-four usually constitute a grand jury, but not more than twenty-three can be impaneled, for the reason that no number under twelve can make a presentment.

At the sitting of the court you were specially charged to inquire into crimes committed in this district, but some parties seem to misunderstand the intention of this court. Nothing can be further from my intention than to treat from a magistrate any of his rights, and nothing can be further from my intention than to interfere with any of the lower courts.

So far as we are concerned we deal with those questions that are immediately before us. If you deal with those things that have evidences of where there is sufficient to warrant you in presentment, then you do your duty, and so far as this court is concerned it is to send up to you such matters as may come to it from other courts.

This court has done nothing more in respect to this subject than to decide that Probate courts cannot have jurisdiction in criminal cases in this Territory, and this is a decision that was made by the other two judges. And I repeat to you that when you take into consideration the place of this district, and such criminal matters as may be brought before you, and when you bring in bills, then your duties with this court are at end, and no imputations can rest upon you or the court afterwards.

The importance of maintaining the public peace, the importance of bringing offenders to justice as well as punishing them for their guilt, and to deter others from the commission of like offences, appeals with sufficient force, I know, to every member of this grand jury, without my endeavoring to enforce it further.

What the District Attorney may have to present, and what you may have under consideration, this court cannot know, until it is brought before it officially.

It is not for me to assume the duties of public prosecutor, but it has been reported to me that this city has been the scene of murders, and that the murders are going about independent of law—that the guilty are at large.

It will be your duty to institute the most rigid investigation into these cases, and to maintain the dignity and honor of the law against murder, rapine and robbery, and to let these offenders be punished, not anxious to administer punishment, but to maintain the law.

Your duty you will know, that it takes twelve of you to make a presentment, and when you wish to make any, or to receive any instructions, you will come into court.

You will meet upon your own adjournments, and I need not say anything about dispatch, for you all know the necessity and importance of it. You may retire.

The Judge gave notice to the attorneys that after recess he would commence the reading of the criminal docket, and also informed the bar that it was his intention to meet each day at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Owing to the absence of important witnesses in the case, the suit of Spiers and Phelps, on a charge of robbery, was set for the next regular term of the court, and the accused bound in the sum of $500 each to appear at that time.

Thomas Colbourn, (colored) was found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced by the Judge in accordance with the recommendation of the jury in the case, viz: one year at hard labor in the Penitentiary and a fine of $100.

Myron Brewer, who was indicted as accessory before the fact, in the McKenzie forgery case, was admitted to bail in the sum of $3,000.

Yo-oge, an Indian, was found guilty of stealing a mule, and sentenced to one year's hard labor in the Penitentiary, and cost of suit.

John Wade, and Moses, alias Charlie Clark, were found guilty of the same offence, and received a like sentence.

An affidavit was filed to the effect that important witnesses, in the case of Dross Gibson were absent—that their presence was an unevasive necessity—whereupon the court remanded the prisoner into custody until the next regular term.

Marshal Hunt was fined $50 for contempt of court in disobeying process, the Judge expressing his intention to have witnesses appear if he had to "summon the whole city to do it."

Grand Jury came into court, and upon reporting no more business before them were discharged.

DEATH OF EUGENE FULLER.—We regret exceedingly to learn that Mr. Eugene Fuller, who was a passenger on the steamship Empire City, on her last trip, was lost overboard before the vessel reached Havana. Nothing is known of when or how the accident took place. Mr. Fuller was missed, and the most scrutinizing and general search gave no trace of him. He had been for some months in very feeble health, and, we believe, was not expected to recover. Mr. Fuller was for many years connected with the New Orleans press as a telegraphic news and commercial reporter. Mr. Fuller was a brother of the celebrated Margaret Fuller, Countess d'Osoli. His fate strangely resembled hers—the sea has claimed both brother and sister. A widow and several children are left to mourn this lamentable catastrophe. His sister will be remembered as a brilliant contributor to the New York Tribune, some years back.

RECH MINES IN MARIPOSA.—A company of quartz miners at work a few hundred yards from the town of Mariposa, recently struck a rich pocket, from which they took in one day, quartz that will yield them $30,000. Over $10,000 says the Gazette were pounded from the rock, and nearly as much more will be realized by the usual process of reducing.

A German at Cincinnati made a bet of $50 that he could drink half a barrel of lager in twenty-four hours. Seeing how he was going on, the other party paid him $10 to stop and throw up the bet.

PRIZE FIGHT.—A prize fight, for $1,000 a side, is on the tapis between Australian Kelly and a Boston head-puncher, named Edw. Price. Kelly is the man who fought a fellow six hours and a half in Australia, which is the longest fight recorded on the annals of the ring. Price fought Jo Coburn, (now in State Prison at Sing Sing,) in 1856, 3 hours and a half, and only stopped on account of nightfall. The contest is to come off on the 1st of October next, in Canada.

There are at this time two vessels fitting out in Salem, Mass., for the slave trade on the coast of Africa. The principals in the affair are a Spanish firm in New York, and the pecuniary equipment of the vessels has been forwarded in the form of nearly $20,000 in hard specie. If the Government really wishes to stop this infamous trade, it must look North as well as South, and to these small New England ports as well as New York and New Orleans. There will be no difficulty in identifying the craft at Salem, and this is not the first instance in the last few months.

Mr. Buchanan will be 71 years old at the close of his official term, which is five years older than Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison or Monroe; fifteen years older than Polk or Fillmore and eighteen years older than Pierce.

Mr. C. James has retired from the Territorial Enterprise, Carson Valley, and the editorial responsibility now devolves upon Mr. J. Williams.—Success attend Mr. W.

Annie Raymon, "a beautiful girl of eighteen," poisoned herself with laudanum in N. York, from grief at the desertion of a "down town merchant," under whose especial care she had been living since May last.

CHEAT WORK IN CHINA.—The Rev. F. J. Roberts, American Missionary in China, in a communication to the Hong Kong Register says:

"I asked a female member of our church the other day, 'What kind of work can you do?' 'Needle work.' 'What can you make per day at needle work?' 'Five cash—one farthing—half a cent.' 'How much can you live on per day?' 'Twenty cash—one penny—two cents! Then the husband must make up the discrepancy between the income and outlay of 15 cash, or starvation must ensue. This may account in some measure for the wretched condition of so large a number of females in China who have no husbands on whom to depend.'"

MADAME BONAPARTE OF BALTIMORE.—The Cleveland Herald makes the following extract from a private letter written by a lady in Baltimore some time since:

"Among the sights to be seen from my window is Mme. Bonaparte, who still retains the marks of beauty in her fair skin and arched eyebrows. She wears the everlasting ornament on her forehead that has been there all her life. She has a peculiar way of catching up her dress (which in summer is usually a brown barege over white) thereby discovering to the world a pair of little feet and ankles that have been her pride. She has not spoken to her son for twenty years, and is insulted should any of her fellow boarders mention his name. But the grandson, who is now home on a visit, and is a splendid looking fellow, she is delighted to talk of, and one makes friends with her at once, but woe to the uninitiated stranger who speaks of the son. The son (Jerome) is known by the strangers by his 'wonderful likeness to the General.' No two in this world could be much more alike as he drives in his high-seated carriage, with his tiger behind on a much lower seat."

ITEMS ABOUT TEETH.—The Green Mountain Farmer states that a little girl, daughter of Mr. Geo. Cady, of Northfield, Vermont, recently met with an accident by which five of her front teeth were displaced and fell from her mouth. In about fifteen minutes after the accident, Dr. Gilbert replaced the teeth in the child's mouth, and under his treatment they became firm in their sockets, and are now, to all appearance, as substantial, useful teeth as ever they were. So says the Farmer. We perceive by the New Orleans papers that Dr. B. F. Smith has made an important improvement in the mode of inserting teeth with vulcanite base (for which he has taken out letters patent) by which he inserts molar or masticating teeth which are nearly or quite equal in point of usefulness to the natives. This, if we can believe our New Orleans cotemporaries, is an achievement which will at least delight the toothless.—N. Y. Tribune.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

SHOOTING AFFAIR.—On last Saturday morning, about 8 o'clock, a man named Carpenter, was shot by one Thomas Ferguson, in the stage office of P. Jackman, in the presence of several persons. The parties are said to have been quarreling during the morning, and had been once or twice separated. At the time of the occurrence, Carpenter was sitting in the stage office, when Ferguson came in, walked up to him, and very deliberately shot him with a Navy size revolver. The ball entered his left breast and came out just below the shoulder blade. Early Sunday morning the wounded man expired.

Ferguson was quickly arrested, and we learn that the Grand Jury now in session, has brought in an indictment against him. What the causes of the shooting were, we have not learned; but it seems to have originated through the agency of King Alcohol.

THE CALIFORNIA MAIL.—By our California mail we get nothing of hardly ordinary interest. The difficulty with the Mohave Indians is the most important item from that section; though they contain letters from the north-west, of some importance, touching upon the difficulties between the Americans and British, on Van Couver's Island. The bulk of the California papers is made up of political melange now-days.

Four men convicted have been turned over to the keeper of the Penitentiary, Yodes, (an Indian), sentenced to one year's imprisonment for mule stealing. Colburn, (negro), sentenced to one year's imprisonment for killing the negro boy, Shep. Clark, sentenced to three years imprisonment for mule stealing, and John Wald, sentenced to one year's imprisonment for stealing a mule.

Last Sabbath afternoon, our reporter visited the Tabernacle, but too late to hear anything but the "winding up" of H. C. Kimball's remarks. They were to about the following effect:

First Appearance.—Brothers and sisters: what brother Snow has just been talking about would do anybody good, be he a Jew, Gentile, Mormon or the Devil. Now I want a sight lively tune sung.

After the singing of a hymn, the Elder made his

Second Appearance.—There is just one thing now that I want to say to you, that is AROUSE YOURSELVES AND SHAKE OFF YOUR YOKE, AND YOU SHALL BE FREE!! [The roof fairly raised off the building by the yelling of "Amen."] Let all Israel say AMEN. [Another yelling of amen, louder if possible, than before.]

There was such an earnestness in the Apostle's style of delivery, and the words were caught with such eagerness by the congregation, and responded to in such thundering emphasis, that our reporter fairly smelt sulphur.

We were visited by a slight frost on the morning of last Sunday. It was not sufficiently extensive to do injury.

The mail stage arrived last Tuesday, as usual, but brought no mail. This accounts for our lack of news.

The London Star says that a late sale of ancient manuscripts, autographs, &c., Milton's receipt to the publisher for the purchase money of "Paradise Lost," was knocked down at the price £45, to a gentleman who bought it on commission for the United States. This receipt, in Milton's own hand writing, is now on its way to Philadelphia.

AGRICULTURE IN JAPAN.—The recent visitors to this heretofore undescribed land say that anything like a plain, or a meadow, (in the American sense of the words,) is utterly unknown there, yet every practicable foot of land is highly cultivated. The narrow strip of interval between the banks of the numerous coves which border the shore and the mountain sides, is cultivated in gardens or planted with fruit trees. From these rise terraces, the rocks being dug out of the earth and placed in walls by the mere strength of human bone and muscle, and then the earth leveled down, and the small patch or plot constructed, every inch of which is to pay its semi-annual tribute to the cultivator.

Professor Felton has written a letter to the Boston Courier, denying that he is a Spiritualist. He concludes his letter thus:—Judge Edmonds continues to write his puerile notions in the New York Tribune, but I have never heard of a man, except myself, who has read them. Nobody but the Judge believes a single word of them; and since he affected to think that Mansfield's atrocious English doggerels come from the elegant English poet Menander, which he could not possibly have believed, I cannot suppose he believes in them himself.

Hunt's Merchant's Magazine enumerates no less than thirty-eight substances which are employed to give potency, flavor, consistency, and other desirable qualities to lager beer. Among them are chalk, marble dust, opium, tobacco, henbane, oil of vitrol, copperas, alum, strychnine, and other deadly drugs.

The Losses of Austria.

Whatever may be Austria's future indemnification—for it is vaguely hinted that at the death of the "black man" she will come in for a slice of a Turkish province—it is certain that she has lost considerably by the late war. Her men, money, military prestige and political influence are all diminished; and there is also a territorial loss, for the Austrian eagle can no longer flap his wings over the plains of Lombardy, and one of its finest possessions is lost to the Austrian crown. The area of this lost district of Lombardy is eight thousand five hundred and thirty-eight square miles; and the population about two million eight hundred thousand. It is one of the most densely populated portions of the earth, there being (in 1849) two hundred and seventy-nine persons to each square mile. The northern part of the territory, bordered by the Alps, is mountainous, but the greater part is a huge flat plain, thickly strewn with cities and villages, and almost entirely in a state of cultivation; indeed, four-fifths of the inhabitants of Lombardy depend for subsistence upon agricultural pursuits, and the land is cut up into small farms seldom exceeding seventy acres in extent, while some comprise not more than ten acres. The farms are well irrigated, and the science of hydrostatics has been successfully and practically developed.

Lombardy possesses some of the noblest cities of Italy, among which are those that have borne a conspicuous place in European history. The principal of these is Milan, a place which unites with the traditions of the past much of the vitality and progress of the present. In size and population it surpasses Turin, and is now the finest city in the dominions of the king of Sardinia. The Cathedral of Milan, one of the noblest edifices in the world, is the proudest architectural work which Victor Emanuel can call his own. Pavia, with its noble Certosa and University; Brescia, a town rich in both medieval and classic remains, and possessing important fortifications; Bergamo, with its upper-town, a relic of the past, and its lower-town alive with active trade; Como with its picturesque walls washed by the waves of Lago di Como, and forming an agreeable entry into Italy from Northern Europe; Cremona, with a remarkable Campanile and other architectural wonders; Peschiera, at the foot of Lake Garda, and one of the four fortresses of the famous Quadrilateral; Crema, Lodi, Sondrio, Varese, Lugano, and scores of smaller places, all are transferred to the house of Savoy, and lost to the Austrian. Of course the latter lose with them the "modern improvements" they had added to the premises during their occupancy, the railroad from Milan Westward through Northern Lombardy, with its numerous elegant station-houses, the corresponding telegraph line, the additional fortifications at Milan, Pavia, and Peschiera, the improved carriage roads—all go to the new proprietors. Many of the cafes and shops of Lombardy contained framed engravings representing Francis Joseph, the Austrian Emperor. It would be curious to learn what will become of these, and how long it will be before they will be replaced by portraits of Victor Emmanuel, King of Sardinia and Lombardy.

These are the losses of Austria. It may be said the Italian provinces were always a trouble to her, and that she will get along better without them; this talk is, however, much like that applied to rich men who, when they lose their property by reverses of fortune, are reminded of the cares and troubles that property entailed on them, and exhorted to take things as they come. This philosophy, is however, not always perfectly satisfactory to the losers. —New York Post.

The Germanic Confederation.

A letter from Munich, on the 18th inst., says: "The members of the Chamber of Deputies have already held a preparatory meeting, and it is said that they are all agreed that a reform of the German Federal Constitution is desirable. That question will form the basis of the address which will be presented to the King."

A meeting of men of the democratic party from all parts of Germany has been held at Eisenach. The following resolutions were agreed to:

1. We see in the present condition of affairs great dangers to the independence of our German fatherland, and these dangers have been increased rather than diminished by the peace just concluded between France and Austria.
2. These dangers have their ultimate cause in the faults of the Federal Constitution of Germany, and they can only be averted by a speedy modification of that Constitution.
3. With that object, it is necessary that the Germanic Diet should be replaced by a Central Government of Germany, firm, strong, and permanent, and that a National Assembly shall be convoked.
4. Under present circumstances, the proper steps for attaining that object can only emanate from Prussia, and it is therefore necessary to use every effort to induce Prussia to take the initiative.
5. With that object, and to prove more effectively the foreign interests of Germany, it is expedient provisionally, and until the definite constitution of the central German Government, to confer on Prussia the direction of the German military forces, and the diplomatic representation of Germany abroad.
6. It is the duty of every German to support with all his might the Prussian government, as far as it tends to this object; and assuredly the German people will not shrink from any sacrifice required by the independence, unity, and happiness of the German Fatherland.

The Federal Council, on the 21st ult., unanimously agreed to the proposals of Austria and Prussia respecting the restoration of the Federal contingents and fortresses to a peace footing.

So unstable have been the governments in Mexico, that since the establishment of the republic in 1822 there have been fifty-six Presidents, averaging one and a half yearly.

THE STRONGEST MAN.—Since the famous feats and lectures of Dr. Winship, the modern pocket edition of Sampson, nearly every State in the Union has come out with a "strongest man," or local champion of some sort or other. With the rage of our people for conventions, we shortly expect to hear of a convention, or tournament of champions to see who shall stand as Grand Master of this new order of physical nobility. The last arrival is from the "Star of the East," most down to "Blue nosedom," and his claims are thus set forth by a correspondent of the Boston Herald avowing that he knows what he says to be true:

"Mr. William Brooks, of Kennebunkport, is in all probability the strongest man in the State of Maine. On one occasion there were several men in the blacksmith shop of D. & S. Ward, myself with the rest, when one of the party asked the weight of an anvil that sat on a block in the shop. The smith replied '300 pounds.' 'I'll bet,' says the interrogator; 'that Brooks will lift it by the horn by one hand.' It happened that Mr. Brooks was just passing at the time, so he was just called in and asked if he could lift the anvil. He said he could, and would 'lift it with the heaviest man in the crowd on it.' The heaviest man in the shop did not weigh but 160 pounds, and he got on, when Brooks took hold of the horn of the anvil and raised it nearly three inches.

"I have often seen him shoulder a barrel of flour with his feet tied together. Once I saw him take a barrel of pork, with the heads in, by the chimes with his teeth, and lift it from the floor, so that I put a half-bushel measure under it. I think such strength is rarely seen in a man of 172 lbs. weight."

INDIAN DEPREDACTIONS, &c.—A dispatch from Shasta to the Sacramento papers, on the 16th, says: An unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the Yreka stage near the mouth of Coffee Creek. Four men sprung for the reins, but Dan Hooker, the driver, saw them in time to whip up and escape. The stage was full of passengers, which was probably the reason that the robbers did not fire. We are indebted to Mr. Barstow, who is just in from Lost Camp, ten miles from that creek, for the following news:

John Calahan, proprietor of Hat Creek Station, on the Pitt river road to Yreka, and his cook, were killed by Indians on Friday night last, and the house robbed of provisions, arms and ammunition. They were found Saturday morning by some teamsters—Calahan, with four bullets and one arrow through him, close to the house; the cook was found some distance off, shot with five arrows through the back. No others were there. The station is thirty miles from Fort Crook, on the head of Cow Creek. The Indians are killing cattle, and have a horse which they told a valley Indian they had taken from a white man whom they had killed. They are of the same band.

HOTEL LIFE IN HERMOSILLO.—The expense of living is remarkable, although the fare at the hotels is not equal to Delmonico's. They are generally kept by Frenchmen; sometimes by Mexicans. Any establishment is supposed to last from six months to a year. Then every one is insolvent. This tendency to breaking is not caused by the extravagant expenses of the landlord, or high prices of articles consumed by the boarders, but rather by the lack of customers. Mexicans generally prefer to stay with some of their numerous relations, perhaps dating from Noah or some remote period; and foreigners, who are the men that spend the cash, are but few generally. Only at the annual excitement, when it is either supposed by the boys that Sonora has been purchased, or will be shortly, by old U. S., which has been the case for the last six years, landlords do a good business. Americans and others then flock in the country. They, at first like orange trees—the delicious aroma in the air—the easy manners of the people—the many pretty girls—even go so far as to prove of chili Colorado and tortillas for a time. When, however, the excitement ends in smoke, then that eternal blue sky gets tiresome, and reminds them of some very bad place, with which Sonora is not seldom compared. Misfortunes never come alone: with the failure to buy Sonora is generally connected a vacancy in the portomonte, and the question is now, not how and where to speculate, but how to get out of the country in double quick time, before the last eagle takes its flight. Hard times then come. The excitement and throng of human beings over, the landlords hold out a little longer and break. This is no joke. It is a question of time only, influenced by the amount of capital or credit a hotel is started with. —H. E. in the Arizona.

ANTIDOTE FOR THE "POISON WEED."—We are informed that spirits of turpentine, given as an emetic, is an effectual antidote for the "poison weed." The dose is about half a pint, to be repeated with half the quantity, if the first does not operate. As proof of the efficacy of this antidote, we learn that J. B. Wynn saved one of his valuable French Merino sheep, at Salinas Plains by it. The sheep was badly poisoned, when Mr. Wynn immediately sent for the turpentine, and though some time elapsed before it could be obtained, on being administered the poison weed was ejected, and in the course of an hour the sheep was apparently as well as ever. —Cat Farmer.

BILLIARDS FOR THE INSANE.—At the South Boston Insane Asylum, there are a few patients who have now, as they had in happier days, a fervent passion for the game of billiards, and to gratify an innocent desire of such, the directors of the institution have recently caused the introduction of a billiard table. While much harmless amusement is thus derived by many, an opportunity is afforded of witnessing the workings of that singular power of human nature which permits the most flighty and turbulent disposition to be rendered intelligent and submissive under the influence of some object that engages the attention, pleases the fancy, and excites the sympathy of one of an unstable mind.

GREAT PRICES FOR OLD COINS.—A great sale of old coins, by auction, has recently taken place in London, and enormous prices were obtained. Three Anglo-Saxon pennies of different types were sold in one lot for $1000. Pennies of Alfred's time sold for from $50 to $80 each, and one half-penny of great rarity brought more than one hundred dollars! A good penny of Henry III., of the highest rarity, sold for upwards of $600. Among the coins struck for America may be mentioned the Lord Baltimore penny, said to be unique, $362; a New England half-penny, $75; the fifty-shilling piece of Oliver Cromwell, $225; gold five-shilling pieces of Charles II., $146.

STRANGE TRIBE OF INDIANS IN CENTRAL AMERICA.—An engineer connected with the Tehuantepec surveying party states that in running his line across the mountains between Minatitlan and Tehuantepec, he came across Indians who had never seen a white man in their lives, who spoke no language known to his party, and were absolute "free lovers," living all together, and twenty or thirty men and women sleeping in one bed, and acknowledging a community of wives and properties. In another place he passed through a village where the Indians had light hair, fair complexion and blue eyes; and yet another town, where all the inhabitants were lepers, covered with the white spots of that detestable plague.

FAMILY RELATIONS OF THE CZAR AND THE EMPRESS.—It is a fact which is not generally known that the families of the Czar of Russia and the Emperor of France are connected by marriage. A son of Eugene Beauharnais, who was married to the daughter of the King of Bavaria married a sister of the present Emperor Alexander of Russia. Eugene was the son of the Empress Josephine, the first wife of Napoleon. One of her grandsons is the present Emperor of France. Another is the husband of the sister of the Emperor of Russia. One of her granddaughters by the Eugene is present Queen of Sweden. Another grandson, who is now dead, married the Queen of Portugal. Still another grand-daughter by Eugene is the Empress of Brazil. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE.—The San Jose Tribune says: One night last week, some malicious person entered the cemetery by breaking through the fence, and plugged up with pieces of wood, rocks and hard clay, so as to render useless, an artesian well, which the people had subscribed to sink, for the double purpose of irrigating the shade trees with which the grounds are planted and of accommodating those who might follow to their last resting place the remains of those "they loved in life and honor after death."

Hon. Daniel E. Sickles has published a letter relative to his re-union with his wife, from which we clip the following paragraph:

In conclusion, let me ask one favor of those who, from whatever motive may deem it necessary or agreeable to comment in public or private upon this sad history, and that is, to aim all their arrows at my breast, and for the sake of my innocent child, to spare her yet youthful mother while she seeks in sorrow and contrition the mercy and the pardon of Him to whom sooner or later we must all appeal.

A DANCE OF DEATH.—A story is told of the Dutch painter Heimsckerk, who died about 1622, that he left by his will a sum of money yearly, as a dowry, for one young girl of his native village, on condition that the day before her marriage, she and her future husband should dance upon his grave. This condition was complied with for several years.

A cubic inch of gold is worth one hundred and forty-six dollars; a cubic foot, two hundred and fifty-two thousand two hundred and eighty-eight dollars; a cubic yard, six millions eight hundred and seventy-six dollars. The quantity of gold now in existence is estimated to be three thousand millions of dollars, which, welded in to one mass, could be contained in a cubic of twenty-three feet.

The Mariposa "Gazette" records the death of a rattlesnake killed last week near the old Fort, Lower Mariposa, six feet eight inches long, and thirteen and a half inches in circumference, at the largest part. His tail was ornamented with twenty-one rattles.

BULL FIGHT.—Another of these disgraceful exhibitions took place at the San Francisco Mission some time since. One of the fighters, a Mexican, was tossed by a buffalo, and two of his ribs were broken. A bear, after whipping several dogs, which were set at him, broke his chain and rushed in among the spectators, who ran at a lively pace. The bear then climbed upon a building, from whence he got upon a Church and chimed the bells, after which he got down into the church, where he was captured.

The morning after the French occupation of Milan several journals that had been suppressed by the Austrian Government reappeared. One had been suppressed five years, and in the last number had promised the "conclusion" of a story in the next, at the end of five years, took up the story where it had been left off and concluded it.

THE VICINITY OF HERMOSILLO.—Hermosillo stands on a gravelly table land, bounded north and south by brown barren mountains, and drained by the Sonora river, whose course is ordinarily traceable in the dry season, for a mile, not by a volume of water, as one would suppose from the name of the river, but by a broad belt of dry, glaring sand, lined with rows and groups of cottonwood trees.

Outside of these lines of trees, sometimes on one or the other side of the river, we find the cultivated portions of this, one of the best valleys of Sonora. These lands are a light alluvial deposit made by the summer freshets of the river. Owing to the warm climate and irrigation, they produce well as far as the water will reach; as every inch has to be irrigated to produce at all. These bottoms are seldom over half a mile in width, but what there is, has by hard work become a species of paradise. There are luxuriant fields of fine Sonora wheat, clover, corn, sugar cane, vines, and other agricultural products, intermixed with groves of beautiful tropical products, intermixed with groves of beautiful quinces, pomegranates, palms, and other fruits produce well. Plantains, pineapples, and the northern fruits grow to advantage. —H. C. in the Arizona.

EARTHQUAKE IN SANTA CLARA.—The San Jose Telegraph of Saturday says: "Quite a severe shock of an earthquake was felt in this city on Wednesday night last, at about half past nine o'clock. It was preceded by a loud report like the shooting of a cannon. The undulations seemed to be from the east westward. Another visited us on Friday morning about 4 o'clock. They are becoming so common in this locality that they hardly occasion remark."

In speaking of the wonderful growth of commerce, an Eastern paper says:

In 1784, an American vessel entered Liverpool with eight bales of cotton as part of her cargo. This was seized by the Customs on the conviction that it could not be of American growth. In 1857, a million and a half bales of cotton were imported at Liverpool from the United States. The first steam engine used at Manchester was not erected till 1790.

AUCTION!

Sale of Watches and Jewelry to the Trade by Catalogue.

J. C. LITTLE & CO., WILL sell at Public Auction, at their Store, on Tuesday, 27th September, 1859, at 10 o'clock a.m., an extensive and valuable assortment of WATCHES & JEWELRY!

Merchants and dealers can be furnished with Catalogues at our store a few days previous to sale. Stock can be seen on the morning of the day of sale as above specified. 45-1

WM. A. HICKMAN, ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW,

Will practice in all the Courts in this Territory. OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Tunwell & Co.'s Store. 43-1

NOTICE.

ANOTHER SALE OF PUBLIC! MULES, WAGONS AND HARNESS.

ON TUESDAY, 20th instant, will be sold, at Public Auction, at Camp Floyd, U. T., in the highest bidder, for Specie or Government Funds, about 400 excellent Draft & Saddle Mules; and also a number of Wagons, together with Harness of the same complete. The mules are all young, sound, and thoroughly broken, and in good condition; and the Wagons and Harness are in complete repair, with all the equipments for immediate service.

The sale will commence on the day above mentioned, in lots of one or more, and will continue from day until all are sold.

G. H. CROSMAN, Deputy Q. R. M. R. G. S. U. S. A. Camp Floyd, 2d Sept. 1859. 43-3

George Cronyn & Co. HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Eldridge & Co., consisting of

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, &c., beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at George Cronyn's Old Stand, near Bishop Minner's, and offer them at retail. They assure the public they have put prices at a low rate. You are invited to call and examine. The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS, Groceries, Hardware, Oils, Turpentine, Alcohol, Window Glass, Hay and Manure Forks, Shovels, Spades, Scythes and Snaths, Cotton Yarn, Dye-Stuffs, &c. Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of all kinds received. 44-1

WILL THE ITALIAN CONFEDERATION WORK.—The Hon. CALVIN CUSHING has contributed an able and ingenious article to the Boston Traveller under this head, from which the following are extracts:

Will the Confederation work? Will it last? Observe, it is not merely a federal union of the Pope, Austria being one of those provinces. If it were that alone, it would be the league of Austria and all Italy against France. But in addition to that, it must be a league of Austria and France—that is, of the two great Catholic powers of Europe, sheltered under the shadow of the mighty name of Rome; for thus only can France maintain her own standing as a great Catholic power. Whom does such a league threaten? Is it not quite seasonable now for Great Britain to ponder the problem of Cherbourg?

Napoleon, by the actual aid of Great Britain, has balanced the Russian success of Moscow by the reduction of Sebastopol. He has, with the passive countenance of Great Britain, balanced the Austrian occupation of Paris by the victory of Solferino. The debt to Prussia remains to be paid off; but above all, that to Great Britain. Trafalgar and Waterloo are memories of rage and shame in the hearts of all Frenchmen, and especially of all Bonapartes. And if, in this respect, the turn of Great Britain is to come, she will only have herself to thank, for the present powerful and proud position of Louis Napoleon is her work quite as much as that of his own genius. Certain we be, that of this great drama of the Second Empire, the fourth and fifth and greatest of its acts are yet to come.

Eight Children at a Birth.

On the 2d of Aug. Mrs. Timothy Bradley, of Johnson, Trumbull county, Ohio, gave birth to eight children—three boys and five girls. They are all living, and are healthy, but quite small. Mr. B's family is increasing fast. He was married six years ago to Eunice Mowery, who weighed 173 pounds on the day of their marriage. She has given birth to two pairs of twins, and now eight more, making twelve children in 6 years. It seems strange, but nevertheless is true, Mrs. B. was a twin of three, her mother and father both being twins, and her grand mother the mother of five pairs of twins. Mrs. B. has named her boys after noted and distinguished men.

One after the Hon. Joshua R. Giddings, who has given her a splendid gold medal; one after the Rev. Hon. Elijah Champlin, who gave her a deed of 50 acres of land; and the other after James Johnson, Esq., who gave her a cow. Mr. Bradley says it is profitable to have twins, as the neighbors have clothed the others ever since they were born. Mr. B. is a poor, industrious laborer, but says he will not part with any of his children while he is able to work. —New York Tribune.

Three of the members of Congress elected to the next House of Representatives have died, viz: Hon. Thomas L. Harris, in the Sixth district of Illinois; Hon. Cyrus Spink, in the Fourteenth district of Ohio; and Hon. William O. Goode, in the Fourth district of Virginia.

THE EMIGRATION.—The Placerville Observer says the emigration is slowly and steadily pouring in upon us. During the week, several trains of families have passed through town en route for the valleys below. Most of these families are from Missouri. The emigrants all appear to be in excellent health, and their stock is in unusually fine condition.

KILLED BY A WOMAN.—A notorious puffian, known in Southwestern Arkansas as Jack Cade, was recently killed by a woman whose husband he had shot. The widow challenged him to fight a duel, and as the ruffian declined, she attacked him with a revolver and lodged three balls in his body, one of which passed through his heart.

Alabama has again elected a Democratic delegation to Congress as follows: 1st district, Jas. A. Stallworth; 2d district, Jas. L. Pugh; 3d district, David Clopton; 4th district, Geo. S. Houston; 5th district, W. R. Cobb; 6th district, J. L. M. Curry; 7th district, Pugh and Clopton are new members. All the others were members of the last Congress. Andrew B. Moore (Dem.) is re-elected Governor by a large majority. —Omaha Nebraskan.

The gold diggers among the Indian mounds of Chiriqui, upon the northern part of the Isthmus of Panama, are to be reinforced by a vessel load of adventurers from New York, who are to proceed from that port to Chiriqui on the Atlantic, in a clipper schooner.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,
Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Merrimack Prints
Blue Denims
"drills
White & cold bl'kets
Canton flannels
Woolen do
Quilts & comfortables
Alpacas and merinos
Spun yarn
Sewing thread
Curtain damasks
Satinet & cassimeres
Cottonades and pant
stuffs

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as
Bl'k and fancy dress silks
Plain all wool delaines
Fancy do
Alexander's kid gloves
Bay state long shawls
Stella and merino do
Delaines in dress patterns
White cambric muslin
Jackonets
Swiss
Mull & Namsocks
Plaid Jackonet muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and guantlets
Lace mits and gloves
Dress lawns and barges
Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet
Velvet
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY
is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.
Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HORN & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugars, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, copperas, saltpetre, madder, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla rope, ginger, mustard, oases, sauces of every kind, brandy, fruits, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stems, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of lemon, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market. Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen. —HORN & DICKSON.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

Dyer, Bro's, & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business. —GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us. —GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;
—ALSO—
OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,
AT
G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd,
Fort bridge, Fairfield, and
Millersville.
The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive. —37-1f

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. —DYER, BRO., & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by

40-1f DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale

40-1f DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE

40-1f to sell or exchange for Country Produce. DYER, BRO. & CO.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.,

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above. —MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,

where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread

Crackers,

Cakes,

Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS,

CONFECTIONERY,

SODA WATER, &

SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS,

In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:

Single Bath..... 75 cents.

Five Baths..... $3 00

Ten do..... $5 00

37-3m E. REESE.

CITY BREWERY.

MR W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.

He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments. —n34tf

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. —n36-1f

250 Tons Merchandise.

LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.,

Salt Lake City and Camp Floyd,

HAVE received, 9th of June, and to arrive per trains of 10th and 20th of July, and 18th of August, the largest stock, and best selection of general assorted Merchandise, ever offered for sale in this market; and to which they would invite the attention of their friends and customers, and purchasers in general, flattering themselves upon the superior quality of their goods, and their ability to make large sales at uniform and low rates.

33-3m LIVINGSTON, BELL & CO.

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. FILLEY

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.

MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Saws and all kinds of Iron Castings of every description, Circular Saw Mills of the Page and Childs Patents.

30-1f

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods,

Liquors,

Hats & Caps,

Boots & Shoes,

Clothing

Hardware,

Outfitting Goods,

Harness,

Saddles,

& Bridles,

Which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,
75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MALTSE JACK; one fine STALLION. For sale by [35-1f] C. A. PERRY & CO.

To the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All pack-goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. —FARMER A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

SACRAMENTO DRUGGISTS,

CALIFORNIA.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

IMPORTING

AND

WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Wholesale Importing Druggists,

DEALERS IN

DENTAL AND SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Essences, Oils, Brushes, Camphene, Lamps, Machine and pure Lard Oils, Hops, Brews' Materials, &c.

139 J STREET, SACRAMENTO.

PATENT MEDICINES.

WE are Agents for California for the following valuable preparations:

JAMES' Alternative, Expectant, Hair Tonic Vermifuge and Pills

Sands' Sarsaparilla, Peruvian Febrifuge, Clove Anodyne, and Roman Eye Ointment

Dr. Moffat's Pills and Bitters

Ayer's Pectoral and Pills

Wistar's Balsam Wild Cherry

Green's Oxygenated Bitters

All of which we offer for sale at very near New York prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PERFUMERY.

WE are agents for the celebrated

Perfumery House of Jules Hanel & Co., Philadelphia, and have a large stock of their excellent preparations on hand for sale at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

HOPS! HOPS!

WE are now receiving a fine lot of

1833 hops, to which we invite the attention of

Brewers.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Radical Cure Trusses.

THERE is no longer any doubt about the cure of Hernia, by the use of Dr. Marsh's Radical Cure Truss. We have just received a good supply, the first ever brought to this city, and invite all interested to call and examine this new and valuable improvement.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

PAINTS AND OILS.

WE have just received per clipper

Intrepid, from New York, a large invoice of choice Paints and Oils, consisting in part of superior Boiled and Raw Linseed Oil, Chrome Green, Paris Green, Chrome Yellow, Vermillion, Red Lead, Prussian Blue, Putty, Venetian Red, Gold Leaf, Ochre Varnish, Japan, Furniture and Damar Varnish, Gum Shellac, Vandyke Brown, &c., &c., for sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Crucibles and Retorts.

WE have on hand a large assortment of Black Lead and Hessian Crucibles, of all sizes; also superior Iron Retorts, which we offer at reasonable prices.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Large Iron Mortars.

FIFTY-SIX large Iron Mortars for

sale by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, No. 139 J street, Sacramento.

FRESH CAMPHENE.

ALWAYS on hand, and for sale at the lowest market rates, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

CHEMICALS.

PER last steamer we have received from the Chemical Laboratory of Power & Welchman, Philadelphia:

400 bottles Strychnine;

75 ounces Nitra Silver, pure;

25 ounces Sulphate Morphine;

100 ounces Iodine Mercury, Lead, and Iron.

ALSO

200 ounces Quinine;

75 pounds Lodine Potassae;

80 pounds Chloroform;

750 pounds Spis Nitro, Aq. Ammonia, and Sulphuric Ether.

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, 139 J street, Sacramento.

Corks, Corks, Corks.

JUST received from New York—100,

000 superior Soda Corks, 50,000 superior Wine Corks; 1,000 gross Vial Corks, assorted sizes Beer Keg Corks, &c., for sale low, by

R. H. McDONALD & CO.,

Druggists, Sacramento.

Oils, Oils, Oils!

PURE Lard Oil, Machine Oil, Sparm

THE VALLEY TIAN.

H. N. MAGUIRE, Editor.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 46.

"The Boys."

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Has there any old fellow got mixed with the boys?
If there has, take him out, without making a noise!
Hang the almanac's cheat and the catalogue's spite!
Old Time is a liar! We're twenty to-night!
We're twenty! We're twenty! Who says we are more?
He's tipsy—young jackanapes!—show him the door!
"Gray temples at twenty!"—Yes, while, if you please;
Where the snow flakes fall thickest, there's nothing can freeze!
Was it snow I spoke of? Excuse the mistake!
Look close—you will see not the sign of a flake;
We want some new garlands for those we have shed—
And these are white roses in place of the red!
We've a trick, ye young fellows, you may have been told,
Of talking (in public) as if we were old;
That boy we call "Doctor," and this we call "Judge,"
It's a neat little fiction—of course it's all fudge.
That fellow's the "Speaker"—the one on the right;
"Mr. Mayor," my young one, how are you to-night?
That's our "Member of Congress," we say when we chaff;
There's the "Reverend," What's his name?—don't make me laugh!
That boy with the grave mathematical look,
Made believe he had written a wonderful book,
And the Royal Academy thought it was true!
So they chose him right in; a good joke it was too!
There's a boy—we pretend—with a three-decker-brain,
That could harness a team with a logical chain;
When he spoke for our manhood in syllabled fire,
We called him the "Justice"—but now he's "The Squire."
And there's a nice youngster of excellent pith;
Fate tried to congeal him by naming him Smith—
But he shouted a song for the brave and the free—
Just read on his medal—"My country"—of thee.
You hear that boy laughing? You think he's all fun—
But the angels laugh too at the good he has done;
The children laugh loud as they troop to his call,
And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all!
Yes, we're boys—always playing with tongue or with pen,
And I sometimes have asked—Shall we ever be men?
Shall we always be youthful, and laughing, and gay,
'Till the last dear companion drops smiling away?
Then here's to our boyhood, its gold and its gray!
The stars of its Winter, the dew of its May!
And when we have done with our life-lasting toys,
Dear Father, take care of thy children the Boys!

CORRESPONDENCE.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Sept. 16th, 1859.

Since my last communication to your paper, nothing of unusual local interest has occurred. We were all in hopes that some arrangement would be made by the Post Office Department to render our postal facilities from and to this place more agreeable, but were disappointed; therefore, in consequence of our inability to procure something from abroad to interest us, we must make up in something local.
The "Soldiers' Circus Company" are giving us entertainments twice and three times each week, which for interest and amusement are increasing each time they open. On Friday, the 9th inst., they produced two laughable and extravagant burlesques of the "Battle of Echo Canyon," as it would have been, for the first time, and the same again on Wednesday, the 14th inst., to a good audience, who all went away satisfied that Messrs. Crawford & Willis possess a peculiar faculty in hitting off the Mormons, and this is the thing to please the soldiers. We all hate these degenerate scoundrels, and any thing produced in the way of burlesquing them will always take well.

On Wednesday evening they also performed the pantomime of "Jack the Giant Killer," Master Hearn, of the 5th Infantry, as the "Giant Killer," Mr. White as the "Harlequin," Mr. Fletcher as the "Sprite," with fairies, giants, &c., &c. This piece was not so interesting on this occasion as it might have been, and as I see the posters of the company announce its reproduction this evening, I trust that it will be more interesting than before.

The gymnastic, arabic and tumbling feats in the ring are steadily improving. Mr. White, late of the Dragoon recruits for this place, is an excellent tumbler, and generally speaking, useful in the ring and about the company, having, as I understand, considerable experience as a circus actor. Mr. Fletcher, of the 5th Infantry, is also good in somersets, and amuses the audience with comic gestures as the tumbler's clown. Messrs. Pender, Schindlky and a number of other whose names are unknown to me are also creditably fair in their parts of the performances. I must not omit mentioning some of the juvenile department, among whom I noticed Masters McCarty, Hearn and Miller, whose performance on the spring-board, in posturing and turning somersets from the ground, are highly creditable indeed.

Their enterprise is a laudable one, and deserves the encouragement and patronage of the enlisted men of the camp, as it is exclusively a soldiers' concern, supported by soldiers, wholly independent of any Mormon influence or assistance whatever.

The M. D. company have played twice or three times during the week past. I was present on Saturday evening, the 10th inst. The bill for the evening consisted of the "First floor," the "Two buzzards" and the "Clock-maker's hat." I only remained to see the first piece performed. Not having the "cast" of the play, I cannot particularize characters; some were well rendered, and some were very poor.

The drop-curtain of the stage is a very poor specimen of artistic talent. The former one was far better in appearance, and the scene described was better appreciated by the majority of the audiences visiting the theatre. In all other respects, the interior of the building is much improved in comfort and appearance.

The "Germanic Society" hold their social meetings every evening, and appear to enjoy themselves very well. They have a large and excellent selection of music; also arrangements for dramatic exhibitions, although they are not made public only to members of the society, and such friends and acquaintances as they may invite.

Yours, in haste,

OBSERVER.

A Lion Adventure in Algeria.

I was roused by something, and felt a pain in my head, and directly afterward I received a blow on the head through the side of the tent, which made me think for a moment that I had been struck by an iron bar with claws at the end, which I carried with me in my wagon; but in an instant that idea flashed across me that it was a lion which was sniffling at me through the back of the tent. If I remained where I was without moving, there was the probability of the beast tearing up the tent and dragging me through. On the other hand, an attempt to move closer to the fire would probably be detected, as the lion has the same characteristics as the cat, and would doubtless have sprung upon me in that case, and have carried me off. While hesitating what to do, the animal, most likely from not being able any longer to feel any thing through the wall of the tent, must have turned away, for after what was, in fact, but a few moments, but which seemed a very long time, there was a terrible shriek, followed by a low, deep growling, then a shot and a louder growl. I felt about for my revolver, which I had placed beside my head before going to sleep, and creeping round the tent I saw the horrid beast standing perfectly still, with glaring eyes, and continuing the same low, deep growling, and holding in his mouth the body of a man, which he occasionally lowered on the ground as if with the intention of taking a firmer hold, but never entirely letting go of it. I saw by the direction of his look that he had caught sight of me, and so terrible were the associations connected with the beast in my mind that I dared not move or breathe for some seconds, when the thought suddenly occurred to me that it must be the body of Hamed that he held in his mouth. My liking for this man had become so strong that the desire to rescue or avenge him drove every feeling of fear out of my mind, and, with a steady aim, I fired at his body just behind the shoulder. Singularly enough, although I knew I had hit him, he merely gave a loud growl and remained stationary, without relaxing his hold of the Arab's body. How long he would have remained in this state of immobility I can't say, but I was just about to try the effect of a second shot when a regular volley of guns were fired from out of the darkness; the beast sprang forward toward me, almost at the same instant that I felt a sharp, stinging sensation in the upper part of my arm, and fell to the ground so close to me that I stepped back to avoid a blow from his paws in his death-struggles. They did not last long, and as soon as they were over, I fetched a lighted brand from the fire, and first holding it to the face of the dead man to see who it was, and feeling much relieved at finding it was not Hamed, I waved it about as a signal for the others that they might come with safety. They soon came and clustered around the body of the dead lion, some kicking it, and others spitting on and reviling it, and all of them claiming the honor of having killed him, a claim that they seemed far more interested in defending than in commiserating the fate of their dead companion.

All the efforts we made to release the latter were unavailing without having recourse to our knives, and as there was not the least doubt of his being dead, for the teeth of the powerful brute were buried in his chest and back, we determined on leaving both bodies where they were until daylight. The first thing I did when I awoke was to look for the bodies of the Arab and lion. They were lying where the beast had fallen in the night, and his stiffened jaws still held the body of the man as in a powerful vice. The desire of preserving a record of the event for my friends in England to look at was too strong to be resisted; so we set to work, cut three pieces of timber to a point, and having raised the lion to an upright position, kept him up by means of the pieces of wood. To conceal these, I planted a shrub here and there, which had the desired effect; and the result I obtained was a negative, the like of which, I believe never was seen. The attitude is as natural as possible, and makes one shudder to look at it.—Photographic News.

NAPOLEON I. IN POVERTY.—M. Thiers, in his history of the Consulate and Empire, recites some very strange and previously unknown particulars respecting the early life and penury of Napoleon Bonaparte.

"It appears that after he had obtained a subaltern's commission in the French service, by his skill and daring at Toulon, Bonaparte lived some time in Paris, in obscure lodgings, and in such extreme poverty, that he was often without the means of paying ten cents for his dinner, and frequently went without anything at all. He was under the necessity of borrowing sums, and even worn-out clothes, from his acquaintances! He and his brother Louis, afterwards King of Holland, had, at one time, only a coat between them, so that the brothers could only go out alternately, time and time about. At this crisis, the chief benefactor of the future Emperor and conqueror, 'at whose mighty name the world grew pale,' was the actor Talma, who often gave him food and money.

"Napoleon's face, afterward so famed for its classical mould, was, during that period of starvation, harsh and angular in its lineaments, with its projecting cheek bones. His meagre face brought on an unpleasant and unsightly and cutaneous disease, of a typhoid, virulent, and malignant that it took all the skill and assiduity of his accomplished physician, Corvisart, to expel it after a duration of more than ten years.

"The squalid beggar, then, the splendid Emperor, afterwards—the threadbare habiliments and imperial mantle—the hovel and the palace—the meagre fare and the gorgeous banquet—the friendship of a poor actor—the homage and terror of the world—an exile and a prisoner. Such are the ups and downs of this changeable life; such are the lights and shadows of the great and mighty.

A STRANGE OCCURRENCE.—The writer of the following communication, to which he has prefixed the above appropriate head, is, we presume, perfectly honest in his statement. But, notwithstanding his positiveness to the contrary, we cannot but think there is a mistake somewhere in the matter of this rapid gestation to which he certifies:

Mr. Editor: This is to inform you and the public that there has one of the most singular occurrences took place in my neighborhood, near the town of Steelville, in Crawford county, Mo., that ever was recorded on the pages of history; and I send this to you for publication, knowing that the readers of the Republican will be glad to hear of this strange occurrence.

John McDade, one of my nearest neighbors, has a cow that has had three calves in less than twelve months and but one at a time. Her first was calved the last of July, 1858; her second the middle of March, 1859; and her third about the middle of July, 1859. From the first to the second was about seven months and a half, from the second to the third was about four months. Her two last calves are both alive and both suck the cow. They are large likely calves. These things, though strange, are true.

My children first saw the cow and calf, and told it to myself and wife. We went over to Mr. McDade's and found the children's statements to be true. She had a young calf and it was her's. There is no mistake. And there was her other about four months old—both in the lot together. The cow ranges about my house, and that is the reason why we know all about her. If these things are questioned they can be established by many witnesses.

Mo. Republican, July 25, 1859.

Death of Pat. Hearn.

The New York correspondent of the Sacramento Union, under date of July 20, writes:

"Pat. Hearn is dead. This well known member of the sporting fraternity died at his residence, No. 4 Clinton Place, of apoplexy, on the 9th inst. Hearn has long been celebrated as the prince of gamblers. He was one of the most gentlemanly and polished scoundrels that New York could furnish, and that is no small praise in its way. He would victimize an individual so handsomely that the sting carried its own antidote, and so perfectly did he sustain himself in his peculiar relation with the public that all his victims, no matter how severely they suffered, ever spoke well of him. His 'hell' in Broadway was the resort of many of the wealthiest men of the country, and no stranger of distinction ever visited Gotham without a squint at the interior of Pat. Hearn's brilliant saloons.

"Hearn was an Irishman by birth, and was forty-nine years old. He leaves a wife and two adopted daughters, and has a couple of brothers in this city. His early life is not known. Rumor has said that he was born a gentleman and educated for the law, and again that he had little or no education, but wonderful natural ability, and an easy, polished demeanor, to which his success was indebted. He appeared in New York in 1838, as a boarder at the Astor, when his free and genial manners, elegance of costume, and princely expenditure of gold, gave him an introduction to the sporting gentlemen, and also, in no slight degree, an introduction to a certain class of wealthy characters who were not of the sporting order. He soon started a first class gaming house, backed by a fellow named Lansing, and also by a notorious courtesan, the celebrated Julia Brown, who was rich from her sinful spoils. With means from such sources the noted No. 3 Park Place was started, and the sporting men all over the Union supported it. Hearn had varying success here, good and bad alternating, and finally started a couple more 'hells' up town, one at 387 and the other at 560 Broadway.

These saloons were well patronized for several years, and with success. Hearn was frequently indicted, plead guilty, was fined, and kept on as flourishingly as ever. The young rich fools of New York, and all the brainless heirs who congregate here with liberal allowances from foolish 'governors,' could not take any sort of position as 'fast,' unless they knew Pat. Hearn, and to know him was to bleed. Pat's dinners were splendid. The hour of dining was six, and the feast was kept up till midnight. Cooking was carried to its highest point, and his wines were rare and costly. The house, of course, was magnificently furnished, and bedrooms for gentlemen who were not in a state to walk into the splendid faro saloon, after the dinner was over, were always in readiness. Hearn made some heavy hauls during his checkered career. One youngster, just of age, and in the possession of a large estate, was done to the enormous sum of $50,000. He was a New Yorker. Time and again he was arrested for these matters but by some process judgment was suspended. Hearn was consistent. He was emphatically 'fast.' He was fond of the turf, and bet heavily, patronized everything of a sporting character which a gentleman of style consistently could favor, was an epicurean, as the term is understood, and a gourmand. Of late years his habits were very luxurious. His afternoons were spent in sleeping, smoking and drinking the very choicest and costliest of liquors, and all the night in riotous debauchery. Very few men of this age could have gone through with so much constitutional wear and tear as Hearn and lived so long. He spent his vast income rapidly, and as fortune was fickle, she would one day pour thousands into his coffers and the next deplete them, and when he died the sum left was just enough to clear his debts and leave a trifle for his family.

THE POWER OF ELEPHANTS.—Charles John Anderson, the African Traveler, writes home an account of his adventures in hunting elephants. In one of his letters he says: "The more I see of these stupendous animals, the more I am surprised. I should very much like to know the real strength of a full grown male; it must be something almost incredible. Nothing gives a person a better idea of their stupendous powers than a day's walk through one of their favorite haunts. There may be seen whole tracts of forest laid prostrate, and such trees sometimes! The trees, which are for the most part of a brittle nature, are usually broken short off by the beasts; but when they meet with a tree that seems to them too tough to snap at once, up it goes, roots and all. If they can do this in mere play, or for the sake of feeding on the branches, &c., of the prostrate trees, what will they not effect in a paroxysm of rage?"

A CURIOUS CASE.—The founder of the Smithsonian Institution was dying of an unknown complaint; five doctors had been unable to discover what his disease was. At length they told the patient he must die. Calling them all around him, he said: "My friends, after I die, make a post mortem examination and find out what ails me; for really I have heard such long and learned discussions on the subject, that I am dying to know what the disease is myself."

The Countess Culcoll, Byron's innamorata, is living at Paris. No longer young, she is said to be still beautiful, and wears curls. She wore them thirty years ago.

Sands Gathered from the Bank of the River of Life.

We smile to see the creeping babe grasping at sunbeams. Hoary-headed age, standing upon the brink of ETERNITY, with a heavy heart looks back through the shades and sun-lit sports of life's great highway to the cradle, and levels itself with the infant; declaring that "all is vanity and vexation of spirit" that the GRAND total of human existence is a heart-sickening record of sorrow and disappointments.

True merit, like true gold, needs no polishing to attract attention. It modestly stands upon its own natural footing, forbidding suspicion, and scorning deception.

GREAT talents, misapplied, bring curses on the head, and are an eye-sore to society. Like unto a house wrapped in flames in a great tornado. The blaze of a great, but prostituted mind, consumes its own substance, and spreads evil and alarm wherever the sparks fly.

True hearts like pure diamonds, show themselves as well in the dark as the sunshine. The latter are of much more value than the former to the man of the world, but oh, what a joy to meet in the former, as the home-sick soul journeys toward the "Golden City."

VULGARITY indicates a lack of sense; But to notice the same is its best defense.

TEARS shed upon the grave of the departed are fertilizing drops from the fount of the heart, refreshing the flowers of peace—a tribute from the sorrows of earth to the unfading glory of HEAVEN.

CONTENTMENT decorates the rough walls of the hovel with charms, which human artifice and boundless riches cannot bestow upon the marble palace of discontent.

THE WINE GLASS is a mirror of Futurity, in which we can see, if we look deep enough, the misery and poverty of coming years.

SPEAK KINDLY TO THY MOTHER.—Young man, speak kindly to thy mother, and courteously, tenderly, of her. But a little time, and you shall see her no more forever. Her eyes are dim, and her form is bent, and her shadow falls toward the grave. Others may love you fondly, but never again, while time is yours, shall any one's love be to you as that of your old, trampling, weakened mother has been. Through helpless infancy her throbbing breast was your safe protection and support; in wayward, tasty boyhood, she bore patiently with your thoughtless rudeness, she nursed you safely through a legion of ills and maladies.

Her hand bathed your burning brow, or moistened your parched lips; her eye lighted up the vigils, watching sleepless by your side as none but her could watch. O, speak not her name lightly, for you cannot live so many years as would suffice to thank her fully. Through reckless and impatient youth she is your counsellor and solace. To a bright manhood she guides your steps for improvement, nor even then forsakes or forgets.

Speak gently, then, and when you, too, shall be old, it shall in some degree lighten the remorse which shall be yours for other sins, to know that never wantonly have you outraged the respect due to your aged mother.

THE SUICIDE OF MISS HEIMAN.—We published on Saturday an account of the suicide of a young Jewess named Ulrica Heiman at Stockton. The following letter was found among her effects:

Stockton, August 11th, 1859.
Dear God forgive me. The step I am going to take I am forced to. I have erred, and I do not want to see the day when people shall be pointing after me with their fingers, saying, the good—; I had not a thought she would do anything of the kind.

Don't let my parents know anything of this. I beg my uncle and aunt to forgive me. My other cousin will forgive me—that I know.

You here in this house, I beg of you a hundred times to forgive me. I was in hopes to leave this house in a different way.

Oh, dear—, call your child back. I have tasted all the happiness on earth. I have loved and I have suffered. ULRICA.
The deceased was a native of Prussia and aged 21 years.

L's PREDOMINANT.—In the Louisiana lowlands lived lovely Lucy Leslie. Levi Larkins loved Lucy lavishly. Lucy loved Levi largely likewise. Levi lassoed Lucy—Lumpkins, legal lumphead, lashed the lovers together, and lots of little Larkins leaped limberly long, the lumpkins, lending loud lustre to the land, and likewise causing lively pleasure to the hearts of Levi and Lucy Larkins.

THE REMAINS of the late Secretary Mason, of Washington Territory, were buried from the capitol at Olympia, on the morning of the 25th. The funeral ceremonies were witnessed by a large concourse of people, after the conclusion of which, ex-Gov. Stevens delivered a eulogy upon the deceased. During the funeral services, and while proceeding to the grave minute-guns were fired, and the bells tolled.

Much excitement has been created in Reach, (Canada) by the discovery in that vicinity of a wild woman. She was discovered by a party of gentlemen who were hunting. The whole neighborhood are in pursuit and a capture must be the consequence.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Sept. 28, 1859

Salutatory.

By the Valley Tan preceding this, its readers perceived a change in its editorial management.

It is unnecessary for us to indite an extended introduction, but proper to draw outlines of what we expect our future labors to be.

Although young, we are not altogether unaccustomed to the pen; although we lay claim to but very limited natural ability, in this position we stand in need of but little. The errors which we have enlisted to battle against are so palpable that "he who runs may read, and the wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err."

Knowing well, notwithstanding the traitorous sentiments which we hear uttered on the streets daily, and preached in Church weekly, that we are still under theegis of the American flag,—that that flag carries protection for its advocates and subjects even to the very dung-pon-doors of constitutional despotisms,—it is not at all probable that here, in the very centre of our common country, we will relinquish one iota of our individual rights. Our opinions we will write, and the laws of our native land we will uphold.

"Nor heed the storm that howls along the sky," Never having been educated in that method of composing ideas into essays which expand "mole-hills into mountains," our readers must bear with our old-fashioned, self-acquired style, and submit, for the time being, to simplicity and brevity—plain things plainly told.

Personalities in conducting a newspaper we ignore. If persons are at times handled by us without gloves, the reason will be their inseparable connection with principles which we wish to speak to, and never from individual and private animosities. It is a fact, well known by all acquainted with the condition of "this people," that there exists here in Utah a concentration of power; so cunningly devised and craftily managed, that while it does not present an open front in opposition to the rights of man, it sneakily ramifies its various functions, under a cowardly guise of secrecy, binding in ignominious servility the minds of the supporters of the revolting system. This monopoly wily promises the substance of liberty, while in reality it yields not the shadow of bona fide constitutional freedom,—instead, it shackles the mental, and reduces to subservience, the physical man.

In treating of these things, of course the authors and direct supporters of the transparent imposition will not be eulogized by any means, but those of common sense, who are conscientious in their belief, will find nothing to get angry at; if, unfortunately they should elevate "their bristles" like "quills on the fretful porcupine," and come at us with a wicked six-shooter for an apology, the explanation would probably be something after the Heber C. Kimball fashion:—"Well, what are you going to do about it? It's so, and all the devils in hell combined cannot prevent it." There are members of the Mormon fraternity for whom we have the highest regard as individuals; they know how we stand relative to their principles.

Who next will raise the cry of "fire?" A few ambulances laden with venom, it is said, left for the far east the other day. It would not surprise us to hear of loud talk in the great City down there by and bye. But they were better. The people of the United States, we trust, are opening their eyes and they will watch closer and act with more precaution in future.

But should this not be the case, should the contemptible wolves, who have prowled around us so long, watching for victims and bones to gnaw, succeed in raising another storm; we will advise, we do not dread, the result. Let the storm gather again, if rather it gush. God protects the honest and virtuous. We have weathered many a storm, and can do it again. When the squall comes, we will reef top-sails and hold under the poles once more. We know we have done right. We have no political principles but find an endorsement in the Constitution of our country.—Mountaineer.

We have to give the "lawyer" editors further consideration. As they are gentlemen of erudition, we will not presume to give them advice; but a humbly proffered suggestion may not be out of place. Gentlemen, when you wish to be effective with men of sense, the closer you adhere to principle, and the further you keep from silly school-house paroxysms of imaginary Websterian force, the closer you will come to the mark you aim at. What is the use of all those tear-drawing (?) words about your grit, and the persecutions you have undergone, and expect to go through? All the objection we have to your verbosity is, when we find occasion to clip from you, you enumber our columns "too much for so little."

"The people of the United States are opening their eyes, and they will probably watch closer, and act with more precaution, in the future."

sustainer of the one-man-power—should recognize the power and supremacy of "the people." We think the dose which was administered has had some effect.

From the words "in future," we presume the idea intended to be conveyed is, that "the people" have heretofore erred in their treatment of "this people." Well, now, if the "lawyers" are determined to play upon the same string all the time, and every time, they will excuse us for doing so in following them up. As they desire the people to open their eyes, perhaps we can give our countrymen information, from time to time, that will tend to effect that desideratum so "devoutly wished for." We will again quote from the "Apostles":

"To those who have their minds open to eternal things, spiritual and temporal things are all one."—Brigham Young.

"How can you become impregnated with the Spirit and power of God, except you become impregnated through us? There is no true path, except to do as you are told by those whom the Lord has called and chosen and placed to direct you."—H. C. Kimball.

"What course shall we take? The course we are taught and directed from time to time by the revelations of the servants of God, and that will make us one."—H. C. Kimball.

"I mean what I say, and this people say they will not have any other Governor, (than Brigham) and especially any one that has to come here under arms, for we consider that any man is a damned curse that has to come here under arms to rule over us."—H. C. Kimball.

Here we have it. "There is no true path, except to do as you are told by those whom the Lord has called and chosen and placed to direct you;" so says head apostle Heber C. Kimball. Ah! but this is a religious matter is it, and the constitution of the United States concedes in emphatic terms the right to worship God just as we please,—does it? This concession is so broad in its nature, that even an idolator can exonerate himself beneath its plain signification, can he, as the courts in California adjudged he could? As you are "lawyers," it would seem hardly necessary to mention the fact, that every principle in the American constitution is a constituent link in that chain of principles which unanimously combine in binding each and every State in the Union together under the all-pervading principle of "Equal and exact justice to all men." What does "religion" mean, as mentioned in the constitution? It plainly signifies, the rendering of homage by man to God—the veneration of the creature for the Creator—a matter of conscience, in which no man has a right to interfere between his fellow-man and Almighty God. Of course, if one man interferes with the religious principles of another, the man so interfering violates the constitution of the United States, and according to the provision of that instrument, is no religious man at all—his professed religion is a myth, a falsity. Does the constitution essay to tell a man what the nature of his religion shall be? No, whoever says it does "is a liar, and the truth is not in him." Now, you will ask, we suppose, how is it then that you rail against the Mormons, when your jurists unhesitatingly assert the right of the semi-civilized Chinese to come to this country and worship their idols? To be plain and unpelevating, the reason is because, notwithstanding as a people, in most of their main characteristics, they are sunk far beneath you Mormons in general enlightenment, yet they are much more civilized in religion, according to the interpretation of our laws of what religion is. If a Chinaman wishes to pass by the popular sanctuaries of the day, and in a peaceful, unobtrusive manner, enter a temple of his own choice, and kneel down before a false god, carved out of wood, stone or gold, he has a clear right to do so. Any missionary, representing a lawful denomination, has an indisputable right, and it is a personal duty on his part, to turn the superstitious idolator's mind to better things, by moral suasion; but so soon as he resorts to persecution and proscription to achieve this end, he tramples upon the laws of his country. Could the Brahmanite come to this country, and practice his religion? No, he could not: because the tenets of his faith, just like yours in some cases, are written in blood; his religion teaches him that deliberate murder appeases the wrath of his gods; what with him is religion with us is criminality—and it could not be suffered. Could the Mohammedan, with impunity, bring a plurality of wives, and settle among the people of the United States? We think not; for in so doing, he would be indulging in what the common law of all civilized and christian nations stigmatizes as one of the most loathsome relics of the darkest barbarism—as a crime conflicting with everything noble in human nature, and opposing to every unabrogated law of heaven. Here you may ask us, if any one of the States, by virtue of certain rights which were not compromised away in entering into the federal compact, would not have the right to pass laws endorsing and sustaining polygamy? Our reply finds its origination in the positive condition of things. Any State in the Union could do so, regardless of the prejudices, customs, and laws of nations and sister States, if it could be done without violating the over-riding authority of the constitution; and this they would not do if such laws would not infringe upon the religious privileges of others and others' guaranteed rights. But is it at all probable that any of the enlightened States of the Union will ever so far loose their self-respect, and respect for christianity and civilization, as to desire to take such a retrogressive step? Just about as probable as it is that the heresies of Mormonism will ever get a foothold in a land of freedom, where the people, and not monarchs, are the rulers. The answer then, to the question, is, such outrages never will be tolerated in the United States. If you can find any encouragement in hoping for a State government in this, take it. But in this, we only make reference to one branch of your religion—polygamy—and probably deem more liberally with you upon this question than the majority of our countrymen would take all of your principles combined in a system of religion, and the institution could not be sustained, in accordance with the principles of the constitution, in any State of the American Union, even if all the inhabitants of such state were in favor of it. Would you like to see this proved? Well, if Brigham Young tells the truth, we will prove it:

"I know, when you hear my brethren telling about cutting people off from the earth, that you consider it a strong doctrine; but it is to save them, not to destroy them."—Sermon of Brigham Young.

Jedediah M. Grant, then third Connellor to Brigham, addressing the people the same day, at the Tabernacle says:—

"I say that there are men and women, that I would advise to go to the President (Brigham) immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case, and let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."

Is not this an unconstitutionality? If men choose, at any time, to go contrary to your religion, in certain things, you will "let a place be selected, and let a committee shed their blood" will you? Is this "equal and exact justice to all men?" Gentlemen, under our institutions all have a right to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences, and you cannot diabolically murder persons for doing just as they please in these matters. But we do not understand the case, say you? The explanation is, that you cut their throats that they may go to heaven, is it? This dark, hellish, inhuman dogma, harmonizes about as much with the principles of the United States constitution as powder does with fire; the chance for the Mormon people to become a State, so long as they entertain such sentiments, is about as likely as that of the United States resolving themselves into a government of Nero tyranny and Herod cruelty. Now you are sufficiently irritated, undoubtedly, to demand why we refer to these things—these ecclesiastical monstrosities—in speaking of what you have written outside of religion in your paper. We answer, you have written nothing unbecoming by the Mormon leaders and you dare not write anything, nor orally express anything, aside from their dictations. You are servile tools to the church leaders, and cannot stand up like a citizen in the United States, and assert yourselves freemen. Now you want this proved, do you? Very good:

"To those who have their minds open to eternal things, spiritual and temporal things are all one."—Brigham Young.

"There is no true path, except to do as you are told by those whom the Lord has called," &c.

Unless you declare you are no longer Mormons, your servility is proved by the above quotations. We do not want to hurt your feelings by these remarks, but generously wish to help you "open the eyes of the people of the United States." And more, we wish to show your superlative impudence and inexcusable ingratitude in vituperating against that country, and the officers of that country, under whose flag you are protected, and from whose soil your subsistence is drawn, and at whose hands you are proffered the exercise of those inherent rights specified in the constitution which the hierarchy to which you belong, from the very nature of its organization, cannot bestow upon you. You writhe in the galling chains which you have imposed upon yourselves, in all the hellish misery of self destroying fiends, and when you see the delegates of liberation standing over you, hammer in hand, to burst asunder your fetters; like the blacksmith's viper, you hiss and dart the tongue of malignity with ever-increasing fury as each succeeding effort goes to prove the utter abortiveness of all your attempts to sink your venomous fangs. Was ever before such a deplorable picture presented to the eyes of man? When we see men sunk in slavery that they cannot extricate themselves from, our deepest sympathy their condition elicits; when we behold them passively slaves when they can help themselves, but have not the patriotism to try, it is with mingled feelings of pity and detestation we consider them; but when a community of people become voluntary, willing slaves, and deliberately oppress liberty when offered them, we—our pen cannot command the words. Shame, shame on you, for claiming connection with the glorious constitution of our country, when your religion is your worldly, as well as your heavenly director, and, if it had the power, would strike a death blow to every principle of that immortal instrument. Polygamists, theocrats and religious (?) assassins claiming kindred with Republicanism! Why, to use your own language, "they strike at the foundation," and "loosen the corner-stones of the whole national edifice," and had it not been for that mercy for which our government is proverbial, outraged justice would have smitten to the dust long since the audacious pretension.

Now, gentlemen, just crack your whip at government officers to your hearts' content,—you only waste your lash in the open air. Officials sent hither cannot tyrannize over you, if they desired to do so; you may try to make your own people believe it to your extreme ability, but the people of the United States, of all parties and denominations, have common sense enough to know better. You insult their integrity and intelligence when you tell them the machinery of their government is so recreant to the purposes of its creation as to permit anything of the sort. Furthermore, gentlemen, so long as Utah is a Territory, under all administrations, you must submit to such officers as the people of the United States choose to send to you—they cannot trust the cherished principles of liberty in your own hands,—and so long as Mormonism continues the Mormonism of today you cannot disgrace the sisterhood by coming into the Union of States. Put that in your pipe and smoke it.

Eastern Mail.

The stage from the States arrived, as usual, inside of schedule time, bringing an immense quantity of mail matter,—between thirty and forty large bags.

The contractors, owing to the irregularity in postal arrangements along the line of their route, are subjected to greater inconvenience and expense than can be equitably imposed upon them, under the specifications of their contract. We notice efforts in certain quarters to lead the public mind into erroneous views on this matter, and next week we will handle the subject at length.

The "lawyers" gratify their malignant dispositions in their last by indulging in a basely false and harmlessly spiteful article against the character of Secretary Hartnett. The ground-work of the attack is, that the Secretary "didn't pay his rent." It is hardly necessary for us to say that Mr. Hartnett left an agent, fully empowered and provided, to attend to his personal business until his return, which will be in less than three months from the time of his departure. The Secretary's one of them "cursed gentiles," who Heber said the Mormons never would live under again, isn't he? Oh, yes! the case is a clear one.

On the first page will be found a communication over the signature "Observer." In the second paragraph in this letter, since its publication, we noticed the words "degenerate scoundrels," alluding to the Mormons, as a people. Had we read the letter through when it was first in our hands, it would have been excluded from our columns. After having merely glanced over its contents, we handed it to the compositors. Such harsh language we do not ourselves indulge in, unless in elucidating principles, and of course cannot allow it from our contributors. There are many dignified and honorable men among the Mormon people.

The balance in the United States Treasury on the 22d of Aug., was $4,123,000. The amount of receipts for the week ending on that day was $1,606,000; of drafts paid $1,444,000, and of drafts issued $1,607,000.

Our numerous patrons are hereby informed, that as the first volume of the "Tan" is about to close, they will be waited upon by one authorized, for settlement. We hope our collector will meet with a hearty response.

We regret much to record the fact that an employee accompanying Secretary Hartnett, was injured by the coach upon which he was seated capsizing, a few miles outside of the city. Medical assistance was immediately dispatched for, and the unlucky man is now receiving all the assistance that science and kind treatment can yield.

Our second volume, the beginning of which is close at hand, will be of increased size. The necessary material for this is on the road and will arrive in due season.

"Then art come from among us, Gentle Johnny, Like a chafed rivulet thou didst depart; Thou hast fled, and with the money— And left thy friends cut to the heart?"—Polio of the Mountaineer.

Yes, he's gone from your midst, servile ass, In the dampest disgust he went away; If you return, you can save those "blacks," And speak your mother tongue and—bray!

EDITOR OF THE "VALLEY TAN."

The last number of the Mountaineer contains an abusive and wantonly attack upon John Hartnett, Esq., which for coarseness and gross personalities, has been rarely equalled in those journals whose common staple is defamation and slander, and whose existence depends upon the means extorted by detraction and abuse. The article referred to differs from the diatribes of venom and slang which issues almost weekly from the pulpit of the Tabernacle in this city only, in its greater personality, and if it be possible in its increased virulence, private hatred and malignity no doubt combining with considerations of a more general character in giving additional gall to the ire of the editors. The time selected for this onslaught is worthy of notice, as well as the manner of it; it was made two days after Mr. Hartnett had left this city, on his way to his home in Missouri, and when he could have no chance of repelling the foul accusations made against him. What he has not an opportunity of doing at present, we will do for him. Not that his character at home, where he is well known, or his reputation and standing here among those whose opinions are not governed by clanish dictation or personal grudge, requires any vindication from assaults like the one contained in the Mountaineer. His entire life is a refutation of the charges made against him to all who know the man, and it is only to those who are unacquainted with him that the article can possibly do him any injury, and it is to correct any false impressions that may be made upon the minds of such, by the article in question, that we are induced to enter upon Mr. Hartnett's vindication in any direct manner from the charges made against him.

The article against Mr. Hartnett, as if seeking for sources on which to ground an attack against him, sets out by stating that "Mr. Hartnett, who pompously styles himself Secretary of State, has left for the east, &c." Mr. Hartnett, we suppose, in his official acts, appended his title and style of office; this, of course, is necessary, in order to stamp his acts as official, a fact which the editors of the Mountaineer should very well know, for we believe that they have both held official position, either civil or military, under a certain local government, once organized in their Territory, and to all their official acts and communications we suppose these gentlemen added the name of their office: indeed the matter is set at rest so far as one of them is concerned, by a report now before us, made to the Governor of the Territory, and which in addition to the name of one of those gentlemen is affixed the high-sounding, not to say pompous title of "Adjutant General Militia, Utah Territory."

We do not know that this title was ever used "pompously." Our belief, on the contrary, is, that it was more modestly, and with the humility that should always be connected with high official position, and which constitutes more than place the chief glory and honor of office. If, by the charge of "pompously styling himself Secretary of State," the editors of the Mountaineer mean to allege that Mr. Hartnett made any vain and ostentatious parade of office, or used his title out of place, or in any offensive manner, it is certainly a matter of news to those who know him best; and who were most intimate with him here. But this is incidental only, and a mere prelude to the charge which follows, and which furnished the motive for the attack. Mr. Hartnett, it is said, "much to his discredit as a gentleman, and especially one who should try and make honorable the name of his government, left without paying his rent." The article then adds that "an attachment was sent after him, which will probably be tried in the Probate Court in a few days." Mr. Hartnett "was not himself detained, as he assured the sheriff that his agent in this city would see to the settlement." A plain statement of facts derived from a source believed to be reliable, will afford the best refutation of the charges incidentally conveyed in the above paragraphs.

We say incidentally, for the impression made on reading them is, that Mr. Hartnett attempted a fraud by leaving the country without settling with his creditor; and that it was only by virtue of a writ of attachment that he was induced to make any arrangement for the settlement of his rent. Instead of all this being true, Mr. Hartnett made arrangements with an agent in this city, before leaving here, to pay for the quarter's rent due on the building lately occupied by him, when it became due, at the same rate heretofore charged and paid by him; but the owner of the building, after he had entered on the present quarter, which has not yet expired, demanded an amount of rent four times as great as that heretofore paid. Mr. H. did not see proper to comply with the demands which he regarded as ex-fortunate unjust; ready, any time, that has this fact duly informed editors of the denials; temptible injure the tally do. We will here and actions, namely have some eye and dragging notice of tainere, to reman act as out the w nett; who and stand attesting paper ed through ground, I pealed to. This I man to to of the M pose, her proper rponents t of their. We col gree of f practice debt and, a venal i be lished which th treat wit beancee selves to be found affairs of the publi

On Th between Whitlock $2,000, mile from two hou came a was a alone.

On Sa Miss Be We are crowded able to ances co dy of "C Othell Westwo H. How ano, Mr of Veni stead; I Westwo

The i White, and Tho parts; a tage of (which' The oth the exti Westwo faults, we coul knowle being hi Trage and Mr Banks Mr. Jon ner that Mrs cy dang pearne practice site. I danseus does, an abe will

The mirth-p Victim Northwood, E is quite formed; usual, I hearse i particul the man the stag An evid able on was not sociatio ception the timi commen have m ought t touch of the hour and wanton... which for... has been... whose com... and the means ex... The article... weekly from... this city only... if it be pos... private ha... ming with... character the... of the for this on... as well as the... days after... on his way... he could... foul accusa... he has not... present, we... character at... or his repu... those whose... loush dicta... any vindi... contained... life is a re... nist him to... only to those... that the ar... injury, and it... that may... by the ar... induced to... ation in any... age against thett, as if... ground an... stating that... styles him... for the east... e, in his of... and style of... ry, in order... which the... very well... have both... or military... to, once or... all their... we suppose... of their of... report now... of the Ter... the name of... of the high... of "Adju... ry."

e was ever... in the con... tly, and al... always be... tion, and... the chief... the charge... secretary of... near mean... any vain... used his... manner, those who... intimate... only, which... follow for the... "much to... especially... orable the... at paying... that "an... rich will... out in a... ot himself... that his... he settle... a derived... ble, will... argues in... graphs.

pression Hartnett country and that attach- any ar- his rent. Hartnett in this for the ately oc- e, at the paid by after be r, which amount refore comply as ex-fortunate, and under the circumstances, as unjust; and it is still determined, if possible, to resist the collection of the claim, but is ready, through his agent here, to settle, at any time, for the rent due, at the same rate that has been heretofore charged; and of this fact the owner of the building has been duly informed. With these facts, which the editors of the Mountaineer will not attempt to deny; how frivolous and meanly contemptible are the charges made by them to injure the reputation of another, and how fatally do they react on their own heads.

We might very properly close our article here and leave those editors to their own reflections, and to the judgment which the community must place upon their acts; but we have something to add concerning the propriety and taste with which they have acted in dragging a more private matter before the notice of the public. The editors of the Mountaineer, as they sometimes take occasion to remark to their readers, are lawyers; they acted as counsel for the gentleman who sued out the writ of attachment against Mr. Hartnett; what then will be thought of their taste and standard of professional honor, after instituting a suit against a man, to use a newspaper edited by themselves, as a medium through which to assail him, on the very ground, too, that legal redress has been appealed to?

This is, indeed, a new mode of bringing a man to terms, and the clients of the editors of the Mountaineer will hereafter, we suppose, have the gratification of gauging all proper redress at law, and having their opponents thoroughly "wooled" in the columns of their lawyers' paper.

We commend these gentlemen to some degree of prudence and discretion in the new practice they have introduced. If to owe a debt and not pay it, or to be sued thereon, it be a venial fault, or crime for which a man is to be lashed in a newspaper, it is one at least which the editors of the Mountaineer should treat with some degree of leniency and forbearance, otherwise they might expose themselves to similar attacks, if any person could be found so vindictive as to drag the private affairs of these gentlemen before the gaze of the public.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Sept., 20th, 1859.

On Thursday last, the long expected match between Mr. Johnson's sorrel horse and Mr. Whitlock's grey colt for the reputed sum of $2,000, was decided on a track about a mile from Fairfield. After waiting nearly two hours the start was effected, when it became apparent to the most verdant, that it was a disgraceful sell—the sorrel entered alone.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Westwood and Miss Beard received a benefit at the Theatre. We are happy to state that the house was crowded in every part, numbers not being able to obtain admittance. The performances commenced with Shakespeare's Tragedy of "Othello," with the following cast: Othello, Mr. R. C. White; Iago, P. M. Westwood; Cassio, J. G. Cooke; Roderigo, H. Howard; Erabantio, J. Rutledge; Gratiano, Mr. Hall; Lodovico, A. Thorne; Duke of Venice, O. L. Baldwin; Antonio, Plumstead; Desdemona, Mrs. Tuckett; Emilia, Westwood.

The part of Othello is too heavy for Mr. White. Messrs. Cooke, Warren, Baldwin and Thorne, were respectable in their allotted parts, and appeared to possess the advantage of knowing something about the text, (which is generally considered desirable.) The other male characters were ludicrous in the extreme, with the exception of Mr. Westwood, who, although he has many faults, and whose elocution was not what we could have wished, yet by his thorough knowledge of the part, saved the piece from being hissed.

Tragedy is not the forte of Mrs. Tuckett and Mrs. Westwood. Miss Beard sang the "Banks of Allan Water," very prettily, and Mr. Jones gave two songs in a better manner than usual.

Mrs. Lucy Stevenson, appeared in two fancy dances; she is young, has a very good appearance, and dances well; she requires practice to give that finish which is requisite. It is something in the desert to find a danseuse who possesses the advantages she does, and we hail her visit with pleasure—she will be a great favorite.

The entertainments concluded with the mirth-provoking force, of "The Widows Victim." The characters by Messrs. Shaw, Northrop and Cooke, Messdms D. Westwood, P. M. Westwood, and Tuckett, which is quite sufficient to ensure it being well performed, it received great applause. It is usual, we believe, in large theatres to rehearse the pieces intended to be performed—particularly five-act ones; but it seems from the manner in which Othello was put upon the stage, that the M. D. A. dispense with it. An evident want of preparation was observable on Saturday evening, and the Tragedy was not nearly as well performed as the Association could do it. We must also take exceptions to the period which elapsed between the time the curtain drops and the music commences. The orchestra do not seem to have made up their minds what to play, it ought to strike up the moment the curtain touches the stage.

DRAMA.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.—On last Monday evening, near eight o'clock, two shots were heard discharged upon the corner of Second East Temple and Second South Temple St. Upon repairing to that locality, immediately after the reports, we saw the body of a man stretched out upon the side walk, with the brains oozing from his head. A centre shot had been given, and death must have instantaneously ensued. The deceased was named John Ghren, and had been engaged in the butchering business. His character we hear universally spoken of as good. The circumstances of the death are hidden and vague, mysterious and incomprehensible. The prevailing opinion, we believe, is, that the deceased committed suicide, this sentiment being strengthened by the fact that a pistol was found lying by his body; but would it not have been policy if the man was murdered, for the murderer to have dropped his weapon on the body of his victim?

Col. Stambaugh, United States Surveyor General for Utah, and suit, arrived in this city last Monday evening. The General and company have been entertained by Dr. Forney, Superintendent Indian Affairs, since their arrival, and with whom they now remain.

We made a call, the other day, upon Mr. M. Cannon, at his Daguerrean Rooms and from specimens exhibited to us are prepared to attest his artistic skill to be of the first order. His rooms are commodious and comfortable, his facilities for prosecuting his business extensive, and his prices reasonable. In short, Mr. Cannon is "cocked and primed," ready to discharge himself creditably.

In the case of the Territory of Utah vs. T. H. Ferguson, indicted for murder in the first degree, the jury, after hearing full testimony in the case, and argument thereupon, brought in a verdict of "murder in the first degree," and the prisoner was sentenced by the Judge, to be hanged on Friday, the October 28th, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, P. M.

The third Judicial District Court has adjourned until next term.

We glean from the Eastern mail, which arrived yesterday, 27th inst., the following items of news:

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—The War Department has issued orders detailing the following officers for duty at the Military Academy, West Point. They will report to the Superintendent by the 31st instant.

Department of Engineering.—Lieutenant Godfrey Heitzell, corps of Engineers.

Department of Ethics.—Lieutenant Herman Biggs, First Infantry.

Department of Spanish.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Samuel H. Locket, corps of Engineers; Brevet Second Lieutenant E. B. Carling, Second Artillery.

Military Staff.—Lieut. S. D. Holabird, First Infantry.

The term of service of the Brevet Second Lieutenants detailed above as assistants in the department of Spanish, is limited to one year.

The following transfers of officers in the Second Regiment of Artillery are approved: Lieut. Lloyd Beal, from Light company M to company K; Lieut. Edward R. Platt, from company K to Light company M.

The following assignments are now made of engineer officers:—Lieut. R. K. Meade, on being relieved from the Military Academy, will repair to the city of New York and report for duty as assistant to Major J. G. Barnard; Lieut. G. W. C. Lee is relieved from duty in the department of California, and will repair to the City of Washington and report for duty to the chief of his bureau.

Leave of absence for six months, with permission to visit Europe for the benefit of his health, is granted to Capt. W. D. Smith, Second dragoons, on the special recommendation of the medical officer.

An extension of leave of absence for four months is granted to Lieutenants Harrison and Porter, Second Cavalry.

Naval Intelligence.

The United States frigate Cumberland was at Funchal bay, Madeira, on the 8th of August, and was expected to sail immediately for Portsmouth. N. H. Officers and crew were all well.

The United States frigate Constellation, Captain John S. Nicolas, was at Maderia on the 8th ult.

Advices from the Macedonia, Capt. Levy, at Leghorn, August 13, state that she was about to leave to spend the remainder of the cruising season off the coast of Syria, paying special attention to whatever the American Minister at Constantinople might suggest as important to American interests.

The United States sloop of war Levant, Commander Wm. E. Hunt, which sailed from this port last May to join the Pacific Squadron, was at Rio Janerio July 23.

WAITING FOR DIVORCE.—The wife of Sherman Booth, of Milwaukee, recently tried there for the seduction of a girl of fifteen, has commenced an action for divorce. The parties are on good terms notwithstanding, reside in the same house, and walk out together arm in arm.

The following we extract from the comments of Bennett of the "Herald" on the letter of Greeley to the "Tribune":

"When fanatic meets fanatic, and both are in the opposite extremes, something ludicrous may be expected from the collision. Horace Greeley, after writing home fabulous gold stories from a modern Ophir, which deceived thousands to their ruin, visits Brigham Young, in Utah, and writes an account of that personage and his harem which is equally reliable. His letter will be found in another column. The idea of such a man as Young submitting tamely, like a child, to be put through his catechism by such a man as Greeley, is a story that will do to 'tell the horse marines.' Horace reports his questions and the answers of Brigham; but he takes good care not to report Brigham's questions and his own answers. He says that 'in two hours conversation much was said incidentally that would not be worth reporting,' and as some of the conversation 'assumed somewhat the character of a disputation, he could hardly give it impartially.' Now the parts left out are just those in which Young floored Greeley with his posers.

"Now it is singular how extremes meet. Horace Greeley, the pot, calls Brigham Young, the kettle, black. The one, by his polygamy, degrades woman below her sphere; and the other, by his woman's rights, degrades man and unsexes woman, throwing her out of her sphere, and sending her among the clouds or to the moon. Greeley pronouncing on Young and his Mormonism is like a lunatic in one ward of an asylum pronouncing a different kind of lunatic in another ward mad."

Here allow us to say, that notwithstanding the keenest observations of Greeley, something worse than polygamy was hidden from him by Brigham. Read what is in this paper for proof.

A table compiled from official documents gives the number of Free Masons in the United States as 211,538, and the income of all the Lodges as about $450,000.

In the conclusion of a lengthy, and apparently sincere, letter from this city, Horace Greeley closes thus:—

If I hazard any criticism on Mormonism generally, I reserve them for a separate letter, being determined to make this a fair and full expose of the doctrines and polity, in the very words of its prophet, so far as I can recall them. I do not believe President Young himself could present them in terms calculated to render them less obnoxious to the Gentile world than the above. But I have a right to add here, because I said it to the assembled chiefs at the close of the above colloquy, that the degradation (or, if you please, the restriction) of woman to the single office of child bearing and its accessories, is an inevitable consequence of the system here paramount. I have not observed a sign in the streets, an advertisement in the journals of this Mormon metropolis, whereby a woman proposes to do anything whatever. No Mormon has ever cited to me his wife's or any woman's opinion on any subject; no Mormon woman has been introduced or has spoken to me; and, though I have been asked to visit Mormons in their houses, no one has spoken of his wife (or wives) desiring to see me, or his desiring me to make her (or their) acquaintance, or voluntarily indicated the existence of such a being or beings. I will not attempt to report our talk on this subject, because, unlike what I have above given, it assumed somewhat the character of a disputation, and I could hardly give it impartially; but one remark made by President Young I think I can give accurately, and it may serve as a sample of all that was offered on that side. It was in these words, I think, exactly:—"If I did not consider myself competent to transact a certain business without taking my wife's or any woman's counsel with regard to it, I think I ought to let that business alone."

The spirit with regard to woman, of the entire Mormon, as of all other polygamic systems, is fairly displayed in this avowal. Let any such system become established and prevalent, and woman will soon be confined to the harem, and her appearance in the street with unveiled face will be accounted immodest. I joyfully trust that the genius of the nineteenth century tends to a solution of the problem of woman's sphere and destiny radically different from this.

H. G.

The Thugs of the Rocky Mountains.—More Outrages by the Utahs.

On Thursday evening last, we received a call from Messrs. Wm. Taylor, Daniel Kelley, and Amos and Norman Reid, who have just returned from the South Park. They told us a tale that filled us with horror and dismay. On the 25th ult., when about two hundred miles southwest of this point, they came up to the bodies of six white and one red man—all stripped and scalped. They also found the carcasses of eight animals—five horses and three mules—in the immediate vicinity of the spot on which the mutilated human bodies were stretched. From all appearances, the finders were led to believe that the victims of the Utah ferocity had been members of a large company, and that the Indian belonged to a friendly tribe and acted as the guide of the former.

This is another of the series of brutal outrages committed by the blood-thirsty savages of the "Great Basin" upon our mining population during the present season. Their victims can already be numbered by the dozens, and yet no steps have been taken to meet out just retribution, and avenge the slaughter of our countrymen. Blood calls for blood. These North American Thugs should be forthwith stopped in their career of carnage and plunder. Nothing can be expected from the government this fall, and hence would it not be proper and timely for the people of this country to rise of their own accord and see that the perpetrators of those rapidly succeeding depredations shall not remain unpunished?—Rocky Mountain News, Sept. 3.

From the New York Herald.
THE GENERAL NEWSPAPER DESPATCH.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1, 1859.

General Lane, in a private letter, says, in relation to the presidency, he is content to place himself in the hands of his friends, and will take no steps to bring himself before the people as a candidate.

Judge Douglas intends leaving Washington on Monday next, proceeding via Pittsburg to attend the State Fair at Chicago, on the 12th inst. It is now probable he will be able, while on his way, to comply with the Democratic State Central Committee of Ohio, to canvass that State so far as to deliver several speeches.

Ex-Senator Soule is in this city.

Later from Europe.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER INDIAN.

FARTHER POINT, August 28, Midnight.—The steamship Indian, from Liverpool, with dates to Wednesday, the 17 inst., has passed this point on her way to Quebec. The steamers Borussia and North Breton had arrived at Liverpool.

At Zurich on the 15th inst., a conference between the Austrian and French plenipotentiaries took place, lasting two hours. A Cabinet courier arrived from Paris on that day. A second Austrian plenipotentiary, W. Welzemburg, had not left Zurich for Vienna as reported. The plenipotentiaries held a formal sitting on the 13th and 15th, but were engaged in festivities.

FRANCE.—The military fete at Paris, on the entry of Napoleon, proved to be a very grand affair. The troops were headed by the Emperor, and the display made was most imposing. The Emperor has granted a full amnesty to all political offenders.

A Te Deum took place in Paris, on the 15th in honor of the fete; Napoleon, the plenipotentiaries and members of the Federal Council were present.

The Paris Correspondent of the Daily News asserts that the Zurich Conference is a dead-lock.

The Emperor Napoleon exhibited symptoms of annoyance at the conduct of the Court of Vienna, and the recent articles in the Paris journals in praise of Kossuth and Garibaldi, are attributed to this feeling.

The grand military spectacle which had been prohibited in the Paris theaters out of consideration for Austria, has been permitted to reappear.

The Ministerial journals of Vienna insist very strongly on the stipulations at Villa Franca being carried out at Paris.

ITALY.—The rumored Red Republican movement in Parma is contradicted.

Special Dispatch to the Missouri Republican.

ATLANTIC, September 2, 1859.

The Express from Salt Lake City arrived this morning, bringing dates from Fort Kearney to the 28th ult. We extract from it as follows:

Companies A and C have arrived here from Utah. Company C has gone into camp at Prairie Dog Creek. Two companies of Infantry from Fort Ridgely are expected here shortly. Lieutenants GILL of the Fourth Artillery, and ROBERTSON of the Dragoons, left on Thursday last for Washington.

The roads are in fine order and trains making rapid progress.

FROM THE MOHAVE COUNTRY.—DEPREDA-TIONS OF THE INDIANS.—The Los Angeles Star of the 13th August says: By the Overland mail, which arrived yesterday morning, Capt. Hancock, U. S. A., received intelligence from Fort Mohave that the Indians continued their hostility, and that the troops under Major Armistead were engaged in pursuing them. Firing was going on between the parties when the express left, and the huts and crops of the Indians were being destroyed. Dispatches have been received by Capt. Hancock, from Gen. Clark, and forwarded immediately to Major Armistead. Orders have been given by the General to detain the herd of cattle until joined by an escort. We have not heard what troops have been ordered on this duty; probably the First Dragoons, from Fort Tejon.

Since the foregoing was written, we have learned that another dispatch has been received by Capt. Hancock, containing details of Indian depredations. They have destroyed the garden at the post; three of them swam up to the bank where a boat was fastened, and attempted to steal it; the sentinel fired on them and thinks he killed one of them; the others escaped. Next morning, on examining the locality where the sentinel was stationed twenty-five arrows were found, shot into the bank—they had been shooting at the sentinel before making the attempt to steal the boat. A party was sent out in pursuit of the Indians; several shots were fired but without effect. The Indians are persevering in their hostility, and will, no doubt, bring down on themselves a severe castigation. The herdsman who was missing, on the first outbreak, when the mules were run off, has not since been heard of.

Major Armistead brought the men of Beale's party, with their wagons and baggage, into camp. The cattle and stores, intended for the troops at the post, are encamped on the Mohave, awaiting the escort, which is to consist of thirty-five men, with two officers, of the First Dragoons, from Fort Tejon. They are to remain at the post, subject to the orders of Major Armistead, should he require them. But as that portion of the country has been lately overflowed by the Colorado; it is supposed mounted men cannot be made available in pursuit of the Indians.

"Husband I must have some change today." "Well, stay at home and take care of the children; that will be change enough; say how?"

GARIBALDI AT FLORENCE.—A letter from Florence of the 15th ultimo says: Gen. Garibaldi arrived here this morning at ten. He was proceeding in a carriage, incognito, to the New York Hotel, when he was recognized by a group of volunteers in the street. They immediately ran after the carriage, shouting, "It is he! it is he! Garibaldi for ever!"

You may imagine what a cortege was collected by the time the carriage had reached the center of the town. It was a display of true popular enthusiasm. The news ran from street to street, from house to house, and in a short time Garibaldi's name was in every mouth. All the windows were instantly decorated with flags. The streets where Garibaldi's hotel stands is crowded with people flocking thither from all quarters. He was forced to appear several times on the balcony, when he was cheered with an enthusiasm that defies description. Although he has got over his illness, he still suffers from weakness in the legs, owing to an attack of rheumatism. The government sent to compliment Garibaldi as soon as he arrived. This afternoon he will visit M. Ricasoli, the President of the Council.

ONE OF THE AUSTRIAN ATROCITIES IN ITALY.—The French accused the Austrians, it is said, of demanding "pretty women" to be delivered up by the Piedmontese to the rapacity of their soldiers. The Austrian reply is that they wanted, at Vercelli, "belladonna" for the sick soldiers, and they demanded it of the Syndic. He said he had not any and could not find any; but they insisted that he must. The French, so say the Austrians, translated bella donna (Italian for "pretty women") into folie femme (pretty women,) and so made them (the Austrians) to be asking for women when they only wanted medicine.

The Marysville Democrat notices some fine tobacco from Cuba seed growing in a garden at that place. The plants are seven feet in height. Frequent experiments have demonstrated that this State is well adapted to the cultivation of tobacco.—San Francisco Nat.

A Minister, noted for combining the somewhat incongruous professions of preacher and money-lender, was proffering a prayer, in which was the following petition: "Grant that we may have interest in heaven!"

"Don't do it," exclaimed one of the congregation, "don't do it. The old sinner gets five per cent a month now; and that's enough, the Lord knows."

UP AND DOWN.—In 1850, when we lived in San Francisco, J. H. Kimball was the possessor of land, houses and other property worth altogether at least $200,000. Recently he was taken into the station house of that city, completely destitute—a poor miserable vagrant, without home or a place to lay his head. Verily this is a world of ups and downs. Verily riches do take to themselves wings and fly away.—Shasta Courier.

LAST TRAIN, AND BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS.

WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store house recently occupied by C. H. Bassett.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR Stock or Goods CAN NOT be surpassed in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT of FINE DRESS GOODS ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS, CASHMERE, CASHMERE, ALPACAS, DELAINES, LAWNS, JINGHAMS, CHAMBRAYS, JACONNET AND SWISS MUSLINS, CRINOLINE, CHALIS, RIBBONS, VELVETS, AND ALL SORTS OF TRIMMINGS. SHAWLS, CLOAKS, MANTILLAS, PARASOLS, and every variety of LADIES' GOODS, CLOTHES, SATINETTS, CASSIMERES, TWEEDS, CORDUROY, BOOTS AND SHOES, HATS AND CAPS, AND READY-MADE CLOTHING. GROCERIES AND DYE STUFFS. A full list of Yankee notions. Don't forget Good and Cheap. ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS. 28—11.

PULPIT ANECDOTES.—The Rev. Mr. Peters, of Tennessee, was preaching, and, having a large gift of continuance, was somewhat protracted in his discourse. Several of the hearers left in the midst of his sermon. One young man was on his way to the door when Mr. Peters pointed his long finger at him and said, "Brethren, that young man has just as good a right to go out as any one." It is needless to say, that he was the last deserter.

At another time, while M. Peters was preaching, a young man started to leave the house and making some noise as he went, Mr. Peters paused and said:

"I will finish my discourse when that young man gets out."

The fellow very coolly took his seat, and said:

"Then it will be some time before you get through?"

The preacher, however was up to him, and remarking, "A bad promise is better broken than kept," went on with his sermon.

The following is attributed to the celebrated Roland Hill:

Two strangers were passing the church in which he was preaching, entered, walked up the aisle, and finding no seat, stood for a while and listened to the sermon. Presently they turned to walk out. Before they reached the door the preacher said—"But I will tell you a story."

This arrested the strangers, and they paused, turned again and listened.

"Once there was a man," said the speaker, "who said that if he had all the axes in the world, made into one great axe, and all the trees in the world made into one great tree, and he could wield the axe and cut down the tree, he would make it into one great whip to thrash these ungodly men who turn their backs upon the Gospel, and stop to hear a story."

The strangers thought they had heard enough to satisfy their curiosity, and resumed their walk in the street.

At a marriage ceremony in New Bedford, Mass., the bride stated that her age was about twelve years, and the bridegroom twenty-five. The parties are of Portuguese extraction, and the girl married not from any wish of her own, but at the solicitation of her mother.

WHAT THEY "RAISE" UP NORTH.—The La Crosse Democrat has the following:

Last week one of our eastern friends, coming down from St. Paul, stopped at Winona over night. Being a stranger he inquired of the landlord "what kind of land they had back on the prairie?" "D—d splendid land, sir!" "And what kind of country have you back on the bluff?" "D—d splendid country sir!" And what do you raise mostly round here?" "We raise h—ll!"

"I never knew," said Lord Erskine, "a man remarkable for heroic bravery, whose very aspect was not lighted up by gentleness and humanity."

A puzzled etymologist complains that Worcester is pronounced Wooster, and wants to know how rooster ought to be spelled?

"I will lay you a wager," said Bouncer, "that I will shoot more crows today than you!" "Oh, yes," replied his companion, "you always beat me at crowing."

Mr. Pullup, coming home late, "pretty full," finds the walking slippery, and exclaims, "V-ver-very sing'lar, whenever water freezes, it allurs freez'es with the slippery side up; sing'lar."

WHAT CAN A WOMAN DO?—An English woman, about twenty-five years of age, residing nine miles west of the city, in the town of Aurelius, walked into our market this (Monday) morning, bringing the entire distance 29 lbs. of butter on her head, 28 dozen of eggs on one arm, and a thumping fat baby weighing, 36 lbs. on the other. She sold the eggs at Brown's & Lee's and the butter at Fowler's, and kept the babe for future reference. After selling the butter and eggs, both of the best quality for the highest market price, she shouldered the 36 pounder and started for home. With such a helpmate, how can a man fail to succeed?—Auburn Ad.

We often hear it said of a sick man, that he enjoys bad health. Such is not the case. The only persons who enjoy bad health are the doctors.

The Louisville Courier states that Colonel Humphrey Marshall has declared that if he were in Congress, with parties organized as at present, he would vote for the Democratic candidate for Speaker; and that if the next election for President was thrown into the House, and he was a member of it, he would vote for the Democratic candidate. Such sentiments govern every National man, every one who loves the Union and desires its preservation—every one who despises fanaticism and is unwilling to place himself on an equality with the negro.

The Hartford Times says that 10,000 revolving rifles are being made at Colt's armory for the British Government. They are provided with the sword bayonet.

It is solemnly announced that sickness was expelled from the Order of the Sons of Malta, immediately after the fact became known that he had renewed conjugal relations with his wife. Much excitement is said to have existed on the subject, and the case has been appealed by his friends in the lodge to the Grand Consistory of the Order.—Madison Courier.

Woman's eye appears more beautiful when it sparkles through a tear, as a star seems more brilliant when it sparkles on a wave.

We learn that a difficulty recently occurred at Walker River, between two men named Spencer and Mann, which resulted in the latter getting his right eye cut and his right arm nearly severed from his body. The doctors were of the opinion that Mann could not recover. The difficulty occurred about a game of cards. Spencer had not been arrested.

The same ladies who would faint to see a man's shirt on a clothesline, will in a waltz, lovingly repose their heads on the bosom of the same garment when the man is in it.

Boling & Crenshaw, on 3d August, commenced an action in the District Court of Mariposa county, says the Star, against John C. Fremont and two others to recover $19,600 damages, and to abate the nuisance alleged to be done, by the Fremont dam at Hell's Hollow, to their mining claims and mining machinery at Washington Flat on the Mercer river.

SHORT HAIR FOR LADIES.—It is becoming quite fashionable for a lady to appear with hair cropped closely behind; the front lock being long enough to curl. So rapidly has the fashion gained in favor that it will not be wonderful should it become general for a time, but it must necessarily be short lived. Long hair is a glory to a woman, as St. Paul observes, and its grace cannot well be dispensed with by the handsomest face.

Mr. Sandford, the slave-trade candidate for Governor of Alabama and who has just been beaten by twenty-five thousand votes in that State, by Governor Moore, is the gentleman who received the thirty column letter from Governor Wise, in favor of that measure. The document was altogether too weighty for him to carry.

WM. A. NICKMAN,
ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW,
Will practice in all the Courts in this Territory.
OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s Store. 43-1f

George Cronyn & Co.
HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Eldridge & Co., consisting of
DRY GOODS,
GROCERIES,
HARDWARE, &c.,
beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at George Cronyn's Old Stand,
near Bishop Huffer's, and offer them at retail. They assure the public they have put prices at a low rate. You are invited to call and examine.
The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS,
Groceries,
Hardware,
Oils, Turpentine,
Alcohol,
Window Glass,
Hay and Manure Forks,
Shovels, Spades,
Scythes and Snaths,
Cotton Yarn,
Dye-Stuffs, &c.
Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of all kinds received.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN
Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors;
—ALSO—
OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,
AT
G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fairfield, and Fort Bridger, Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive. 37-1f

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.
TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if Hoad & Dickson are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, copperas, saltpetre, madder, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla rope, ginger, mustard, cassia, sauces of every kind, brandy, fruits, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stoma, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of lemon, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.
We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low.
We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market.
Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.
We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen. 40-1f

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,
Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, full assortment of

Brown sheeting	Merrimack Prints
Bleached do	Blue Demins
" shirtings	" drills
Brown do	White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes	Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey	Woolen do
Kentucky jeans	Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking	Alpacas and merinos
Dolaines & cashmeres	Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels	Sewing thread
" napkins	Curtain damasks
" table cloths	Satinett & cassimeres
Crash, toweling and	Cottonades and pant
doilies	stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths
White linen bosom shirts Apron checks
Colored calico do Heavy duck (all Gray flannel do widdies)
Red do do Blue & Hick'y check
Blue do do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesrooms contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as
Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered sets
silk collars & sleeves
Plain all wool dolaines " window curtains
Fancy do " edgings and in-
Alexander's kid gloves " sections
Bay state long shawls " linen handkerfs
Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric
Dolaines in dress pat- Hem stitched " ters
Silk
White cambric muslin " cravats and ties
Jacksons Suspenders
Swiss Dress Trimmings
Mull & Namssoks
Plaid Jacket muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and gauntlets
Lace mitts and gloves
Dress lawns and bargees
Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY
Is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.
TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.
Agents for the Garner Patent Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-3m

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. 40-1f

100 COOK STOVES for sale by
40-1f DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale
by 40-1f DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce.
DYER, BRO. & CO.

NOTICE.
The Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.
Dyer, Bro's, & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business.
R. H. DYER.
GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.
We having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see us. 39-1f

GILBERT & GERRISH.

To the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.
THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.
He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.
Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.
He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received, or carried, by him, except the Postage prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.
All packages, baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.
All packages weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.
All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.
The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.
A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.
Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.
FARMENIO A. JACKMAN,
Proprietor. 39-1f

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

GOODS AT COST!
THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of Dry Goods, Groceries, Books & Shoes, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.
40-1f
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

LOOK HERE.

THE Undersigned has opened, THREE Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY,
where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread, Crackers, Cakes, Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found
ICE CREAMS, CONFECTIONERY, SODA WATER, & SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are
BATHS,
In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS:
Single Bath 75 cents.
Five Baths $3 00.
Ten do $5 00
37-3m
E. REESE.

CITY BREWERY.

MR. W. H. HOCKINGS respectfully calls the attention of the public to his eating room, recently fitted up in connection with his establishment, and having added to his premises a superior malt kiln, a malt mill, and several other improvements, he has greatly increased his facilities for accommodating his friends and customers.
He will keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best BEER and refreshments. 34-1f

Ho! for America!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!
Fare Reduced!
IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.
Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175.
Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.
No responsibility assumed for baggage.
For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. 38-1f

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.
GERARD B. ALLEN & CO.
MANUFACTURE High and Low pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Screw and Brass and Iron Castings of every description, Circular Saw Mills of the Fago and Childs Patents. 39-1f

100 WAGONS.

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES
WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF
Dry Goods, Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing

Hardware, Outfitting Goods, Harness, Saddles, & Bridles,
which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.
Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,
75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN WAGONS; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MARYS JACE; one fine STATION. For sale by [35-1f]

C. A. PERRY & CO.

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their NEW STORE RO ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of MERCHANDIZE;

Specially selected for this market.
Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 31-1f

DRUGS! CHEMICALS! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.
ALEX. LEITCH,
MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,
selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

He would commend to the notice of those in search of
TOILETTE ARTICLES,
including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.
And is also prepared to fill all orders for

Congress and other Mineral Waters,
of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE, ORSERS and SADDLERY BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS.
38-1f

L. & A. CARR,

WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,
TURKERS,
No. 49 Main Street,
ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetics, grammars, geography, philology, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,
Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice. 14-1f

STRAYED

FROM the herd at the Hot Spring Brewery, two BLACK MULES, branded it 8 on near shoulder, and B 11 on near thigh. Supposed to have gone toward Salt Lake City. $20 reward will be paid for their delivery to the subscriber at the Brewery. 40-1f

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,

AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of the market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments. 12-1f

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS,

ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. 1-1f

OFFICE—One door North of Post Office, Great Salt Lake City.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory, 2-1f

S. M. BLAIR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's Store. 2-1f

WORK CATTLE.
100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-1f

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 2-1f

FOR SALE,
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley. 10-1f
CHARLES MOGO.
Hot Spring Brwn 7.

THE VALLEY TOWN.

H. N. MAGUIRE, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1859.

NUMBER 47.

DARE TO STAND ALONE.

Man, brist not to the swelling surge
Of popular sneer and wrong;
Thou'lt bear thee on to ruin's verge
With current wide and strong.

Stand for the right! Humanity
Ignores with groans and tears
Thine aid to break the fastening links
That bind her tolling years.

Stand for the right! Though falsehood reigns
And proud lips coldly sneer,
A polished arrow cannot wound
A conscience pure and clear.

Stand for the right — and with clean hands
Bask the true on high;
Thou'lt find warm and sympathizing hearts
Among the passers by.

Men, who have seen, and thought and felt,
Will not have hardy dare;
The battle's brunt, but by thy side
Will ever dangers share.

Stand for the right — proclaim it round,
Thou'lt find an answering tone
In honest hearts, and thou no more
Be doomed to stand alone.

Affairs in Mexico—Still greater Anarchy.

We condense from the Minatitlan letter to the New Orleans Picayune, later news from Mexico. The letter is dated August 17:

The message of Juarez created immense excitement among the clergy in the City of Mexico. The priests, fantastically dressed, ran through the streets, distributing money among the rabble, and with cries of "to arms, to arms—death to the Liberals, death to all foreigners!" succeeded after while in collecting a few thousand people behind them to witness the show. The excitement is said to have been so great that the "foreign residents," fearing insult or assassination, remained for several days shut up in their houses; and those scandalous proceedings might have had very serious results had not the soldiery appeared in time to disperse the crowd.

The Archbishop has issued a decree excommunicating all the Liberals, and which decree has been published with great solemnity. As to Miramon, he is completely frightened out of his boots, seeing how warmly Zuloaga is supported by the Church. Miramon has dissolved his cabinet, and retained only General Corona, who is at present busily engaged in forming a new one. His decree authorizing a forced loan of $20,000,000, and the issue of $80,000,000 of paper money is to be revoked. It created the greatest dissatisfaction among all classes.

The decree of Juarez confiscating the Church property, has been published in all the newspapers, and read attentively by the people, and it is believed that the Liberal government is fast gaining ground at the capital—Quien sabe?

From Orizaba it is reported that the notorious robber chief Cobos, had returned to that place and published a proclamation in which he declares that he wants more money and men for his intended expedition against Oajaca. The people did not like the idea of transferring the money from their own pockets into those of Cobos; therefore they remonstrated; but he issued immediate orders of arrests for numerous persons, and at present one-half the population, so to speak, are in prison.

Guadalajara, which is occupied by two thousand men, under the command of General Marquez, is besieged by the Liberal forces.

From Tampico comes the news of complete defeat of Gen. Wolf in Panjamo. He had left Guanajuato in order to attack Gen. Hinojosa; but was beaten, lost all his artillery, while his infantry deserted, joining the enemy. He himself escaped with a portion of his cavalry.

At Vera Cruz a council of war had been held, at which Gen. Degollado expressed himself decidedly against the plan of calling in 4,000 to 5,000 American volunteers. He proposed, on the contrary, to send Lerdo de Tejada to the United States for the purpose of raising $3,000,000, and with this amount he believed they would be able to raise 40,000 Mexicans, by whose aid he thought to be able to lay the capital at the feet of Juarez by the end of October. That the Liberal Government has adopted his plan, the quick dispatch of Tejada shows; but that he (Tejada) will raise the money, or that Degollado will lay the City of Mexico at the feet of Juarez in October, are questions yet to be solved.

From Texas.—Dates from Galveston to the 16th inst. have been received.

In regard to the result of the recent election, the Galveston Civilian has the following paragraphs:

Election returns now come in but slowly. The large majorities already reported for Gen. Houston leave the election for Governor no longer in doubt.

Clark is still believed to have been elected Lieut. Governor, and White Commissioner of the land office, but the returns for these offices are far less complete than those for Governor.

RIFLED GUN TRIAL AT FORT MONROE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4, 1859.
Nine guns of rifled ordnance, on trial at Fort Monroe, have been found far superior to the smooth bore, after a very severe test.

Further from Europe.

We have four days later news from Europe, received by the Hungarian, which arrived at Quebec, on Saturday night.

The Emperor Napoleon was on a visit to the camp at Chalons, witnessing the maneuvers of the troops.

The United States frigate Cumberland was at Madina August 1st.

The advices are to the 10th inst., and though interesting, are not of general importance.

The representatives of France, Austria and Sardinia met at Zurich on the 8th inst., to perfect the treaty of peace agreed upon at Villafranca by the Emperors Napoleon and Francis Joseph. Nothing, however, had been made public respecting the proceedings of the conference. The representatives—namely, the Marquis Bourqueney, assisted by M. de Bonneville, on the part of France; Count Colorado, on the part of Austria; and Chevalier Desambrois, on the part of Sardinia—had been warmly welcomed by the authorities and inhabitants of Zurich.

The completion of the steamship Great Eastern was formally celebrated on the 8th by a banquet given on board, which was attended by many members of both houses of Parliament, and a number of the most distinguished engineers and scientific men. The engines, both screw and paddle, were set in motion for the first time, and the result was satisfactory in the very highest degree, and far beyond expectation.

Lord Stanley proposed the toast of "Success to the Great Eastern," and painted in glorious terms the marvels her success will accomplish. Mr. Brummel, the engineer, and Mr. Scott Russell, the builder, were toasted, but the former was absent from ill health. The ship presented a beautiful and finished aspect, being almost ready for sea.

The city article of the London Times says, in regard to the stipulations of the treaty alleged to have been arranged between Minister McLane and Juarez at Vera Cruz, that Mexico will, from the moment the treaty is ratified, virtually pass under American sway. It then adds that the result will be advantageous to Mexico and the world, but thinks the extent to which private rights will be respected or jeopardized an anxious question. The American government is urged at every step to protect the interests of foreign bondholders.

The strike among the building trade had assumed formidable dimensions. Estimates of the men unemployed range from 20,000 to 40,000. The master builders had sought the intervention of the government, but the Home Secretary said he did not see how he could interfere.

A sham fight is to be executed by 4,000 men at the Camp of Chalons under the Emperor's orders, illustrative of the episodes of Solferino. The Emperor returns to the camp in September, to take command of the maneuvers.

It was reported that Gen. Fleury was to be raised to a General of Division.

Early on Monday morning, the 7th, the King of Sardinia entered Milan, accompanied by his ministers, members of Parliament, and the municipal bodies of Turin and Genoa. His Majesty passed through Corso on horseback, amidst enthusiastic acclamations. A te deum was performed, at which the King was present; he afterwards received the authorities of the city. In the evening a general illumination took place. The aspect of Milan during the jete was very imposing.

The Opinions of Turin says that fifty thousand French troops will remain in Italy, provisionally owing to the dangerous state of some provinces.

The relations between Austria and Prussia, almost assume the dimensions of a general rupture, and were regarded as dangerous to the smaller German States, which were already looking to ward France for protection.

Consumption Cured by Swinging.

Dr. Lawson, of Holyok, Mass., writing in the Springfield Republican, argues strongly in favor of the use of the swing as a remedy for diseases of the lungs—particularly consumption. The method which he recommends is, to suspend a rope from some elevated point, with a stick attached to it some six or eight inches above the head. The stick should be some two feet in length and the rope attached to its centre. The patient grasps the stick with a hand on each side of the rope, and raising himself from the ground by his arms, swing, backwards and forwards, commencing moderately if easy, and gradually increasing the exercise as he acquires the strength.

The doctor contends that the muscular attachment connecting the arms with the ribs, through this exercise, elevates the ribs and expands the lungs, increasing the volume of air, thereby purifying the blood and preventing congestion or the deposit of any tuberculous matter.

There is certainly sense in the idea, and in this country of pulmonary diseases it deserves attention. That following Dr. Lawson's prescription would be infinitely better than to fill the stomach with drugs and quack nostrums, cannot be for a moment doubted. We believe that regular practice of this and similar exercises calculated to develop the physical power, would do more to prevent if not to cure disease, than all the medicine in the world.

Dr. Lawson says he has prescribed the swing remedy for thirty-five years, and has been able to increase the measure of the chest from two to four inches in a few months, and that the result has always been good.

Elopement in New Jersey.

AN EDITOR RUNNING OFF WITH HIS WIFE'S SISTER.—ANTECEDENTS OF THE PARTIES.

Considerable excitement has been occasioned recently in a quiet town on the line of the New Jersey Central railroad, by the elopement of the editor of one of the village papers with the sister of his wife. The circumstances of the case, though not mysterious, are remarkably singular, and afford a striking illustration of the frailty of human nature. Mr. V. the editor in question, is a gentleman some thirty-five years of age, enjoying a good position in society, and for the last ten or twelve years has been a member in high-standing of a Christian church. In his family relations he has been, it is believed, more than usually happy. In his children, two in number, he has always manifested the greatest pride and delight, and we who have seen him in his home, would never have supposed that any infatuation whatever could induce him to abandon the comforts and enjoyments of the household circle. In his business Mr. V. has been successful, and it is not known that any embarrassment menaced him therein.

The lady who accompanies him in his guilty flight is probably twenty-two years of age, and is, as stated, a sister of his wife. She possesses the charm of beauty, and has moved in highly respectable circles—her family being one of the best in the country where they reside. Until recently it was never suspected that any improper intimacy existed between the two, and, indeed, it is believed that the whole affair was of sudden growth. Some days before the elopement, Mr. V. made sundry purchases of jewelry, &c., which it is believed he presented to the object of his criminal affection—the articles being obtained on credit.

The first positive information which the friends received of the elopement came in the shape of a letter from the fugitives, announcing their flight, and that it would be useless to pursue them, as, when the letter reached its destination, they would have left California. The husband left a letter for his wife, stating that sufficient money had been left behind to maintain her for a time, and adding, that if successful in the Golden State, he would remit to her from time to time, such means as she might need. The flight being thus sudden, and the discovery producing very naturally an astounding effect, pursuit was of course out of the question, and the deserted wife and little ones, upon whom scarcely a sorrow has ever fallen, are left to grieve alone and in despair at the hearth at which the father's face will, in all probability, never again appear.

What causes have operated to produce this catastrophe—the alienation of a husband from the wife of his love, the surrender of happiness and good name, and the abandonment, more than all, of the purity and peace of an unspotted Christian life—it is impossible, of course, to comprehend. The facts only can be stated, and the world, whose judgments are seldom too lenient to offenders, must discover for itself the cause of the sad and sudden fall. And could the world, with its hundred greedy eyes, follow the course and read the future of the fugitives, mayhap it would be discovered that in this, as in other instances of like nature, the sin carries its own punishment, mingling its bitter with every sweetened cup.—Newark Mercury, Aug. 26.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.—WHAT WAS ITS CAUSE?—DOES A METEOR EXPLODE?—Every body who was not in profound slumber must have been startled this morning, by one of the most remarkable and thus far mysterious occurrence that has during a long period of time transpired in this section of country. At about 7 o'clock, while the sky was perfectly cloudless, while hardly a breath of air was stirring, while not a single indication prevailed of a natural commotion of any sort whatever, there was a terrific, shocking, deafening report, accompanied apparently by two sharp echoes. It was as if the sound had come from the sky—but there was no clouds, not a single indication of the prevalence of electricity, and that explanation could not be entertained.

The force of the concussion was so great that houses were shaken; that persons walking in the street felt the ground vibrate underneath them; that men who had just commenced work upon buildings instinctively dropped their tools, and looked about to see what was the matter; that little children were frightened, and asked many strange questions of their parents.

John P. Ball, Esq., County Clerk, assures us that the noise was the result of an explosion of a meteor in the sky. Mr. Ball resides in Pittstown, in this county, and is a perfectly honorable and reliable gentleman. He informs us that he had just finished his breakfast, and was standing in his door-yard when he observed a bright light in a southerly direction from his house over the town of Grafton, and descending very rapidly to the ground in a north-westerly course. This was about 7.20 a. m. Mr. Ball last saw it when about a half a mile above the earth, when it disappeared, and in a moment or more he heard the explosion. It was very loud and resembled thunder.—Troy (N. Y.) Times, Aug. 11.

[From the N. Y. Day Book, August 10.]

The Inquest upon the body of Virginia Stewart.

Coroner Jackson on Friday, at eleven o'clock, proceeded to hold an inquest upon the body of Virginia Stewart, who was shot on the 23d ult., on the corner of Canal street and Broadway, by a resident of Mobile, named McDonald. The two courtessans who were in company with her at the time of the occurrence, were present as witnesses. McDonald, accompanied by Hon. P. Phillips, of Washington, who at the request of his (the prisoner's) family, acts as his adviser or prochein amy, and a Mr. Grandin of New Jersey, who has been employed by his family as one of his counsel. McDonald looked considerably better than when he was first consigned to the Tombs, but wears a melancholy look and a downcast appearance and evinced a considerable agitation during the going on of a portion of the testimony. The inquest will probably take the greater portion of the day. The facts obtained are the same as have already been published. The funeral took place at half-past ten o'clock this morning. The body was placed in a neat but inexpensive coffin, at the dead house connected with the Hospital, and given in the charge of father Quinn. On the lid of the coffin was a silver plate bearing the cross, underneath which was inscribed "Eliza Stewart, died 4th August, 1859, aged 23 years, 6 months and 29 days." The body was conveyed to Calvary Cemetery, followed by two carriages, in one was her mother and a gentleman, and in the other was father Quinn, of this city, and father Dolan, of Albany. Her mother is present at the inquest, and seems greatly affected by the loss of her erring daughter. At the close, the jury gave the following verdict: "That Virginia Stewart came to her death by a pistol shot wound at the hands of the prisoner, Robert C. McDonald, July 23d, 1859." After the rendition of the verdict, the prisoner was brought forward and examined in the usual manner. In answer to what he had to say relative to the charge preferred against him, he answered: "That he supposed he fired the shot as the witnesses had stated, but was perfectly unconscious of having done so, and that he had no ill feeling towards her." He was then remanded to the Tombs, and the case was laid before the grand jury last night.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.—By the arrival of the steamship Havana at New Orleans, from Minatitlan, we have very important news from Mexico. The dates from Minatitlan are to the 17th.

The mails and passengers from California were robbed on the Isthmus, six miles from Tehuantepec, by the Patricios.

Miramón's Cabinet has been dissolved, and the Archbishop of Mexico had excommunicated the entire Liberal party.

Marques had revolted against Miramon, but the Liberals were besieging him in Guadalupe.

Gen. Wolf had been defeated in Tamadlipas, losing all his artillery.

Gen. Degollado had assumed command of the Liberal army. He promises to take the capital by October, but wants $3,000,000 and 40,000 men to do it.

The decree against the Church property was being executed. The bonds of the matured debt had risen ten per cent.

The decree of President Juarez respecting the Church property of Mexico was celebrated at Matamoros by the firing of salutes and a general parade of the citizens.

A LIVING HEAD ON A DEAD BODY.—The Newburgh Va., Index, gives the following curious but melancholy particulars of a respectable farmer in that neighborhood:

Mr. Archibald Campbell, a respectable farmer in the township of Camden, East, while engaged in finishing a new dwelling on his premises, the scaffold gave way, and he was precipitated head foremost to the ground and dislocated his neck, but very fortunately and mysteriously did not kill him. When his head was brought to its proper position, the vertebrae of the neck returned to their place with a dull, but distinct snap. The whole body is paralyzed and dead from the neck downwards. He is not capable of moving a muscle or experiencing the slightest pain. Fortunately the nerves supplying the muscles used in respiration were not paralyzed, and he can breathe and live. Had the injury of the spinal cord been a little higher, he would have died immediately. The senses of sight, hearing, smelling, &c., are normal and his intellect unimpaired. Mr. Campbell has been for a number of years the victim of a series of misfortunes. But the last misfortune is more intolerable than any of its predecessors. There he has, a strange and remarkable specimen of a living head on a dead body, with a full consciousness of his unenviable position. When last heard from, however, there were some indications of a return of sensation, and the power of motion, and it is just possible that he might partially recover.

EYE-FANCIES.—It is said that black-eyes are most apt to be passionate and jealous.

Blue-eyed—soulful, truthful, affectionate and confiding.

Grey-eyed—philosophical, literary, resolute, cold hearted.

Hazel-eyed—quick-tempered and sickle.

Outrage at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, August 23.

The Sun of this morning publishes an account of a series of dreadful outrages perpetrated on Saturday night on board the steamboat Express, which left here the same evening with a large company for the camp meeting at Chaptank river. After getting some distance from port, a party of rowdies rallying under the cries of Enbalt Banters and Rip Raps, made an indiscriminate assault upon the white and colored passengers. Several were knocked down, stabbed or horribly wounded. Several white men were robbed of their watches and money, the assailants blowing out the lights to prevent recognition. A colored man was stabbed and robbed, and his wife outraged in his presence.

On Sunday morning the Sheriff of Dorchester county arrested four of the ringleaders, and committed them to jail. One colored man is said to have died of his wounds.

Hugh Sullivan was shot in the head and instantly killed, last night, when on his way home, about 12 o'clock. Several arrests were made, and the Coroner's inquest is now engaged in investigating the circumstances leading to the murder.

The yacht Haswell of Providence, from Richmond, arrived here this morning in 23 hours from Old Point Comfort.

The Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guardian has the following anecdote:

"When, after the peace, M. de Cavour found himself for the first time face to face with the Emperor and the King, he found it impossible to remain within the bounds of etiquette, and his indignation burst violently forth; so violently that at length Louis Napoleon, under control as he is, lost temper in turn, and threatened! The word 'arrest' escaped his lips; at which the betrayed Piedmontese minister turned round, saying: 'Arrest me! Try it! But you would not dare; for then you would have no choice left you but to go back to France through the Tyrol!'"

THE AURORA BOREALIS AND THE TELEGRAPH.—Montreal, August 29, 1859.—The Superintendent of the Canadian Telegraph Company's lines telegraphs as follows:—"I never in my experience of fifteen years in working of telegraph lines witnessed anything like the extraordinary effect of the Aurora Borealis between Quebec and Farther Point last night. The lines was in most perfect order, and well skilled operators worked incessantly from eight o'clock last evening until one o'clock this morning to get over in even a tolerably intelligible form about four hundred words of the steamer Indian's report for the press, and at the latter hour so completely were the wires under the influence of the Aurora Borealis that it was found utterly impossible to communicate between the telegraph stations, and the line was closed for the night."

Boston August 29, 1859.

Despatches from various and distant localities describe the appearance of the Aurora Borealis during last night as more brilliant and of long duration than has occurred for twenty years.

Mr. and Mrs. Sickles.

Mrs. H. O. C. Hewitt, a Southern lady, formerly of Mississippi, is out with an elaborate defense of the reconciliation of Mr. and Mrs. Sickles. We give a specimen, as we find it in the Merchant's Record:

"And Mrs. Sickles, she may be a blessing to many! Rahab, the worst of women mentioned in sacred history, was saved, with all her family, when the city of Jerico was taken, and no other souls were saved—her faith and good deeds justified her."

"There is more rejoicing in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth than in the ninety-and-nine that went not astray."

"Mrs. Sickles, though sold like poor little Joseph, has it in her power to be a deliverer from evil, through grace, and a minister of good to aching hearts and erring sisters.—We should rejoice that one man, at least has dared to do right—to return to his wife, and an erring wife has preferred to take her own husband in preference to those who would gladly have her separated from him, in order that they might try to get her! The vomiting up of their chagrin at the just disappointment would be amusing, if it was not in such a serious cause. Cannot some one recommend a panacea for their distress?"

AN ALARMING ANAGRAM.—Among the curiosities, not of literature—but of letters, the Anagram was wont to be a favorite in the days of a by-gone generation. Who, for instance, has not smiled blandly over that famous transposition, which aptly converts "Horatio Nelson" into Honor est a Nilo?

The taste, however, for this laborious trifling has almost passed away; nor do we propose to open the subject of cabalistic lettering. Our only purpose is to offer a new specimen of its eccentricities, which came upon us recently during a vain attempt to solve certain mysteries that occupy just now many serious minds. It is commended alike to snappers up of unconsidered trifles, and to readers who chance to be imbued with a little tinge of superstitious sensitiveness. We strive to hope, that though almost as curious, it is not so unimpeachably appropriate as the one quoted above. The name so much in men's mouths, Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, may by this method be converted into An open plot—arouse, Albion!—N. Y. Albion.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Oct. 5, 1859.

The Courts of Utah—and Territorial Legislation in regard to them.

There is no subject of more interest and importance to the citizen than the well defined limits and jurisdiction of those tribunals by which his rights of person and property may be affected, or in any way called in question. The difference between a free and enlightened government and one that is oppressive and tyrannical, is perhaps more plainly evinced by the administrations of their courts than by the exercise of any other power in the state. And no government can become altogether corrupt or oppressive as long as her courts, and those who occupy the benches of justice remain free and uncontaminated by the corruptions and abuses which may exist in other departments of government; for while they remain thus they constitute a bulwark, resisting executive usurpation, and legislative tyranny upon the subject or citizen.

Without concurring, therefore, in the criticism or personal allusions which called forth the remark, we heartily concur in the opinion expressed not long since by our cotemporary of the Mountaineer in regard to the purity that should mark the Judicial Ermine. We cannot, however, coincide as fully, or in any essential particular, with the same journal, in many of the opinions and statements expressed in a recent editorial in regard to the "administration of justice in Utah." We think that the writer of the article mentioned has misapprehended, (we will not be so uncharitable as to suppose that he intentionally misstated,) the powers which Congress, by the organic act, conferred upon the different courts of this Territory.

The law of congress is quoted correctly, but the construction placed upon it, and the deductions and reasonings in regard to it we think erroneous, and from these we honestly dissent; and though, perhaps, less qualified than our cotemporaries of the "Mountaineer," to discuss a question of law or courts, we venture modestly to offer some opinions upon the points at issue, though in opposition to professed legal attainments and knowledge in such points.

Section nine of the Organic Act is the one that provides for the establishment of the different courts organized by law in this Territory. It also defines to some extent the jurisdiction and powers which the different courts shall possess, and when this is not done, the name of the court itself by analogy to the same courts elsewhere, and by long usage and practice limits, and defines their jurisdiction. The system referred to invests in the supreme and district courts respectively, common law and chancery jurisdiction, but it does not confer like power on the probate court, and the fact that it does not, is proof that Congress did not intend that the probate court should exercise concurrent jurisdiction with the district court in matters expressly delegated to the latter. A general rule we believe in the construction of statute law is that when a power is expressly granted, or a particular mode is prescribed by which any right or authority shall be exercised, that the delegation of this power to any particular court excludes and debars all other courts from the exercise of like authority.

If this principle and the reasoning on it be correct, Congress clearly did not intend that the probate court which they provided for in this Territory, should exercise chancery and common law jurisdiction in common with the district courts, or they would have delegated the power to it in the same manner that they did to the district courts of the Territory. Silence in a case like this is virtually to withhold or deny the jurisdiction claimed for the probate court. We sometimes hear persons speak in praise of "strict constructionists," let the principle be applied to the question of the jurisdiction of courts here, and it will be seen on what slight foundations the powers claimed for the probate court rest. But it is contended that as Congress has not in the Organic Act defined the jurisdiction of probate courts, nor prohibited them from the exercise of the powers granted to the district courts, that the Territorial Legislature, therefore, possesses the power of declaring what its jurisdiction shall be. But did Congress in the Organic Act intend to confer any such power upon the legislature of the territory? If so then why did they give the name of "probate" to a court of unlimited and undefined jurisdiction, and whose powers might be varied to suit the varying tastes and crude notions of a territorial legislature? Can it be supposed for a moment that a body of men such as the Congress of 1850 was composed of, were guilty of an act of folly like this, or that they would have applied such a misnomer to their own creation as to call it by a name certain and exact in its signification if they only intended to create something to which a hundred other names would apply as well and even better? It is folly to reason thus; and surely Congress in providing for the establishment of probate courts here were guilty of no such folly as we have named. Something it is true may have been left to the territorial legislation in the organic act. They had the power of prescribing the particular lines and the rules by which a probate court should exercise the powers it possessed, but not of extending these powers (illegitimately, and to other matters unconnected with its legitimate and natural province, for cavil about words as we please the word "probate" in our language and in legislation has an exact and technical meaning, and refers only to the proving of wills and the management of the estates of deceased persons.

Every dictionary that we have ever seen, from Webster down, gives this as the definition of the word in our language, and any law writer that we ever heard of conforms to this sense of the word in treating of the powers of probate courts; and if this is the general as well as the strict and technical meaning and use of the word, the conclusion is irresistible that the Territorial Legislature in granting to the probate courts of this Territory, jurisdiction beyond what is implied by the term itself, and by the powers of such courts as they are almost universally constituted, assumed a power of legislation inconsistent with, and contrary to, the provisions of the Organic Act. Nor is the force of this conclusion at all impaired or broken by the fact that one or two of the States of this Union have granted to probate courts a jurisdiction beyond that which is commonly vested in them, or if we may venture upon the use of a law phrase which they exercise in proprio jure.

A Territory is not a State, and is not on an equal footing with the States as it regards absolute local independence in the management of its domestic concerns. In its powers of legislation and in the organization of its government, laws and courts, it is subservient and dependent upon the government creating it, existing in this respect in a capacity similar to that which a minor bears to his parent or guardian. A State being independent in all local matters can organize its courts and grant them such jurisdiction as they see proper. But if the General Government in establishing or providing for the establishment of courts in a Territory define the powers, or give to the courts which they create, a name which in itself is indicative of their power, the Legislature of the Territory is thereby precluded from varying or changing the jurisdiction of such courts, contrary to the intention of the power creating them.

But it is contended that if Congress, in the exercise of the power which it possesses of annulling the laws passed by a territory, fail to exercise this power, all defects and inconsistencies of legislation are thereby waived and cured. This may be true as far as Congress is concerned, but it is one of the special provinces of judges appointed to preside in territorial courts to decide whether the legislation of territories is consistent with the act organizing the territory, and which has the binding force of a constitution while it remains such. The power of federal judges in the territories in this respect is precisely analogous to the powers of the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to the constitutionality of the laws passed by Congress, except that an appeal can be taken from the decision of the territorial judge, whereas the decisions of the Supreme court are final. We intended saying something in this connection about some remarks made in the Mountaineer, in the editorial which has been already referred to respecting the exercise of this power by some of the federal judges here, but as our remarks have already extended beyond the limits originally intended, and as the strictures in the article named appear to have been dictated more by petty malice than by reason, we will let them pass, as we should the entire article in the Mountaineer in regard to the jurisdiction of courts here, as it is a matter that has undergone judicial determination.

DEAD.—Col. Thos. S. Miller, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, died in that city lately. On the night of the election, in company with some friends, he was celebrating the success of a favorite candidate, when a difficulty occurred between the Hannibal and Palmyra friends, in which stones &c. were used. Col. M. was struck on the head with a stone. Lock-jaw was the result, which terminated his life. He was a very worthy citizen and energetic business man.

Greeley is a jackass—a complicated puzzle to the most profound student of human nature—the strangest mixture of good sense and consummate foolishness extant—the most inconsistent specimen of natural inconsistency we ever heard of, read of, or saw.

In one part of his letter from this city, he openly avows that the spirit, with regard to woman, of the entire Mormon, as of all other polygamic systems, would, if it should once become established and prevalent, sink her to the confines of the barem, and make her appearance in the street, with unveiled face, as insulting to her lord as that of the miserably degraded prostitutes of the lecherous inhabitants of orientalism; in another, he states that neither from the pulpit or elsewhere, has he heard one generous prayer for the enlightenment and salvation of mankind, but that on the other hand, the Mormon's religion teaches him tyranny on earth, and glids his brightest hopes of an after existence by promising him the privilege of sitting on thrones and ruling multitudes in heaven; in yet another section of the delectable document, Mr. Greeley, in greatest sincerity, asserts that "no jury can be drawn here, unless in flagrant defiance of the Territorial laws, which is not mainly composed of Mormons; and no such jury will convict a Mormon of crime for any act done in behalf of God's kingdom—that is of the Mormon Church;" and finally, after having apparently exhausted all the language at his command, in very truthfully pen-painting what Mormon barbarisms he saw and heard of whilst here, he very coolly submits the following suggestions:

"Let Brigham be reappointed Governor; withdraw the present army of 10,000 men, open shorter and better roads to California through the country north of Bridger, and invite the emigrants to it, if they choose to pass through Utah, they will do so at their own risk. Let the Mormons have the Territory to themselves—it is worth very little to others, but reduce its area by cutting off Carson Valley on the one side, and making a Rocky Mountain Territory on the other, and then let them go on their way rejoicing."

First, the Mormon's religion teaches him to level woman—the being who stamps upon the infant's brow the nation's destiny—to a condition of slavery and prostitution; second, it nurtures him to servility, and teaches him that despotism is the first gift of God; third, it rears a front of defiance to all political authority, and screens its votaries, though guilty of the blackest crimes, from the penalties of outraged law;—then, get rid of the heathenism, disloyalty, and crime-encouraging proclivities of the Mormon people, by locating them upon the very centre of our progressing, but only partially developed country, and protect them in their iniquities;—nay, more, tell the American citizen that the great natural and national right which he has in going civilly from one part of United States Territory to another, shall here cease, and that if he dares to cross Utah, any Mormon can, with impunity, cut his throat, and prove his devotion to his religion (?) by the act! This is a specimen of the distinguished Tribune editor's logic and love of country. "Let the Mormons have the Territory to themselves—it is worth very little to others"—and the next we hear of this unpatriotic loggerhead, he turns up in California, making Abolition stump-speeches on the importance of building a Central Pacific Railroad, which he knows—unless he is a greater dolt than either we or Brother Kimball think he is—must, if it ever runs at all, run through Utah Territory, even when circumscribed as he proposes.

How in the name of common sense and popular biographies Horace Greeley ever acquired his wide-spread reputation we cannot divine. Read the history of his just-ended trip across the continent for instance. In Kansas, he guaranteed a Republican majority of 10,000, but that Territory passed into the hands of black republicanism by the skin of her teeth; on the plains, some humorous stage driver made him gobble down a belief in the wind being strong enough in that section to blow the tires off wagon-wheels and straighten them out as smooth as they were before being touched by the blacksmith's hammer, which fact (?) he solemnly wrote to the Tribune; when in the buffalo country, he wrote to his journal a pathetic account of the "wild cow's" dismal fate—their pasture field was small and getting smaller, while the deadly rifle was carrying them off by thousands—soon, soon they must pass away and be a matter of history,—as if the Platte Valley was the only place known to man in all North America where buffaloes could or did live; at the Pike's Peak gold mines, as Bennett says, his fatal letters caused the pecuniary ruin of thousands; and so he blundered on to California, where he told the people what he termed five or six years ago "a railroad to the moon," could be and should be constructed immediately.

Horace Greeley is naturally an unscrupulous fanatic, socially a nuisance, politically an assassin, and literarily a numskull. Here we will let him rest for the present.—Should we see danger of his influential letter causing us "Gentiles" to be moved away from Utah by force, or have our throats peaceably cut by the Mormons, and Brigham Young made Governor of "God's people," we will give our friends the wink in due time.

There are about 7,500 newspapers published in the United States—a newspaper or some kind of a magazine, to every 4,000 inhabitants. The people of Utah claim a population of 100,000. At these figures they ought to support twenty-five newspapers.—The Territory of Nebraska, containing a population of about 60,000, supports, to the best of our knowledge, which we believe to be well-grounded, fifteen newspapers; Kansas, with a population of over 80,000, boasts over twenty; Arizona, with less than three thousand white inhabitants, has one, and we do not certainly know but two; the "Gentile" population of Carson Valley, who do not, according to the Mountaineer, exceed "three or four hundred," have one;—and we could, undoubtedly, if we had the statistics at hand, show that the 1 to 4,000 ratio holds good throughout all the States and all the Territories except sainted Utah. One of the two organs which are issued here is supported, not by the common intelligence of the masses, as is the case elsewhere, but by means wrung from the scanty purses of the Church members, through the pillaging tithing system, which system must be complied with by all Mormons, or else—they are not in "good standing" as church members. It is, of course, altogether optional with our Mormon friends whether they pay one-tenth of their substance to the Church or not, but to refuse to do so would be to incur the displeasure of the Almighty, which displeasure it is supposed, manifests itself through crop failures, sickness, and all sorts of adversities. Their consciences are mortgaged as security for the payment of these eleemosynary contributions—their consciences are shackled down as guaranties for the sustenance of this system of voluntary robbery.

Now, the question arises, do the Mormons as a people, fall behind their neighbors in their liberality to the press? Perhaps they would not if newspapers were as necessary to them as to the "world;" but they have better facilities for obtaining information than through newspapers. About every other family, and generally the one between, is possessed of either astrological science or a "peep-stone." By the former they can cypher out the fate of nations with much greater accuracy than a Brougham, a Bennett, a Raymond, or any other uninspired man, and through the latter—a small globular-shaped pebble—they can see cattle beyond mountains, twenty or a hundred miles, or even a greater distance off. Then what is the use of throwing away money upon the printers?

We make these remarks merely to justify our Mormon friends before the world, in their illiberality to the press.

Senator Broderick Dead. By information imparted in another column our readers will perceive that one of the most distinguished political men of the United States—Senator Broderick, of California, is dead—has been murdered. Here we have nothing to do with party politics at all, and even if we were identified with factional strife, we could never endorse such proceedings. The despatches concerning the affair which we publish, seem to indicate that Mr. Broderick's pistol was discharged accidentally; but this is disputed by some of the California journals, which claim that the Senator intentionally discharged his weapon in the ground from feelings of humanity and conviction of principle. Be this as it may, Judge Terry manifested very little manhood—in fact he proved himself an unmitigated murderer—in shooting an unarmed antagonist. Mr. Broderick was very bitter, extremely uncourteous, upon the stump, but that is no excuse for a political enemy to dodge behind the supposed "code of honor" and murder him, when he was unprepared for defense.

At the Tabernacle, last Sabbath forenoon, a distinguished Apostle, in speaking of "round tires like the full moon,"—the same as was prophesied of in days of old—said that hoops were an outward sign of inward grace. Some of the women vamped others blushed, while the men laughed heartily; many fair faces were hid, and we think many of them were too incensed to Hyde.—Of course we didn't understand what the Apostle, or-son of the Priesthood, was driving at, but suppose he was telling his hearers something about the charms of virtue, &c. We think there is not much truth in what bro' Hyde says—that is, we mean that, like all the rest of us, he is liable to exaggerate—as in the same sermon in which he kicked up the sensation spoken of above, he declared that two hundred and sixty billions of people were destroyed in the Deluge—a numbe greater than now would be upon the face of the earth if there had been no deaths since that time, but twice as many births as there have been!

"Well, we hadn't orto cheat each other you know, for we're both Mormons."

The above remark fell upon our ear the other day, as we were passing along the street, and in it is embodied an idea, although it be clothed in the vulgarity of illiteracy. How lucky it was that one of those disputing men was not a "gentile," for then the impulse would have been, "you're a 'cussed gentile," and damn you, you orto be awindled anyhow!"—in that case, it would have been religious to have extorted the pound of flesh nearest the heart—it would have been a horse of entirely a different color.

The following, clipped from the Baltimore Weekly Sun, of Aug. 20th, shows that our Eastern friends generally have a correct idea of how things ought to be done, whether they are done right or not:

"CONVICTION OF MONOMON COUNTERFEITERS.—Special agent Jarvis (of Baltimore) arrived at Washington yesterday from Salt Lake, and brings the information that McKenzie and Brewer, the two Mormons who were arrested upon the charge of counterfeiting drafts on the United States Sub-Treasury at Salt Lake City, have been tried, and convicted before Judge Eckles, at Camp Floyd, and sentenced to twenty-one years imprisonment. They will be taken to California or Washington, D. C., to serve out the term.

McKenzie was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary, and Brewer's case is not yet disposed of. Had McKenzie stood in the same enlightened and individually independent condition of a bona fide American citizen when he committed the crime, "twenty-one years' imprisonment" would not have been too much for him; but inasmuch as his religion—which he devoutly believes in—teaches him that it is according to the prophesy of Isaiah that "God's people" should "suck the milk of the gentiles"—that it is perfectly right to steal and rob from, and murder those who do not believe in Mormonism—his ignorance commanded sympathy, and correctly enough the term of imprisonment was set at two years. Mr. Saw, what say you ought to be done with those impostors who instigate men of perhaps natural honesty to these felonies? The crime of itself demands twenty-one years penitentiary incarceration, but the tool who was advised to perpetrate it should not suffer over two; who should the remaining nineteen years' imprisonment belong to?

We visited the Fair at the Social Hall, day before yesterday, and were much pleased with the display of natural and artificial attractions there to be found. One thing concerning the exhibition struck us forcibly: all the most prominent nations on the face of the earth were complimented by having their respective national banners conspicuously placed over the trophies of industry and ingenuity;—even the Infidel's Crescent boldly unfolded its colors to the passer-by;—but the "Stars and Stripes," the "flag of the free" was neglected, disrespected, and only dared to peep out occasionally from behind a screen of ornamental shrubbery. What o'clock is it?

ERRATA.—In our last we stated that one of Secretary Hartnett's employees was injured by the coach which he was in upsetting. This is a mistake—we were misinformed. Mr. JOHN KENN, a passenger in the last stage going eastward, had his leg broken by the stage turning over. We are told that Mr. K. is rapidly mending.

A young man was shot in Camp Floyd last Sunday night, and killed instantly. Our correspondent from that place was not able to give us the particulars of the affair, but promises them next week.

"SOME PORKINS."—There is a Squab on exhibition at the Social Hall, where the Fair is being held, which weighs 130 pounds.

Attention is called to the advertisement of friend Abraham Taylor. Although Mr. Taylor does not as extensive business in the mercantile line as some of his cotemporaries, yet what he does is done upon correct principles. We know him to be a gentleman of honesty, honor and liberality.

A POOR RULE THAT WON'T WORK BOTH WAYS.—Some one of our young "Gentile" friends tell us the Mormons say that "many embrace Mormonism for the sake of receiving the smiles of their beautiful ladies." Suppose that's a fact.—Is it not as well to embrace Mormonism for the sake of the women, as to embrace the women for the sake of Mormonism?

Wherein do the Mormon people resemble professors of acoustics?

In this particular.—Their prophesies (prof-its) lie in the ears of the people.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Sept. 28th, 1859.

I was somewhat surprised a few days since, to observe some printed bills posted up in conspicuous places around camp, setting forth that Shakespeare's "Othello, the Moor of Venice," would be produced on Saturday evening, the 24th inst., at the theatre. I was surprised because I had no idea that this company were aspiring to anything so high in the dramatic line. I am sorry to say that it was an entire failure,—made more particularly prominent in consequence of its being the night of a benefit. The afterpiece was somewhat better, partially relieving the embarrassment and disappointment of the first piece.

The "Soldiers Circus Company" suffered some damage to their pavilion in consequence of the late storm, but on Monday evening they were ready for exhibition. Willis and Crawford, the managers, are evidently doing all they can to amuse the visitors to their establishment. How far they succeed is more than I can say, to speak generally. The gymnasts, acrobats, and tumbler of the company are steadily improving and they have secured a new feature in this department in the person of Mr. J. W. Hyde, late of Smith's National Circus, of San Francisco, Cal. He is a first rate performer and merited all the applause he received on Monday night. In lieu of the equestrian performance, the managers produce from time to time, quite a number of original burlesques, pantomimes and farces. These form one of the attractive features of the company with the enlisted men of the camp. There is not a soldier in camp, (except a few whose love for Marmos Crinolines is greater than their love of their country,) but that would rather hear Crawford's speech on the "Adobe Town Militia," or Willis' sketch of a "Salt Lake Court Scene," and other extemporaneous effusions, than witness some baudy arrangement in the shape of a "spider dance." The majority of the officers and enlisted men of the camp, regard nothing in the shape of burlesque is too severe on the Mormons—on whose account we are swallowing pecks of dust weekly.

There is nothing new in camp. No mail since the 7th inst., and no prospects of one up to date.

Yours, in haste,

OBSERVER.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Oct. 3rd, 1859.

On Sunday evening, the 23rd Sept., we had again the pleasure of attending the Theatre of the German Musical Society. The following is a programme of the evening's entertainment: Orchestral, overture to Italian Opera, Rossini. Orchestra, Waltz, Fleur de Marie. Next drama by Korner, entitled Joseph Heidrich, or "Fidelity until death." Captain of Austrian Riflemen, Barzohf; Merchant, Bohlman; Lieutenant, Fink; Doctor, Fokrbach; Corporal, Grossman; Citizen, Gleiser. Orchestral, Cavatina from the Opera Lucia de Lamamoor. Orchestral, Gallop, Bertha's favorite song, Hunter's farewell to the forest. Orchestral, American Clipper Polka, Sickles Comedy, in two acts. The smartest gets the bride, Mrs. Waldner, Meerholz; Henrietta Waldner's daughter, Goetz; Graeber, Loesh; Mr. Waldner, upper bailiff, Grossman; Baer, Fokrbach; De Helder, Cap. Fink; Servant, Petsh; Krempel, Landlord Aberde; end of the first act. Orchestral, Venus Polonaise. Serenade, (Sleep Gentle Lady,) with orchestra accompaniment. Orchestral, Mazourka; end of second act. Orchestral, Concert, Mazourka. Song, Waldlieu.

We may state the music performed at this elegant little establishment is characterized no less by its chasteness of style than by the brilliance of its execution. The selections are made with taste and judgment, and is decidedly superior to anything which can be heard elsewhere in this territory.

The acting is very good. The pieces are put on the stage with care and attention to minor details which is very praiseworthy.

A street scene especially deserves our commendation. It is painted with a high degree of artistic skill, and requires only to be seen to be appreciated. On Wednesday evening, the Military Dramatic Association presented to their patrons a drama called the "Bottle," dancing by Miss Stephenson; and "Born to good luck." We were not present but understand the house was a very good one.

On Saturday evening the performances commenced "All that glitters is not gold." It was tolerably well performed, and appeared to give great satisfaction. A dance by Miss Stephenson, next two songs by Mr. Jones (who sang very indifferently), after which a fancy dance by Miss Stephenson and Mr. R. C., which was very neatly gone through, and was greatly applauded. The whole concluded with the very laughable farce of the "Stage struck Yankee," in which Mr. Warren particularly distinguished himself. The rest of the characters were well sustained, and sent a well satisfied audience home in good spirits.

DRAMA.

From the San Francisco National.
Later from British Columbia.

By the arrival of the steamer Forwood, we have dates from Victoria, V. I., to the 27th inst. The news from the "seat of war" on San Juan Island represents every thing quiet. We extract from the Gazette:

REPLY OF GOV. DOUGLASS TO GEN. HARNEY.
GOVERNMENT HOUSE, VICTORIA,
Vancouver's Island,
13th August, 1859.

Brigadier Gen. Wm. S. Harney, Commanding the Troops in the Department of Oregon:

Sir:—On the evening of the 10th inst., I had the honor of receiving your dispatch dated Fort Vancouver, Aug. 6th, 1859.

In reply thereto, I must thank you for the frank and straight forward manner in which you communicate to me your reasons for occupying the Island of San Juan in the Haro Archipelago with a portion of the military forces of the United States under your command.

I am glad to find that you have done so under your general instructions from the President of the United States as Military Commander of the Department of Oregon, and not by direct authority emanating from the Cabinet at Washington.

You state that the reasons which induced you to take that course are the "insults and indignities which the British authorities of Vancouver's Island, and the establishment of the Hudson's Bay Company" have recently offered to "American citizens residing on the Island of San Juan," by sending a British ship of war "from Vancouver's Island to convey the Chief Factors of the Hudson's Bay Company to San Juan, for the purpose of seizing an American citizen, and forcibly transporting him to Vancouver's Island to be tried by British laws."

I will explain for your information that the Agents of the Hudson's Bay Company hold no official position in Vancouver's Island, nor exercise any official power or authority, and are as entirely distinct from the officers of the Executive Government as are any of the inhabitants of Vancouver's Island.

To the reported outrages on an American citizen, I beg to give the most unhesitating and unqualified denial. None of Her Majesty's ships have ever been sent to convey the Chief Factor or any officer of the Hudson's Bay Company to San Juan for the purpose of seizing an American citizen, nor has any attempt ever been made to seize any American citizen and to transport him forcibly to Vancouver's for trial, as represented by you.

Up to a very recent period but one American citizen has been resident on San Juan. About the commencement of the present year a few American citizens began to "squat" upon the island, and upon one occasion a complaint was made to me by a British subject of some wrong committed against his property by an American citizen, but no attention was paid to that complaint, out of consideration and respect to the friendly government to which the alleged offender belonged, and whose citizens, I think, it cannot be denied, have always been treated with marked attention by all the British authorities in these parts. With reference to San Juan in particular, I have always acted with the utmost caution to prevent, so far as might be in my power, any ill feelings arising from collisions between British subjects and American citizens, and have in that respect cordially endeavored to carry out the views of the United States Government, as expressed in a dispatch from Mr. Marcy, dated 17th July, 1855, to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, a copy of which I herewith enclose for your information, as I presume that the document cannot be in your possession.

Following the dignified policy recommended by the dispatch, I should in any well grounded case of complaint against an American citizen have referred the matter to the Federal authorities in Washington Territory, well assured that if wrong had been committed reparation would have followed.

I deeply regret that you did not communicate with me for information upon the subject of the alleged grievance, you would then have learned how unfounded was the complaint, and the grave action you have adopted might have been avoided. I also deeply regret that you did not mention the matter verbally to me when I had the pleasure of seeing you at Victoria last month, for a few words from me would, I am sure, have moved from your mind any erroneous impressions, and you would have ascertained personally from me how anxious I have ever been to co-operate to the utmost of my power with the officers of the United States Government in any measure which might be mutually beneficial to the citizens of the two countries.

Having given you a distinct and emphatic denial of the circumstances which you allege induced you to occupy the Island of San Juan with United States troops; having shown you that the reasons you assign do not exist, and having endeavored to assure you of my readiness on all occasions to act for the protection of American citizens, and for the promotion of their welfare, I must call upon you, sir, if not as a matter of right, at least as a matter of justice and humanity, to withdraw the troops now quartered upon the Island of San Juan; for those troops are not required for the protection of American citizens against British authorities, and their continuance upon an island, the sovereignty of which is in dispute, not only is a marked discourtesy to a friendly Government, but complicates to an unusual degree the settlement in an amicable manner of the question of sovereignty, and is also calculated to provoke a collision between the military forces of two friendly nations, in a distant part of the world.

I have the honor to be sir

Your most obedient servant,

JAMES DOUGLASS.

The following was brought by the steamer from Victoria. We find it in the Sacramento Standard:

"The force of the United States on San Juan Island, now consists of five companies of Infantry and four of Artillery. A company of Sappers and Miners were on the way there, under an American Engineer, for the purpose of erecting a line of earthworks. Besides the field guns belonging to the artillery companies, three Paixan guns had been landed from the Massachusetts, and placed in position commanding San Juan Harbor; all is quiet, however.

Governor Douglass seems determined to resort to hostile measures forthwith, but Admiral Baynes, of the British Pacific Squadron, and Col. Moody, of the British Army, recommends a conciliatory settlement, and to await advice from the Government.

It appears that Gov. Douglass, backed by the Colonial Legislative Assembly, issued orders for the bombardment of the Island, and Admiral Baynes refused to carry the order into effect.

A council of war was held at the Government house, Victoria, on the 18th inst., to take into consideration the renewed offense, offered by the Americans, in fortifying San Juan.

The Council was composed of Gov. Douglass, Admiral Baynes, Col. Moody, Judge Bugbie and Capt. DeCourcy, Prevost and Henry, of the English Squadron.

Explanations from the U. S. officers were strongly insisted upon by several members of the Council, but the war party failed in the effort to convince Admiral Haynes of the propriety of their course.

It is said General Harney will call on the Governor of Washington Territory for volunteers, as he has refused joint occupancy.

Gen. Harney has addressed the following letter to Gov. Douglass:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF OREGON,
FORT VANCOUVER, AUG. 6, 1859.

His Excellency James Douglas, C. B., Governor of Vancouver Island, Vice Admiral of the same:

Sir: I have the honor to inform you of the receipt of an official copy of a protest made by you to the occupation of San Juan Island, in Puget Sound, by a company of United States troops under my command. This aforesaid copy was furnished by Capt. Hornby, of Her Majesty's ship Tribune, to the United States officer in command at San Juan Island, Capt. George Pickett, of the Ninth Infantry of the American Army, together with a communication threatening a joint occupation of the San Juan Island by the forces of Her Majesty's ships Tribune, Plumper and Satellite, now in the harbor of that island, by your orders, as the military commander of the Department of Oregon, assigned to that command by the orders of the President of the United States. I have the honor to state for your information that by such authority invested in me, I placed a military command upon the island of San Juan, to protect the American citizens residing on that island from the insults and indignities which the British authorities of Vancouver Island and the establishment of the Hudson's Bay Company have recently offered them, by sending a British ship of war from Vancouver Island to convey the Chief Factor of the Hudson's Bay Company to San Juan, for the purpose of seizing an American citizen and forcibly transporting him to Vancouver Island, to be tried by British laws.

I have reported this attempted outrage to my Government, and they will doubtless seek the proper redress from the British Government. In the meantime, I have the honor to inform your Excellency that I shall not permit a repetition of that insult, and shall retain a command on San Juan Island to protect its citizens, in the name of the United States, until I receive further orders from my Government.

I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

W. S. HARNEY.

Brigadier General U. S. Army, commanding

Homicide in Carson Valley.

CARSON CITY, Sept. 5th.
On the third, at Willow Town, about 64 miles east of this city, Mike Obay shot Capt. Dale, station keeper. As we are informed, Dale had been drinking, quarreled with Obay, and chased him around the house, firing twice at Obay, who begged him to stop. Dale not doing so, Obay drew his pistol and fired, killing Dale instantly. Some emigrants have Obay in charge, and intend trying him.

THE ELECTION.—Returns show that Latham is elected by one of the most overwhelming majorities ever known in California. Even Sacramento and San Francisco has gone for him, and in all probability, Yuba. These are the three strongholds of Broderick. We think it quite safe to estimate Latham's majority at 20,000, and Scott's and Burch's majority at 15,000. As soon as possible we will give the entire vote. We do not deem it expedient to burden our columns with partial returns. This tremendous rebuke should silence the enemies of the President and the democracy in all times to come.—San Joaquin Rep.

Judge Cradlebaugh opened his Court today for this district. He appointed a clerk and deputy U. S. Marshal, and then adjourned until 10th October. Judge Cradlebaugh will issue a warrant for the arrest of Obay, who shot Dale, immediately, and take him from the mob.—Territorial Enterprise, Carson Valley.

STAGGERS IN HORSES.—Miles Saunders, Esq., sends to the Pulaski Times the following remedy for the cure of staggers in horses: "Bleed the horse copiously in the large veins inside the thighs (and never in the neck.) Fill both ears with spirits turpentine, and cord them well; wet the head all round with turpentine, and wet them well back of the shoulders and in the flanks; squirt a small quantity of turpentine up each nostril, and smoke them well with rags or cotton. I have never known the above remedies to fail when attended to."

From Dispatches to the Placerville Observer.
Senator Broderick Shot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13—9 A. M.

The duel between Judge Terry and Senator Broderick, came off at precisely 7 o'clock this morning, and on the ground measured off yesterday, close to the boundary line between San Francisco and San Mateo counties. There was but one shot each.

Broderick fired at the word, an into the ground. Terry thereupon fired, shooting B. through the right lung. The wound is pronounced mortal. He did not speak after being shot.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]

The ball lodged in Broderick's breast.—He is bleeding profusely. At 9 o'clock, an express from the field says he was alive, and being brought to town in a carriage. Merchant and Montgomery streets are filled with people, and the excitement is intense. There is a report in town that Broderick's surgeons do not consider his wound mortal. It is only a report.

[THIRD DISPATCH.]

Broderick has arrived in town, and is at the residence of Leonidas Haskell, Esq.—The latest report is that he is dying.

[FOURTH DISPATCH.]

McKIBBIN CHALLENGES TERRY.—It is reported that Broderick is dead, but I doubt it. It is said McKibbin challenged Terry, on the ground.

Broderick's pistol discharged prematurely. Terry took good aim.

[FIFTH DISPATCH.]

DEATH OF SENATOR BRODERICK.—From a private despatch, we learn that Senator Broderick died at 2 o'clock.

Greatest excitement prevails. McKibbin bound to meet Terry.

THE VERY LATEST.—Just before going to press, we learn from a private dispatch that Senator Broderick is still alive, but no hopes are entertained of his recovery. He is shot through both lungs.

THE MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—The New York correspondent of the Charleston Mercury says that Senor O., whose approaching nuptials were alluded to in the Tribune last week, is "no less a person than Esteban St. Cruz Oviada, of Cuba, and the fair American is Miss Fanny Bartlett, (still in her teens,) daughter of Captain Bartlett, of Me., late of the United States Navy. The gentleman is one of the richest residents of the sunny island, reputed to be worth about $4,000,000. He owns two large sugar plantations, worked by some 2,100 negroes, and a large number of houses and lots in the city of Havana." The millionaire, Senor has been, of late years, a frequent visitor to this city, and to the fashionable watering places North. But the "hour and the woman" had not come for the Senor until last New Year's day, when he met the fair heroine of this true tale and surrendered at discretion.

HON. EDWARD EVERETT.—The August number of the Electric Magazine, in speaking of this gentleman, gives an account of his labors in connection with the Mt. Vernon Fund. His Washington Oration was first delivered Feb. 22d, 1856, and has been given since then one hundred and twenty-nine times, yielding $55,783 62. For the "Mount Vernon papers," in the New York Ledger, he received $10,000, and in other ways smaller sums, making a contribution to the Mount Vernon Fund of $68,163.56. In addition to his labors for this object, he has delivered lectures for other benevolent associations, making a total of more than ninety thousand dollars in a little more than three years. It is to be understood, too, that Mr. Everett has traveled many thousand miles, and defrayed all his expenses from his private purse. He has done this, too, when much occupied by private and public affairs, and frequently in delicate health.

NEW WAGON ROAD THROUGH SALT LAKE VALLEY.—We publish in another column a letter of instructions for General Harney, commanding the Military Department of Oregon, directing the opening of a new wagon road from the Dalles, a point a little to the south of Columbia river, to Great Salt Lake Valley, connecting with the road through the Western States by South Pass, already constructed. This route will open a direct communication between the Pacific coast and the heart of Utah Territory, and will greatly facilitate the transport of troops and military stores to that point; thus saving an immense expense in the transmission of armies and supplies through the vast deserts traversed by General Johnston last year in the Utah expedition. Besides, it will open up another great artery of travel through the Mormon domain, now comparatively impassable.—This road will doubtless prove a useful national work, and we hope it will be pushed through as speedily as possible. [N. Y. Herald.]

INDIANS IN THE NORTH.—A despatch to the Union dated Yreka September 5th, says: "George H. Dobbins is here with information from Captain J. T. Langley that, on the 3d inst. the Pitt Rangers attacked a rancheria of Reaver Creek Indians numbering two hundred, seventy of whom were killed. Three of the Rangers were wounded, two with arrows and the other with buck-shot. The latter is a brother of N. McElroy, who was killed by the Indians some weeks since."

GENERAL HOUTON GOVERNOR ELECT OF TEXAS.—The election of Gen. Samuel Houston as Governor of Texas, of which he was the first President while it was an independent nation, suggests a retrospective glance at his history. His childhood and youth were spent in the Cherokee country. His first step in public life was keeping a school in Tennessee. Next he was clerk and county auditor. In 1813 he enlisted under Gen. Jackson, and served with him in the Creek war, was wounded, and made a lieutenant. Next he studied law in Nashville, and was twice elected to Congress, serving from 1823 to 1827. He was then chosen governor of Tennessee, and after entering upon his third year in that office, resigned; returned to the Cherokees in Arkansas, and applied himself zealously to a defence of their rights, and the assertion of their just claim upon the United States Government. He went to Texas on a visit, and was elected a member of the constitutional convention, which met for the purpose of preparing the State for admission into the Mexican Union. Santa Anna rejected the constitution, and Gen. Houston took the lead in arousing the Texans to arms. He was elected commander-in-chief of the Texan troops, conducted the war vigorously, and brought it to a successful termination at the battle of San Jacinto. He was the first President of Texas; then a member of the Texan Congress; then President again. Upon the annexation of Texas in 1844 he was elected United States senator; was twice re-elected; and in March last made his farewell address to that body, from which he was about to retire voluntarily. He now took the field as candidate for governor of Texas, with the like success which had attended all his previous enterprises.

REPORT OF THE DEATH OF THE EMPEROR OF CHINA.—An Amoy correspondent of the Herald says that the death of the Emperor of China, Hian Fung, was reported.

MOVEMENT OF U. S. TROOPS.—Company E. Sixth Infantry, at present stationed at San Bernardino, are under orders from General Clarke for Fort Mohave, on the Colorado. They will move as soon as Captain Hancock, Quartermaster, can procure transportation for them.—San Fran. Nat.

Mr. Cyrus W. Field, the telegraph hero, attended the Williams Convention on Wednesday, and was added to the list of those who received the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

E. H. Baxter, lately employed as a job printer in the office of the Metropolitan, at Kansas City, has just received the intelligence that he has fallen heir to an estate of $80,000 in England.

BONNER AGAIN.—It is reported that Bonner, of the New York Ledger, has offered Edward Everett $10,000 to stop writing for his journal. But Everett says he won't stop for less than twenty thousand. It is thought they will compromise on fifteen thousand.

VARIETY STORE.

A. TAYLOR & SONS,
GENERAL DEALERS,

RETURN thanks to all their friends and patrons, and especially those who have settled their accounts, and taken this opportunity to invite those who have not, to do so immediately, and save the trouble of putting them into other hands to collect; and they also inform their friends that they are carrying on their business as usual, under Cannon's daughter, room, next to Geo. Cronyn's, and invite them to inspect their stock, which consists in part of

Ready Made Clothing,

HATS, SHOES, GLOVES, MOCCASINS,

and a great variety of useful and ornamental notions. They are also dealers in Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash, Nails, Putty, Glass, Paper, Paint, Oil, and all the hardware, tools, and all the articles too numerous to specify, and have a man on hand in the basement to repair and cover Umbrellas and Parasols, making Mouse Traps and Children's Toys, and other jobbing work on the shortest notice. Agents for Bailey's Pure Whisky, and Day's Strong Beer. Give us a call.

A. TAYLOR & SONS,
Council House Street.

FOR SALE.

A HOUSE AND LOT and 25 acres at Coltonwood. Also a House, Lot and 5 acres of land at Provo, for sale or exchange for city property. A. TAYLOR,
Council House Street.

ALMERIN GROW,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

OFFICE—On Main Street, G. S. City, Utah Territory.
37—17.

THE REMAINS OF NAPOLEON THE GREAT.—Workmen are now busy in the vaults of Saint Dennis preparing a sepulchre for the remains of Napoleon I, which will certainly be removed from the Invalides, although the day for the disinterment is not yet fixed. I presume the Marshal Prince Jerome, who at one time declared that the tomb in the Invalides of which he is governor, should never be disturbed as long as he lived, is now less positive in his opposition. The last resting place of the great Napoleon among the bones of the kings of France will not, however, after all, be the precise spot which he had selected for himself, and which he is represented pointing to in the well known glass painting in one of the Cathedral windows. Louis XVII is buried in that vault, and the Emperor, whose great object in interring his uncle in the royal basilica is to teach the public to regard him as the legitimate founder of a new line of monarchs, cannot in consistency desecrate the tomb of a legitimate Bourbon. —[Manchester Guardian, August 8.]

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.—The reports made by Mr. Fulkerson to the Southern Pacific Railroad meeting two evenings since, of which an official report is given to-day, were of the most flattering character. From Dr. Fowlkes, a telegraphic dispatch was yesterday received, saying the road is now in a position almost to be termed independent.

With twenty-five thousand dollars more in hand, the entire debt of the company can at once be paid, and the company be placed in a condition to prosecute the work of construction. —[Picayune, Aug. 6.]

SECRETARY FLOYD.—We are gratified to be able to state that the health of Secretary Floyd is much improved, and that in a very short time he will resume his duties at the War Department. There is no probability of his retirement from the Cabinet, and it is doubtful whether Mr. Buchanan would accept his resignation, even if Governor Floyd was to press it strongly upon him. Mr. Buchanan desires no change in his Cabinet, during the remainder of his Presidential term. —[Wabk. States.]

GENOA, SEPT. 5.

BIG PILE WON.—The Chicago Democrat tells the story of a man who won $25,000 in that city in one night. He staked the amount on his wife next day and swore off gambling forever.

A first class locomotive costs about $10,000; a passenger car, $2,000; a baggage car, $1,500; a freight car, $650; a gravel car $450. The iron of a railroad costs from $5,000 to $6,000 per mile.

A fellow seven feet high passed through Charleston on his way to California. On being asked why he ventured on so hazardous a journey, he replied: "They don't want me any longer down in Maine."

ORIGIN OF THE CAP OF LIBERTY.—In former ages, when old age was honorable, caps became emblems of honor. By degrees it became the badge of freedom, for none were deemed honorable who were not free, and when a slave was made free, he had a cap given him, which he was permitted to wear in public. The cap of Liberty was simple in its form, in the shape of a sugar loaf, broad at the base and ending in a cone. This prefigures that freedom stands on the broad basis of humanity and runs up to a pyramid.

Thus far, this year, 64,726 emigrants have arrived at the port of New York, against 44,534 to the same date last year.

It is said that, instead of going to reside in Washington for the coming season, Mrs. Sickles purposes to visit Europe under the protection of her father.

A colored firm in Newark, N. J., having suffered some pecuniary embarrassments, recently closed business, and the senior member gave the following notice to the public:

"The dissolution of co-partnership here tofore resisting twix me and Moses Jones in the barber profession, on heretofore resolved. Pussions who owe must pay; the inscriber Dem what do firm ose must call on Jones as de firm am insolved."

LIGEE JOHNSON.

Many people like newspapers, but few preserve them; yet the most interesting reading imaginable is a file of old newspapers. It brings up the very age, with all its bustle and everyday affairs, and marks its genius and its spirit more than the most labored description of the historian. Who can take up a paper half a century back, without the thought that almost every name there printed is now cut upon a tombstone at the head of an epitaph?

The American Dental Convention is to be holden at Niagara Falls, on the 2d of August. The cost of travel and board, we presume, are to be charged to each member as incidental expenses.

The mind is like a sheet of white paper in this—that the impressions it receives the oftener, and retains the longest, are black ones.

Success produces confidence, confidence relaxes industry, and negligence ruins that reputation which accuracy had raised.

The people of Salt Lake are dissatisfied at the change made in their male arrangements. —[St. Jos. West.]

They have more reason to be dissatisfied with the threatened change in their female arrangements. —[Border Star.]

AN ENTIRE FAMILY BURNED TO DEATH.—The Muncy (Pa.) Luminary, of August 23d, says:—We have the particulars of a most terrible calamity which occurred near Red Bluff, on the Sacramento river, California, on the 12th of May last. The residence of Col. E. A. Stevenson, late Indian Agent, was set on fire by an Indian boy in his employ, early in the morning, and the entire family of Col. Stevenson, consisting of his wife and three children, together with the wife of a Mr. Kronk and two children, perished in the flames. The boy was instigated to the terrible deed by five Indians, in the absence of Col. Stevenson. Mrs. Stevenson was the daughter of the late Jonathan Marcy, of Wilkesbarre, and the niece of the Rev. George C. Drake, of this borough.

LAST TRAIN, AND BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store house recently occupied by C. H. BASSETT.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR STOCK OF GOODS CAN NOT be surpassed in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF FINE

DRESS GOODS ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS, CASHMERES, MERINOS, ALPACAS, DELAINES, LAUNES, SINGHAMS, CHAMBRAYS, JACONETT AND SWISS MUSLINS, CRI OLINE, CHALIS, RIBBONS, VELVETS,

AND ALL SORTS OF TRIMMINGS.

SHAWLS, CLOAKS, MANTILLAS, PARASOLS, and every variety of LADIES' GOODS, CLOTHS, SATINETTS, CASSIMERES, TWEEDS, CORDUOYS, BOOTS AND SHOES, HATS AND CAPS, AND READY-MADE CLOTHING.

GROCERIES AND DYE STUFFS. A full list of Yankee notions. Don't forget Good and Cheap.

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS.

28-42.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors; —ALSO—

OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY, AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

37-42

NOTICE. THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

Dyer, Bro's & Co. at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business.

R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GERRISH.

39-42

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HORN & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stocks of staple groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, c.ffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spices, alum, copperas, saltpetre, nutmeg, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, nutmeg, ginger, mustard, oases, saucers of every kind, brandy, fruits, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, butter, lard, cod fish, and bones to be made into steams, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs, and cloves, pickles, sugar of len, on blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, at many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Assorted celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market.

Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen.

40-42

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c. Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induce us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting	Merrimack Prints
Bleached do	Blue Demins
" shirtings	" drills
Brown do	White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes	Canton flannels
Plaid linsey woolsey	Woolen do
Kentucky jeans	Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking	Alpacas and merinos
Delaines & cashmeres	Spun yarn
Linon diaders & towels	Sewing thread
" napkins	Curtain damasks
" table cloths	Satinet & cassimeres
Crash, toweling and	Cottonades and pant
doilies	stuffs
Ginghams and lawns	Carpets and oil cloths
White linen bosom shirts	Apron checks
Colored calico do	Heavy duck (all
Grey flannel do	widths)
Red do do	Blue & Hick'y check
Blue do do	do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c. such as

Bk and fancy dress	Embroidered sets
silks	" collars & sleeves
Plain all wool delaines	" window curtains
Fancy do	" edgings and in-
Alexander's kid gloves	" sections
Bay state long shawls	" linen handk'fs
Stella and merino do	Plain linen cambric
Delaines in dress pat-	Hem stitched "
terns	Silk
White cambric muslin	" cravats and ties
Jackonets	Suspenders
Swiss	Dress Trimmings
Mull & Namssoks
Plaid Jackonet muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and gauntlets
Lace mits and gloves
Dress lawns and bargee
Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York

Agents for the Garment Print Works, and the New-England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-3m

WILL A. HICKMAN, ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW, with practice in all the Courts in this Territory. OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co's Store. 45-47

George Cronyn & Co. HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Eldredge & Co., consisting of

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, &c. beg leave to say 'they have now opened the goods at

George Cronyn's Old Stand, near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail. They assure the public they have put prices at a low rate. You are invited to call and examine.

The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS, Groceries,

Hardware, Oils, Turpentine, Alcohol,

Window Glass, Hay and Manure Forks,

Shovels, Spades, Cotton Yarn,

Dye-Stuffs, &c. Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of Salt Lake received.

41-42

NOTICE. WE have taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends will please call and see.

38-42

GILBERT & GERRISH.

To the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a. m., and arriving at 2 p. m. He has four fine chaises of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE. He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.

Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE. He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. Letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

All pack goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All pack goods weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Baggage, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. PARMENIO A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

39-42

NEW GOODS. WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City, and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, especially for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the City.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine.

40-42

100 COOK STOVES for sale by DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale by DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce.

40-42

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms a fourth above.

40-42

LOOK HERE. THE Undersigned has opened, THREE Doors North of the Salt Lake House, a

BAKERY, where at all times may be found

Fresh Bread, Crackers, Cakes, Pastry, &c.

In connection may be found

ICE CREAMS, CONFECTIONERY, SODA WATER, & SUMMER DRINKS.

Attached are

BATHS In Private Rooms, neatly fitted up.

PRICE OF BATHS: Single Bath 75 cents. Five Baths $3 00 Ten do $5 00 37-3m E. REESE.

Hol for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE! Fare Reduced! IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. n36-42

100 WAGONS JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods, Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing, Hardware, Outfitting Goods, Harness, Saddles, & Bridles, which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce. Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO, 75 Light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MARY HSE JACK; one fine STALLION. For sale by 35-42

C. A. PERRY & CO.

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Have opened in their NEW STORE RO

ON MAIN STREET.

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDISE, Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 34-42

DRUGS! CHEMICALS! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH, MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS, of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements.

He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES, including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN. And is also prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

RIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS. 26-42

L. & A. CARR, WHOLESALE

BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS, No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetics, grammars, geographies, philosophies, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING

PAPER, has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. They have an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY, attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice. 14-42

GERARD B. ALLEN, OLIVER B. FILLEY

FULTON IRON WORKS, Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO. MANUFACTURE High and Low pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron Works, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Presses and Iron Castings of every description, Circular Saw Mills of the Patent and Childs Patents. 30-42

STRAYED FROM the herd at the Hot Spring

Brewery, two BLACK MULES, branded R S on near shoulder, and R II on near thigh. Supposed to have gone towards Salt Lake City. $20 reward will be paid for their delivery to the subscriber at the Brewery. 40-42

R. BT. HERKFOR.

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. OFFICE—One door North of Post Office, Great Salt Lake City. 1-42

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW.

Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-42.

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR

THE VALLEY TANTAN.

H. N. MAGUIRE, Editor.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1859.

NUMBER 48.

Hidden Love.

There is many a tender love unseen,
That close in the bosom dwells,
And the bud conceals the flower within
The leaves of its folding cells.

There is many a treasured love unknown,
That deep in the heart is laid,
Like a vein of gold, or precious stone,
Concealed from the miner's spade.

There is many a struggling love untold,
By feeling itself suppressed,
As the trembling lips cannot unfold
The thoughts that we love the best.

There is many a thrilling love unsung,
Unheard as the spirit's wing;
As the song of the harp, though sweetly strung,
May sleep on the silent string.

There is many a cherished love unbreathed,
That dies with the faithful breast,
Or, perchance, in dying words bequeathed,
As the bosom sinks to rest.

There is many a love we dare not name,
Though purest of earthly loves;
There is many a love the world may blame,
That Heaven itself approves!

The Mojave War.

By the steamer Senator we have Los Angeles papers to the 23d inst. The Vineyard of that date has the following regarding Indian hostilities:

Capt. Hancock, A. Q. M., U. S. Army, received last night an express from Fort Mojave, August 17th, for Brigadier General Clarke, commanding Department of California. S. A. Bishop and his party of thirty men reached the river on the 16th, from New Mexico, and have volunteered to remain five or six days and render aid to Major Armstrong. The Indians show no disposition to submit, but continue to lurk about the Fort with hostile intentions, and will have to be well chastised before they will wish for peace. This is the opinion of an officer at the post. It is said that Major Armstrong has asked for additional force, to enable him to successfully prosecute this war. The troops there are constantly employed in destroying those villages which are within the reach of their operations.

Mr. E. Gilbert, of the Central Overland Mail, and who was at the station on the Colorado river, when the Mojaves attacked and plundered that station, arrived in this city on Sunday. Mr. Gilbert informs us that the Indians along the road from the Colorado river to the Mojave river are manifesting a hostile disposition. A few days since, an express was forced to turn back, and seek safety from an attack of those Indians. The Mojave Indians exercise a strong influence over the Pah-Utah nation, as well as over the Indians on the east of the Colorado river, and until they are severely chastised, there can be no hopes of peace in that part of the country.

Capt. Wilcox, who arrived in this city on Saturday last from the Colorado, says that a Yuma Indian, who was up the river at the time of the fight with Major Armstrong, reports sixty-three Mojaves killed in the fight and two badly wounded.

FROM FRAZER RIVER.—The news from the mines is quite meagre. It is still confidently anticipated that large quantities of gold will be taken out "when the river falls." It is stated in the correspondence of the Victoria Gazette that the miners on Canal river, near Fort Alexander, are making from ten to fifty dollars per day.

A correspondent writing from Yale says that on the 15th inst., the body of a white man was picked up in the river, and the verdict of a coroner's verdict was that he had been foully dealt with. He remarks:

"I fear there is some mystery which should be solved; these bodies being found at this time, when there is no river navigation, give ground for suspicion of treachery on the part of our Indian neighbors. I may be wrong, but hazard the conjecture.

"Since writing the above I have conversed with an intelligent boatman, and he mentioned an instance where a man had been lost in a whirlpool, and after drifting only a quarter of a mile, was stripped of everything except one wristband, besides which the body was cut and bruised in many places, and the scalp entirely bare, yet the body had been in sight the whole time. Trees have been seen whirling in a similar manner, and afterwards found stripped of limbs, leaves and bark."

The first school in British Columbia was opened on the 15th inst.

The news from Thompson's river is that the miner's are making $3 per day, and upwards.

AFFAIRS AT SAN JUAN.—Gov. Gholson, of Washington Territory, visited the U. S. Military encampment at San Juan on the 24th of August. He was accompanied by a company of ladies and gentlemen. The correspondence of the Gazette says that the Governor had accepted an invitation to visit the British steamer Satellite. The site of the new camp is described as a very romantic spot. Shortly after the removal of the camp, Lieut. Col. Casey issued an order to the effect that no infringement upon the rights or property of the H. B. Co., contiguous to the spot, would be permitted by any attaches of the force under his command.

THE WOUNDED SOLDIERS.—The wounded soldiers returning to France from the war present a sorry sight. A Marseilles correspondent of the London Times, describing a cargo which had just arrived, says:

"The appearance of the poor fellows presented the reverse to the medal, and was a most painful sight, even although the worse cases—where limbs have been amputated—were not seen. Some had their arms in slings, others hobbled on crutches, and all showed traces of recent suffering. It was remarked that a large proportion belonged to the Imperial Guard, which goes to confirm the statement of your correspondent at the Austrian headquarters as to the extent to which this corps suffered. A medical man, who has charge of upwards of a hundred wounded men, French and Austrians, noticed with surprise that the majority of the wounds were on the left, indicating that they were struck while in the act of firing, or that the troops had not allowed in aiming for the lateral deviation of the rifle bullet. He also observed that these bullets made holes as if they had been drilled, and that they travelled over, or through the body in the most eccentric directions. In one case the ball struck the right eye, carried away the bridge of the nose, and passed over the left eye, making its exit just before the ear. Another penetrated near the back of the neck and came out below the root of the tongue. The conclusion is that, after all, conical balls produce less dangerous gunshot wounds than the ordinary spherical ones, since, whenever the first meet an obstacle, except they strike with the apex, they deviate from their course instead of smashing the bone, and make their way through the fleshy part of the body. How far this conclusion may be true or false will be for your medical readers to determine."

ERUPTION OF MOUNT HOOD.—The Oregonian of the 20th says: On Wednesday last, the atmosphere suddenly became exceedingly hot about midday. In the afternoon the heavens presented a singular appearance, dark, silvery, condensed clouds hung over the top of Mt. Hood. The next day several persons watched the appearance of Mt. Hood until evening. An occasional flash of fire could be distinctly seen rolling up. On Thursday night, the fire was plainly seen by every one whose attention could be drawn to the subject. Yesterday, the mountain was closely examined by those who have recently returned from a visit to its summit, when, by the naked eye or a glass, it was seen that a large mass of the northwest side had disappeared, and that the immense quantity of snow which, two weeks since, covered the south side, had also disappeared. The dense clouds of steam and smoke constantly rising over and far above its summit, together with the entire change in its appearance heretofore, convince us that Mt. Hood is now in a state of eruption, which has broken out within a few days. The curious will examine it and see for themselves.

INTERNATIONAL COURTESIES.—The steamer Pacific, Captain Patterson, on passing H. M. S. Ganges, in Esquimaux harbor, upon entering, dipped her flag, and a fine band on board struck up "God save the Queen." The Admiral's ship immediately returned the compliment by playing the "Star Spangled Banner," and lowered a boat which came alongside the Pacific and desired to know how many U. S. troops were on board, thinking probably that several companies had been sent here in consequence of the San Juan difficulties, and that they were indebted to them for the salute. Capt. Patterson replied he had no troops on board, although the troops was—a Circus Company from Portland, to whom the band belonged. This reply caused no little merriment among all parties, in which none joined more heartily than the officers of the Ganges.

ADVERTISING—IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Supreme Court of Indiana has rendered a decision which has an important bearing upon the interests of the newspaper press. A controversy existed relative to a charge for advertising, between the Commissioner of Hamilton county and the Patriot newspaper. It was held by the Judge that:

The published terms of newspapers constitute a contract. If work is given to newspaper publishers without a special contract contravening the published terms, the publishers can charge and receive according to the terms so published. It is not necessary to prove what the work cost or was worth; the publishers have a right to fix the value of their columns, and if so fixed, no other question need be asked, but the price thus charged can be procured.

MORTALITY AMONG PRINTERS IN NEW ORLEANS.—Death has been very busy among the printers of New Orleans. Five of those connected with the Picayune alone, have been carried off since November last. In an editorial on that subject that paper says:

But the noble sentiment of charity and brotherly feeling that ever characterizes the printers, in whatever part of the world they may be found, in some degree compensates for those losses; and although there is no rule that calls for such action on the part of printers, as a body, the widows and orphans' griefs are often assuaged by the practical kindness and benevolence of the friends and associates of the loved and lost.

HARD TO BEAT.—The best thing we have heard of an antiquarian is told of Wm. F. Goodwin, Esq., of Concord, N. H., who is acknowledged to be the greatest antiquarian in New England. Mr. G. in order to add another valuable volume of legal lore to his already well-stocked library, is engaged in hunting up copies of the celebrated criminal trials that have taken place in the State of New Hampshire. Observing in a catalogue of books issued by an old and distinguished publishing house in New York, that a copy of a trial he was in search of was for sale, Mr. G. immediately wrote to the firm requesting them to forward it to him. By due course of mail he received a letter informing him that the copy of the trial he desired had been sold, but that they would procure another copy for him, and that their business was so extensive, both in this country and in Europe, that they could furnish him with a copy of any trial he might desire. Mr. G. having been placed in the same position several times by attempting to purchase catalogue books with the prices annexed, wrote back the following short, but pithy note:

Concord, N. H., July 2, 1859.

Messrs. Gentlemen: Yours of the 30th of June is at hand. Be kind enough to procure for me, as soon as may be, one copy of the trial of the "two thieves" who were hanged, "one on the right hand and another on the left of our Saviour when he was crucified," and very much obliged, Your obedient servant, W. F. GOODWIN.

P. S. Be very careful and get the edition that contains the indictment, for I have never been able to find out what those two rascals stole. The above letter is to be preserved in the New York Historical Society Archives, and a dinner awaits the pleasure of the author. [Boston Journal.]

LIFE OF A PRINTER.—Printers, it is said, die at an early age. This is doubtless caused by the noxious effluvia rising from the types, want of exercise, constant employment, and the late hours to which their work is prolonged. There is no other class of human beings whose privileges are so few, whose labor is so continuous, whose wages are so inadequate, as printers. If a "typo" be a man of family, he is debarr'd of the privileges of enjoying their society at all times, because his hours of labor are almost endless, and his moments of leisure so few that they must be spent to recruit his exhausted energies, and prepare him for the renewal of his toils. Poor fellow! he knows nothing of sociability, and is shut out from the world as a convict in a prison cell. Truly he is in the world, but knows not of it. Toil— toil— toil, by night and by day, is his fate, until premature old age ends his existence. For the advancement of science, morality, and virtue, the chords of his heart are severed one by one, and when life is run, and time to him is on more, he goes down to the grave unwept and unknown, though his existence has been sacrificed for the benefit of his race.

When we hear mechanics cry out against oppression, and demanding certain hours for labor and for rest, we cannot but reflect upon this situation of our own craft; how every moment of their lives is forced into service to earn a bare subsistence, how uncompromisingly they devote themselves to the good of that same public, who wear them as a loathsome garment to be doctored, when convenient, and doffed when no longer needed.

Printers are universally poor men, and for two reasons. The first is—they rarely ever receive fair compensation for their services. And the second is—that injured to continual suffering, privation and toil, their purse strings are ever untied at the bidding of charity, and the hard earned "dimes" are freely distributed for the relief of their fellow men. Thus it is that they live poor, and if a suitable reward does not await them after death, sad indeed must be the beginning, the existence, and the end of poor "typos."—Printers' News Letter.

RASCALLY TRICK.—One of the most successful efforts at rascality ever heard of, was brought to light yesterday, in this city. It appears that a sharper in Philadelphia advertised for a number of young ladies to go South, to fill situations as Teachers of Music. Fifteen young women were accepted by the advertiser, who were to have remunerative employment in the families of wealthy Southern planters, and in every respect their future prospects were of the most flattering description.

It was simply stipulated by the advertiser that the ladies should defray in part, their expenses to their respective destination. On arriving in this city en route for the South, the sharper took charge of the baggage of the ladies, collected from them about $150 for their fares in the steamship, and while they were waiting patiently at the hotel for him to conduct them on board, he decamped with his plunder.—N. Y. Sept. 1st.

THE Buffalo Courier avers that there has been organized in Lockport a base ball club, composed wholly of fat men—none weighing less than three hundred being admitted. The name of the association is the "Paunches Pilate B. B. Club."

DOG FENNEL.—We see it stated that a German colony in Iowa county, extensively engaged in tanning, are buying up "dog fennel" at $15 per ton. Such a price, for a hitherto useless weed sets the people to work to gather it up. It is used for tanning.

WEIGHT OF THE EARTH.—Copernicus first distinctly demonstrated that the apparent terrestrial plain was really a free and independent material mass moving in a definable path through space. Then Newton explained that this independent mass moved through space because it was substantial and heavy, and because it was unsupported by props and chains; that, in fact, as a massive body, it is falling forever through the void; but that, as it falls, it sweeps round the sun in a never ending circuit, attracted towards it by magnet-like energy, but kept off from it by the force of its centrifugal movement. Next, Snell and Picard measured the dimensions of the heavy and falling mass, and found that it is a spherical body, with a girth 25,000 miles. Subsequently to this, Baily contrived a pair of scales that enabled him approximately to weigh the vast sphere; and he ascertained that it had within itself somewhere about 1,566,195,670,000,000,000,000,000 tons of matter. To these discoveries Foucault has recently added demonstration to the actual senses of the fact, that the massive sphere is whirling on itself as it falls through space and round the sun, so that point after point of its vast surface is brought in succession into the genial influence of its sunshine; an inverting atmosphere of commingled vapor and air is made to present clouds, winds, and rain, and the inverted surface to bear vegetable forms and animated creatures in great diversity. The world is then a large, solid sphere, invested with a loosened shell of transparent, elastic, easily moving vapor, and whirling through space within the domains of sunshine; so that by the combined action of the transparent mobile vapor and the stimulant sunshine, organized creatures may grow and live on its surface, and those vital changes may be diffused, amongst which conscious and mental life stand as the highest results.

WHY DO THE STARS TWINKLE?—We have received the following communication, propounding an interrogatory, which we confess we are not sufficiently versed in astronomy to answer. Will someone answer the question for us?—Richmond (Va.) Morning News
Mr. Editor: While laying upon my bed a few nights ago, vainly endeavoring to woo coy dame sleep to my couch, I endeavored to soothe my mind and thus give relief to a tired body, by contemplating, from an open window near my bedside, the wondrous beauty and awful grandeur of the heavens. The night, though excessively warm, was entirely unclouded, and the glittering hosts beaded the sky in countless numbers, looking serenely down upon our sin-stricken earth, all wrapped in repose, like watchers peering out from the celestial battlements. I had not long been thus engaged before the oblivion of sleep, which I had for hours sought in vain, began to steal over me, and, as I slowly sunk to rest, the last effort of my reasoning faculties was to ask myself, "Why do the stars twinkle?" The same interrogatory I now propound to you—"What causes the twinkling of the stars?" So familiar has this phenomenon become, (for it is a phenomenon,) that the question may seem a silly one; but be it silly or grave, I should be pleased to have information on the subject. Yours, truly, SUBSCRIBER.

ATTEMPTING TO FLY.—The Madison Journal relates the following incident:

Two or three weeks since a man named Whiting, living near Sun Prairie, in this county, got religion so bad that he was too pure for the prairie, and accordingly attempted to come to Madison or some other religious place. He was too pure to travel like a mortal, and having faith that he could fly to his destination, he attempted the experiment. He procured an umbrella, and climbed to the topmost branches of a tree in the skirts of a timber. After hoisting his umbrella, he jumped from the tree, and began to kick and squabble; thereby thinking to propel himself through the air. La Mountain or Wise did not work harder than our hero; but alas for human calculations, instead of going ahead, he quickly descended to the ground, holding on to the handle of the umbrella for dear life. He at last reached terra firma in a sound state, and has now made up his mind that faith is a good thing, but should not be taken in too large doses.

A most extraordinary affair occurred in Jasper county, Indiana last week. An old man named William Haskins, aged seventy, married an old lady of almost the same age, named Anna Mead. Twenty-seven years ago they were man and wife, with five children. Becoming dissatisfied at the time, they separated, and hearing nothing of each other for years, both married again; but both being left alone, after the deaths of their partners, and coming together thus late in life, they concluded to travel the little journey that was left together. So extraordinary a case we do not remember ever to have heard of before.

It is said that a small quantity of sassafras bark mixed with dried fruit will keep it free from worms for years. The remedy is easily obtained in many localities, and is well worthy an experiment, as it will not injure the fruit in any manner, if it does not prevent the nuisance.

We go to the grave of a friend, saying "A man is dead, Angels throng about him, saying—"a man is born."

ABOUT EYES.—A noted writer says that a woman with a hazel eye never elopes from her husband, never chats scandal, never sacrifices her husband's comfort to her own, never finds fault, never talks too much or too little, always is an interesting, intelligent, agreeable and lovely creature. "We never knew," says a brother editor, "but one uninteresting and unamiable woman with a hazel eye, and she had a nose which looked as the Yankee says, like the little end of nothing whittled down to a point." The gray is a sign of shrewdness and talent. Great thinkers and captains have it. In women, it indicates a better head than bear. The dark hazel is noble in significance as in its beauty. The blue eye is admirable, but may be feeble. The black eye, take care! Look out for the wife with a black eye! Such can be seen daily in the police office, generally with a complaint against her husband for assault and battery.

A negro girl only twelve years old, had murdered three children belonging to her master—Mr. B. C. Herring of Goldsborough, N. C., within as many weeks. She strangled all in a nook of the wood where each of the little innocents was found dead, and without any clue being had to the murderer. She was detected in the act of strangling the last child.

The New Orleans Delta thinks the speakership in the next House of Representatives, lies between Hon. Em. Etheridge, of Tennessee, and Hon. Tom Corwin, of Ohio.

Chief Justice TANEY of the United States Supreme Court, is in the 83d year of his age.—His eight associates in the court, with one single exception, are all three score years and ten, some of them considerably exceed that number.

FOR CONGRESS IN NEBRASKA.—The Democratic Territorial Convention of Nebraska, which assembled at Plattsmouth on Friday last, nominated Gen. Estabrook, of Omaha, for delegate to Congress. This is the first time the contest for that office in Nebraska has assumed distinctive party features. Gen. Estabrook was Attorney General of the Territory under President Pierce.

VALUABLE DOCUMENTS IN QUEER PLACE.—The Gazette notices the recovery of four checks for $1,000 each, drawn on a bank in San Francisco, which were lost by an unlucky miner while on a visit to some female Indian fellow-citizens. The checks were found in a hut occupied by Mrs. Kapsallow. The owner of the checks had left San Francisco to stop payment.

A TELLING PUN.—"Do you know who built this bridge?" said a person to Hook. "No," replied the wit, "but if you go over you'll be tolled."

If you do when you are alone what you are unwilling to do in the presence of your acquaintances, you respect them more than you do yourself.

FROM OREGON.

Reported Massacre of U. S. Troops.

We learn from the Portland News of the 21st, that a rumor prevailed at the Dalles that Capt. Wallen's command, 140 well armed and equipped men, had been massacred by Indians at Warm Springs.

A private letter to Portland, says the Advertiser, reports this disaster as coming from the Indians; and says that the Indian Agent at the Dalles puts faith in it. This correspondent adds:

Capt. Wallen's command consists of Company E, 1st Dragoons, commanded by Lieut. Sweitzer, about 60 strong—some 30 sabres of Company H of the same regiment, about 40 privates, etc.; of Company H, 4th Infantry, and a detachment of 10 sappers and miners armed as riflemen—an aggregate of about 140 rank and file, well armed and equipped—a force which, if not attacked at great disadvantage of situation, must have been able to make head against any body of Snake Indians.

A letter in the Fort Smith Times states that in the midst of the Mountain Meadow massacre, a girl thirteen or fourteen years old threw herself upon John D. Lee (the captain of the band of murderers and a Danite Saint), and plead for her life after seeing her father, mother and brothers murdered; Lee took her into the bushes, robbed her of that jewel which to a virtuous girl is dearer than life, and after satisfying his beastly desires, deliberately cut her throat, and left her weltering in her life's blood.

THE VALLEY TAN.

Wednesday, Oct. 12, 1859.

Why we Accepted our Position.

To edit a Republican journal, a free paper, in the midst of a secret and concealed despotism, but still to all intents and purposes a despotism, is anything but an agreeable task. To hold such a position is to be in daily, hourly, communication with those who are congenial and forbidding, cold and repulsive; men who look upon such an editor as their bitter enemy, as their most implacable foe. Here the flowers of peace and friendship cannot disclose their petals to the full extent of natural vigor, but are chilled by the incompatibility and uncongeniality surrounding them; malice, calumny and unsubduable hatred combine their despicable powers in injuring the character, wounding the feelings, and despising him who dares, in the heart of slavery, to advocate the rights of man. This is our position exactly; and in consideration of these facts, it was with the greatest reluctance that we consented to take editorial charge of the "Valley Tan," and had it not been that we felt that stern duty called us to the post, we never would have accepted the vocation.

Free from the remotest charge of egotism or self-regard, we can assert that we have lived where we received the esteem and kind regards of all, regardless of political differences, and expect to again form just such associations when we depart from Utah; but while we remain here, deport ourselves as best we know how, we are fully convinced that we must submit to the sneers and omity of "God's people." So be it. When duty calls 'tis ours to obey; and fearlessly, set as courteously as we can, we will perform the functions of our unenviable position. A clear conscience is as bright a reward as we covet; but we have further consolation than this: we know that a free and intramelled journal will always stand a sentinel on the watch-tower of liberty in Utah—that the dark and bloody influences which have sent many of our countrymen beyond the vale can never crush it out; that whether our present labors be suspended by the hand of violence or by volition, an abler expositor of the insiduous and disguised heresies of Mormonism will take the place vacated, and send the ball rolling with accelerated power.

The premonitory mutterings of the political sky indicate the proximity of another of those quadrennial revolutions in American Republicanism which is directed by the constitution and has been ratified by the sanction of the masses since the formation of our government. The opposing factions are exerting all their skill and strength in marshaling their respective forces for the coming conflict.

From all the information which has come under our observation, we believe Hon. S. A. Douglas stands in the van of all competitors. Many who were his most zealous friends it is true, have turned against him in the very hour of need, but the circumstances which brought this treachery about have been the cause of strengthening him from other quarters, from whence he never looked for aid, and from whence he courts none. His unwavering attachment to those principles which six years ago arrayed against him the combined opposition of large numbers of dissenters from that party which he had, and now has, a right to call his own, the wreck of whiggery, and all the isms then existing, is now about to have its reward. From all the malicious charges of demagoguism, motives of self-interest, and unscrupulous ambitious incentives, which have been bitterly pronounced upon his head in every nook and corner of the American Union, he comes out not only unscathed, but with increased power—the "Little Giant" will soon become the "Great Giant"—the Chief Magistrate of the American people. Standing in the Senate Chamber last winter a year ago, surrounded by the most able and influential men of both the North and South, who menacingly told him that to stand by the immortal principles of the Kansas-Nebraska bill as he, the father of those principles, believed patriotism and consistency dictated to be right, would be to throw himself out of the Democratic organization he dared to tell his countrymen, through that hall, that he was ready to abide the consequences—that his views of the pending questions were just and legitimate views of genuine Democracy, and that if the party wished to leave him, he would stand alone, and be content in the reflection that he had performed his duty to his country; and by this course, who will presume to say that he has not effectually and satisfactorily cleared his skirts from every imputation of dishonesty made against him? Now he stands before the American Union respected by all for his honesty, and revered by the majority for the principles which he advocates—he has a stronger hold upon the minds of the voters of the Union than among other statesmen. And the position that Stephen A. Douglas now holds, is the secret of the success of the Democratic party. That party has ever, as all parties in a Republic should, appealed to the good sense of the masses—the fountain-head of all authority in a Republican government,—from which all power is derived. Why has Douglas got the confidence of his countrymen to such a degree as to defy the influence of party leaders, the wire-pullers everywhere? Because he is emphatically a consistent national man; and, notwithstanding that fanaticism may, at times, carry the popular mind into errors, in their cool, deliberate sense, the people of the United States are far from being suicidal to their country, and when questions are fairly presented to them, it is impossible for prominent politicians to pull them this way or that way, according to their respective whims. Thousands in the North who gave John C. Fremont their votes, are ready at the incoming race to give the same to Stephen A. Douglas, for the reason that they have become acquainted with their past unintentional follies, and are now willing to repudiate them; while in the South, all conservative men who stood by the "Little Giant" in days gone by, are stronger friends to him now than ever.

But "Utah cannot, of course, go to the polls," and if she could she could not speak her mind—exercise that noble, God-given right of suffrage which the people of each of the States exercise,—for an Apostle of God has told the Mormon inhabitants of this much abused, shamefully tyrannized Territory, that "there is no true path except to do as you are told by those whom the Lord has called and chosen and placed to direct you!" The Mormons constitute nine-tenths of the inhabitants here, and dare not speak their minds, and vote as they please, so long as they are Mormons. If Brigham Young should tell them to vote for the devil, or any of his sulphuric imps—one of which would suit his preference better than any existing American Statesmen,—they are bound to obey the despotic order, or deny their religion. For a Mormon to declare his individual preference for any man for the Presidential chair, before the "holy prophet, seer and revelator," Brigham Young, says who that man shall be, is to trample under foot the laws of his God as he is taught them from the pulpit. What though Sam Houston, of Texas, N. P. Banks, of Mass., Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois, or any other man, suits the individual views of a Latter Day Saint, such Saint dare not open his mouth in favor of such a preference without virtually saying, Brigham Young is a liar and a false prophet.

Were Utah a strong State, of the calibre of New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia or Ohio, we would tremble for the fate of our favorite, the "Little Giant," as Joseph Smith, the founder of despotic Mormonism, prophesied that Stephen A. Douglas never could be President, and Joseph Smith and Brigham Young, in the latter's words, have that influence over "this people" that "no other man on earth has in the midst his community, with the exception, perhaps, of some whom we call heathen and the members of the church of Rome."

AN INDIAN FIGHT.—Our attention was arrested the other day by the collection of a crowd of white men, black men, and red men, in a certain locality of the city, who appeared intensely interested in some sort of a performance, which at first was hidden from our view by the surrounding multitude. At length a vista was opened through the crowd for our vision, and we beheld two "bright Alfaratas," of the "Lamaita," blood, engaged in a hand to hand conflict. Hair flew like snow flakes in January, and faces which often before had been beautified by artifice were now crimsoned with the paint of nature. Fierce and fiercer grew the combat, and serious consequences appeared inevitable, when a stoical warrior, who was probably the lord of both the antagonists, as Indians are all polygamists,—a vestige of their ancient enlightenment and civilization which has been retained through the devastations of dark tradition—interfered to prevent further loss of lariat timber and Indian claret. The consequence was that the chivalrous squaws both "pitched into" him, and gave him a sound drubbing; and the result of this demonstration of "women's rights" will most likely terminate in two squaws having their heads split open by the cruel tomahawk.

The mail, from the States, arrived yesterday morning, with St. Joseph dates as late as the 20th ult., and New York dates up to the 17th. There is not much news of interest.

Some Mormon has written in the Mountaineer over the non de plume of "Observer," in a strain in perfect keeping with the sentiment inculcated by his religion, in anathematizing our little journal and the editor thereof. We remember an anecdote, the origin of which we are not able to give, which runs as follows:

(Husband nursing a cross babe; wife engaged in her household duties.)—Wife.—Husband, spank that young one, and make it stop crying.

(Husband does some fumbling with the baby's unmentionables, but the child cries louder and louder.) Wife.—Husband, why don't you spank that child, as I told you, and make it stop crying, or shall I stop my work, and do it myself?

Husband.—Well, I would, wife, but the facts of the case are, I can't find a spot big enough to spank on.

That is the very reason why we will not give "Observer" further attention. There are no principles set forth in his strictures—they are a mere tirade of low-bred slang—and we cannot find a spot big enough to spank on. We do not wish to be understood as endeavoring to discourage "Observer" from future efforts; he may do better next time, and we like to encourage literary aspirations.

One day last week, we enjoyed the greater part of a day on the margin of that belle wonder of nature, Salt Lake. So striking was the picture, that ourselves and party remained, wrapped in agreeable amazement and pleasant repletion, until Luna, almost in the zenith of her glory, loomed over the distant mountain-tops, and threw a silvery sheen of heavenly beauty over the miniature ocean. To attempt further description would be to lay ourselves liable to a charge of superfluity, and we forbear. But

If you would view fair Salt Lake aright,
View her by the pale moonlight.

We are now enjoying weather the most delightful. The days are not disagreeably warm, nor yet objectionably cold, while the nights are gauged to precisely the right temperature for sound and pleasant sleep.

Alabama has again elected an entire Democratic delegation to Congress, as follows: Stallworth in the 1st District; Pugh in the 2d; CLOPTON in the 3d; Moore in the 4th; Cobb in the 5th, and Curry in the 6th. Moore, Democrat, re-elected Governor.

Mr. Toombs of Ga., has taken the stump for Douglas.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR. EDITOR:—I have read an article in the Mountaineer, reflecting upon the virtue of the ladies and the integrity of the gentlemen connected with the ball lately given at "Ballo's Hall," which I think deserves the censure and just condemnation of every honest man.

The article alluded to is as bad as the slang of Billingsgate can make it, and proves the author to have lived in such a place, or worse, if such exists. If the ladies who attended that ball were harlots, so are "Veto's" sisters, and nearly all the ladies in this city, for those who were there belong to the best families in this place, and they were well behaved, as modest and as chaste in action and conversation as any ladies that I have ever seen; the gentlemen, also, without exception, conducted themselves with the utmost decorum, and but for a pistol shot thro' the window, by some cowardly fool, everything was pleasant and agreeable.

It is no trouble for a discerning man to see the object of such communications. They are afraid of the good example and conduct of these gentlemen, and dare not trust their women where they will learn the truth.

Every Mormon knows that the influence exerted in society by these gentlemen is a dead shot at Polygamy; that girls, if permitted to go to their balls and parties, will learn sooner or later, that in America, woman is reserved for a higher and nobler aim than the harem and the corn field; they learn that the first duty of a gentleman is to respect virtue and defend it with his life; they learn that in other countries women are permitted to exercise their own judgment in the selection of a husband, which makes the marriage bed a couch of roses, instead of a kennel to litter in; this is the cause of all this trouble, nor can we blame these miserable creatures for guarding this pass most vigilantly.

Out of the forty or fifty gentlemen for whose benefit this dirty and scurrilous article was written, half of them are married men, and have left wives and children in the States and come out here at a risk of life and property for the very purpose of building up the very institutions that the Mormons hate; these are the men they call "basilisks;" no wonder they wish to keep them at a distance, for if they do not, there are thousands of girls in this Territory, who before the autumn winds of the year 1860 shall waft through this valley, will be offering up prayers for these very "basilisks," who have saved them from their horrible fate.

There are thousands of women in this Territory between the ages of fourteen and twenty who would gladly walk bare-footed all around the world, to find some place to hide from these hoary headed, ravishing bishops, elders and priests, and the time is close at hand when all who wish to escape from these lustful turks can, have the opportunity, for it is generally understood that a very gallant old gentleman, known all over the world as "Uncle Sam" has the means and the ability to furnish transportation and rations to every woman that wishes to escape from this Territory; and we assure them, they can trust their gentle bodies with this good old man, without the precaution of sealing or endowments.

"GENTILE."

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Oct. 5th, 1859.

Our camp and vicinity are equally as tragic in every particular as your own city—or even California in its earlier history. On Sunday the 2nd inst., about 4 o'clock p. m., another race came off at the course, a short distance north of Fairfield, between horses owned by gamblers, named Madison and Johnson; the result was that Madison's horse won the race. A young man residing in Fairfield named Faust, alleged unfairness in the manner in which Johnson's horse was put upon the track; an altercation ensued, of which the result was the death of Faust, by a knife in the hands of a boy whose common name was "Jack," who acted as champion for Johnson. The murder was taken into custody, and is now awaiting the preliminary investigation before a magistrate. We require a few strong examples in this Territory, to deter the inclination invariably manifested on the part of the gambling and sporting fraternity, to use knives and pistols for slight offences.

We received a slight addition to the numerical strength of this command, by the arrival of two companies of the 4th artillery from Fort Laramie. They are armed and equipped as Infantry, and are acting as such at the present.

The late mail brought little or no army intelligence—indeed the general intelligence derived from newspapers (except local ones) is of a political nature at the present; and this does not interest the soldier much. Should any difficulty ensue from the state of affairs on the Oregon boundary, then may we look for something to do—something to dispel the monotony of camp life.

The different places of amusement are not doing a very heavy business at present; notwithstanding they are each doing all they can to present attractive features in their exhibitions. I see the M. D. Company are a going to present to the public another tragedy this evening. As it is the benefit of Mr. Warren of the 5th Infantry, I trust the company will do their utmost to make it interesting. Of its success I will speak again next week.

ONSEVER.

[Written for the Valley Tan.]

"MY HEART IS MY WORLD."

I love to gaze on yonder sky
And watch the clouds go floating by,
But when those clouds grow dark and drear,
I turn from them to thoughts more near.

I look again, into my heart
A world, from all the world apart;
And hidden dreams once more appear
To light the present, dark and drear—
"While older forms go trooping past,"
With smiles, by far, too bright to last,
And once again I dream of love!

O love! The theme of God's above:
And now, a fair and lovely girl,
With laughing eyes, and golden curls,
(Whose image long has been impressed Upon a heart that knows no rest.)
Appears before my anxious view,
With voice as sweet, and heart as true
As in the happy days of yore,
When LOVE and TRUTH were all my store.

The scene has changed, and now I roam
A stranger, from my native home,
With none to love, and none to think
How bitter is the cup I drink!

Alone I stray, from place to place
Without a hope my mind can trace—
Without an aim, without an end
With no one near to call my friend:
My friend!—I fear 'tis but a name,
For who would be my friend in shame?
But oh! if such a man be found
Let his brow with wreaths be bound!

Let all the world proclaim him great
Whose friendship changes not with fate,
And still I say, that every heart's
A world, from all the world apart:
A world of joys, of hopes, and fears,
A world of bliss, of smiles, and tears,
A world of sorrow, and of crime,
A world of poetry sublime,
A world of woe, a world of fire,
A world of thought which never expires,
Oh, yes! the heart's a living world,
Where brightest banners are unfurled,
Where all can see, and all can read,
That each man's heart's his world indeed.

Q. L. B.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T. Oct. 4th, 1859.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE ANGLO SAXON.

FATHER POINT, Sept. 13, 1859.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool 31st ult., passed this Point at one o'clock yesterday afternoon, en her way to Quebec, where she will be due to-morrow.

THE ZURICH CONFERENCE.

A despatch dated Zurich, August 27, says:—For the last few days there has been no conference of the Plenipotentiaries. It is believed they will be enabled, to quit Zurich at the latest in a fortnight.

On Sunday, the 28th, the Austrian and French Plenipotentiaries held a private conference.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, in a letter dated evening of the 28th, says:—

A private letter from Zurich of the 28th states that the labors of the Plenipotentiaries were going on slowly enough, notwithstanding the announcement made a few days ago, that it was doubtful if any more important point had been settled. Whether the fault is attributable to the Plenipotentiaries themselves, to preliminaries of the treaty of Villafranca, or to the Emperor not having taken into calculation in their eager anxiety to make peace all the difficulties of the negotiations no one knows. Some people incline to the opinion that this delay is intentional, and the manner in which Madame Bourgeois is acting lends some color to the suspicion. What the French government will last have to do is simply to declare to Austria that it has done all that was morally in its power in favor of her protege, or else it must dispose itself to impose them on the Duchies by intrigue, if not by force.

A late Berne despatch says that the reports current as to the proceeding of the conference were quite contradictory, and that there was every reason to believe that the Sardinian Plenipotentiaries would not affix their signatures to any protocol in favor of the return of the deposed rulers of the Italian Duchies.

The Paris correspondent of the Times, writing on the 30th says:—"Things are going on so badly at Zurich as to render the dissolution of the conference in a very few days probable. A Congress of war seems to be the only alternative, a Congress which will have as little success as this conference."

The designation to be given to the new kingdom has been discussed at Zurich. Austria is willing that Victor Emanuel should be known as King of Sardinia and Lombardy, but will not consent that he should describe himself as King of Upper Italy.

A despatch from Zurich, dated August 31, says:—

"Private conferences have continued to take place between the Plenipotentiaries for the last three days. The representatives of France and Austria have daily conferred together. Yesterday there was a meeting of the French and Sardinian Plenipotentiaries."

GREAT BRITAIN.

The directors of the company owning the Great Eastern had declined Mr. Lever's amended offer to charter her, and their original programme is to be carried out. The ship had been closed to the public, and was to leave the Thames in a day or two. The receipts from visitors during the few days she was open to the public exceeded £4,000. Few or no policies of insurance had been taken out on the ship at Lloyd's, the underwriters being generally unwilling to transact business until the completion of the trial trip. There were some anxious to see the ship safe out of the Thames, but those in charge of her entertained no fears on the subject.

Leigh Hunt, the popular author, died in London on the 28th of August, in the 75th year of his age. He had been in a declining state of health for a considerable time.

The Queen and Royal Family had gone to Scotland for their usual autumnal visit, as was arranged; they made the journey from London to Edinburgh during the night.

The Isle of Man had been successfully connected by a submarine telegraph cable with England.

The telegraph communication between England and Malta had been re-established; this would expedite the reception of news from India by about three days.

Lord Rialstone publishes in the London Times a letter received by him from Richard H. Dana of Boston, on the subject of ballot in the United States. Mr. Dana shows the benefit of the ballot system, and explains that in America it has been found necessary for security against fraud, to deprive it of the element of secrecy.

An investigation at Liverpool into the charge against Bontelle, mate of the ship Conqueror, of having caused the death of a seaman on board that vessel, resulted in his liberation, the evidence showing that the deceased died from natural causes.

A cabinet council was unexpectedly summoned in London on the 29th. Various speculations were afloat as to the cause of it, but it was generally supposed to have reference to some new phase in the Italian question.

The strike of the London builders continued. The London Times, in a leading article on England's defensive preparations, says that she is now rapidly approaching, if indeed she has not actually attained it, a state in which no assailant can hope to attack her with impunity.

ITALY.

The situation of affairs of Italy has undergone no change.

A deputation of the National Assembly had gone to Paris on a special mission to Napoleon.

The elections throughout Romagna had taken place with the greatest tranquility and order.

The official Piedmontese Gazette gives a dental to the reports of political dissension among the members of the Sardinian cabinet.

Count Lymnty, Mayor of Parma, issued a proclamation on his return from Paris. (Napoleon, in addressing him, used the following words:—"Tell the populations that have sent you to me that my army shall never do violence to their wishes, and that I will not permit any other foreign force to commit violence against you.") The Count adds:—"These words make you the arbiters of your destinies."

Garibaldi has resolved to maintain in the army of Central Italy the same spirit of order and discipline that distinguished the Chasseurs of the Alps. In an order of the day he says:—"I will cause to be shot any one who calls himself a Mazzinian, a republican, a socialist or even a Garibaldian! I will have none with me but soldiers and Italians."

The Tuscan Minister publishes a decree abolishing the Tuscan army regulations and adopting those of the Sardinian.

A letter from Naples says that the people were much excited in regard to the high price of corn, and that the government in consequence had ordered the purchase abroad of a large quantity.

General Fanti had accepted the command in chief of the army of Central Italy.

Garibaldi's command comprises the troops of Tuscany and Modena.

An earth quake had taken place at Sorcia. Two hundred persons were killed, and a large number wounded. Nine thousand of the population had been encamped in the neighborhood of the town. The Pope had dispatched assistance to them.

Late advices from Rome say that the French Minister had held a conference with Cardinal Antonelli on the re-organization of the legations. One French division only was to remain at Rome.

The government of Bologna is said to have dissolved the regiment in which some of Mazzini's volunteers had a tendency to cause an excitement.

The garrison of the Pope was on the march to Posero, where troops were being concentrated.

GERMANY.

The cholera was spreading all along the shores of the Baltic.

A combination of bankers and financiers had been formed at Frankfurt-on-the-Main for contracting the Bavarian loan and half per cent. loan to defray military expenses. The loan is issued at 98 per cent., and is for about a million sterling.

By the last Eastern mail we received files of the Leavenworth Daily Herald up to Sept. 20, from which we clip the following telegraphic dispatches:—

From Washington.

Washington, Sept. 14.

Col. Hawkins of the British army, yesterday brought dispatches concerning the San Juan disturbances, to the British Legation, and then left for New York to take passage for England with dispatches from Gov. Douglas to her Majesty's Government, on the same subject.

The news of a social revolution in Costa Rica, being unexpected, has caused much interest and surprise in official quarters.

Senor Morino, Minister from that Republic, left today for New York to meet the expected steamer.

Col. Fountleroy left Washington today to take command of the military department of New Mexico.

Mr. Hendrick's resignation as Commissioner of the Land Office, takes place tomorrow.

Nothing has been heard from Judge Hughes as to his acceptance of the office.

The President has appointed Wm. J. Moore of Nebraska, agent for the Indians in the Omaha agency, vice Wilson, resigned.

Commander McBear has been ordered to the Washington Navy Yard, and Commander Thatcher to the Boston Navy Yard.

Lieut. Watson has been ordered to relieve Lieut. Bull, in command of the store ship Fredonia, at Valparaiso.

Lieut. Murphy has been ordered to the naval rendezvous at Norfolk, and Lieut. Walker and Davidson to the naval academy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.

The late convention between Great Britain and the Republic of Guatemala, has not excited a renewal of angry controversy between this country and Great Britain, as was recently published by the English press. On the contrary both governments are still animated by the hope that their Central American difficulties will be happily adjusted.

The larger part of the Balise had never been the subject of actual survey, as was officially declared by Lord Grey in 1836, and the above mentioned convention, it is said, merely definitely fixed its territorial limits, which act was intended by Guatemala as a barrier to British encroachments on its soil.

The following officers have been ordered to the steamship of war Narragansett: Commander Hunt, Lieutenants Prebell, Ransom and Blake, Purser Emery, Passed Assistant Surgeon Lowbert, Master Enos Armstrong, Assistant Surgeon Davis has been ordered to duty at the Philadelphia Navy yard. John Redden has been commissioned as Surgeon, and Bennett W. Green, of Virgilia, as Assistant Surgeon in the Navy.

From Pike's Peak.

St. Louis, Thursday, Sept. 8, 1859.

A special dispatch to the Bulletin says that the Denver City express of the 2d had reached Leavenworth.

At a large meeting at the former city, a committee was appointed to prepare a memorial to Congress, embracing a detailed description of the gold regions and wants of the inhabitants, and praying for an Indian agency, a military post, and a wagon-road from Denver City to Salt Lake City.

New York, Sept. 15.

The Herald's Washington correspondent says that Gen. Scott's advice is required relative to the San Juan difficulty, and will be asked for at a meeting of the Cabinet, which will be held on Thursday, for the purpose of reading over the late dispatches from Gen. Harney and debating on the general bearing of the affair.

The administration is a good deal exercised in regard to the present aspect of affairs growing out of the siege of the Island of San Juan. They are fearful that a collision will take place before dispatches, which were recently transmitted, can reach Gen. Harney.

The Bavarian minister had a long interview with the Secretary of State today in reference to affairs transpiring between the two governments.

Peru has recently manifested a disposition to settle a number of long standing accounts held by our citizens.

The N. Y. Times Washington correspondent sends to-day some very interesting as well as new and authentic figures on the current and prospective finances of the Federal Government.

It appears that the Secretary of the Treasury in a version of his estimates of revenue for the fiscal year of 1860, ending June 30th, claims that the customs will yield at least $62,400,000 instead of $68,000,000, as he before estimated, and that with other resources, he will be able to reimburse or purchase the public debt to the amount of $7,650,000 without reducing his working below six millions at the end of the year. He has already determined that no treasury bills falling due after June 30th, will be received or in any way renewed.

Lieut. General Scott arrived here this morning, and in the course of the day called on the President and other officers of the government. He came on business relative to the San Juan Island dispute.

New York, Sept. 18.

The steamship Borussia, from Hamburg and Southampton, has arrived with dates to Sunday, the 4th inst.

The steamship Fulton had arrived at Southampton from New York.

The advices from the Zurich Convention, are to the 1st instant, when, at a meeting of the Plenipotentiaries, the limits of the Lombardian frontiers, and the civil and ecclesiastical jurisdiction were under consideration.

A meeting of deputy plenipotentiaries of the three powers, was also held on the 1st inst.

It is reported that Austria intends to discount the portion of the Austrian debt which will be transferred to Lombardy, to sell the public domains.

A tax had been levied on foreigners doing business at Smyrna.

The Borussia brings only London papers of Saturday, the 3d inst., and these contain nothing with regard to the sailing of the steamship Persia or of the Arabia taking her place.

Advices from Gibraltar state that the Emperor of Morocco is dead; also that a serious conflict had occurred on the Island of Centa, between the Spaniards and Moors. The troops had been called out. Several thousand Moors had collected, and, at the last accounts, the sorties were in conflict all night on the 26th ult., and several were killed on both sides.

The English mail steamer Indus was fired on twice from the Spanish fort of Tonfa, on the morning of the 27th of August, while her ensign was flying.—At the second fire, a large round shell fell about fifty yards from the steamer.

A terrible cyclone passed over Calcutta on the 26th of July, and forty-six vessels, including two steamers, were lost in the river Woogly, and immense damage was occasioned on shore. Many lives are reported lost, but no further particulars have been received.

It was reported at Paris, on Thursday, that Meternich, the Austrian Ambassador, was about to leave on a visit to Vienna.

Accounts from Madrid state that Spain had withdrawn her Consul from Tangiers and decided to demand satisfaction of Morocco for the outrages at Centa.

Orders had been given for the formation of an expeditionary corps of 10,000 men, and it is suggested in the London papers that the firing in the steamer Indus was for the purpose of bringing her to, in order to learn the state of affairs at Centa.

The steamer De Soto arrived from Honduras with dates to the 13th inst.—

A royal decree had been promulgated giving the Cubans a nearer approach to popular representation. The weather was cool and the health of the city much improved. There was scarcely any sickness in Port.

Blondin a Myth.

A Niagara correspondent of a New York paper says that Blondin, who is reported to have crossed Niagara Falls many times this summer on a tight rope, performing various gymnastic marvels on the slender thread above the roaring waters, is a purely imaginative being, brought into existence by a bright Niagara bar-keeper. This correspondent says:

As I have not been away from home during the whole summer, I think I am a tolerably credible witness; and I must, therefore, assure you that the whole of this wonderful series of stories has grown out of a bet made by a person well known in this town, that he could bring more people to Niagara in two weeks than the Falls had ever brought here in as many months. How the rope-dancing dodge occurred to him I don't profess to know, but he selected Blondin as the name of his hero, because there was a Blondin once in this country with the Raveles, a very good rope-dancer, now retired and living somewhere in the country of Savoy, who could, of course, hear of the story in time to contradict it. Anything funnier or more foolish than the faces of the crowds which have succeeded each other down about the Falls on each successive day announced for the "feats" you never saw, and the hotel have reaped a golden harvest.—But you will observe that not a single individual has ventured in any of the letters from Niagara, to say that he saw Blondin do any of these things. Our local editors, and others, of course, enjoying the joke, have joined in it, and a very good joke it has been, certainly; but it seems to me it ought to be regarded now as played out.

Whether any Mr. De Lave exists, or has crossed the Genesee Falls at Rochester, I don't profess to know. It is very possible that such a thing may have been done, however, for there is no sailor, in the whole of our merchant navy who does not do as much and as dangerous "slack-rope walking," in mid-air, whenever he is sent aloft in a gale. And this is not the least amusing part of the whole hoax, that everybody (I can't even except yourself of the times) has accepted the difficulty of the feat on the mere faith that it was asserted to be difficult. A moment's reflection will convince any one that a man who can keep his head clear and cool at the height of a clipper's mainmast, could do the same thing at the inferior height of the mid-space of Blondin's acrobatic feat. The good people of our town have had their fun out of you, you must admit, and have made a snug thing out of it, too, in a pecuniary way. But a joke, as I said before, is a joke, and has its bounds.

R. E. P.

[From the New Orleans Picayune.]
The Isthmus Gold Discoveries—
Off to the Biggings.

PANAMA, Aug. 18, 1859.

Our gold excitement still continues. Since my last, Messrs. Hawes and Merritt, two gentlemen who went down to Chiriqui, have returned, and confirm the previous accounts that large amounts of gold have been taken out of "las huacales." Mr. Hawes takes out not less than $200,000. One cemetery, of forty acres in extent has been completely dug out, and the few people who are able to stand the continual rains of this season, are opening new graves in other localities, where they find gold, but how rich these other places may be, is yet unknown, and will be until December. Evidences are plentiful that huacales exist in all the district of Chiriqui, and even northwardly from it towards Costa Rica and southwardly to Veraguas. There are not more than 150 persons who reside out of the district at present in the gold region, and Mr. Hawes echoes his advice for none to come into it until the rainy season is over. Mr. H. brings several pounds of beautiful gold images and a plentiful amount of pottery, vases, &c, in which it appears the aborigines placed chicha and other fluids, as well as estates for the dead on their journey to the new hunting fields in the other world.

There is no evidence in the appearance of the cemetery that has been exhausted, that it contained the bodies of the kings or chiefs, but it is generally believed, by the best informed who have examined it, that it was simply a common burial ground of an aboriginal village. Nearer the mountains some larger vaults have been opened, but no gold has yet been taken from them, as the diggers are believed not to have gone deep enough as yet. Many are sanguine that they will find the cemetery of the kings, when they expect rich times.

The graves are all running from north to south, sometimes a single one and sometimes four or five together, as in our cemeteries. In the little graves, little images for children are found, and the large ones only in full length graves, and generally in those which are made into a sort of vault, by flat stones set on the edges, and round stones piled against them. The vases are of earth baked in the sun, or by fire, some of them handsomely painted, and some with legs split open, as it were, into which earthen balls have been ingeniously placed, and then partly closed, so that the balls can be seen and rattled. The gold images have also, many of them, bells in the eyes, ears and legs, &c. Mr. Hawes saw one human figure of fine gold weighing three pounds.

Wm. Orney, of Southampton county, Va., died a few days since, aged 100 years and 5 months. He was engaged at the battle of Brandywine, and also at Petersburg, Va., when Arnold paid that town a visit. The old soldier had never taken medicine in his life.

TEXAS FEVER.—HORSE THIEVES ARRESTED.—EARS CUT OFF, &c.—Mr. Wilson Fox, of Iowa, passed through this city about the 15th of August last, with sixteen head of fine stock cattle, which he had purchased to drive to Texas, to raise blooded stock from. On reaching the Cherokee nation, his cattle were taken down with the Texas Fever, and all but two died. The same disease was carrying off hundreds of the people of the nation, as they themselves persist in believing, making its appearance in the shape of a flux. Mr. Fox, fearing to pass through this country, turned back for this city. Near the Osage Mission, he fell in with a party of Osage Indians who had just arrested nine horse thieves. They threw a rope over the limbs of a tree, and told the party that they intended to hang the last one of them.

Among the thieves was a lad about fourteen years of age, and an old man bent over with years. They told the boy if he would give them all the information in his possession about the gang that they would let him off. He then told the whole story, revealing the fact that there were thirty men encamped in a bottom on a small creek near at hand, and that they had sixty ponies in their possession. A party of three hundred Indians immediately set out after these men. In the mean time the nine men were brought forward, one by one, and had the left ear cut off, and one-half of the head shaved close to the scalp. They were then turned loose, and told that they would be hung if ever they were caught again. The boy also informed the Indians that the old gray headed man was the leader of the band, and that every one of the thirty-nine men came from the Wabash bottoms of Indiana.—Kansas City Journal of Commerce.

TELEGRAPHIC FEAT.—Judge Douglas' speech was sent by the Western Union Telegraph Line, in full, directly to New York, St. Louis, Louisville, Indianapolis, and most of the intermediate cities, from one manipulation.—Cin. Enquirer.

According to the official return of the Austrian Government, just published, the total loss of the army in Italy, in killed, wounded and prisoners, was 1,164 officers, and 48,000 men.

The Kansas Gold Mines.

LEAVENWORTH, Sept. 12, 1859.

The express from Denver City has arrived here, with dates of the 4th inst. and $8,000 in gold. Business was active.

News from Northern Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12, 1859.

The Brownsville Flag of the 1st inst. says that it was rumored that Aframo, with 3,000 men had marched into San Luis. Gen. Marquez was in Zacatecas, and Gen. Ortega had been killed in battle.

An Aerial Ship.

New York, September 10.

An aerial ship called the City of New York, intended for a trans-Atlantic voyage, has been in the course of construction for some months past in the vicinity of New York, is now so nearly completed that she will be ready to undertake the trip in October.

The aeronaut who has charge of the enterprise is Mr. Lowe, of New York, who has made several successful excursions. The dimensions of the ship are greater than those of any balloon previously built. The capacity of the gas receiver is 725,000 cubic feet, the diameter 130 feet, and the aggregate height from the valve to the bottom of the boat is upwards of 300 feet.

Mr. Lowe proposed to go directly from New York to London in 48 to 64 hours. Dropping below the basket, is a metallic life boat, in which is placed an Ericsson engine, its purpose being to control a propeller rigged upon the principle of the screw, by which it is proposed to obtain a regulating power.

The application of the mechanical power is ingeniously devised. The propeller is fixed in the bow of the life-boat, projecting at an angle or about 45 degrees. From a wheel at the extremity twenty fans radiate. Each of these fans is five feet in length, widening gradually from the point of contact with the screw to the extremity, where the width of each is one and a half feet.

Mr. Lowe claims that by the application of these mechanical contrivances, his air ship can be readily raised or lowered to seek different currents of air; that they will give him ample steerage way; and that they will prevent the rotary motion of the machine.

SOMNAMBULISM.—A Gentleman Walks out of the Second Story Window of a Hotel.—Mr. Thompson Shurtz, a wealthy gentleman of New York, arrived in this city a few days ago. The object of his visit among us is to purchase property, and we are informed that already he has invested near fifty thousand dollars in real estate in this city and county, ten thousand dollars' worth of which was purchased from Capt. T. A. Smith. The gentleman is now stopping at the Bachel House, in Patee's Addition, where, being a somnambulist, he walked out of a second story window, and fell to the ground. He was injured, for a wonder, but very slightly, and is now, we understand, almost recovered. Mr. Schnurtz is a gentleman who is held in high regard by those who know him, and is showing his faith in our city by investing his money.—[St. Joseph Gazette, 14th.

THE $100,000 DIVORCE CASE.—New York, Sept. 4.—The case of Effie C. Carstang against Henry Shaw, of St. Louis, for breach of promise, will be remembered as one of the most remarkable of its kind ever occurring in this country. The plaintiff and her family formerly lived in the city of Brooklyn, and to ascertain and if possible to impeach the character of plaintiff, a commission was issued by the Courts of Missouri, appointing John M. Eager and Edward Collins, Esqs., of this city, to take testimony thereon. The testimony, which is very voluminous, is just closed. Many of the first and oldest citizens of Brooklyn have been examined, and it is said the only important witness against Effie has been impeached. Of course, no pains have been spared by defendant's counsel, Judge Lakeland and C. F. Cady Esq., of St. Louis, to make out a case for their client, while, on the other hand, the lady has been strenuously opposed by her counsel, E. T. Wood Esq., of this city. Nearly four weeks have been spent in daily examination of witnesses on both sides. The testimony will be transmitted to St. Louis, and a final trial had in November in that city.

PIKES PEAK GOLD.—We understand that Maj. Vasques and Dr. Lee, both old mountaineers and the former the discoverer of Salt Lake, passed down the river the other day with $20,000 in gold dust from Pikes Peak.—Mo. Statesman, Sept. 16.

THE LIFE OF A NEWSPAPER EDITOR IN CALIFORNIA.—He rises at ten o'clock in the morning, dresses himself, takes his hat, already pierced with three or four bullets, and goes to a restaurant to get his breakfast. After breakfast he returns to his office to read the morning papers. He finds that he is called a wretch in one, in another a liar, and in a third a villain. He smiles at the thought of having something to do, and signs his name to three challenges, which he always carries about him to be ready for emergencies. These he dispatches and sits down to write an article, when he is suddenly interrupted by some interloper, whom at last he is compelled to throw out of the window. At noon he learns that his challenges have been accepted for the next day.

At three o'clock he goes to fight a duel which had been arranged the day before, kills his man and returns to dinner. On his way from dinner he gets mixed up with a riot, and gets some bruises and wounds. When he reaches his sanctum he finds an infernal machine on his table. Without manifesting the slightest surprise he throws it out of the window.

He then writes a leader on moral reform—this done, he goes to the theatre. On his way he is attacked by three men; he kills two and takes the third to the nearest station house.

When returning to his office at three o'clock at night, he beats a man who tries to rob him; kills a dog with a stone; is almost run over by a hackney coach, and on the threshold of his door receives two more bullets in his hat, then congratulates himself on having passed a quiet day; writes till two o'clock in the morning; retires to bed and sleeps tranquilly.

FURNISHED ROOM TO RENT.
SITUATED on SECOND EAST
TEMPLE STREET, opposite the residence of DR.
ANDERSON. For further particulars call immediately at the house where the room is to be had.
W. H. HOCKINGS.

VARIETY STORE.
A. TAYLOR & SONS,
GENERAL DEALERS.

RETURN thanks to all their friends and patrons, and especially those who have settled their accounts, and take this opportunity to invite those who have not, to do so immediately and save them the trouble of putting them into other hands to collect; and they also inform their friends that they are carrying on their business as usual, under Cannon's direction, next to Geo. Cronyn's, and invite them to inspect their stock, which consists in part of

Ready Made Clothing,
HATS, SHOES, GLOVES, MOCCASINS,
and a great variety of useful and ornamental notions. They are also dealers in Lumber, Lath, Shingles, Sash Nails, Ropes, Twine, Furniture, Cooper, Tin and Crockery ware, Bowls, Shoe Press, Awls, Lutes, &c.; Carpenters' Tools, Tars, Salt, Saleratus, Alums, Vegetables, Flour, Corn, &c., and many other articles too numerous to specify, and have a man on hand in the basement to repair and cover Umbrellas and Parasols, making Mouse Traps and Children's Toys, and other jobbing work on the shortest notice. Agents for Belfry's Pale Whisky, and Day's Strong Beer. Give us a call.
A. TAYLOR & SONS,
Council House Street.

FOR SALE.
A HOUSE AND LOT and 25 acres at Cottonwood. Also a House, Lot and 5 acres of land at Provo, for sale or exchange for city property.
A. TAYLOR,
Council House Street.

ALMERIN GROW,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
OFFICE—On Main Street, G. S. City,
Utah Territory.
37-41.

Dutch Wife-Kissing.

[A case of Dutch wife-kissing occurred lately in Milwaukee, where the husband sued the offender and obtained THREE DOLLARS damages. The aggravated case is here stated.]

"Mishter! spare mine vrow!
Touch not her booty cheek,
Vor if you kles her now,
I hit you mit dis stick!"

"I hit you mit dis stick,
Und schlog you on de kop,
Potzunderblitz, amol!
Mishter you'd petter sthoph!"

I klicks him mit mine hand,
I strikes him mit my foot;
I took him by de nose,
Und pulls it like a root.

I dragged him to the Shantre,
Who fined him plenty mooch—
To teach him not to kles
Round 'mongst de lovely Dootch.

Ihr schaeene Jungfraun zart!
Haltet euch stets in Acht,
Und kuesen nicht auf der Strasse,
Soger in Kuessenacht.

Denn ist der Dmahn boes,
Vielleicht auch er war dumm;
So wird er mit 'nem Stock
Losschlagen wild herum.

An Editor's Dream of Bliss.

A bachelor editor out west, who had received from the fair hand of a bride a peice of elegant wedding cake to dream on, thus gives the results of his remarkable experience:

"We put it under the head of our pillow, shut our eyes sweetly as an infant, blessed with an easy conscience, and soon snored prodigiously.

The god of dreams gently touched us, and in fancy we were married! Never was a little editor so happy. It was "my love," "dearest," "sweetest," ringing in our ears every moment. Oh, that the dream, had broken off here! But no! some evil genius put into the head of our ducky, to have pudding for dinner, just to please her lord.

In a hungry dream we sat down to dinner. Well, the happy pudding moment had arrived, and a huge slice almost obscured from sight the plate before us.

"My dear," said we fondly, "did you make this?"

"Yes, love, don't you think it is very nice?" "Tis the best bread pudding I ever tasted in my life."

"Plum pudding, ducky," suggested my wife.

"Oh, no my dearest wife, bread pudding. I was always extremely fond of 'em."

"Call that bread pudding?" asked my wife, whose lips slightly curled with contempt.

"Certainly, my dear—reckon I have had enough at the Sherwood House to know—bread pudding, my love, by all means."

"Husband, this is really too bad; plum pudding is harder to make than bread pudding, and is more expensive, and a great deal better. This is plum pudding, sir!" and my pretty wife's brow flushed with excitement.

"My love, my sweet, my dear love, exclaimed we, soothingly, "do not get angry, I'm sure it is very good, if it is bread pudding."

"You mean wretch," replied my wife, in a higher tone, "you know it's plum pudding."

"Then, ma'am, it's so meanly put together, and so badly burned that the devil himself wouldn't know it. I tell you, madam, most distinctly and emphatically, and I will not be contradicted, that it is bread pudding, and the meanest kind at that."

"It is plum pudding!" rose above the din as we had a distinct perception of feeling two plates smash across our head.

"Bread pudding!" we groaned, in a rage, as the chicken left our hand, and flying with extremely swift motion across the table, landed in madam's bosom.

"Plum pudding," resounded the war cry from the enemy, as the gravy dish took us where we had been disposing the first part of our dinner. "Bread pudding, forever," shouted we in defiance, unsuccessfully dodging the soup tureen, and falling beneath its greasy contents.

"Plum pudding," yelled the amiable spouse as noticing our misfortune, she determined to keep us down by piling on our head the dishes with no gentle hand. Then, in rapid succession, followed the war cry. "Plum pudding," she shrieked with every dish.

"Bread pudding," in smothered tones, came from the pile in reply. Then it was "Plum pudding" in rapid succession, the last cries growing feebler until we just distinctly recollect; it had grown to a whisper. "Plum pudding" resounded like thunder, followed by a tremendous crash, as my wife leaped upon the pile with both feet, and commenced jumping up and down. Then thank heaven, we awoke, and behold it was a dream. This dream has determined us—we shall never marry.

A LANGUAGE.—George W. Matsell, late chief of the New York police, is about to publish a dictionary of the rogue's dialect, the words employed by thieves, burglars, stock-jobbers, and other depredators upon property. A large proportion of the words are from the Gipsy dialect, with a mixture of Hebrew and Sanstrit. So perfect is the rogue's language, that Mr. Matsell declares that two thieves of different countries, perfectly ignorant of each other's vernacular, are able to converse intelligibly by using this dialect alone.

BUNKER HILL.—One of the places in England just visited by the Hon. R. C. Winthrop, was the old crenelated tower of the Cheshire Cathedral, which is now the library, and here he saw two standards, somewhat tattered and torn, suspended over the doors. On inquiry, he was told that they were the standards of the Cheshire regiment, and that they were used in America at a certain battle, called Bunker Hill, where it was said that only three of this regiment escaped without injury of some sort. The keeper said it was understood that the Americans got behind some sort of a fence or hedge, where they could shoot others without being hit themselves.

ANECDOTE OF MR. CHOATE.—Two or three years ago, relates the Boston Courier, during a season of illness, Mr. Choate was visited by one of his friends, who urged upon him the importance of paying more attention to his health. "Sir," said the visitor, "you must go away; if you continue your professional labors thus, you will certainly undermine your constitution." Mr. Choate looked up, and with that grave irony and peculiar twinkle of the eye which were so marked and indescribable when he jested, said: "Sir, the constitution was destroyed long ago; I am now living under the by-laws."

A FELLOW FEELING.—A pompous self-conceited student being shown the carcass of a jackass exclaimed—"How fearfully [and wonderfully] are we made."

Chas. Dickens and the Earl of Malmesbury, are announced amongst the arrivals at the Salt Sulphur Springs, Virginia. We are not advised as to what other parts of the country they will visit.

THE PILGRIMS' MONUMENT.—The Plymouth Rock states that the cost of the Pilgrim Monument, when fully completed, will be about $300,000, of which sum about $45,000 has been subscribed. The time absolutely necessary for its completion will be about six years, but this may be prolonged in order to obtain the amount of funds necessary to defray the expenses.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the City.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. DYE, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by DYE, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON, for sale by DYE, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce. DYE, BRO. & CO.

NOTICE. The Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. Dyer, Bro's & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business. R. H. DYER, GILBERT & GERISH.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

Fare Reduced!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City.

NOTICE. WE have taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends, will please call and see for themselves. GILBERT & GERISH.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HORD & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, copperas, saltpetre, madder, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla rope, ginger, mustard, cassia, saucers of every kind, brandy, fruit, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stoves, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of ten up, blacking and brushes, greens of every kind, as many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured hams, put up expressly for this market.

Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase by the way of a few hundred good oxen. HORD & DICKSON.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and quality of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints

Bleached shirtings Blue Demins

Brown do White & cold bl'kets

Hickory stripes Canton flannels

Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do

Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables

Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos

Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn

Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread

" napkins Curtain damasks

" table cloths Satinet & cashmeres

Crash, toweling and Cottonades and pant

doylies stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths

White linen bosom shirts Apron checks

Colored calico do Heavy duck (all

Grey flannel do widths)

Red do do Blue & Hick'y check

Blue do do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered sets

silks " collars & sleeves

Plain all wool delaines " window curtains

Fancy do " edgings and in-

Alexander's kid gloves " sections

Bay state long shawls " linen handkerfs

Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric

Delaines in dress pat- Hem stitched "

terns Silk

White cambric muslin " cravats and ties

Jackonets Suspenders

Swiss Dress Trimmings

Mull & Namassoks

Plaid Jackonet muslins

Plaid cashmere for children

Buck gloves and gauntlets

Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and barges

Plain colored silk Ribbons

Bonnet do

Velvet do

Combs brushes and cutlery

Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY

Is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,

Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal. and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garner Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-3m

WILLIAM A. HICKMAN,

ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW,

Will practice in all the Courts in this Territory.

OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s Store. 43-1f

George Cronyn & Co.

HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Kildridge & Co., consisting of

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES,

HARDWARE, &c.,

beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at

George Cronyn's Old Stand,

near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail, they assure the public they have put prices at a low price. You are invited to call and examine.

The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Groceries,

Hardware,

Oils, Turpentine,

Alcohol,

Window Glass,

Hay and Manure Forks,

Shovels, Spades,

Scythes and Snaths,

Cotton Yarn,

Dye-Stuffs, &c.

Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of Salt kinds received. 41-1f

NOTICE.

WE have taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerish & Dyer, at Camp

Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be there all the time. Our friends, will please call and see for themselves. GILBERT & GERISH.

41-1f

TO the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS

NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp

Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp

Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m.

He has now four changes of horses on the road,

also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers;

therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable,

in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.

Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or

day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All packages weighing over 40 pounds

will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

All packages weighing under 40 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 100 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents

per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk,

Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

39-1f

LAST TRAIN, AND

BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS

WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store-house recently occupied by C. H. BASSETT.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR Stock of Goods CAN NOT be surpassed in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF FINE

DRESS GOODS

ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS,

CASHMERES,

MERINOS,

ALPACAS,

DELAINES,

LAWNS,

GINGHAMS,

CHAMBRAYS,

JACONET AND

SWISS MUSLINS,

CRINOLINE,

THE VALLEY TIAN.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1859.

NUMBER 49.

LATER FROM CHINA.

Battle between the British, French and Chinese—The War Renewed—Defeat of the Allies.

By the arrival of the American bark Sea Nymph, at Victoria, V. I., on the 13th September, 37 days from Hongkong, we have received through the columns of the Victoria Gazette of the 15th September, late and important intelligence from China.

The war between the English and French naval forces in those seas and the Chinese, which but a few months since was supposed to have satisfactorily ended, appears by the following to have been quite unexpectedly renewed.

The locality of the present hostilities was at the mouth of the Pei-ho river. The attack was commenced on the Chinese by the naval forces of the Allies on the 25th June last, and resulted, after a very sanguinary battle, in the defeat of the latter, with the loss of several gun-boats and a large number of officers and men killed and wounded. The affair seems to have grown out of a misunderstanding of the preliminaries to the exchange of treaties between the allied ministers and the Chinese authorities, consequent of which an attempt was made by Admiral Hope to force the passage of the Pei-ho. It was necessary to effect that object. As may be supposed, the British and French officers and men displayed heroic valor. It is surmised, however, that the cannon of the Chinese were directed by Russian or other European officers, as they were remarkably well served and the fire terribly effective.

The North China Herald says that the total loss is as follows: British, total killed and wounded, 464; French, 4 killed and 10 wounded, (including Captain Tricauld of the Chayla, wounded in the arm.) The following is the total loss of the Marine Brigade alone: killed—1 officer, 2 sergeants, 1 corporal and 24 rank and file; total 28. Wounded—15 officers, 13 sergeants, 2 buglers, 8 corporals and 104 rank and file; total, 142. Total, killed and wounded of the Marine Brigade, 170.

A correspondent of the Mail, says: "The belief is universal throughout the squadron that Europeans manned the batteries as well as Chinese. Men in grey coats, close cropped hair, and with Russian features, were distinctly visible in the batteries, and the whole of the fortifications were evidently designed by Europeans. Some of those who advanced near the wall even go so far as to declare that they heard men calling for 'more powder,' in Russian; and this morning it is reported that two bodies floated out of the river, dressed in Chinese clothes, but having inconspicuously European features. The damaged forts have already been repaired, and have never ceased to fire upon the boats that are still engaged, under Captain Wiles, and Commanders Commerell, Heath and Wynniatt in struggling to rescue the five stranded gun-boats, two of which, however, they got aloft again, and succeeded in saving the contents of the other three."

The Mail is inclined to consider the Chinese as not entirely to blame. It says:

"The lamentable intelligence we have to convey by this mail, is a new difficulty with the Chinese authorities, which led to an attack on the 25th June, from and upon the Taku forts at the mouth of the Pei-ho, resulting in the total defeat of the British force, with the loss of no less than five gun-boats, and between four and five hundred men, or about one-third of our forces employed."

"This matter will form a subject of Parliamentary discussion. The Hon. Mr. Bruce has not the power to collect troops for carrying on a new war with China; and if he applies for assistance, as it is reported he has done, to the Governor General of India, we trust that Lord Canning will not comply with the request until Her Majesty's Government have had time to examine into the whole affair. There is more in it than meets the eye, and the most intelligent in this country—those the best acquainted with the Chinese are indisposed to believe that the Chinese are entirely to be blamed."

"Mr. Bruce delayed to the last moment in Hongkong. At Shanghai we understand that he refused to meet the Imperial Commissioners who made the treaty with Lord Elgin. He arrived at the mouth of the Pei-ho only on the evening of the 20th June, though the treaty had to be exchanged on the 26th; and we have reason to believe that the Governor-General of Chihli (a sufficiently high official) was deputed to meet him at the mouth of the Pei-ho, and conduct him to Peking; but, unfortunately, the communication from the Governor-General only reached him on the day the attack commenced, and too late to allow of the Admiral being signalled to suspend operations."

There was nothing to fear in going to Peking in a peaceful manner, for every motive that could commend itself to the minds of the Chinese officers, combined to ensure a safe and courteous conduct thither. By indiscreet haste in pressing the immediate passage up the river, when, really, as we fear, time enough had not been granted to the provincial authorities to reach its mouth, has the promising conclusion of negotiations been destroyed, which the treaties of Tientsin encouraged. Three or four days more, and a visit to the northern entrance, called Peking, and learn what arrangements had been made, and the reason for barring the Pei-ho, would have at least afforded time and chance to have avoided an appeal to arms. It would certainly have fully developed the intentions of the Chinese Government, and put them in the wrong more plainly, if they designed a final struggle.

The Overland Trade Report says, that when the two gunboats sent by the allied squadron to the mouth of Pei-ho with dispatches announcing the arrival of the ministers, they found the river heavily staked, but a contractor superintending some of the villagers stated that the works were undertaken for protection against pirates, and that the stakes would be removed. The gunboats advanced to the attack under the impression that the batteries were masked to conceal a scarcity of guns. No reconnaissance was made, and there was nothing to prevent the gunboats shelling the Forts out of the range of the guns of the latter, and no reason why the land and sea attacks should not have been made simultaneously. As it was, the land force was only enabled to operate by the assistance in towing of an American steamer. The force was landed in mud so soft that the wounded could not rise after having fallen, and fifty (out of 1000 landed) who reached the Fort, had not even a dry cartridge. It is asserted at Shanghai, the Emperor has expressed sorrow at the occurrence, and ordered the leaders to be decapitated. The Overland Trade Report also takes the ground that the attack of the British will be difficult to justify.

MOVEMENT OF THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES.

The North China Herald, in speaking of the movements of the British and French Ambassadors, says:

Since our issue of the 9th of July, the Hon. F. W. Bruce and M. de Bourboulon, the Ministers of England and France, with their suites, have arrived at Shanghai. The former is in the Cormandel, and the latter in the Du Chayla. The Magicienne and Assistance are gone to an anchorage off Chinghai, Ningpo, near Kinfans Island, where the British squadron will rendezvous, to recruit the sick and wounded. The Hesper arrived yesterday from the Gulf on the 8th. The Admiral in the Chesapeake was waiting until the disabled gunboats were ready to accompany him to the rendezvous. The Highflyer was to leave on the 8th, under sail, where she will take her station again as guard-ship. The Cruiser and two gunboats will remain in the Gulf. The American Minister was holding communication with the Chinese officials at a more northern entrance to the Pei-ho. It is expected he will proceed to Peking.

PUNISHED FOR PERJURY.

A Chinese insolvent, who failed in Singapore, was found guilty of perjury, and sentenced to transportation for seven years.

[From the Alta Californian of Sept. 16th.]

MINATITLAN, ISTHMUS TEHUANTEPEC, September 1st, 1859.

JUAREZ TAKING AWAY TOWN PROPERTY.

The late decrees of Juarez, ordering the confiscation of all Church property, legalization of marriages performed by the civil authorities, and the establishment of offices for the registration of births, deaths, marriages, etc., have created a great excitement among the people. Americans, accustomed to free institutions, applaud the progress which the Liberal party of Mexico is making by the adoption of these new laws. But we forget to ask, "Are the Mexican people ripe for such progressive measures?" "Do the people even understand them?" We must not forget that the majority of the Mexican people are ignorant Indians. Another very important point, which ought not to be passed by without being properly noticed is, that those who enacted these laws went entirely too far, and overleaped their purpose.

The confiscation of all Church property is a wise measure, but the same decree which breaks the power of the clergy orders the confiscation of the cofrades, the capellanias and other funds which were the property of the people, or the respective communities. These funds were not in the hands of the clergy, but in those of a Mayor-Domo, appointed by the people. Therefore it is very natural that the people should be indignant. The law has already been executed in the States where the Liberal Government is in power, and the property belonging to the different municipalities has been taken with the utmost rigor.

THE LAW ABOUT MARRIAGES.

The law which decrees that marriages, performed by the civil authorities, shall be legitimate, has produced a still worse effect. This law decrees that all marriages shall be performed by the Judge of the District Court, and that the parties afterwards are at liberty to receive the benediction of the Church.

The newspapers of Mexico which advocate the Liberal cause, but which have not the liberty promised by Juarez, are filled with letters from the Governors or military leaders of the different States, communicating the news that the new laws were received everywhere with the greatest enthusiasm; but those statements are positive falsehoods. I have opportunities sufficient to know the feeling of the Mexican people, and can say, these laws have produced the utmost consternation. Men who have long been zealous defenders of the Liberal cause, have now changed their views altogether, and declare that they will not submit to such infringements of their rights as those decreed by Juarez.

APPROACHING CRISIS.

Every body feels that the crisis is approaching. The people are disgusted, but have not yet resolved how to act; and with more certainty than ever, I regret the prophecy made in my last, that we soon shall see a Dictator of Mexico, in the person of Miramon, or some other leader of the same party. I do not wish to say that Juarez would not make a good Dictator. On the contrary, he has shown that he is Constitutional President only in name; his actions are those of an absolutist; but the Church party has, in my opinion, more elements and chances to come out victorious from their struggle, particularly since the publication and commenced enforcement of the new decrees of Juarez.

THE GOVERNOR OF ZACATECAS.

The Governor of Zacatecas has comprehended better than Juarez the situation of Mexico, and the manner how to better it. He did not publish the decrees of Juarez, but when on account of orders from the Bishop of Guadalajara, the priests abandoned Zacatecas, he issued two decrees. In one, he ordered the immediate confiscation of all property belonging to the clergy, who had left their posts, leaving all funds which belonged to the communities untouched. In the second decree, he states that since the priests have abandoned the State, the sacred duties would remain unperformed, and that in the absence of the clergy, legitimate marriages would be performed by the civil authorities. This wise and well calculated course has gained for Senor Ortega not only the estimation and confidence of his people, but also the admiration of foreigners. Sr. Jesus Gonzales de Ortega, Governor of Zacatecas, deserves to be mentioned, because he is the only person, as yet, who has understood the real evil under which Mexico suffers, and what is more, he has understood how to mend it.

CIVIL WAR IN YUCATAN.

In Yucatan, the war of races has broken out again, and with new fury. The Indians have a leader who is stated to be an Englishman. The Indian forces advanced close to Merida, but were defeated on the 11th, in Tixalop, and on the 21st, in Jetamal. Nevertheless, according to the latest news, they still kept the field.

THE BROOKLYN.

On the night of the 16th inst., the U. S. war steamer Brooklyn arrived at Vera Cruz, after a stay of a few hours, and after exchanging communication with the sloop-of-war Saratoga, which has been for some time in port. She left for Montepio, a port between there and Minatitlan, in order to place herself at the orders of Mr. McLane, who has taken his summer residence in the neighborhood of Montepio, in the village of San Andres.

JUAREZ APPOINTS A NEW PRIME MINISTER.

On the 16th inst., Juarez nominated Senor Antonio de la Fuente to the position of Secretary of State and Foreign Relations.

AFFAIRS IN NUEVA LEON.

Gen. Vidauri has lately made a trip thro' the State of Nueva Leon, of which he is Governor, and he returned on the 15th ult., to Monterey. He was occupied during his journey in organizing forces in every place thro' which he passed, for the double purpose (as he states) of reinforcing the army of the North, under Zuazua, and of protecting the country against American adventurers. San Louis Potosi is designated as the head quarters of the Liberal Army. There Mr. Degollado thinks to concentrate a considerable army and intends to re-open the campaign in October next.

Large Fire in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.

The most disastrous conflagration that has ever visited our city since the great fire of 1857, occurred last night. The fire broke out about 9 o'clock, in the stable of F. Merrill & Co., entirely destroying it with its contents, including four valuable horses.

The flames thence communicated to the blacksmith shop, 45 Canal street, spreading thence in different directions, consuming the entire block, bounded by Clinton, North Canal, West Lake and Fulton streets. From this block it communicated to Blatchford's Lead Works, thence to the Hydraulic Mills. These, together with the block bounded by North Jefferson, Clinton, Fulton and West Lake streets, were entirely destroyed.

From the north-west corner of Fulton and Canal streets the fire communicated to the lumber yard of Messrs. Ryerson & Miller, consuming nearly three million feet of lumber, valued at $40,000; thence to the lumber yard of L. Sutherland, destroying the entire stock, valued at $10,000; thence to Lull's yard adjoining, consuming two million feet of lumber, and to Mason & Co.'s machine shop, corner of North Canal and Carroll, which were totally destroyed. From Ryerson's yard it communicated to the Vulcan Works of Warrington & McArthur; thence to the Vulcan boiler works, destroying the block bounded by Fulton, Carroll, Clinton and North Jefferson streets. The two blocks adjoining were also partially destroyed.

The principal losers are J. W. Cochran at the Dubon House, $60,000, insured for $30,000; Blatchford's Lead Works, $60,000, insured for $40,000; Cochran & Baker, Cleveland House, $37,000, insured for $25,000; Avery & Co., $40,000, insured for $27,000; Hydraulic Mills, $10,000, no insurance; Walter Lull, lumber yard, $20,000, insured for $5,000; E. Rucker, Planing Mill, $7,000, no insurance. The total loss will probably not be less than $500,000, while the insurance will not exceed $250,000, the greater part of which is in New York, Providence, Hartford and Springfield Companies.

A large number of the buildings destroyed were dwelling houses of but little value. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained. Two firemen were slightly injured by the falling walls.—St. Louis Morning Herald.

Discoveries in Eastern Africa.

The intrepid and scientific travellers, Captains Burton and Speke, conquering a thousand difficulties, succeeded in penetrating the continent, between latitudes four degrees south, to the depth of six hundred miles, over land that the foot of a European never trod before. The remarkable discoveries they made consisted of two fresh water lakes, those of Ujiji and Nyanza, the bare existence of the first of which only had been known, while that of the latter, by far the largest, had not even been suspected.

We shall confine our notice to the Lake Nyanza, as the most important. It was found to lie 3,700 feet above the level of the sea, and hence about three times higher than the Lake of Geneva. Its breadth was estimated at from forty to ninety miles, and its length conjectured at three hundred, which would give it an area equal to that of two-thirds of Ireland. This mighty inland sea is conjectured by Captain Speke, to be the true and long sought for source of the Nile; a question which has puzzled civilized men for two thousand years, and is still unsettled. In our judgment the question is more of words than substance. Every great river has many sources, and it depends on the nomenclature to which of the several contributing streams he may give the name which practice has assigned. We have, however, no doubt but that the water of the Lake Nyanza does contribute largely towards feeding the classic stream, the inundation of which is the source of the fertility of that Egyptian valley which for thousands of years, has exercised so large an influence on the civilization of man.

Of the country and people seen by our enterprising travellers, we have but a few words to say. The land is evidently less favored by nature than that of the Western side of the continent, and the negroes are physically, and even mentally inferior. The Eastern side possesses no navigable rivers, leading to the sea, as does the Western, nor has it the gold or the valuable palm oil of the latter. Its crops consist of millet and maize, the latter received from Africa through India. With apparently abundant facilities for irrigation, not a grain of rice, the main cereal of tropics, is grown by the rude and stupid inhabitants.

The only valuable product is coffee—still, however, in a wild state only. This is a peculiar indigenous plant in this part of Africa, although we call it Arabian, because we first derived it in its cultivated state from that country. The common fowl and oxen, the latter used only for their flesh and small milk, but not for labor, are the only animals which have been domesticated. The horse is unknown, and so is the hardy ass, except to a few Arabian settlers. Man, then, has here no help in his toil, without which any respectable progress towards civilization is impossible. A hardy, coarse cotton is grown, and the art of weaving a fabric of corresponding quality is understood. So is the art of making malleable iron, the highest stretch of negro civilization in this part of Africa. Letters are unknown to the negroes of the Eastern coast, as, indeed, they are to all African negroes. The staple exports consist of the bodies of the inhabitants in bondage, and tusks of slaughtered elephants. The imports correspond in value. It would be but to deceive the public to promise a beneficial commerce with such a country and such a people.—London Examiner.

REFORMS IN THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American, in a recent letter to that journal, says: "The reductions in the mail service over the country, which the Postmaster General has power to make, under a provision in all contracts, except that for the overland route, from which it was strangely excluded, though involving a gross expenditure of $3,600,000, exclusive of interest, are clearly completed, and the figures will be brought together this month, so that the public may understand what has been accomplished. The work has gone on quietly, but effectually, without discrimination in favor of any section or interest, but in pursuance of an equitable system established by Mr. Holt, for the double purpose of conforming to a present necessity, and of correcting a loose and extravagant expenditure which his predecessor had encouraged. Though some of the accustomed mail facilities, many of which had been unduly enlarged, have been curtailed, no serious complaint has been made that the public interests have suffered, and the contractors and others, from whom most clamor was anticipated, have submitted uncomplainingly to the duty imposed upon the Department. To perform this irksome task without an outbreak of indignation required tact, resolution, and a clear comprehension of all the complications. The Postmaster General, and the assistant upon whom the practical execution of this duty devolved, have cause of congratulation in a success which was by no means expected in any quarter—not even in the Department itself. This retrenchment may cover a couple of millions, and Mr. Holt will then submit the question distinctly to Congress, whether the service shall be conducted on such a basis as he shall propose, or be dependent upon regular or capricious legislation hereafter."

WOMAN IN ADVERSITY.—Woman should be more trusted and confided in as wives, mothers and sisters. They have a quick perception of right and wrong, and, without always knowing why, read the present and future, read characters and acts, designs and probabilities, where man sees no letter or sign. What else do we mean by the adage "mother wit," save that woman has a quicker perception and reader invention than man? How often, when man abandons the helm in despair, woman seizes it, and steers the ship through the storm! Man often flies from home and family to avoid impending poverty or ruin. Woman seldom, if ever, forsakes home thus. Woman never evaded mere temporal calamity by suicide or desertion. The proud banker, rather than live to see his property gazetted, may blow out his brains, and leave his wife and children to want, protectorless. Loving woman would have counseled him to accept poverty, and live to cherish his family, and retrieve his fortune. Woman should be consulted and confided in. It is the beauty and glory of her nature that it instinctively grasps at and clings to the truth and right.—Reason, man's greatest faculty, takes time to hesitate before it decides; but woman's instinct never hesitates in its decision, and is scarcely ever wrong; where it has even chances with reason. Woman feels where man thinks, acts he deliberates, hopes where he desponds, and triumphs where he fails.

SCARED BY A WOMAN.—An extraordinary case came up in one of our police courts on Saturday, which, had it been proven, would have established a practical instance of the enforcement of the woman's rights doctrine. A Mr. Elisha Chapman, well known as a dealer in negroes in this city, charged one Mary Coleman, equally well known, but in a very different manner, with enticing him into her room, and compelling him, by threats of summary severance of his mortal coil, to sign and endorse a note at three months for one thousand dollars.

The evidence in the case showed that Mr. Chapman had been living with the accused in matrimonial relations for several months, when he desired to get married and in recompense for this desertion of her gave her a written promise to make her a present at the end of three months of a negro, or else one thousand dollars.

One of Mary's friends told her this paper was valueless in the eye of the law, and wrote her out the blank form of a note for one thousand dollars payable three months from date. Mary procured Chapman's signature to this, and, as he says, by force. Several witnesses, however, testified to his having said that he had signed the note cheerfully in compliance with his former promise to Mary, and that she had used no threats or violence toward him. Mary followed the example set her by her late protector and was married. Her husband was in court during the examination, and her lawyer used this fact to touch upon the well-known tender feelings of Recorder Monroe, by picturing the anguish which a charge of this kind must bring upon a newly married couple in their honeymoon. The case was dismissed.—[N. O. Bulletin.]

FOUR PERSONS OVER NIAGARA FALLS.

—We learn from a gentleman who came up on the Niagara Falls cars this morning, that a boat containing two gentlemen and two ladies was seen going over the Falls yesterday evening. They were in a clinker boat, and it is supposed were running around the neighborhood of Chippewa, and were accidentally drawn into the current. Our informant did not witness the accident himself, but obtained the information from a person who pretended to be an eyewitness. For ourselves we put no faith in the story. The telegraph will probably inform us if such an accident occurred.

Since writing the above we have received the Lockport Advertiser with the following particulars: "Yesterday afternoon about one o'clock, a man by the name of Rousseau, and a Mr. Morse and wife, started in a boat from near the head of the Hydraulic Canal at Niagara Falls, to cross over the river Chippewa, when the boat was struck by a gale and capsized. They were observed by persons on shore with spy-glasses to get on the boat for safety. They were soon carried by the strong current into the rapids, and were last seen above 'The Sisters.' The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and the efforts which were commenced for their rescue could not be completed before they were hopelessly engulfed in the fatal waters of the rapids."

We learn that Rousseau was saved from a fate like this only about a year ago, and when rescued was so chilled as to be entirely helpless. He is reported by the citizens in his neighborhood to have been a smuggler by occupation. Mr. Morse was a jeweler, and resided at Chippewa.—Buffalo Republic.

THE VALLEY TAN.

STEPHEN DEWOLFE, Editor.

Wednesday, Oct. 19, 1859.

Circumstances, and not choice, have devolved on the undersigned the duty of conducting, for a time, the editorial department of this paper. In assuming the duties of this post, while I do not deem it necessary to pronounce any formal salutatory, or make any exact declarations or promises in regard to the conduct of the paper, or the particular course or line of policy which it may pursue, I yet deem it due to myself, and to the public, to make known one fact concerning my own position as the editor of this paper. An opinion prevails quite extensively in some parts of this Territory, and perhaps, out of it, that the Valley Tan was established and has been conducted as an organ of a small number of Federal officer-holders in this Territory, and that it has never been a fearless and outspoken sheet, but on the contrary cramped and trammelled in its tone, to suit the purposes of a few individuals, rather than to reflect truly and faithfully the existing state of things in this Territory. These opinions I believe are, in a great measure, erroneous; but without inquiry into their correctness, which it is not my place to make, I have only to say, that my connection with it is altogether free and independent. On no other condition would I have accepted the post of its editor, and will continue connected with it not a day, or an hour, longer than perfect freedom and independence in the management of the paper remain. This announcement is made in order that the position which I have assumed may not be misunderstood, and not to indicate any great change in the principles or course pursued heretofore by the Valley Tan; which will continue, as it has done, to advocate whatever is just and laudable in morals and in government, and to denounce whatever is vicious, corrupting, and degrading, no matter on what pretences sustained, or by whom, or how extensively practiced. If these purposes meet with a response from the patrons of the paper, it is to be hoped that they will, one and all, renew their subscriptions at the beginning of the new volume of the paper, which is about to commence, and that they will obtain us as many new subscribers as is in their power.

S. DEWOLFE.

A trial took place in the Alderman's Court of this city on Monday morning last, which, owing to the nature of the charges preferred against the accused, and some circumstances connected with his arrest and imprisonment, make the case one of interest to the public, as illustrating the administration of law and justice in this Territory, and affording to every one a knowledge of the causes, and manner in which they may be deprived of their liberty, and thrust within the walls of a prison. The name of the man tried was Andrew Smith, and the circumstances of his arrest as narrated to us by an eye-witness, in whose statement we place the fullest confidence, and which he is ready, if necessary, to verify under oath, were these: Andrew Smith was at the house of his brother, who lives in the outer limits of this city, in the ward known as the "Sugar House Ward." On Saturday night last, as he was preparing to retire, having divested himself of his shoes, Mr. A. O. Smoot, Mayor of this city, made his appearance in front of the house, and with a drawn pistol commanded Mr. Smith, who was sitting on the door step, to yield himself a prisoner. Mr. Smith immediately retreated into the house and Mr. Smoot followed him as far as the front door with his pistol still drawn. A brother of Andrew Smith, who was also on the inside of the house, intercepted him as he was proceeding into another room as he supposed to get his pistol, and placed himself between Andrew Smith and A. O. Smoot, for the purpose of preventing a collision between them; as he did this he asked Mr. Smoot what this all meant? to which question Smoot returned no answer, but told him to "let his brother go, that he (Smoot) was chief magistrate of the city," and that Smith was his prisoner "and that he was going to send him to the lock-up." His authority for arresting Mr. Smith was then asked, when he replied again that he was chief magistrate, and that the authority rested in himself. No further resistance was made to the arrest, after the declaration of such plenary power, and Mr. Andrew Smith was soon after placed in a wagon and drawn to the lock-up in this city.

After getting in the wagon, Smoot made some threats of jerking him out, as farther evidences, it is supposed, of the authority which rested in him. Mr. Smith was placed in the lock-up on Saturday night, and kept there till Monday morning, without being furnished with a copy or specification of the charges for which he had been arrested; but complaint having, in the mean time, been made to Judge Eckels, at Camp Floyd, of the circumstances of his arrest, he issued a writ of habeas corpus, and directed it to A. O. Smoot, who combined so much authority in himself, that he could arrest a man, and send him to prison without a writ or process of any kind from a court. This writ was served upon Smoot by Marshal Dotson, on Monday morning, while he was near the City Hall and lock-up, apparently waiting for the hour fixed for the trial of Smith. His reply to the marshal, on reading the writ, was, that Smith was not in his custody. He went away soon after, taking the writ with him, and after being absent about long enough to hold a consultation over it in the "office of the President," he returned, and after some side consultation, between him and some of the police, it was determined to proceed with the trial of Smith, notwithstanding the writ which the chief justice had issued. Mr. Smith was soon after brought before Jeter Clinton, an alderman and Justice of the Peace of the city, when the following charges were, for the first time, brought against him. That they may lose none of their force, we present a copy, taken verbatim, et litteratim, et punctatim, from the original, now on file we suppose, in the Alderman's office:

"Alderman's Court, G. S. L. City Territory of Utah, Great Salt Lake County The People of Great Salt Lake City vs Andrew Smith

Personally appeared before me the undersigned an alderman of Great Salt Lake City William Staker and upon oath saith, that Andrew Smith did on the 15 day of Oct A. D. 1859, at my house within limits of the corporation of Great Salt Lake City, and commensal after a few words to threaten A. O. Smoot by saying that he would as leave shoot his head off as a would a rattle snake, he also used the name of God in vain several times contrary to the laws in such case made and provided

(Signed)

WILLIAM H. STAKER.

Subscribed and sworn to this 17th day of October 1859. (Signed)

JETER CLINTON Ald

Before Mr. Smith was arraigned on these grave charges, his counsel rose and protested against the alderman's court exercising any jurisdiction or authority over the accused, farther than to take him before Judge Eckels as commanded, in his writ; but this the Alderman disregarded, alleging that he could not take notice of such a writ unless it was brought to his knowledge by some more certain manner than by the statement of a lawyer. It should be mentioned that he had seen the writ and read it at the time it was handed to Mr. Smoot. As the objections of the counsel were disregarded, he left the Court after advising Mr. Smith not to plead to the charges made against him, deeming it his duty not to remain in Court and participate in a trial, after a writ of the kind named had been issued from the highest Judicial Authorities in the Territory. The trial however proceeded, and Smith was fined ten dollars and the costs. Through motives of prudence or charity, the penalty was shortly after remitted, and Smith was discharged. These facts in regard to the trial we know are true, those in regard to the arrest and imprisonment we believe are so. They require no comment; the charges against Smith are so trivial and insignificant that they are unworthy of notice. They are such charges as might be made against hundreds of men in the streets of this city every hour in the day, against Mormons as well as gentiles. Smith's real offence, was that he is an apostate Mormon.

We do not know what course Judge Eckels will pursue towards the disregard and contempt shown to his writ, but we hope that he will prove to the world and to the individual to whom it was directed, that some "authority" is also lodged in him.

Another Murder.

A man whose name, we learn, was Vincent, and who came into this city not long since from Pike's Peak, was found dead, early on Sunday morning last, in the seventh Ward of this city. His body was found stretched across one of the ditches bordering the street, and on examining it, he was found to have been shot through the head, the ball passing out directly in the centre of his forehead. His boots were gone, and his pockets turned inside out, showing that his murderer was actuated wholly, or in part, with the motive of robbery in the commission of the crime.

His body was conveyed, after being found, to the police station of the city, where, we understand, a post mortem examination was held, but no facts elicited to indicate who his murderer was. Another man has thus fallen in our midst by the hand of the assassin, and another murderer is loose upon the world, to execute, it may be, other deeds of blood. How long, Oh! how long are scenes like this to continue? When is the tide of violence and blood, with which this city has for weeks past been visited, to cease its flow? It would seem as if the insatiable demon and enemy of man must himself be gorged with the flow of human blood in our midst; yet another victim is added almost every week to the heaping altar.

Somewhat should be done to check the farther shedding of human blood in our midst. No man's life is secure as long as the scenes of violence and bloodshed which have been of such frequent occurrence among us for months past continue to be repeated, and the perpetrators escape unpunished, or not detected. In no other community, we venture to say, in our country, could so many murders have taken place within so short a space of time, and yet so few of the offenders been arrested and brought to justice. Why is this? The fault certainly lies somewhere, if it is in the insufficiency or incompetency of the police force of the city, let the defect be immediately remedied. If our city is infested with a band of assassins, let us adopt the course pursued in other communities. When crime abounds, and is committed with such secrecy that the offenders escape detection, let us furnish all parties against whom well grounded suspicions rest, with a given amount of rations, and advise them in the most urgent manner, to seek a different locality. We do not mean to counsel rashly, but would, if possible, adopt some means of preventing a farther flow of blood. In what we have written, we mean to cast censure on no one in particular, for we know not where blame properly rests. Our remarks are addressed to every law abiding man in the community, whether Mormon or Gentile, and they are equally applicable to all, as all have an equal interest in the safety and preservation of human life.

Vincent, the man lately killed, had the reputation of being a desperado, if not a murderer, himself. He is said to have investigated or incited the commission of the recent murder at Fairfield, near Camp Floyd; and to have fled from Texas on account of crimes committed there. Whether this is true or not, it furnishes no excuse to his murderer. When God sent the first murderer forth in the world, he placed a mark on his forehead, that others might be prevented from retaliating on him the crime committed against his brother; and at the same time denounced a double vengeance against the shedding of the blood of Cain. Our laws, also, provide other modes of punishment for crime than private assassination or vengeance.

Do the Mormons Intend Leaving Utah?

In another part of our paper will be found an article clipped from one of our exchanges, but which originally appeared in the New York Courier and Enquirer, in regard to the very troublesome question of "what is to become of the Mormons." The rumor that Brigham Young and the leaders associated with him over the Mormons, were desirous of disposing of their improvements made here and of leaving the United States, is not a new one, but has heretofore been accredited by journals of the first intelligence in our country and of reliable sources of information. We know not upon what foundation these reports rest; no one certainly who resides here can perceive any indications of the change spoken of either in the leaders among the Mormons or in the masses who submit with implicit obedience to their dictation. Their declarations, indeed, as well as all their acts rebut the presumption of their quitting, or intention to quit, at any time shortly, the Territory of the United States. They are constantly adding to their improvements here, and their improvements are generally of a durable and substantial kind. In the country as well as in the towns, new houses are constantly rising to take the places of humbler and less commodious abodes; new lands are being brought into cultivation, machinery for the manufacture of such wants as a higher degree of prosperity than has heretofore existed have given rise to, is being constructed or brought into the Territory.

The incoming of the army here has been a source of revenue and profit to all classes, and the prosperity that has followed in its train is perceptible in every branch of industry. The very costume of the people has acquired a finer texture and polish than it before possessed. It is not reasonable to suppose that a people enjoying a degree of prosperity which they have hitherto unknown, and who are reaping in substantial benefits the rewards of treason and rebellion, will voluntarily abandon their good fortune, or desert a government so beneficent and charitable as ours has been to them. But aside from these probabilities and the evidences which their acts afford of their intention to remain here we have the infallible declaration of their prophets, setting the matter entirely to rest. No one abroad, or who is unacquainted with the clear visions and certain utterings of modern prophecy will credit the great and wondrous events that are yet to take place in "the valleys, of the mountains." "The gathering of the nations is to be here;" this is to become the gravitating and central point from which inspirations and revelations are to radiate and illumine all the dark places of the earth. It is true that a handful of the "Saints of the Lord" will, in a few years, leave these valleys to go and take possession of some other inheritances in other parts of the earth. Jackson county, Missouri, is one of the regions set apart for the use and occupation, but the number who will go there or elsewhere, will be small compared with those who will continue here, near the fountain of light and knowledge. Let the good people of Jackson county take heed to the words of the prophets, and make way for the "Saints."

No very important news from "America" was received by the last Eastern mail. Blondin and the politicians divide, about equally, the attention of our friends across the Plains: the first by his wonderful performances on the rope at Niagara, and the politicians, by their immense feats at President making. Blondin, we believe, up to this time, has rather the advantage, the politicians having done nothing that we have heard of to equal his latest and greatest feat of rolling a wheelbarrow over his wire, and coiling the wire up in his wheelbarrow as he passed. We shall not be surprised to hear, at any time, that Blondin is surpassed by his competitors, even in the rolling and coiling operation. Governor Wise, of Virginia, has very nearly coiled himself up, by a letter written to a political friend in Albany; and many other Presidential aspirants, we have no doubt, will be very effectually rolled up, and coiled away, before their ardent hopes are realized.

The Broderick and Terry Duel.

The California papers received by last mail, come filled with the minutest details of the late duel between Senator Broderick and Judge Terry. The causes of the hostile meeting, and its fatal results to Mr. Broderick, together with the funeral obsequies, had over his remains, are related with every attention to the slightest circumstances connected with the succession of sad and deplorable events, which have terminated so suddenly and so tragically the career of a man high in station, and in influence in the State of his adoption.

Our space will not permit us to transcribe at length any of the numerous articles detailing these events. The results of the duel are well known, Mr. Broderick was mortally wounded on the first fire, the ball of his adversary striking him on the right side of the breast and passing obliquely across the front part of his body, lodged in his left side. His own pistol in consequence of its extreme lightness of trigger was discharged prematurely, the ball from it striking a few feet short of his adversary.

The challenge passed from Judge Terry and was given as stated in the correspondence which preceded the duel, in consequence of some offensive remarks made by Mr. Broderick concerning Judge Terry some time previous, while at the table of the international Hotel at San Francisco. Judge Terry demanded from Mr. Broderick a retraction of the remarks deemed offensive, but as the latter refused making any, and instead, justified what he had said by referring to some offensive expressions used by Judge Terry at a convention held some time previously at Sacramento, the duel with its fatal results followed.

Without questioning in any way, the fairness with which the duel was conducted, when judged by the code to which the parties voluntarily resorted, and without impeaching, in the slightest degree, the conduct of either of the combatants, when measured by the same code, we nevertheless think that Judge Terry, in taking deliberate and deadly aim at his antagonist, after the pistol of the latter had been discharged without injury to himself, even though he may not have known that its discharge was accidental and premature, evinced more of savage revenge and malignity, than of exalted chivalry, or the high courage which is commonly supposed to animate those who resort to the field of honor. He displayed, in his course, little of the magnanimity with which John Randolph acted on a similar occasion, when the life of Mr. Clay was at his mercy. And though his conduct in taking the life of Mr. Broderick as he did, may be excused and defended by the code which governed his conduct, he nevertheless let pass the opportunity of evincing to the world the proof that he could be generous and humane, as well as brave. And the admiration bestowed upon valor and true bravery is, in his case, greatly lessened by the absence of those more magnanimous impulses with which valor and bravery are commonly found associated.

We subjoin from the oration of Col. E. D. Baker, delivered at the funeral ceremonies of Senator Broderick, the following just and correct sentiments in relation to the fairness and equality offered by the duellist code:

"The code of honor is a delusion, and a snare; it palters with the hope of a true courage and binds it at the feet of crafty and cruel skill. It surrounds its victim with the pomp and grace of the procession, but leaves him bleeding on the altar. It substitutes cold and deliberate preparation for courageous and manly impulse, and arms the one to disarm the other. It may prevent fraud between practised duellists, who should be forever without its pale, but it makes the mere 'trick of the weapon' superior to the noblest cause and the truest courage. Its pretence of equality is a lie—it is equal in all the forms, it is unjust in all the substance; the habit of arms, the early training, the frontier life, the border war, the sectional custom, the life of leisure, all these are advantages which no negotiation can neutralize, and which no courage can overcome."

Senator Douglas on Popular Sovereignty.

The September number of Harper's Magazine contains an elaborate and ably written article from Senator Douglas, on the much vexed question of "Popular Sovereignty in the Territories." The article is too lengthy to insert in our columns, but we subjoin from the N. Y. Journal of Commerce a synopsis of it, which is believed to be just and impartial. We need hardly add that Senator Douglas brings to the discussion of this question a degree of investigation and a force of logic and argument rarely equalled, and which must excite the admiration of those whom it fails to convince.

It is, no doubt, a difficult task for even the greatest and wisest statesman to lay down the exact line of demarcation between Federal and local authority as they are found combined under our system of government. But assuming that Judge Douglas' views as to the sovereignty of the Territories over local matters are correct, and place the Territories in this respect on an equality with the States, does it follow, that either the States or Territories may pass laws, and adopt customs, in opposition to the enlightened sense of the great body of the nation; and which must bring reproach and disgrace upon the nation at large? This is no idle question, but will, ere long, require a solution in regard to the existing customs and institutions of this Territory.

Harper's Monthly Magazine for September contains an article of nineteen pages entitled "The Dividing Line between Federal and Local Authority. Popular Sovereignty in the Territories." By Stephen A. Douglas. This, we presume, is the exposition which has been from time to time announced from Washington as in course of preparation by Judge Douglas on the question which now attracts such general attention, and which is supposed to have an important bearing upon the Presidential campaign.

The position of Mr. Douglas as a candidate for the Presidential nomination, as well as the distinguished part he has taken in the discussions on the subject of the present article, gives universal significance to his opinions at this time, and will lead to a careful scrutiny in all quarters. The article before us is ably written, and presents a concise, logical, and connected view of the subject upon which it treats, from the earliest period in our colonial history down to the present time.

Mr. Douglas states the position of the two great political parties in this country as follows:

The Republican party (he assumes) hold to the complete power over the question of slavery in the Territories in accordance with the resolution adopted by that party in 1855, as a part of the Philadelphia platform, which declared—

"That the Constitution confers upon Congress sovereign power over the Territories of the United States for their government, and that in the exercise of this power it is both the right and the duty of Congress to prohibit in the Territories those twin relics of barbarism, polygamy and slavery."

The Democratic party, Mr. Douglas says, it would be uncandid to deny, is not fully agreed upon the relative power of Federal and Territorial authority over the question of slavery, and he classifies these differences under three heads:

"First. Those who believe that the Constitution of the United States neither establishes nor prohibits slavery in the States or Territories beyond the power of the people legally to control it but leaves the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the constitution of the United States."

"Second. Those who believe that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories and withholds from Congress and the Territorial Legislature the power to control it, and who insist that, in the event the Territorial Legislature fails to enact the requisite laws for its protection, it becomes the imperative duty of Congress to interpose its authority and furnish such protection."

"Third. Those who, while professing to believe that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories beyond the power of Congress or the Territorial Legislature to control it, at the same time protest against the right of Congress to interfere for its protection, but insist that it is the duty of the Territory to protect and maintain slavery in the Territories without any law upon the subject.

Mr. Douglas, of course, adopts the first of the above propositions; and his remarks, after presenting the various aspects of the question, that—

"It is difficult to conceive how any person who believes that the Constitution confers the right of protection in the enjoyment of slave property in the Territories, regardless of the wishes of the people and the action of the Territorial Legislature, can satisfy his conscience and his oath of fidelity to the Constitution in withholding such Congressional legislation as may be essential to the enjoyment of such right under the Constitution. Under this view of the subject it is impossible to resist the conclusion that, if the Constitution does establish slavery in the Territories beyond the power of the people to control it by law, it is the imperative duty of Congress to supply all the legislation necessary to its protection; and, if this proposition is not true, it necessarily results that the Constitution, neither establishes nor prohibits slavery anywhere, but leaves the people of each State and Territory entirely free to form and regulate their domestic affairs to suit themselves, without the intervention of Congress or any other power whatsoever."

Mr. Douglas disposes of the argument that Congress may confer upon a Territorial Legislature all the powers which itself possesses by declaring the reverse to be generally true; that, in fact, any subject upon which Congress may rightfully legislate cannot be delegated, but that it may provide for a Territorial Government for a people with whose local and domestic affairs it has no power to interfere, while it may create a Territorial Legislature, which has full control over all questions of a local nature, slavery included.

In pointing out and tracing the dividing line between Federal and local authority, Mr. Douglas goes back to our Colonial days, showing that the complaints of the Colonies were never directed against the exercise by the Imperial Government of powers which were Imperial and not Colonial, but arose from the fact that their local and domestic rights were invaded; that among other wrongs inflicted upon the Colonies was the authority given to introduce slaves against their consent, against which Virginia and other Colonies remonstrated, and passed laws taxing slaves thus introduced, which laws were rendered inoperative by the order from the Imperial Government to the Colonial Governors not to give their assent to such laws; that the right to resist such "unfriendly legislation" was insisted upon by Virginia and other Colonies, and that to this day the constitution of Virginia contains a clause, continued from its original Bill of Rights, declaring that one of the reasons for separating from Great Britain was "the inhuman use of the royal negative in refusing us [the Colony of Va.] permission to exclude slavery from us by law." We have not space to follow the argument, which is designed throughout to prove that all legislation upon local and domestic questions belongs not to Congress, but to the Territorial Legislatures; that such was the uniform understanding in the early period of our history; that the "new States," as they were then called, instead of Territories, possessed the same control of their domestic affairs as the old, and that at no time has that right been parted with or alienated to the Federal Government.

Passing to a review of the opinion of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, he denies that there is anything in that opinion to justify the declaration that the Constitution carries slavery into all the Territories, but he says:

"If the proposition be true that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories beyond the power of the people legally to control it, another result, not less startling, and from which there is no escape, must inevitably follow. The Constitution is uniform everywhere within the dominions of the United States—it is the same in Pennsylvania as in Kansas—and if it be true, as stated by the President in his special message to Congress, that slavery exists in Kansas by virtue of the Constitution of the United States; and that Kansas is therefore at this moment as much a slave State as Georgia, or South Carolina, why does it not exist in Pennsylvania, by virtue of the same Constitution?"

We do not deem it necessary to go more at length into a statement of the positions maintained by Mr. Douglas, and with much force and ability. The whole matter is summed up at the close in the following language:

"This exposition of the history of these measures shows conclusively that the authors of the Compromise Measures of 1850, and of the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854, as well as the members of the Continental Congress in 1774, and the founders of our system of government, subsequent to the Revolution, regarded the people of the Territories and Colonies as political communities which were entitled to a free and exclusive power of legislation in their Provincial Legislatures, where their representation could be preserved, in all cases of taxation and internal policy. This right pertains to the people collectively as a law-abiding and peaceful community, and not to the isolated individuals who may wander upon the public domain in violation of law. It can only be exercised where there are inhabitants sufficient to constitute a government, and capable of performing its various functions and duties—a fact to be ascertained and determined by Congress. Whether the number shall be fixed at ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand inhabitants does not affect the principle. The principle under our political system is, that every distinct political community, loyal to the Constitution and the Union, is entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of self government in respect to their local concerns and internal polity, subject only to the Constitution of the United States."

What shall be done with the Mormons?

I have been informed that Brigham Young and the other leading Mormons are desirous to leave America and plant themselves and their followers on the Island of New Guinea, one of the East India Archipelago Islands, lying near Borneo and the equator, and are in negotiation with the United States in regard to their improvements, and the transportation of their whole flock to their final resting place. I also understand that they claim that there are one hundred and fifty thousand Mormons in Europe who are ready to join them here, or, if they determine to go to the island spoken of, to unite with them there.—Wash. Cor. of the Penn. Eng.

On what authority this statement rests we know not, but we earnestly hope there may be truth in it. No other mode of dealing with this hideous excrescence seems possible. Time has demonstrated that it will not of itself rot and slough off. Time has also proved that it will not scatter and be absorbed. Every year but concentrates it, indurates it, enlarges it, and makes it the more malignant. Soft treatment has been tried thoroughly and failed; and so has hard treatment. In spite of everything the abomination holds its own and grows. There is absolutely no alternative left but utter and clean removal.

There were many who believed that the marching of the United States troops to Utah would give a quietus to Mormonism. It was imagined that this movement would so operate in two ways: first, by affording protection to the thousands who, it was said, were sick of Mormonism and would leave it if they were not under duress, and second by establishing the jurisdiction of the Federal court and breaking down the Church supremacy. But all this proved an entire illusion. None of the population availed themselves of the opportunity to leave their old masters. The Mormon community remained unbroken. There proved to be no such dissatisfaction as had been supposed. The fanaticism which had sent tens of thousands to that remote retreat, and had bound them to their leaders as men specially commissioned from on high, still lived in all its original vigor. They still had faith in Brigham Young, and therefore had no desire to get from his control. And, again, the mere presence of the troops has done very little to establish Federal authority. True, it has enabled the Federal Judge to hold his court without molestation, but his judicial power has practically amounted to nothing. He could do nothing without honest and impartial juries. Mormon jurors are not so. They recognize no law, but that of their leaders, and will convict none of their own people. No other jurors can be had without resorting to illegal packing. Consequently the administration of Federal law is little else than a mere shadow. The Territorial laws framed by the Territory itself, are of course the pure work of Mormonism, inasmuch as the Legislature is made up entirely of "Saints." The Territorial statute-book does not conflict with the Constitution of the United States, though it is specially adapted to facilitate and confirm the power of the church leaders. Of course the Federal Governor cannot avoid recognizing and conforming his administration to it. So long, then, as the Territorial organization is preserved, Mormonism cannot sustain serious damage by Federal action. It has been suggested that Congress rescind the organic act constituting the Territory. This would not mend matters, and even if it would, it is not practicable. The people must have government of some kind, and it would not be possible for Congress to supply it in all its details. The idea of dividing the country and annexing it to California and Oregon is chimerical, for these States ought not to and would not defile themselves with so foul an association.

In short, turn the matter as we may, there is no efficient method of getting rid of this abominable evil but by clearing it from the country. To accomplish this violence cannot be used; forcible expulsion would be contrary to every principle of our Government. It can only be done by agreement; and if the Federal Government chooses to bargain with the Mormons for their property in the Territory, and pay them liberally, with an understanding that they quit American soil, we do not apprehend that there is any obstacle in the Constitution to prevent it, or that the public mind will fail to sanction it. It would be advantageous to the fanatics themselves, for they must always be the object of hatred and opposition so long as they remain within our borders. The greater part of them would have no native ties to sunder, for they were born in other lands, and a second emigration would cost less feeling than the first. New Guinea has much to attract them—an area half a dozen times larger than the State of New York, an excellent climate, and a very degraded and a very mixed population; it is moreover free from all civilized jurisdiction. The advantage of their leaving would be as great on our side. It would free us from an enormous anomaly in our republican system, which, if allowed to remain, must, for an indefinite period hence, trouble and scandalize us beyond all calculation; and it would open a large region to the progress of an intelligent and law-respecting American population, who would in a short time form a State fit in all respects to be a member of the Union. If any propositions are really before the Federal Government for the voluntary exit of these people from our shores, we trust they will receive the most favorable regard possible. No better time for deciding the matter can be expected.—N. Y. Spectator, Eng.

SEEING A ZEBRA.—The Petersburg (Va.) Express says that a showman pitched his tent in that town on Thursday, and absorbed some ten-cent pieces in showing a zebra, which proved to be a mule painted. Under threats of lynch law the zebra man left, protesting, however, that he had been deceived in the purchase.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1859. Mr. McLane has arrived at Mobile from Vera Cruz with the new treaty negotiated with the constitutional government there under the recent instructions sent out to him. He is expected to arrive here on Thursday night.

The treaty contains certain important stipulations in regard to the transit by Tehuantepec which will form the basis of all our future interoceanic transit arrangements, including security of the route, free passage of closed mails, ports of deposit on either ocean, and neutrality in time of war; it also opens a route from the Gulf of California to Arizona, and provides for a commission to examine and settle the claims of our citizens against Mexico. For the privileges conceded to us we are to pay Mexico about five millions of dollars, one half of which is appropriated to the settlement of claims, and the other will be paid to President Juarez as soon as the treaty is ratified by the Senate.

The treaty secures to us a perpetual transit over the Tehuantepec isthmus, which was vainly sought when the treaty of peace was made with Mexico, and for which twenty millions would have been paid then; and in addition, it secures to the silver producing district of Arizona a free route and port on the Gulf of California, which is all important to it for supplies and emigration. Under the stimulus which this stipulation will give to the industry of Arizona, it is confidently stated by well informed persons that they will very soon send as much silver into the world as California now sends gold.

The Treaty with Mexico—A New Era of Commercial Prosperity.

The new treaty which Mr. McLane has negotiated with President Juarez, of Mexico, is the most important negotiation that has been concluded by our government since that of the acquisition of California.

Our Washington correspondent gives us the points of the treaty, which are: a perpetual and secure route across the isthmus of Tehuantepec, a free port on the Gulf of California and a route therefrom to Arizona, the adjustment and payment of the claims of our citizens against the Mexican Government; and the payment by us of about five millions of dollars to the Government of Mexico, one half of which is reserved to pay the American claims.

When peace was made with Mexico, our government endeavored to obtain the right of transit across Tehuantepec in very much the same terms that have now been conceded by Mexico, but without success. By the present treaty this important point has been made secure, and its effect will soon be experienced in all our negotiations with the other Isthmus governments. But the most important concession is that of a route from Arizona to a free port on the Gulf of California. When the golden gates of San Francisco were opened, the whole commercial world received a tide of prosperity that still continues to flow, enriching industry and trade, and puzzling the philosophers as to its effect on prices and the value of gold. Now the silver gates of the Bay of Lobos are opened by the new treaty, and a flood of that metal will soon pour through them which will equalize the value of the two types of circulation, and give just such another impulse to all trade and prices as was experienced in 1849 from the placers of California. The practical result of the new treaty with Mexico will be to start the whole country on a career of speculation and expansion, and by the inevitable increase of trade it will add in a few years millions to the wealth of New York, and in proportion to that of the whole country.

The President has exhibited great sagacity in conducting this negotiation with Mexico, and Mr. McLane has done his part of the labor with an ability rare among our representatives to the Spanish-American republics. While the path of material prosperity has been opened to another of our rising States on the Pacific, the jealous susceptibilities of Mexico have not been wounded.

Even more than this has been done. The moderate policy of Mr. Buchanan has proved to the government and the people of Mexico that we have no ambitious desire to take advantage of the present difficulties that involve that republic to despoil it of its territory and its rights. Had such a disposition animated this government, nothing could have been easier than for it to have found a pretext and to have taken possession of whatever it may have desired.

The money that will accrue to Mexico from the new treaty will secure the triumph of the constitutional government, there, and place President Juarez in a short time in the capital. This will enable Mexico to carry out the judicious reforms that have been initiated at Vera Cruz, and if its government pursues a wise course it will bring about the permanent establishment of peace and order there.

It is amusing to notice the various comments of the Press in regard to the visit made by Horace Greeley, while in this city, to Brigham Young. The Pittsburgh Post discourses thus on the wondrous event:

"Horace Greeley has met Brigham Young! Brigham Young has met Horace Greeley! Then came 'the tug of war!' They have been in consultation. They have been in discussion. Indeed, it is not clear that they have not been in prayer together. The President of the Mormon organization was affable and communicative, and the President of the Black 'Republican' organ (with or without the 'ization') was amiable and inquisitive. Greeley was conducted to the interview by his 'friend Dr. Bernhisel' and the High Priest of Utah met him in the simple state becoming a professed Republican, at his open door, where he gave Horace a hearty hug—politely done, no doubt—and thence, dignified with welcoming speeches to an audience chamber in the 'second story parlor, in the largest of his houses.' He has three houses—Brigham has; and the largest was little enough for the interview Horace had solicited. There were present at the audience Kimball and Wells and Ferguson and Carrington and Smith, Brigham thus deeming it right to honor Horace with a sight of the leaders in the Church, in the law, in the army, and other 'high functions' of Utah. There were, moreover, some of Brigham's sons, as specimens of 'the institution.'

A correspondent of the Alta California, writing from Los Angeles, Sept. 6th, 1859, says:

An expressman has just arrived from Fort Mojave, bringing the news that the Indians who had lately been whipped, having lost 90 killed and wounded, have sued for peace. A large number came into the Fort, and a council was held. Major Armistead required the Indians to vacate one of their finest valleys. This was one of the conditions on which peace was made. The Indians at first did not seem satisfied but finally consented.

The new steamer belonging to Johnson & Co., arrived on the 1st, and was to return on the 3d.

Bishop and his party are expected to arrive here in a few days.

Major Armistead is about availing himself to a leave of absence.

The pack train, cattle supplies, &c., were met near the Post, and had no difficulty in going over the road. The animals were in fine condition, grass and water being plenty.

At a sale of animals of the Q. M. Department, Capt. Hancock's 60 horses were sold yesterday, at an average of $60 each. The entire lot was purchased by Mr. Banning.

There was a meeting of the Democracy here, last night; speeches were made by Messrs. Wm. Governor Morris, Col. E. J. Kewin, Judge Norton, and others. A good deal of bad feeling seems to exist between what they call Dr. Downey's party, and the Brent faction—the latter of whom is represented to be a friend of Gwin.

Business is brisk. A large number of very handsome brick buildings are going up.

J. W. Temple, an old and respectable resident of this city, is erecting a magnificent market house in connection with a splendid row of brick stores, which will compare favorably with any in your city.

The Correspondent of the Alta California, writing from Marysville, Sept. 11th, says:

"We have news from Pit River—to the 10th inst.—that Mr. McElroy, recently wounded by Indians, died Wednesday. He was shot with six buck shot in the back. He leaves a wife and four children.

A party from Shingletown, on their way to join the Pit River Rangers, killed four Indians, and took a rifle from them.

On Thursday, a deserter from Fort Crooks, with two other white men, entered Mr. Pen-ton's house, near Lockheart's Ferry, tied Mr. Pen-ton and wife, and robbed them of $180.

The renegades said they were going to raise 200 warriors and clean out the valley by fire.

Mr. Broderick's History.

We give below, says the Bulletin, a brief and eulogistic biography of senator Broderick, taken from the Placer Times and Transcript of 1852. It is understood that this biography was written by Geo. Wilkes, and we are told that it was submitted to, and approved by Mr. Broderick himself before its publication. It may therefore be considered so far as it goes, a history of the main events in the late Senator's life, to previous to that date, given in the light most agreeable to him. The biography says:

The Hon. David C. Broderick is a native of Washington, D. C. where he was born on 4th February, 1820. In the year 1825 his family removed to New York; but there his parents died before he arrived at manhood, leaving to his care a younger brother, who became then the only relative he had on earth. In 1844, that brother perished, with several young playmates, by the chance explosion of an old bumshell at an iron foundry; and Mr. Broderick was left without a tie of blood. Like Logan, he was the last of his race.

His temperament, which had been ardent and cheerful, became saddened by this disaster, and it soon assumed the serious and steady tone for which it has been characterized in California. Mr. Broderick entered politics at a very early period of life. Before he arrived at manhood, he mastered its intricacies; he had presided at conventions, and his judgment frequently governed the movements of a campaign. Withal, he preserved a high tone and correct demeanor; and it yet remains for the first imputation to be put upon his honor, even in the way of partisan device. The district of his residence was the Ninth Ward of the city of New York, and his name is still the watchword there for the most vigorous rallies of his party. Strong natures make strong impressions, and though years have elapsed since he bade that place farewell, the leading politicians of New York gather every winter to do him honor, at a festival known as the Broderick Ball. There are others, perhaps, who recollect him as ardently, in another sense; but it is not every political opponent who is entitled to the compliment of long attention, and it is sometimes a proof of merit to be well hated.

In 1845 Mr. Broderick was elected by his district to preside in convention for the formation of a new charter for the city of New York, and did himself great credit for the liberal current of his views, for the ardor with which he advocated and the firmness with which he adhered to them. In 1846 he was rewarded for his services in that body by a nomination to the Congress of the United States, but was defeated by a small majority on a split organization against him by the barn-burners, with whom he refused to compromise or coalesce. In 1848 he was renominated to Congress, but declined to run, and in the spring of the following year, in accordance with the views which inspired that declination, he sailed for California. During his entire career in New York his position was always one of influence, and the vigor and steadiness with which he pursued his aims made him a powerful auxiliary and invaluable friend.

The career of Mr. Broderick in California is known to most of our readers. Immediately on his arrival in this city he took a leading part in politics; and in the spring of 1850 was unanimously elected to represent San Francisco in the Senate of the State. He was returned to that body again in 1851, by a majority of 391—though the city was governed in other respects by a whig majority—and on the resignation of Gov. Burnett, he was then chosen as President of the Senate by an almost unanimous vote of his fellow-members of both parties. He left the Senate with the universal respect of that body, and it is an extraordinary fact that during the period he presided in the difficult and responsible position of its first officer, not one of his decisions was reversed. From the date of his first election to the expiration of his last term his name is inseparably connected with the history of the State.

Douglas' Reception and Speech.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 9. Mr. Douglas arrived here at half-past six o'clock this evening, by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad and was received at the depot by four thousand or five thousand persons, amid tumultuous cheers, the music of bands and the firing of cannon. No reception speech was made, as no time was to be lost. He was escorted to a carriage drawn by four horses, preceded by two bands of music, and taken to the Burnet House, a number of carriages and persons on horseback following in procession. The sidewalks and streets were thronged. As he proceeded through Fourth and Sixth streets, cheer after cheer from thousands welcomed the Little Giant as he passed.

A little after 8 o'clock he began speaking in Court Street Market Space, where, at the hour of dusk, thousands had assembled, and, with bonfires, waited the coming of the celebrated Senator. When Mr. Douglas made his appearance, he was greeted with immense applause, and some minutes elapsed before he could be heard.

At this time not less than 18,000 or 20,000 persons, it is estimated, were on the ground, the entire square being densely packed.

Though suffering from a bad cold, Mr. Douglas then proceeded to address the meeting.

A NEW KIND OF INFERNAL MACHINE.

The Columbus Journal is responsible for the following: A professional gentleman living in the south portion of the city, was the victim, a short time since, of a most malignant attempt of assassination. He had stepped from his office on a business errand, and on his return found several small nuts lying upon the table, and wondering how they got there, took one and placed it between his teeth for the purpose of cracking, when a loud explosion ensued, lacerating and burning his mouth in a shocking manner. Examination showed the remaining nuts—filberts—to be charged with powder and friction igniting material, calculated, if exploded in the mouth, to blow a man's head off. The sufferer knows of no one whom he would suspect of the dastardly act of placing the infernal machines on his table.

FURNISHED ROOM TO RENT.

SITUATED on SECOND EAST TRIPLE STREET, opposite the residence of Dr. ANDERSON. For further particulars call on the proprietor at the house where the room is to be had. W. H. HUCKLEBERRY.

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS.—An American in Paris went to a restaurant to get his dinner. Unacquainted with the French language, yet unwilling to show his ignorance, he pointed to the first line on the bill of fare, and the polite waiter brought him a fragrant plate of beef soup. This was very well, and when it was dispatched he pointed to the second line. The waiter understood him perfectly and brought a vegetable soup. "Rather more soup than I want," thought he, "but it's Paris fashion." He thought to the third line, and a plate of tapioca broth was brought him. Again to the fourth, and was furnished with a bowl of preparation of arrow root. He tried the fifth line, and was supplied with some gruel kept for invalids. The bystanders now supposed that they saw an unfortunate individual who had lost all his teeth and our friend, determined to get as far from the soup as possible, pointed in despair to the last line on the bill of fare. The intelligent waiter, who saw at once what he wanted, politely handed him a bunch of tooth-picks. This was too much; our countryman paid his bill and incontinently left.

AFFECTING INCIDENT.—Mr. L. recently returned from a whaling voyage, tells the following touching narrative:

On the home trip of one of our New York and Liverpool packets, she being crowded with emigrants that awful scourge, the ship fever, broke out. The carpenter of the vessel, one of nature's noblemen, and having on board his little son, a lad of twelve summers, was one of the first victims. His shipmates sadly enclosed the body in his hammock, and having read over him the burial services, had attached to his feet a grind stone, for the purpose of sinking it, committed it to the embrace of old ocean. The poor boy filled with grief at the loss of his natural protector sprang overboard, and before he could be rescued he was beyond the reach of human aid.

On the day following the burial a large shark was noticed in the wake of the ship, and, as it was almost calm, the sailors asked permission to catch it, which was readily granted by the Captain. Having procured a hook and attached a chain and line and baited it with pork, they cast it overboard, and soon had the excited pleasure of hooking the monster, and with the aid of the windlass, they hauled the writhing writhing mass on board. As it lay on the deck in its death struggles, the sailors heard a rubbing noise that seemed to proceed from within the dying captive. Taking a shipaxe they soon cut their way into the now dead fish and to their great surprise, found that it had swallowed the carpenter, grindstone and son, and that the former, who had swooned, had rigged up the grindstone, and with the assistance of the boy to turn it, "was grinding his jackknife to cut his way out."

SLIGHTLY SATIRICAL.—The Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel relates that a three year old girl accompanied her father upon a visit to her grand-parent in the country, where a blessing is invoked by the white haired patriarch before each meal. The custom was one with which our little friend had not been much familiar at home, and of course on the first occasion she was silent with interest and curious watchfulness. But when the family gathered around the board the second time after the commencement of her visit, she was prepared for the preliminary religious ceremony, and observing that her father did not seem duly conscious of the approaching solemnity, she called him to order by saying with stern gravity, "Be still, papa; grand papa's going to talk to his plate, pretty soon!"

DEATH FROM A FLYBITE.—A letter from Cassel, in the Journal de Frankfurt, mentions the sudden death of M. Habicht, a Protestant minister of that town, from the puncture of a fly. The wound was inflicted near the corner of his eye; a tumor was formed, which was followed by erysipelas, and speedily caused death. It is presumed that the fly had been feeding on some dead carcass in a state of decomposition, and had imbibed a poisonous virus which had entered the wound.

Old Gent.—"Why don't you go to work and stop picking your nose?" Boy—"It's my nose, ain't it?" and it's the Fourth of July, too. I'll pick bunder out on't if I've a mind to."

WHAT CAUSES THE HAIR TO TURN GRAY.—An English writer has recently asserted that an undue proportion of lime in the system is the cause of premature gray hair, and advises to avoid hard water, either for drinking pure or when converted into tea, coffee or soup, because hard water is always strongly impregnated with lime. Hard water may be softened by boiling it; let it become cold, and then use as a beverage. It is also stated that a liquid that will color the human hair black, and not stain the skin, may be made by taking one part of bay rum, three parts of olive oil, and one part of good brandy, by measure. The hair must be washed with the mixture every morning, and in a short time the use of it will make the hair a beautiful black, without injuring it in the least. The articles must be of the best quality, mixed in a bottle, and always shaken well before being applied.

TIT FOR TAT.—The Detroit papers tell the following very good story of a gentleman of that city, who was blessed with an amiable and loving wife. He had the misfortune, a short time since, to see her prostrated on a bed of sickness which, as appearance indicated, was about to make an end of her life. He was excessively grieved at the prospect, and out of pure desire to be employed in some labor of love as an earnest of his affection, he posted off to the cemetery and set the mechanics and nurserymen a work, and presently had so charming a nook fitted up, that it would have been a pleasure to any sensible person to be buried in it. Not so with the lady, however; and before the roses budded which were to have waved over the grave, the lilies departed from her cheek. The husband, a little abashed at his over-tempered zeal, said not a word about the lot in the cemetery, but by some means she heard of it.

It is not pleasant to have such close reminders of one's future existence, and the lady felt not a little vexed at the extensive preparations which her beloved had made to get her under ground. She strictly followed his example, and kept her own counsel, but by way of retaliation, posted off to the jeweler's and ordered an elegant silver coffin-plate, on which she had inscribed the name of her husband, with an appropriate epitaph, leaving the blanks for his age and date of death. This the astonished Benedict found on his bureau one morning, after he got up. He saw the joke at the same time that he heard the bed clothes. The plate is now stowed away in the lady's writing desk, as a standing offset to the flowery nook in the old cemetery.

Time is like a river, in which metals and solid substances are sunk, while chaff and straw swim upon the surface.

KEEP THIS IN MIND.—Correction does much, but encouragement does more; encouragement after censure is as the sun after a shower.

The Butte-Record offers to bet that Blondin can't walk the Equinoctial line without a balancing pole.—Exchange.

NEW GOODS. WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerish, and Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine. 40-41 DYER, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by 40-41 DYER, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS SHEET IRON, for sale by 40-41 DYER, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce. 40-41 DYER, BRO. & CO.

NOTICE. THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. Dyer, Bro's & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business. R. H. DYER. GILBERT & GERISH.

Ho! for America!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE! Fare Reduced!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas. Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES. No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City. 40-41

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HORD & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, copperas, salt petre, madder, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla rope, ginger, mustard, oasalo, sauces of every kind, brandy, fruits, favoring extracts, matches of every kind, and of all kinds, boxes, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stems, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of len on, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, as many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not one high and another low. We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured Ham, put up expressly for this market. Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase. We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen. 40-41 HORD & DICKSON.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, full assortment of Brown sheeting Bleached do "shirts" Brown do "Hickory stripes" Plaid linsey woolsey Kentucky jeans Bed ticking Delaines & cashmeres Linen diapers & towels "napkins" "table cloths" Crash, toweling and doilies Gingham and lawns White linen bosom shirts Colored calico do Heavy duck (all widths) Grey flannel do Blue & Hick's check Red do do &c., &c., &c. Blue do do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as Bk and fancy dress silks Embroidered sets "collars & sleeves" "window curtains" Fancy do "edgings and insertions" Alexander's kid gloves "linen handkerchiefs" Bay state long shawls Plain linen cambric "Stella and merino do Hem stitched " Delaines in dress patterns Silk "cravats and ties" White cambric muslin Suspenders and ties Jacksonets Swiss Dress Trimmings Mull & Namassoks

Plaid Jacket net muslins Plaid cashmere for children Buck gloves and gantlets Lace mits and gloves Dress lawns and barges Plain colored silk Ribbons Bonnet do Velvet do Combs brushes and cutlery Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 820 Broadway, New York Agents for the Garment Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 41-42

WM. A. HICKMAN, ATTORNEY & COUNSELLOR AT LAW, Will practice in all the Courts in this Territory. OFFICE—East Temple Street, opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s Store. 48-49

George Cronyn & Co. HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of B. S. Hildreth & Co., consisting of DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, &c., beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at

George Cronyn's Old Stand, near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail. They assure the public they have put prices at a low rate. You are invited to call and examine. The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS, Groceries, Hardware, Oils, Turpentine, Alcohol, Window Glass, Hay and Manure Forks, Shovels, Spades, Scythes and Saws, Cotton Yarn, Dye-Staffs, &c.

Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of Salt Lake kinds received. 41-42

NOTICE. WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be here all the time. Our friends will please call and see us. 40-41 GILBERT & GERISH.

To the Travelling Public. STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE. He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms. Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE. He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound. All packages weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each. All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound. The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route. A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited. Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office. FARMER A. JACKMAN, Proprietor. 39-41

LAST TRAIN, AND BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store house recently occupied by C. H. BASSETT.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR Stock of Goods CAN NOT be surpassed in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF FINE DRESS GOODS

ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS, CASHMERES, MERINOS, ALPACAS, DELAINES, LAWNS, GINGHAMS, CHAMBRAYS, JACONNETT AND SWISS MUSLINS, CRINOLINE, CHALIS, ROBES, VELVETS, AND ALL SORTS OF TRIMMINGS.

SHAWLS, CLOAKS, MANTILLAS, PARASOLS, and every variety of LADIES' GOODS, CLOTHS, SATINETTS, CASSIMERES, TWEEDS, CORDUOYS, BOOTS AND SHOES.

HATS AND CAPS, AND READY-MADE CLOTHING.

GROCERIES AND DYE STUFFS. A full list of Yankee notions. Don't forget Good and Cheap. ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS. 26-41

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes; Groceries, Hats & Caps, Clothing, &c.

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above. 49-51 MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN Dry Goods, Groceries & Liquors; —ALSO— OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY, AT G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Millersville, Fairfield, and

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive. 27-41

100 WAGONS JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF Dry Goods, Liquors, Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes, Clothing, Saddles, Harness, and Bridles, which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce. Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section. We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO, 75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MALTRESE JACK; one fine ETALION. For sale by

O. A. PERRY & CO. [35-41]

Hockaday & Burr, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Have opened in their NEW STORE RO

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDISE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants. 34-41

DRUGS! CHEMICALS! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH, MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements. He would commend to the notice of the Profession in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES, including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES, ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the

PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS. 26-41

L. & A. CARR, BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS

AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammar, geography, philosophy, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING

AND WRITING PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY, attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice. 14-41

GERARD B. ALLEN. OLIVER B. FILLIS

FULTON IRON WORKS.

Second & Carr Sts., St. Louis.

GERARD B. ALLEN & CO. MANUFACTURE High and Low

pressure Steam Engines, Boilers, sheet iron Work, Saw and Grist Mill Machinery, Tobacco and Lard Saws, and Brass and Iron Castings of every description. Circular Saw Mills of the Patent and Childs Patents. 26-41

STRAYED

FROM the herd at the Hot Spring Brewery, two BLACK MULES, branded H & S on near shoulder, and B H on near thigh. Supposed to have gone towards Salt Lake City. $20 reward will be paid for their delivery to the subscriber at the Brewery. 40-41 ROBT. HERFORD.

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. OFFICE—40 one door North of Post Office, Great Salt Lake City. 1-41

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW. Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-41

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW. Office—Connell House st., opposite Miller & Russell's Store. 2-41

WORK CATTLE. 100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERISH. 1-41

WANTED: A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERISH. 2-41

FOR SALE, ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange wheat, oats, and barley. CHARLES MOGO. 10-41

THE VALLEY TANTAN

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1859.

NUMBER 50.

Think gently of the Erring.

Think gently of this erring!
Ye know not of the power
With which the dark temptation came,
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled, or how well,
Until the hour of weakness came,
And sadly thus they fell.

Think gently of the erring!
Oh do not thou forget,
However darkly stained by sin,
He is thy brother yet.
Heir of the self same heritage!
Child of the self same God!
He hath but stumbled in the path
Thou hast in weakness trod.

Speak gently to the erring!
For is it not enough
That innocence and peace are gone,
Without thy censure rough?
It sure must be a weary lot
That sin-crushed heart to bear,
And they who share a happier fate,
Their chidings well may spare.

Speak kindly to the erring!
Thou yet may'st lead them back,
With holy words, and tones of love,
From misery's thorny track.
Forget not thou hast often pinned,
And gently yet must be—
Deal gently with the erring one,
As God hath dealt with thee!

A touching Story—Truth Stranger than Fiction.

We have just listened to the recital of a "most piteous tale," that, were not the circumstances already matters of history, would seem too strange for credibility. About ten years ago, there resided in England a sea-captain, his wife and an only child, a boy of five or six years of age. A difficulty having arisen between an aunt of the boy and his parents, the woman maliciously abducted the child, and escaped with him to this country, and found her way to Providence. Here she soon varied of her ill-gotten charge, and finally abandoned the little fellow to the tender mercies of the streets of Providence, while she left for the far West, whence it is not known that she ever returned.

The young English lad, thus left without home or protection, of course soon entered upon a career that brought him to the notice of the magistrates, and he was sent to the Reform School. The salutary training he received in that institution wrought an entire change in the boy, and two years ago he was discharged as reformed. Since that time he has been constantly under the observation of the Superintendent and trustees, and in no particular has he seemed to swerve from the right principles inculcated at the Reform School.

The aunt on leaving England had assumed a false name; but the boy had always treasured in his heart the name and address of his father; and after his discharge from the Reform School, by the advice of Mr. Cushman, he wrote to his parents, informing them of his condition and circumstances. The effect of that letter may scarcely be imagined—described it cannot be. It was as if the grave had opened, and their eldest born had come forth to greet them. The father was in the East Indies, in command of a ship of which he was a large owner. When in a distant port he received the tidings that his son was alive, he immediately sold his interest in the vessel, resigned the command, and embarked for England, writing to his son in Providence, that God willing he would soon see him face to face.

After the Captain's arrival in England, and a hurried visit to his wife, he re-embarked at once for this country to reclaim his long lost son to his heart and home. Alas for the fatality of all earthly hopes! When three days out from England a furious gale made havoc of the ship, and a falling spar struck the father's head, causing almost instant death. Slowly and sadly the storm-stricken ship toiled back to the port of departure, and the woful tidings were sent to the mother who was wearily counting the weeks that must elapse before her husband and her first-born son would be restored to her arms. Although a sailor's wife, and accustomed to look calmly on the perils of navigation, this sudden dispelling of the pleasant vision quite overcame her. She was seized with the pangs of premature labor, and in a few hours joined her husband in the world where separations come not and storms and shipwrecks are unknown.

The letter announcing the death of his father and mother, as we have narrated, reached the boy in this city on Tuesday last, and, as may well be supposed, overwhelmed him with grief and a sense of utter desolation. Let us hope that He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb will so guide and support this youth, so singularly and deeply afflicted, that he may be enabled to recognize with filial love the hand of a Father who chasteneth whomsoever He loveth.

The Scientific American says: The largest iron girders that have ever been made on this continent, are about to be placed in position in the Penobscot Institute, now in course of erection in Baltimore. Their length is 69 feet, clear span 66.

The Gorilla.

In Dickens's All the Year Round we find the following description of this animal, which is said to be most closely allied, in structure, to the human form, of any of the brute creation:

"The gorilla is of the average height of man, five feet six inches; his brain case is low and narrow, and, as the fore part of the skull is high, and there is a very prominent ridge above the eyes, the top of the head is perfectly flat, and the brow, with its thick integument, forms a 'scowling' penthouse over the eyes." Couple with this a deep lead-colored skin, much wrinkled, a prominent jaw with the canine teeth (in the males) of huge size, a receding chin, and we have an exaggeration of the lowest and most forbidding type of human physiognomy. The neck is short, the head pokes forward. The relative proportions of the body and limbs are nearer those of man, yet they are of more ungainly aspect than in any other of the brute kind. Long shapeless arms, thick and muscular, with scarce any diminution of size deserving the name of wrist (for at the smallest they are fourteen inches round, while a strong man's wrist is not above eight); a wide, thick hand, the palm long and the fingers short, swollen, and gouty looking; capacious chest; broad shoulders, legs also thick and shapeless, destitute of calf, and very muscular, yet short; a hand-like foot, with a thumb to it, of huge dimensions and portentous power of grasp. No wonder the lion skulks before this monster, and even the elephant is baffled by his malicious cunning, activity and strength. The teeth indicate a vegetable diet, but the repast is sometimes varied with eggs, or a brood of young birds. The chief reason of his enmity to the elephant appears to be, not that it intentionally injures him, but merely that it shares his taste for certain favorite fruits. And when, from his watch-tower, in the upper branches of a tree, he perceives the elephant helping himself to these delicacies, he steals along the bough, and, striking its sensitive proboscis a violent blow with the club with which he is almost always armed, drives off the startled giant, trumpeting shrilly with rage and pain.

Towards the negroes, the gorilla seems to cherish an implacable hatred; he attacks them quite unprovoked. If a party of blacks approach unconsciously within range of a tree haunted by one of these wood demons—swinging rapidly down to the lower branches, he clutches with his thumb foot at the nearest of them, his green eyes flash with rage, his hair stands on end, and the skin above the eyes, drawn rapidly up and down, gives a fiendish scowl. Sometimes during their excursions in quest of ivory, in those gloomy forests, the natives will first discover the proximity of a gorilla by the sudden mysterious disappearance of one of their companions. The brute, angling for him with his horrible foot dropped from a tree while his strong arms grasp it firmly, stretches down his huge hind-hand, seizes the hapless wretch by the throat, draws him up into the boughs, and, as soon as his struggles have ceased, drops him down a strangled corpse.

"A tree is the gorilla's sleeping place by night, his pleasant abode by day, and his castle of defence. From that coigne of advantage he waits his foe, should the latter be foolhardy, or foolish enough to pursue. No full grown gorilla has ever been taken alive. A bold negro, the leader of an elephant hunting expedition, was offered a hundred dollars for a live gorilla. 'If you gave me the weight of yonder hill in gold, I could not do it,' he said. 'Nevertheless, he has his good qualities'—in a domestic point of view—he is an amiable and exemplary husband and father, watching over his young family with affectionate solicitude, and exerting in their defence his utmost strength and ferocity. The mothers show that devotion to their young in time of danger which is the most universal of instincts. The gorilla constructs himself a snug hammock out of the long, tough, slender stems of parasitic plants, and lines it with the broad dried fronds of palms, or with long grass—a sort of bedchamber not to be despised, swung in the leafy branches of a tree. By day he sits on a bough leaning his back against the trunk, owing to which habit, elderly gorillas become rather bald in those regions."

THINGS WE HAVE SEEN.—We have seen the most worthless and lazy fellows dress the most fashionable.

We have seen the most talented young men tipplers, and die drunkards.

We have seen men who have boasted of their wealth, who were not able to pay their tailor.

We have seen men who have made much noise about their bravery and daring exploits—and

We have seen the same run away from a goose.

We have seen men run in debt without any probability of their being able to make payment.

We have seen men urging another to become a candidate for some office, and

We have seen the same fellow vote against him at the election.

We have seen parents urge their inclinations and

We have seen a lovely young girl marry a rich old bachelor merely for wealth; and

We have seen the same girl die broken-hearted within a year.

We have seen talented young men marry dabby, brainless girls; and

We have seen them after drag out a wretched miserable, life.

Terrible Conflict with a Catamount.

The dwelling of Mr. Thomas S. Bisland, of this parish, was lately the scene of a most strange and desperate encounter with a catamount, in which several negroes were severely bitten, and much alarm created amongst the occupants of the house.

The plantation is one of the oldest on the bayou, and the dwelling, a noble one, is located amidst a cluster of live and water oaks, with a few pecan and other trees of the forest. Except a few evergreens that skirt the bayou, there is nothing in the shape of a lurking place for such an animal nearer than the swamp on either side in the rear of the cultivated fields.

Some two weeks since a negro woman heard a noise in the cabin lot above the dwelling where a servant or two lived, and upon repairing to the spot was met by a strange animal, whereupon she beat a retreat pursued leisurely by the monster. The steward came out, attracted by her cries, and seeing the animal, returned for his master's gun and discharged the first load, inflicting a slight wound. The second charge did not take effect, and frightened by the approach of his fearless antagonist, he threw down his gun to fly; but had hardly turned ere it fastened upon his back with a bound and seized him by the neck, in which situation he rushed into the house calling loudly for assistance. His master, who had not yet dressed, peeped out, and alarmed for his family closed the door again, doubtless deeming discretion the better part of valor.

Satisfied with having prostrated his first antagonist, who lay helpless on the floor of the hall, his catamountship inspected the princely apartment on the first floor, and when the negroes arrived from the sugar house, he seated himself on the front piazza and calmly surveyed some dozen or more of them. Satisfied with the scrutiny, he entered the parlor or sitting room, and took formal possession, and when the door was opened by a negro man, he flew at him and seized him by the throat. The negro was a powerful man, and after being severely lacerated, got him under his feet, when four balls were fired into his head from a revolver in the hands of a bystander. The overseer, who had now reached the spot, deeming him dead, ordered the negro to remove his feet, when to the amazement of all present, he sprang upon a third negro, but was knocked off by a blow from a club, and finally killed by a load of buckshot from a gun, opportunely brought by the overseer.

This is certainly one of the most singular conflicts of the kind we ever heard of, occurring as it did, in a dwelling removed apparently from all danger from the incursions of such animals. We hear that the proprietor intends preserving the skin stuffed in a glass case, as a trophy to be shown to his visitors; and really, the circumstances under which it was obtained, will surround it with no little interest. It was fortunate that no children were about, as they must have fallen an easy prey to so resolute and ferocious an enemy. He seemed to have been a very large animal of his species, equaling in bulk and weight a medium sized dog.—Franklin (La.) Banner.

BLONDIN AGAIN.

Blondin Crosses the Niagara River with a Cook Stove, and Cooks an Omelet.

The crowd gathered at the Falls yesterday, to witness another of Blondin's performances upon the rope, although large, and numbering many thousands, was somewhat the smallest, we should say, that has yet been collected, and hardly more than two-thirds as great as that of the last occasion. Blondin's performance would have been accounted in the outset of these exhibitions a marvelous one, but after the great, overshadowing, and unsurpassable feat of last week, it could not seem very astonishing, nor produce any very thrilling degree of interest in the minds of the spectators. It was more of a curious and laughable spectacle than an exciting one, and might be by many preferred to the terribly great performance of last Wednesday.

Blondin first crossed from the American to the Canadian shore in manacles—a collar about his neck, a chain pendant from his arms, and two others from his wrists and ankles. The fetters were not very weighty, and could not have materially interfered with his performances, or added very greatly to the fatigue of the journey. During the passage, he performed most of the feats previously exhibited—standing upon his head, hanging beneath the rope, swinging his body under it backward, sustained by the arms with the elbows bent, &c.—all difficult and daring in extreme, but by Blondin himself made common place and simple. The return performance was the most interesting.

After a stay of fifteen or twenty minutes upon the Canadian shore, he started back with a cook stove swung upon his back, the culinary appurtenances thereto consisting of saucepan, ladle, sundry dishes, and a pair of bellows, securely fastened upon the stove. It must not be imagined that the stove he bore upon his back was a full sized cast iron "Victor," neither must it be fancied a miniature affair—a disguised spirit lamp chafing dish. It was a goodly-sized, properly fashioned cooking stove, made of Russia sheet iron, and boasting of a smoke pipe about two feet in height. Arrived at the centre of the rope, Blondin secured his pole and proceeded with nonchalance to make preparations for "camping." Unslung his stove he placed it upon the rope before him, sat down, and with some pitchy, combustible material built his fire, exciting it with the bellows, and soon raised a smoke which proved the genuineness of the preparations for cooking.

When a proper degree of heat had been attained, he produced his eggs, broke them into his dish, and threw the shells into the river. The omelet was prepared with the skill of a chef de cuisine, and when it was completed he lowered it the deck of the Maid of the Mist, where, we doubt not, it was divided into the smallest shares, and eagerly treasured by the passengers. Gathering up his "hotel," Blondin readjusted it upon his back, and quickly landed himself and it upon the American shore, amid the loud cheers of the throng.

The Sacramento Union says that by the arrival of the Columbia and Brother Jonathan at San Francisco, it has the following:

A STEAMBOAT AT FORT BENTON.—Lieut. Mullan has received, says the Dallas Journal, an express from Fort Benton, with the pleasing intelligence that his long cherished anticipations have been fully realized by the arrival at that point of the steamer Chippewah, direct from St. Louis, laden with two hundred and eighty tons of freight. This is no unimportant incident, even in this era of eventful transactions; for, by it, 800 miles of steam navigation have been added to that of the Missouri, making a distance now open to steamers from St. Louis, in this direction, of 3,000 miles on the eastern slope of the continent. On this side we have steam—on the Columbia, in the same line as far as the north of Snake river, leaving only a distance of land travel of 600 miles, over which Lieut. Mullan is now building a wagon road, with all the characteristic thoroughness of his nature. The next matter to be determined is the length of time each year that steamboats can reach Fort Benton. We believe, in the end, this will be accomplished longer than any one—the most sanguine—has hitherto anticipated. Settlement and trade will follow up speedily the clatter of the steamer's wheels on both sides of the continent, and narrow the unsettled region down to a trifling belt indeed, and must lead, at an early day, to the opening, in this direction, of the great highway of mails, and travel from east to west.

PROGRESS OF THE FORT BENTON MAIL ROUTE EXPEDITION.—The advent of the steamer Chippewah at Fort Benton invests this work with additional interest. On the 10th of August the road had been completed as far as the Cœur d'Alene Mission, a distance of 199 miles from Fort Walla Walla. Much heavy work has been necessary of late. A party was at work at another piece of the road, in advance, of eleven miles; which it was expected would also be finished by August 22nd. A second party had also been set at work about the sources of the St. Francis de Borgia. A small party, under Sohon, are ahead, exploring a line to Fort Owen, in St. Mary's Valley. Another exploration is being made by Engle, of a line from the Mission to Thompson's prairie, on Clark's Fork, thence up the stream to Fort Conner, thence to the mouth of the Bitter Root, and back to the St. Francis de Borgia.

OREGON NEWS.—John C. Creswell, formerly a resident of this county, has just arrived, overland, from the Atlantic States. He left Council Bluffs the 18th of May; passed about one hundred wagons bound for Oregon, and estimates about one thousand for California. Creswell left his party at the Three Islands, on Snake river, and overtook Major Reynolds' battery at Grand Rond, where the Major had stopped to recruit his animals. There were eighteen emigrant wagons in company with Major Reynolds. The emigrants had experienced but little difficulty on the route. The grass was abundant all the way. Creswell heard of but two deaths among the Oregon emigrants—one was J. W. Lane, formerly from Washington Territory. Creswell met Capt. Wallen's military expedition at Rock creek, some two hundred miles east of Fort Bois, all well and getting along finely.—Oregonian.

Quite a sensation was created on the 6th of September in the vicinity of the city jail, in consequence of the incarceration therein of —, a deserter from the U. States Army, and Mrs. —, the wife of a resident of this county. It seems the guilty pair were about to abscond on the steamer when arrested by Marshal Lappens. To add to the joke, the lady was dressed a la Bloomer, only a little more so. This amorous swain takes passage this morning (7th of September) for his old quarters at Vancouver.—Portland Advertiser.

INK FROM ELDER.—We learn from Wittstein's Vierteljahrsschrift that an excellent permanent black ink may be made from the common elder. The bruised berries are placed in an earthen vessel and kept in a warm place for three days and then pressed out and filtered. The filtered juice is of such an intense color that it takes 200 parts of water to reduce it to the shade of dark red wine. Add to 12-12 parts of this filtered juice, one ounce of sulphate of iron and the same quantity of pyroligneous acid and an ink is prepared which, when first used, has the color of violet, but when dry is indigo blue black. This ink is superior in some respects to that prepared with galls. It does not become thick, so soon; it flows easier from the pen without gumming; and in writing, the letters do not run into one another.—Scientific American.

PRESERVING FRUIT AND VEGETABLES FOR WINTER.—Fresh fruits and vegetables are not only great luxuries in winter, but they are also healthful. The old plan of preserving fruits in equal parts of sugar, making an expensive indigestible and unhealthy substance, is fast giving place to the new method of preserving in air-tight cans and bottles. For this object a variety of cans and jars have been introduced, some of which are of course superior to others. The kinds to be preferred are those that most effectually exclude the air and can be managed with the greatest convenience, regard being also had to durability and cheapness.

Fruits of every kind, together with garden vegetables, such as peas, beans, corn, tomatoes, &c., may be preserved for winter use, retaining all the flavor and freshness that belongs to them when first gathered. Besides the luxury and health-giving properties of an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables through the winter they help to economize the more expensive articles of food that are now so much advanced in price. In every well conducted garden there is always a greater quantity of the various fruits and vegetables than are required for immediate use in the family, which should be put up for winter. While many kinds of fruit in our Western climate are so liable to be cut off by early frosts, it is always well to have a good supply on hand to meet such a contingency. In putting up the berries, peaches, and tender fruits generally, they only require sufficient scalding in a large kettle to exclude the air. They should then be put into the cans or jars while hot, and placed into vessels of boiling water, to near the top of the cans or jars. The jars should be entirely filled, and when made scalding hot should be immediately sealed, care being taken that it be perfectly done. They should now be removed from the water to cool; the ends will fall in and become hollowed by the shrinkage of the fruit. If this is not the case, it may be inferred that the sealing is imperfect, the air from without having pressed in, when the work must be done over again.

Green corn, string beans, and Lima beans, require to be boiled from two to two and a half hours before they are put into cans. Tomatoes should be boiled until the redundancy of juice is concentrated. Common stone jars answer perfectly for tomatoes, and are cheap and durable; and much better than metallic cans, which are liable to be corroded by the acid of the fruit. Good corks well put in and sealed over, will perfectly exclude the air.—Louisville Courier.

INDIAN TRAGEDY.—A party of Indians near Van Duzen's lately attacked the camp of another; and destroyed all the bucks and squaws, save one. The survivor sought the protection of the U. States officer, who accompanied him to the wretched camp. The bodies of the dead, mutilated and ghastly, lay as they had fallen. Many were females; some mothers. Saddest sight of all—on the lifeless bosom of one—its infant lips yet seeking the springs of life, now broken and turned in one lavish crimson tide upon its helpless limbs, lay a living babe. The spectacle smote the humane hearts of officer and man, and the solitary survivor sobbed like a child. In the interval of a paroxysm he was directed by the officer to take up the helpless infant and convey it to some friendly squaw to undertake its care. This he steadily refused to do. No appeal to the sight of the orphaned baby affected him. No allusion to his own soft heart broke his stern resolve. His reasons were precise and logical, O humanity! "it wasn't his papoose!"—Northern Californian.

COL. JAMES GLOVER of the California Overland Mail Company, informs the Gallatin (Tenn.) Examiner of the existence of a remarkable spring 280 miles east of the El Paso, on the road leading to San Antonio. It is fully 150 feet in diameter, and has been sounded to the depth of 8000 feet without finding any bottom.

VIRGINIA seems to be claiming Garibaldi as a child of hers. The Petersburg Intelligencer says that he is the descendant of a Virginia girl, who, about the year 1753, ran away with an Italian tight-rope dancer.

EARLY IN THE FIGHT.—The Fayette (Ala.) Banner hoists the name of Daniel S. Dickenson, of New York, for President, C. C. Clay, Jr., of Alabama, for Vice-President.

THAT great bore, the Artesian well, at Columbus, Ohio, has got to the depth of 2025 feet, and was progressing at the rate of four feet in twenty-four hours.

THE VALLEY TAN.

STEPHEN DE WOLFE, Editor.

Wednesday, Oct. 26, 1859.

We last week laid before our readers a statement in regard to the circumstances attending the unwarranted arrest and imprisonment of Andrew Smith, in the lock-up of this city, and of the equivocation and disregard which was shown to a writ issued by Chief Justice Eckels, commanding the person who arrested Smith to bring him before him, at his chambers in Fairfield, there to show cause for his arrest and imprisonment. We have now to state other facts, which have taken place before another tribunal here, which evinces clearly a fixed and deliberate intention to set at defiance all judicial writs and processes issued here by the Federal Judges of the Territory, whenever they conflict in any way with Mormon prejudices, or affect Mormon interests. A few weeks ago Mr. John Hartnett, Secretary of the Territory, was sued before the Probate court of this county, for four hundred dollars, on a claim considered by him unjust and illegal. A petition for a writ of prohibition was presented to Judge Sinclair, before he left here, to restrain the Probate court from entertaining and determining the cause, on the ground that it had no jurisdiction over suits of the kind. This writ Judge Sinclair granted, directing it to be made returnable at the next term of the District court to be held in this district. But notwithstanding this order of the District Judge, the Probate court have proceeded to render judgment in the case, and have ordered execution to issue against the property of Mr. Harnett, for the amount of the claim set up.

Another and more recent judicial proceeding is also worthy of note. C. A. Perry & Co., merchants of this city, were recently sued by Brigham Young, before the Probate court of this county, on a note for $3,000. Judgment for the amount with the costs of suit, was rendered in favor of the plaintiff but from the judgment the defendants sought an appeal to the District court, and filed, in accordance with the statute of this Territory, an appeal bond, with two good and sufficient sureties thereon, in addition to the name of the firm. One of the sureties is at present, a highly respectable merchant of this city, and was formerly Surveyor General of the Territory, and the other present U. S. Marshal of the Territory. One of these securities and Mr. E. H. Perry, on the part of C. A. Perry & Co., went before the probate judge and made affidavit that they were each worth the sum of six thousand dollars, the amount of the appeal bond, after paying their just debts. The other bondsman would have done the same thing, but was absent from the city at the time the other affidavits were made. Notwithstanding all this, and while the judge of probate expressed himself satisfied with the goodness of the bond and the securities offered, he yet refused accepting it on the ground that the securities were merchants, and might sell out and leave the Territory. It should be remarked that both of these securities are here, engaged in active business, that they have resided in the Territory several years, and that the family of one of them is here, and neither of them have any fixed purpose of leaving the Territory at any time shortly, or previous to the next regular term of the District court in this district. The rejection of a bond with such securities, on the grounds alleged, is of course a sheer pretence, the real motive of its rejection being to force the defendants into a settlement, and to deprive them of the right of appeal given by the statute. Whether this effort will succeed remains to be seen. If there is no way of enforcing the decrees and orders of the District court, and if inferior courts are in no way subject to revision or control, either in respect to their jurisdiction, or mode of practice, the probability is that the judgments in the two cases cited, will be enforced. But if the district judges possess the power of looking into and revising the proceedings of inferior courts, when they go contrary to law, or act without authority, and with this right can obtain the means of enforcing their decrees if resisted or disobeyed, the probability is that the cases referred to will at least undergo a review before they are finally disposed of.

While the Probate court of this county producing with such defiance and summary a hearing and determination of the cases before it, let us pause one moment to enquire into the judgments and decrees of the late District Court held in this city are being carried out. That court finally adjourned on the 17th day of last September, more than a month ago. Before the adjournment of the court, Judge Sinclair, ordered judgments in favor of the plaintiffs, in all those cases that were docketed previous to the recess of the court which began on the 19th of August, and which answers were not filed when the court resumed its session on the 12th day of September. Notwithstanding the time that has since elapsed, the clerk of the court who was sworn in as the successor to David A. Burr Esq., previous to the adjournment of the court has not up to this time issued a single execution on any of those cases upon which judgment was rendered. We know not the cause of delay, unless it is to defeat by inaction, the purpose and decisions of the District Court. True, we heard for some time that want of the necessary time was the cause of the executions not being issued; but this we conceive, is not a valid excuse for a man who accepts a public trust, like that of the clerk of a court when so much may depend upon prompt and faithful action.

If we have been rightly informed, one of the grounds of complaint against the Mormons which led to the sending of United States Troops to this Territory, was the resistance shown to the United States Judges. From the facts that we have stated, we would like to know whether the same resistance does not continue? and whether it will not soon be necessary for the President to dispatch some more Peace Commissioners to the Territory in order to form a new treaty, and again stipulate for their submission to Federal Authority? Or will the President adopt a different course, and in his forthcoming message again inform Congress of the good order and submission to law which exists in Utah?

In no other community in the world, we venture to say, is so little confidence reposed in female chastity and modesty, as in this Territory. From the pulpit, from the press, in private conversation, on every hand and in almost every house, something is said indicating how little reliance is placed here on the purity and fidelity which belong to woman, and which nowhere else are suspected, much less called in question without cause. Men talk and write here about the seductions of their wives, sisters and daughters with a publicity and boldness that elsewhere would not be permitted in another. If a young man makes a polite bow to a lady here, or offers any of the civilities which in more civilized regions are deemed the index of a gentleman, his motives are at once suspected, and from the house-tops the community are cautioned to be on their guard, lest some innocent woman fall a victim to his blandishments and wiles. Elsewhere, the education and training of the "wives, sisters and daughters" of the land affords a certain security for their good carriage, while their own deportment forms a barrier against the advances of the most seductive and unprincipled libertine that walks the earth.

Although our acquaintance with the ladies of this city and Territory is very limited, the few that we know, and all that we have seen of others in public, justifies us in saying that they are entitled to the same confidence and respect here, that is universally bestowed upon the sex elsewhere; and we protest on their behalf, and in their names, against the insinuations constantly thrown out against them, respecting their easy virtue, or their yielding themselves a prey to the advances of every gay deceiver or pert "coxcomb" who may chance to cross their path, admitting even, that such are to be found here. Such insinuations coming from those who should be foremost to defend them against such charges, when made by others, evinces as little of self-respect as of taste or good sense in those making them; and groundless as their own fears and suspicions may be, it proves beyond all dispute the rottenness of the institutions and customs in vogue here, which presumes nothing and trusts nothing, to the virtue and innate modesty and sense of propriety which dwells naturally in the breast of woman.

Next Friday is the day fixed by the sentence of the court for the execution of Thomas H. Ferguson, the young man who was convicted at the late term of the U. S. District Court held in this city, of the murder of a man by the name of Carpenter. The execution we understand, will take place on the north side of the city and without the wall.

We have been informed that the unfortunate but guilty man whose end is so near at hand, manifests little of regret for what he has done, or of apprehension or care in view of his approaching fate.

We take pleasure in announcing for the benefit of our Mormon friends in the Southwestern Settlements, that there is no truth whatever in the rumor that Gen. Harney is on his way to Utah to relieve Gen. Johnston, who returns to the States in consequence of ill health. The murderers of the lamented Gunnison and the authors of the Mountain Meadows massacre, can rest in safety for a time longer—a "though" it is said that Gen. Harney has promised if he comes at all, to come "by the lower road."

We were informed a day or two ago that a brother of Andrew Smith who was present at the time of the illegal arrest of the latter, an account of which we gave in our issue of last week, has since that event, had one or two cows shot near his home, in revenge, as he supposes, for the sympathy that he manifested towards his brother at the time of his arrest. Mr. Smith was in the city on the night in which his cows were killed, but did not go home fearing violence himself, but asked and received permission to remain in the store of one of our merchants. The shooting of his cows shows how correctly he judged concerning Mormon malice and revenge, and how narrowly he probably escaped violence himself.

The Eastern Mail arrived at 10 o'clock yesterday, bringing Washington and New York papers up to the 1st, and St. Louis dates to the 2nd inst. We have time to make many extracts, as our paper was nearly ready for press.

The Great Eastern on her "trip from the Thames to Portland exploded one of her boilers. Several persons were killed. We will give the particulars in our next.

DRAGOONS.—Company B, 2nd Dragoons, under command of Lieut. Haight, passed through our city on Thursday. They have been out from Camp Floyd, since the 11th of June, and engaged in scouting, on the Northern Emigration Road, between Fort Hall and the Humboldt. They have not killed any Indians, because, as they say, they saw none. —Mountaineer.

A detachment of U. S. troops (mounted) under command of Lieut. Thomas Hight, passed through our city last week on their way to winter quarters at Camp Floyd. They seemed in good health and spirits considering their long and toilsome march of more than 1800 miles. This gallant young officer left Camp Floyd on the 12th of June last, with instructions as we understand to scout the country in pursuit of Indians, who were said to be on the road harassing the emigrants en route to the Pacific. He found no Indians but friendly ones, but had the melancholy task to perform of burying in one grave, the bones of the 12 unfortunate men, women and children who were murdered in June last, on Marsh river.

Who did this? Could none of the sharp detectives in this region inform us?

Horace Greeley, we understand, has originated a new scheme for the amelioration of suffering humanity in the neighborhood of surprise. It is the establishment of a chartered company, with a cash capital of $17,000,000,000,000,000, to be known by the name of the "South Platte and Beaver Creek Buffalo Chip Company." Its plan of operations is as follows: Each stock-holder is required to pay one cent in cash on becoming a member, and then report himself at head quarters at Lawrence in Eastern Kansas. The Board of Directors will then furnish each member with a sharpened willow stick, and a tin pan, who will proceed to follow up the vast herds of Buffalo who range through the prairies, gathering up all the sound and unbroken chips. The company will have large and commodious warehouses erected along the road to store away this useful article, for future use, as they expect, to realize a large profit by selling it to the "Great Grand Black Republican Carpet Sack Foot Passenger Company," who are coming out to look for the mouth of the Humboldt.

"Many speak the truth, when they say that they despise riches and preferment, but they mean the riches and preferment possessed by other men."

"Never join with your friend when he abuses his horse or his wife, unless the one is about to be sold, and the other buried."

"None are so fond of secrets as those who do not intend to keep them. Such persons covet secrets as a spendthrift does money, for the purpose of circulation."

Many men fall in life from the want, as they suppose, of those great occasions wherein they might have shown their trustworthiness and their integrity. But every one should remember that in order to try whether a vessel be leaky, it is proven with water before we trust it with wine. The minute and trivial opportunities of being just and upright, are constantly occurring to every one; and it is in an unimpeachable character in these minor things that almost invariably prepares and produces these very opportunities for greater advancement, and higher promotion, which most men covet, but which those alone are permitted to reap who have previously sown.

Our "devil" is a youth of inquiring mind. He desires to know how many yards of cotton cloth are necessary to make a pair of sheets for the bed of the ocean?

Gen. Harney's Letter to Gov. Douglas.

Some time ago, an American, living on the small island of San Juan, one of a group situated near the larger island of Vancouver, and near the boundary line between the U. States and the British possessions north of us, in consequence of the frequent depredations of some pigs belonging to one of his neighbors, one day took occasion to avenge the wrongs that he had received, by killing one of the innocent invaders of his much prized vegetable deposits. Our countryman, filled, no doubt, with remorse at the deed which he had done, went, soon after, to the owner of the pig, who in this instance was a British subject, and confessed his guilt in killing his grunter, and offered to make the only indemnification in his power for the offence he had committed, by tendering to him the value of his pig; but this the outraged and stubborn Englishman refused to receive, and demanded instead, one hundred dollars, as an offering and balm to his violated rights. Jonathan thought this was too much and refused paying it, and the case was, in consequence, reported to Sir James Douglas, Gov. of Vancouver's Island, Vice Admiral, etc. Sir James instantly fired up at the wrongs of his suffering countryman and faithful subject, and instantly dispatched a peace officer, backed by a vessel of war, to bring our offending and refractory countryman to terms; but Jonathan, not being accustomed to such peremptory proceedings, stoutly refused surrendering himself at the command of the British officer, and, with rifle in hand threatened terrible vengeance against the farther invasion of his premises. The officer, upon this, taking warning, no doubt, from the melancholy fate of a former invader, deemed it prudent to retire; but in doing so, made some threat which Jonathan saw fit to report to Gen. Harney, the commander of the American forces in the vicinity; and he, with a zeal and determination in the cause of his countryman equal to that which Gov. Douglas had shown for him, immediately dispatched a company of troops to the island to take possession of it as the property of our Government, and if necessary, to protect the rights of American settlers upon it. This, in turn, led to a very spirited correspondence between Gen. Harney and Gov. Douglas, as to the rights of the two governments to the island in dispute. The question of jurisdiction has since been transferred to Washington for diplomatic settlement.

But the origin of the difficulty evinces the insignificance of the causes which sometimes lead to national as well as private difficulties. Here is a specimen of one of General Harney's letters to Gov. Douglas:

HEAD QUARTERS, DEPARTMENT OF OREGON, }
Fort Vancouver, W. T., Aug. 6, 1859.
His Excellency James Douglas, C. B., Governor of Vancouver's Island, Vice Admiral of the same, &c.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you of the receipt of an official copy of a protest made by you to the occupation of San Juan Island in Puget Sound, by a company of U. States troops under my command.

This aforesaid copy was furnished by Capt. Hornby of Her Majesty's ship Tribune, to the United States officer in command at San Juan Island, Capt. George Pickett of the 9th Infantry of the American army; together with a communication threatening a joint occupation of San Juan Island by the forces of Her Majesty's ships Tribune, Plumper and Satellite, now in the Harbor of that Island by your orders.

As the military commander of the Department of Oregon, assigned to that command by the orders of the President of the United States, I have the honor to state for your information, that by such authority vested in me I placed a military command upon the Island of San Juan to protect the American citizens residing on that island from the insults and indignities which the British authorities of Vancouver's Island and the establishment of the Hudson's Bay Company have recently offered them, by sending a British ship of war from Vancouver's Island to convey the Chief Factor of the Hudson's Bay Company to San Juan, for the purpose of seizing an American citizen and forcibly transporting him to Vancouver's Island to be tried by British laws.

I have reported this attempted outrage to my government, and they will doubtless seek the proper redress from the British government. In the mean time I have the honor to inform your Excellency, I shall not permit a repetition of that insult, and shall retain a command on San Juan Island, to protect its citizens in the name of the United States, until I receive further orders from my government.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obt. servant,
W. S. HARNEY,
Brig. Gen. U. S. A. Commanding.

BURSTING OF A BALLOON AND PERILOUS DESCENT OF THE AERONAUT.—Professor Coe, accompanied by Mr. Cottman, of Rome, N. Y. made a balloon ascension here to-day (Sept. 29th), from the fair grounds. The county fair being in session, there were 10,000 spectators. The ascension was fine. At the height of two miles the balloon burst, turning up in the top of the netting, thus forming a parachute. The voyagers, after a perilous and exciting descent, landed safely in a swamp three miles from their starting point. There was intense excitement among the crowd below during the descent. —N. Y. Herald.

Ma. Editor.—The leader contained in the last number of the Mountaineer is a grand conglomeration of high sounding words, full of bombast, and signifying nothing. It shows the writer's brains to be in an elegant state of heterogeneous confusion. Among other flights of fancy, he compares the sable whiskered gentleman to the popinjay. I don't know much about the science of ornithology, but have consulted Audubon, who knows it all, and find that the popinjay is of the woodpecker species, and is considered one of the most useful of the feathered tribe. I do not like to be outdone in politeness, and therefore confess that our sarcastic friend reminds me of that wonderful animal called the gillnew. This mysterious bird is possessed of most singular habits. He feeds upon the young of other birds, and after a hearty meal, soars aloft to a dizzy height, and then descends with great velocity to the earth, alighting upon his bill, which is very long, and in this upright but uncomfortable position, whistles himself to death.

GENTILE.

The Law Forbidding the African Slave Trade.

In answer to a question addressed to the National Intelligencer by a correspondent in Georgia, as to whether the Southern statesmen, took the lead in enacting the law against the African Slave Trade, that paper gives an interesting account of the passage of the act in question. It says:

The Act was passed on the recommendation President Jefferson, and each branch of Congress vied with the other in its promptness to move for the earliest possible suppression of the infamous traffic, for so it was regarded at that day by the Representatives of the people from every quarter of the Union. On the day after the annual meeting of Mr. Jefferson for December, 1850, had been read in the Senate, the first act recorded among the proceedings of that body consists of a notice given on Wednesday, December 3d, by Mr. Bradley of Vermont, that he would, "on the following Monday, (December 8,) ask leave to prohibit the importation of slaves into any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States, from and after the last day of January, 1808." In the House of Representatives it was also resolved, on the same day, "that much of the Message of the President of the United States as relates to the prohibition of the African Slave Trade," he referred to a select committee; and Messrs. Peter Early, of Georgia; Thomas M. Randolph, of Virginia; John Campbell, of Maryland; Thomas Kenan, of North Carolina; Ochsner Cook, of Massachusetts; James Kelley, of Pennsylvania; and Killian K. Van Rensselaer, of New York, were appointed such committee.

The committee raised by the Senate on the same subject consisted of Messrs. Stephen R. Bradley, of Vermont; David Stone of North Carolina; William B. Giles, of Virginia; John Gaillard, of South Carolina; and Abraham Baldwin, of Georgia.

These committees, which it will be seen, comprised in their number a majority from Southern and slaveholding States, reported to their respective Houses bills strongly prohibitory of the foreign slave trade after the first of January, 1808.

The bill introduced by the Senate Committee was passed in that body, without division, on the 27th of January, 1807. The measure reported to the House by its Committee was debated from time to time with the view of ascertaining and inserting the most effective penalties by which to put an end to the traffic, when, on the 13th of February, 1807, the bill sent from the Senate, after being amended, was read and passed with only five dissentients—Messrs. Silas Betton, of Maine; Martin Crittenden of Vermont; James M. Garnett, of Virginia; Abraham Trigg, of Virginia; and David R. Williams, of South Carolina.

It may be proper to state that the 8th section of the bill, as amended by the House of Representatives, contained a proviso excepting the coastwise trade in negro slaves (not imported contrary to the provisions of the act under consideration) from the restrictions and penalties embraced in the bill. To this amendment the Senate refused to agree, and the House insisting, committees of conference were respectively appointed on the part of both branches of Congress. As the result of this conference the views of the House substantially prevailed, though not without some modifications, which provoked strong dissent on the part of many Representatives.

The bill was finally passed in the House by a vote of 63 yeas against 48 nays. Among the latter is recorded the name of Mr. Early, of Georgia, who had been an active instrumental in framing the act, but it is important to add that he expressly based his opposition on the ground that the bill, as modified, left in his judgment, a door wide open to evasion, and would not prevent the introduction of a single slave. The great mass of those who voted with him in the negative were, in like manner, prompted by dissatisfaction with the details, and not with the substance or object of the measure.

The subsequent measures adopted in 1818 and 1820, affixing additional penalties to the traffic, were in like manner adopted by the common consent of Representatives from all parts of the Union, and received the assent of President Monroe, in pursuance of whose earnest recommendations they were passed by the National Legislature.

About the only person we ever heard of that was not spoiled by being lionized, was a Jew, named Daniel.

Senator...
Washington... invitation...
of State, who...
he has de...
one at C...
hundreds...
the line...
himself o...
ried visit...
Sandy m... on the ch...
ed to arr...
time of t...
nati the p...
his hotel...
as it was...
on Sunday...
and num...
lected, co...
The Sena...
peering c...
ever—un...
tuna with...
turn gre...
his habi...
day yeste...
with...
and expt...
course a...
that is a...
cause...
to receiv...
he has be...
before th...
his labor...
keeping...
Ohio, wi...
But little...
course of...
ready in...
to hold a...
day, spe...
rival...
than he...
fatigue...
—as the...
shake hi...
who cha...
always...
And y...
everywh...
ton." Of... what de...
awaited...
have red...
depo; he...
to a hot...
he spok...
a state...
city, wa...
the angy...
travels...
The I...
Ohio la...
Sen—th...
Wednes... commit...
compan...
vic, and...
tude asi...
munge... ed to his...
populat...
strat...
Dougl... person...
cause o...
of Col...
Se. ato...
showed...
The r...
ready...
ions v...
ready...
Dougl...
an app...
the pec...
thus ra...
Miami...
he was...
all plac...
he was...
At Day...
—but...
voice a...
to depe...
He her...
of the...
Cincin...
gress t...
one co...
At Ho... bands...
red ped...
called...
at ever...
Cincin...
repeate...
At a...
ceived...
charge...
the de...
tremen...
deed, v...
impos...
tingua...
magni...
was in...
and se...
House...
Square... holding...
immen...
spoke...
freque...
shouts...
were s...
was hi...
he wa...
next d... attend...
Fairs...
cago...
At I... dark, I...
he was...
Bonfir...
burg t...
standi...

From the Chicago Times.

Senator Douglas in Ohio—His Passage through Ohio and Reception by the People.

Senator Douglas having snatched a few days' time from the cares of his family in Washington, he consented, in response to the invitation of the Democratic Executive Committee of Ohio, to make a flying visit to that State, where, as our readers already know, he has delivered a speech at Columbus and one at Cincinnati, and met the people in hundreds and thousands at other points on the line of the railways. He has availed himself of this brief absence to pay a hurried visit to Chicago. He arrived here on Sunday morning. It was reported through the city on Saturday that he was expected to arrive that evening, and at about the time of the arrival of the train from Cincinnati the people had assembled in crowds at his hotel to give him welcome. And as soon as it was known that he was actually here on Sunday morning hundreds of his old friends and numbers of strangers in the city collected, completely filling the Tremont House. The Senator looked in fine condition—he appearing even younger and more buoyant than ever—and received the spontaneous greetings with all his accustomed ease, and in turn greeted such as called on him with all his habitual freedom and cordiality. All day yesterday the Tremont House was thronged with people anxious to pay their respects and express their entire approval of his public course and their confidence of his success that is sure to result to him and to the good cause. We understand that he has declined to receive any public demonstration, although he has been importuned to appear formally before the masses—he preferring to rest from his labors for a few days preparatory to keeping his appointment at Worcester, in Ohio, where he will speak on Friday next. But little rest he will get, judging from the course of things yesterday. As we have already intimated, he has thus far been obliged to hold one continued reception, night and day, speaking almost literally, since his arrival. But as no man can do this better than he, so he does it with less effort and less fatigue. He is always glad to see the people—as the people are delighted to see and shake him by the hand—so true is it that he who champions the rights of the people will always have the people's support.

And what we see here has been witnessed everywhere along the route from Washington. Our readers are already familiar with what demonstrations of respect and affection awaited him on his arrival at Pittsburgh; they have read of the crowds that met him at the depot; how they carried him, as if by force, to a hotel, and demanded a speech; and how he spoke to them the words of a patriot and a statesman. Pittsburgh, a Pennsylvania city, was ablaze with excitement. It was the same everywhere else on the line of his travels.

The Democratic Executive Committee of Ohio had announced him to speak in Columbus—the capital of that great State—on Wednesday. On his arrival he was met by a committee of hundreds of citizens, with companies of the military and bands of music, and escorted to his hotel. The multitude assembled to see and hear him was immense. All the towns in the vicinity appeared to have poured for the occasion all their populations into Columbus. This demonstration was most complimentary to Senator Douglas; and considered, in other than its personal aspects, was most cheering to the cause of sound Democracy. And the people of Columbus responded to the sentiments of Senator Douglas' speech in a manner that showed that their hearts were in the work.

The speech has been widely published already, and is being answered from all sections with the applause of a convinced and ready people. From Columbus Senator Douglas started for Cincinnati, where he had an appointment to speak Thursday. But the people would not permit him to pass thus rapidly. At every station on the little Miami railway crowds had assembled, and he was called out with cheers, and at several places, where the delay would admit of it, he was compelled to make brief addresses. At Dayton, being ill, he was obliged to stop—but notwithstanding the bad state of his voice and a severe cold, he was not allowed to depart until he had spoken here also. He here surrendered himself into the hands of the Democratic Executive Committee of Cincinnati, and left on Friday. The progress thence to his place of destination was one continued scene of triumphal reception. At Hamilton companies of artillery and bands of music, with upward of fifteen hundred people, met him at the station house, called him out, and he made a speech. And at every railway station between Dayton and Cincinnati this, or something like this, was repeated.

At Cincinnati, Senator Douglas was received with a noble salute and a splendid discharge of rockets. There were collected at the depot, and in all the streets leading to it, tremendous crowds of citizens—so dense indeed, was the multitude that it was next to impossible for the committee and their distinguished guest to make their way. A magnificent barge, drawn by four horses, was in readiness to receive Senator Douglas, and soon he was moving toward the Burnet House. He addressed the people in Court Square, which is fine and large, capable of holding forty or fifty thousand persons. This immense space was filled and packed! He spoke for an hour and a half, eliciting at frequent intervals the most enthusiastic shouts of applause. At the close rockets were sent up, cannons were fired, and music was heard throughout the city. Afterward he was given a serenade at his hotel. The next day he visited various parts of the city, attending the Mechanical and Horticultural Fairs. On Saturday night he left for Chicago.

At Lawrenceville, Indiana, though it was dark, hundreds of people had assembled, and he was greeted with music and a cannonade. Bonfires lighted up the scene. At Greensburg the people were all out, and notwithstanding it was raining at the time, he made them a speech. When the train was again in motion cheers went up, and lasted till it was out of sight. He reached Indianapolis at midnight, and it was raining still; but the crowd, which was dense and excited, seized him and literally carried him out of the cars to the American House, where he spoke to them for ten minutes. When he was again in the cars, the cheers, as in the other cases, followed him till he was beyond the reach of the voices, which were indeed multitudinous.

Such is the account unexaggerated and simple, of the passage of Stephen A. Douglas from Washington through Ohio to his home in Chicago. Can there be any mistake as to how the people feel?

[From the Omaha Nebraska, Sept. 24.]

LATEST FROM THE MINES.

Mr. King, of Davenport, Iowa, Mr. Simmons, of Chicago, Mr. Damon, of Wisconsin, and J. C. Kay, Esq., of Lexington, Ky., arrived in this city on Tuesday last, making the entire distance in thirteen days from Denver city. They found the road in good condition the entire distance and speaks of the North Platte as being much preferable over any other route to the mines.

They give flatting accounts of the mines and the result of the mining operations of the present season.

These gentlemen own rich claims near the famous Gregory diggings, and bring a considerable amount of gold dust, gulch gold and specimens, amounting to several thousand dollars. They return to the States for the purpose of purchasing machinery, with the intention of returning to the mines early in the spring.

The specimen of quartz which these gentlemen brought in were much more impregnated with the precious metal than any we have before seen. We were also shown some fine specimens of gulch gold, in value from $1 to $10 each, the result of a few days gulch mining. We learn new and rich leads are being discovered daily and are developing fully equal to the famous Gregory diggings.

Some members of the Georgia Company returned with these gentlemen as far as the Loup Fork, and from thence to St. Joseph. They return to their homes during the winter. This Company have realized $40,000 the present season, notwithstanding the many disadvantages they have labored under, and which will be entirely removed another season.

They also report miners are preparing to leave the mountains on account of heavy snows which had fallen, interrupting, to a great extent, the further working of the mines the present season. Provisions were abundant and selling at reasonable prices.

The vote to decide on a Territorial or State organization was held on the 5th inst., resulting in favor of a Territorial organization by nearly a two-thirds vote. Denver city polled 642 votes, only seventy of which were in favor of a State organization. Aurora city polled 492 votes, giving a majority of two to one in favor of a Territorial organization.

We have always considered the movement for a State organization for Jefferson, as quixotic. The people were not prepared for it, and by the recent vote have so expressed themselves. An Act organizing that Territory, will, no doubt, be passed by Congress at an early day of the coming session.

On Monday evening of election day, Sept. 5th, a man named Van Orval was hung at Golden City, fourteen miles west from Denver. He was a gambler, a notorious and desperate character, and had been notified to leave the Territory. He had previously threatened the life of two respectable citizens, and on the evening above named had loaded his pistol for that purpose and discharged it at them without accomplishing his object. He was immediately arrested, tried by miners' court and hung.

We also learn that the party of Indians who murdered Dr. Shank and Mr. Kennedy, in July last in the mountains, were headed by a notorious chief of the Utah Indians. Kit Carson, agent of these hostile Indians, had gathered full particulars of the outrages committed, and had notified the chiefs of all the tribes that all annuities would be withheld from them until the recreant and belligerent members of the tribes were given up for punishment, and full indemnification agreed to against future depredations.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—This mammoth it is said, will start from the Thames on her trial trip, on the 3d of September. If that be satisfactory she will forthwith prepare for a trip to Portland in Maine. The New York Herald says of her:

One feature in her construction alluded to is novel and remarkable. Her entire upper deck, measuring seven hundred feet in length, or, as it is described by our correspondent, an acre of land elongated to an oval—is flush from stern to stern, without poop or house to obstruct the view—nothing but the masts, wheelhouse for the helmsman and staircase—so that her commander, standing on the paddle box, can survey every inch of that vast area, and with a wave of his hand convey his orders to every officer on duty. Her speed is estimated at twenty miles an hour, and her dimensions equal to the accommodation of the population of a moderate sized town. The port from which she is to start on her first voyage remains yet undetermined; but Mr. John Orrel Lever, "the man for Galway," has made the magnificent offer of $100,000 for the privilege of running her from that point. Should her speed equal the calculations of her construction, she will be able to make the voyage from Galway to New York, a distance of 2,735 miles, within a week, probably within six days.

FROM VENEZUELA.—By the arrival of the bark Venus, Capt. Atkinson, we have advice from Curacao to the 11th inst. Affairs at Venezuela were about the same as at previous advices. There had been several battles, in which the Federal party were successful, but the Government had gained Laguyra. Gen. Flores, of the Federalists, gained a complete victory over the Government at Barquesimento.

From the N. Y. Herald of the 16th.

Distressing Calamity at Hoboken.

Destruction of the Harmonia Hotel by fire—Suffocation of one of the proprietors and his three daughters—Coroner's Inquest, &c., &c.

One of the most distressing occurrences we have had to record for some time, transpired about 3 o'clock yesterday morning in the quiet city of Hoboken, in the destruction of the well-known Harmonia Hotel, on Hudson st., and the suffocation of Mr. Charles Baese, the senior proprietor, and three of his daughters, Anna Theodora, Clara and Sophia. It appears from the evidence of Ferdinand Knapp, the junior partner before the Coroner's jury, that an unusually hot fire was kept burning throughout the day in the basement, and it is supposed to have ignited a pile of ball-room benches and tables and so communicated fire to the building. The bodies were conveyed to an unoccupied building in the rear of Police Justice Crane's, on Washington street, where they now remain. Mrs. Baese is uninjured; but her nervous system is so shattered that she is unable to converse with any one. Miss Mary Baese, the eldest daughter, in jumping from her bedroom window to the piazza on the second floor, came in contact with a projecting window shutter and was thrown against the window, lacerating her face, neck, arms and legs in a shocking manner. They are both lying at the hospitable residence of Mr. John W. Harring, No. 77, Hudson terrace, under medical treatment.

The window looking out from Mr. Baese's room into the ball-room was found wide open, so that his apartment must have very soon filled with smoke. He evidently struggled very hard, as the blood was found to have rushed so violently to his head as to force itself from his nostrils. The unfortunate children died easy, as there is not a contortion of the body or face to show to the contrary. They lay in their little bed as though quietly asleep when found.

As soon as that alarm was given, Engine Company No. 1 was quickly on the spot, but the density of the smoke almost prevented any access to the building. The house was found to be closed in every part, front and rear, and filled with smoke. Mr. Harring, residing in an adjoining building, was first awakened by the screaming of Miss Mary Baese, from her chamber window, crying "For God's sake, save us!—save us!—save us!" Mr. Harring ran out upon the balcony of his residence and saw smoke issuing from the second and third-story windows of the hotel, and hearing the young lady's screams, ordered her to jump upon the balcony below, which she did. He then procured a ladder and rescued Mrs. Baese, but not being acquainted with the plan of the upper part of the house, could not tell where to look for the rest of the family. Mr. Knapp was awakened by the cries of the children, and jumping out of his bed discovered smoke in his room. Upon opening the door a perfect avalanche of smoke rushed in upon him and almost suffocated him. He heard Mr. Baese encourage the children and would have ventured to them but for the smoke. Returning to his room he threw up the window and jumped out upon the balcony, thus saving his life.

The affair has thrown a gloom over the entire city, where Mr. Baese was everywhere known and highly respected. He was also proprietor of the eating saloon at No. 2 Barclay street, a resort for merchants and clerks in the neighborhood, and had been in charge of it the day before. Every effort was made by the Fire Department and citizens generally who distinguished themselves in trying to brave the dangers of the fire and save the inmates.

HENRY CLAY ON WM. H. SEWARD.—The following opinion of Henry Clay will be of interest to old line Whigs, and may show why Sewardism is shifting its foundations, and why it broke up the old Whig party. It was expressed in a letter written by him on the 16th of March, 1850, to Hon. James Harlan, relative to the Fillmore administration;

I have never before seen such an administration. There is very little co-operation or concord between the two ends of the avenue; there is not, I believe, a prominent Whig in either house that has any confidential intercourse with the Executive. Mr. Seward, it is said, has, but his late abolition speech has, I presume, cut him off from any such intercourse, as it has eradicated the respect of almost all men for him.

WHAT THE OPPOSITION HAS DONE.—The opposition to the Democracy, since the organization of the government, has passed the following laws:

The "Alien law," in 1798, giving to the President—John Adams, the power to order from the country any unnaturalized foreigner he might deem a suspicious person.

The "Sedition law," passed in 1798, by which any person who wrote or published anything against the President or members of Congress, was liable to be heavily fined and imprisoned on conviction in the United States Courts.

An act passed in 1798, by which any person who wrote or published anything against the President or members of Congress, was liable to be heavily fined and imprisoned on conviction in the United States Courts.

An act passed in 1798 extending the term of naturalization of foreigners from four years to fourteen.

They passed the general Bankrupt law in 1841, which enabled all persons who desired to do so, to repudiate all old debts.

They favored the high tariff of 1842, taxed the farmers, mechanics and laboring men, and those engaged in commerce, heavily, for the benefit of a few manufacturers, in New England.

These are all the important laws the opposition ever passed. Every one of them was repealed in less than four years after its passage.

The opposition to Democracy was never continued in power by the people more than one term.

BY THE EASTERN MAIL.

[From the New York Herald of Sept. 29th.]
Despatches from our Minister and Commodore in China, &c.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28, 1850.

It is understood that despatches have been received at the Department of State from our Minister in China, Mr. Ward, dated July 4, after the battle, and that Chinese authorities had assured Mr. Ward that on the next day, July 5, they would be ready, at the mouth of the Peiho, to receive and convey him to Peking for the purpose of exchanging ratifications of the treaty.

It is doubtful, however, whether they meant to fulfil this engagement. Our Minister did not believe they would. What effect the recent battle may have on the treaty, of course is not known, as his despatches were dated the day after the battle. Whether the Chinese will consider the United States as parties after the course of Commodore Tatnall in rendering aid to the British Admiral, remains to be seen. That he did render aid, and with the approval of our Minister, is true. Nothing farther can be known until additional despatches are received.

The recent news from China has produced quite a sensation in diplomatic circles here. Despatches were received to-day at the Department of State from Mr. Campbell, Boundary Commissioner at San Juan. He reports everything quiet, and does not apprehend any further difficulty or fighting. He announces that negotiations are broken off between him and the British Commissioner. He maintains that our right to the island is clear and conclusive.

Minister McLane arrived here this evening, and is stopping at Willard's.

THE GENERAL NEWSPAPER DESPATCH.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 29, 1850.

The Secretary of the Navy has recently made arrangements for the reception of an additional number of active-midshipmen at the Naval Academy—from thirty to forty of them. Members of Congress from districts which have been the longest time without appointments as far back as 1855 will be requested to make nominations of youths for admission, in accordance with the existing law.

The Treasury receipts for the week ending on Monday were $1,599,000. The drafts paid amounted to $1,403,000, and the drafts issued to $348,000. The amount subject to draft was $5,163,459, an increase over last week of more than $758,000, or a million within the last two weeks.

Capt. M. S. Miller has been ordered to Fort Monroe, to assume the duties of Assistant Quartermaster General at that point, in place of Chapman, deceased.

The President has appointed Wm. C. Jones Judge of the United States Court for the Northern and Southern districts of Alabama, vice Galve, deceased. The names of at least ten other gentlemen had been mentioned in connection with that office.

General Jesup, who was seriously sick in New York, has returned to Washington. He is convalescent.

The Secretary of the Treasury has an appeal decided that "felt slipper patterns," as described by the impost, the fabric being worsted in whole or part, and also "Italian cloth" imported as button stuff, but believed it may be used for other purposes, are both dutiable at 10 per centum. The appellants claimed that they should be entered at four per centum, but the articles were imported in the piece and not cut in slips or separate patterns. He also decided that "traveling rugs" are as durable as manufactures of wool or wearing apparel at 24 per centum, and not as blankets as claimed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 28.
The Main street canal bridge in this village fell this afternoon, with an immense crowd of people, who were attending the county fair. Eighteen dead bodies have already been taken out, and it is supposed many more are still in the water.

Revolution in Costa Rica.

A letter to the New York Times states that the "revolution in Costa Rica was accomplished on the morning of the 14th August. President Mora was seized while in bed, after the guard had all retired. He was notified by a deputation that he was no longer President, to which he replied, 'Muy bien Señores.' ('Very well, gentlemen.') Half an hour afterwards he was on the road, 'bag and baggage,' to Punta Arenas. It is stated that the revolution was got up by the church party, for the reason that President Mora lately exiled a bishop. Notwithstanding we cannot commend many of the acts of President Mora, we must concede that he has displayed much ability in governing Costa Rica, which is now the most flourishing little republic among the Central American States. He is somewhat of a despot, it is true, but we doubt whether his successors will be any better in this respect.

A DESPERATE DRIVER.—Yesterday morning Lieut. E. F. Beales, of the U. S. Army, while standing on Broadway, beckoned for a stage, desiring to ride up to the Metropolitan Hotel. Calling the driver of one, he found, as it neared him it was not the stage he wanted, and immediately turned to get into another one just along side. As he did so, the driver of the first stage became somewhat enraged because he refused to ride with him, and seizing his whip made several strikes at Lieut. Beales just as he was getting into the stage. One or two of the blows caught him on the back. He at once had the driver arrested, and he was taken before the Mayor, where he gave his name as John Donaldson, stage No. 127. The Mayor committed him in default of $500 bail to answer an assault.

Army Intelligence.

A general Court martial, consisting of ten officers of the army, of different ranks and regiments, is directed to convene at Fort Moultrie, S. C., on the 3d day of October next, for the trial of Lieutenant Otis Tillinghast, First regiment of Artillery.

The troops which have lately been ordered to the Island of San Juan by General Harney, with those who have already been stationed there, are as follows:—Four companies (A, B, D, and M) Fourth Infantry, one company of the Third Artillery, one company Ninth Infantry, and a detachment of sappers and miners. This constitutes, by the latest dates received, the actual force on San Juan; but it appears that by late orders issued by General Harney, he has caused a much larger force to concentrate at the different posts adjacent, and only a few hours sail from San Juan. The available force serving in that region, and at his disposal, are the First regiment Dragoons, a portion of the Third regiment of Artillery, Fourth and Ninth regiments of Infantry.

A leave of absence for six months has been granted Brevet Major Thos. Williams, Fourth Artillery.

A leave of absence to June 1, 1860, for the benefit of his health, is granted to Lieutenant John Gibbon, Fourth Artillery.

RESCUE OF THOMAS BREWER FROM THE U. S. MARSHAL BY THE CHEROKEES.—The U. S. Deputy Marshal some time week before last arrested a half blood Cherokee, by the name of Brewer, for the murder of a white man by the name of Perkins; and on Sunday the 7th inst., as the Marshal and guard were on their way with the prisoner to this state, near Fort Gibson, they were attacked by a party of Indians, about 15 in number, and rescued Brewer from the custody of the Marshal. There is no troops at Fort Gibson, and of course the Marshal could get no assistance.

Brewer, it is said is a witness against Mac Fields, who is also a murderer, and the friends of Fields gave notice to the Marshal of his whereabouts, and had him arrested, and his friends rescued him. Thus matters stand among the Cherokees. The U. S. authorities are set at defiance, and there are no troops to assist the civil authorities in enforcing the intercourse law. Fort Gibson has been abandoned, and now the Indians are bidding defiance to the authority of the officers of the U. S. District Court. Here is a specimen of Indian government, such as we cherish on our border. They have no sympathy with the U. S. and pay no regard to offenders against the laws of the U. S. or of the states.

FURNISHED ROOM TO RENT.

SITUATED ON SECOND EAST TEMPLE STREET, opposite the residence of DR. ANDERSON. For further particulars call immediately at the house where the room is to be had.
W. H. ROCKINGS.

A Postal Incident.

A young man from the rural districts went to the postoffice the other day with a bank note for a dollar's worth of stamps. He was told that paper money was not received. He then went for Spanish quarters.

"We don't receive them now," said the attendant, "for more than twenty cents a piece." The countryman, tho' Uncle Sam might be particular, so he went and obtained a dollar's worth of coppers.

"Now," said he, on returning to the office, and laying down his pile in the window of delivery, "I guess I can suit ye."

The man inside looked at the display of coppers, and coolly replied:

"We never take more than three cents in copper at any one time—it is not a legal tender above that sum."

The countryman looked at the composed official for the space of a minute without stirring, and then belched out:

"Look here, you—ain't you almighty kind of particular, for fellows backed up in such a jail as this 'ere? You don't take only three cents in copper at a time hey? Well then, 'pose you give me three cents worth anyhow."

The official very politely cut him off a single stamp, and passed it out, for which the countryman laid down three cents. He was about to pass away, when the latter cried out:

"Look here you! that ere's one time. Now 'pose you give me three cents worth more on 'em."

Uncle Sam's clerk was not slow in discovering he had caught a Tartar. He turned back to the window and asked:

"How many coppers have you?"

"Well, only about ninety-seven of 'em. I had a hundred of 'em when I began."

"Pass them in," was the gruff reply.

"Pass out your stamps fust, and then I will, but I reckon you don't ketch me again."

The stamps were passed out and the coppers handed over, when the countryman went off saying:

"I 'pose because a fellow holds office under Uncle Sam, he thinks he is smarter'n all creation; but I guess they larn't something that time."

That's a very good joke to read and laugh over in the newspaper, but Uncle Sam is after all about as cute a Yankee as most of his nephews. The fact is, copper is not a legal tender in any sum. Gold and silver are only legal tender, and the latter only to the amount of thirty dollars.

The following amusing incident took place last week upon one of the Ohio river steamboats, and was related to us by an eye-witness. While the boat was lying at Cincinnati, just ready to start for Louisville, a young man came on board leading a blushing damsel by the hand, and approaching the polite clerk in a suppressed voice: "I say," he exclaimed, "me and my wife have just got married, and I'm looking for accommodations." "Looking for a berth?" hastily inquired the clerk—passing tickets out to another passenger. "A berth!" thunder and lightning, no!" gasped the astonished man; "we have just got married; we want a place to stay all night, you know, and—and a bed."

CLERICAL BOX MOT.—A few days ago, says the Buffalo Commercial, one of our eloquent city divines perpetrated a bon mot in his sermon which not a few took, and among others a prominent railroad man seemed to appreciate it. He was preaching upon repentance, and, "said he, 'when the tears of repentance are flowing, substantial proofs of a regenerated life are expected. Only the tears of deep penitence can wash away the sins of life; for I tell you the heavy freight must go by water!'"

"FELLOW-CITIZENS," said a candidate lately, addressing his constituents, "there are three topics which now agitate the public mind in this great State, viz: Slavery, Retrenchment and the Penitentiary. I shall pass over the two first briefly, as my sentiments are already well known, and come at once to the penitentiary where I shall dwell for some time." The gentleman's auditory reminded him that that institution was already crowded he had better leave any vacant apartment there was in it for his opponent.

THE WITCHERY OF LOVE.—A student turns out from college with honors on his head, his mind replete with learning, and not a stir in his affections except for his kindred. A damsel passes his track, and takes his heart along with her, and ten to one that she does not leave her own behind her. How is this phenomenon to be accounted for? A transcendentalist walks out from his library, stockfull of the deepest metaphysics. He finds, on his way, a little satin shoe of the nicest shape, and, before he has time to count ten, some bright-eyed creature, whom he never saw before, takes complete possession of his soul. To what shall we attribute this witchery? A miser of 60 years and several millions sterling, who never did a generous act, sees a blue ribbon neatly fastened with a common brass pin around the waist of a girl not worth a sixpence, and before three days he makes her mistress of all his wealth, and turns out to be a happy, jovial person. Who can give a logical history of this proceeding? A stern warrior, wedded to nothing but strict discipline, for the glory of his country, enters a ball-room in a foreign clime, where he meets a Spanish girl of sixteen, who takes away his old, stout, honest heart with a simple twirl of her fan. Can we get a mathematical demonstration of the maneuvering by which this conquest was effected?

A MOST SINGULAR OCCURRENCE.—We were told the other day of a most strange event which occurred a few days ago in the north part of this county. It seems that a man, whose name we did not hear, recently returned from California, where he had been for several years. His sojourn there had been quite profitable. A week or two ago he reached home, with between $15,000 and $16,000 in gold coin. Feeling it to be unsafe to keep so much money about the house and doubting the honesty of banks, the fortunate gold hunter concluded to deposit it in the same bank from which it was drawn. Looking around he finally discovered an eligible place to hide it, and accordingly did so. Being very suspicious, he never informed his friends of his hiding place. His mother insisted upon knowing, and at her repeated solicitation, he at last promised to take it up and rehide it—taking her along that she might know the spot. Unfortunately, however, the man went out that day riding a young and fractious horse, which becoming frightened, threw him off, and broke his neck. Of course, no one can tell where the money is. Great numbers of persons have been searching for it, but up to the present time unsuccessfully.—Mansfield Herald.

THE DERIVATION OF CREOLE.—The southern journals are discussing the origin and signification of the word Creole. As there is a popular error that the word is applied to a person of European and African blood, it should be remembered that there is no authority for it. The word was originally used to designate the children of Spanish parents born in Spanish colonies. In time it was applied to the children of other nations, and people talked of French creoles and Dutch creoles. The word properly signifies now that the person to whom it is applied was born in a country originally colonized by France or Spain, and descended from ancestors residing in that part of the country at or before the time of its transfer to the United States.

NEW GOODS. WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by Dyer, Bro. & Co.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale by Dyer, Bro. & Co.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce.

Ho! for America!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations as REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if HOND & DICKSON are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheap store. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spice, alum, copperas, saltpetre, in oil, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, rope, ginger, mustard, oysters, saucers of every kind, brandy, fruits, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stumps, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of tea, on, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, at many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not only high and another low.

We also have a lot of Am. & celebrated sugar cured Ham, put up expressly for this market.

Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen.

HOND & DICKSON.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints

Bleached do Blue Demins

Brown do White & cold bl'kets

Hickory stripes Canton flannels

Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do

Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables

Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos

Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn

Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread

" napkins Curtain damasks

" table cloths Satinett & cashmeres

Crash, toweling and Cottonades and pant

doilies stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths

White linen bosom shirts Apron checks

Colored calico do Heavy duck (all

Grey flannel do widths)

Red do do Blue & Hick'ry check

Blue do do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered sets

silks " collars & sleeves

Plain all wool delaines " window curtains

Fancy do " edgings and in-

Alexander's kid gloves " linnen handkerf's

Bay state long shawls Plain linnen cambric

Stella and merino do Hem stitched "

Delaines in dress pat- Silk "

terns " cravats and ties

White cambric muslin " Suspenders

Jackonets Swiss Dress Trimmings

Mull & Namssoks

Plaid Jackonet muslins

Plaid cashmere for children

Buck gloves and gantlets

Lace mitts and gloves

Dress lawns and bargees

Plain colored silk Ribbons

Bonnet do

Velvet do

Combs brushes and cutlery

Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY

is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,

Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garment Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods.

41-3m

George Cronyn & Co.

HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of H. S. Eldridge & Co., consisting of

DRY GOODS,

GROCERIES,

HARDWARE, &c.,

beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at

George Cronyn's Oil Stand, near Bishop House, and offer them at retail. They are the public they have put prices at a low price. You are invited to call and examine.

The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Groceries,

Hardware,

Oils, Turpentine,

Alcohol,

Window Glass,

Hay and Manure Forks,

Shovels, Spades,

Scythes and Snaths,

Cotton Yarn,

Dye-Staffs, &c.

Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of all kinds received. [41-1f]

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert & Gerrish, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be here all the time. Our friends will please call and see us.

39-1f

GILBERT & GERRISH.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

Dyer, Bro. & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business.

R. H. DYER.

39-1f

GILBERT & GERRISH.

To the Travelling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a daily line of stages running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a. m., and arriving at 2 p. m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers; therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Livery May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.

Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the Postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

All pack-gea weighing under 10 pounds will be taken for 50 cents each.

All over 10 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5-cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end, of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

PARNEMIO A. JACKMAN, Proprietor.

LAST TRAIN, AND BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS

WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store house recently occupied by C. H. BASSETT.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR STOCK OF GOODS CAN NOT BE SURPASSED in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF FINE

DRESS GOODS

ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS, CASHMERES, MERINOS,

"ALPACAS, DELAINES, LAWNS,

GINGHAMS, CHAMBRAYS, JACONET AND SWISS MUSLINS, CRINOLINE, CHALIS, RIBBONS, VELVETS,

AND ALL SORTS OF TRIMMINGS.

SHAWLS, CLOAKS, MANTILLAS, PARASOLS,

and every variety of LADIES' GOODS.

CLOTHS, SATINETTS, CASHMERES, TWEEDS, CORDUOYS, BOOTS AND SHOES,

HATS AND CAPS, AND READY-MADE CLOTHING.

GROCERIES AND DYE STUFFS.

A full list of Yankee notions.

Don't forget Good and Cheap.

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS.

26-1f.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps

Clothing, &c.

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at Cost and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.

40-1f

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN DRY GOODS, Groceries & Liquors;

—ALSO— OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,

AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

37-1f

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF

Dry Goods, Liquors,

Hats & Caps, Boots & Shoes,

Clothing, Hardware,

Outfitting Goods, Harness, Saddles, & Bridles,

which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the people of this section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,

75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MULES; 250 fine AMERICAN WORK CATTLE; one fine MARESE JACK; one fine STALLION. For sale by

[35-1f]

C. A. PERRY & CO.

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their

NEW STORE RO

ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDIZE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants.

THE VALLEY TANT.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1859.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 51

WISHING.

BY JOHN G. SAGE.

Of all amusements of the mind,
From logic down to fishing,
There isn't one that you can find
So very cheap as "wishing!"
A very choice diversion too,
If not but rightly used it,
And not, as we are apt to do,
Pervert it and abuse it.

I wish—a very common wish indeed—
My purse was somewhat fatter,
That I might cheer the child in need,
And not my pride to flatter;
That I might make oppression reel,
As only gold can make it,
And break the tyrant's rod of steel,
As only gold can break it.

I wish that sympathy and love,
And every human passion,
That has its origin above,
Would come and keep in fashion—
That scorn, and jealousy, and hate,
And every base emotion,
Was buried fifty fathoms deep
Beneath the waves of ocean.

I wish that friends were always true,
And motives always purer;
I wish the good were not so few,
I wish the bad were fewer;
I wish that persons ne'er forgot
To heed their pious teaching;
I wish that practising was not
So different from preaching.

I wish that modern worth might be
Appraised with truth and candor,
I wish that innocence were free
From treachery and slander;
I wish that men their vows would mind,
That women ne'er were rovers;
I wish that wives were always kind,
And husbands, always lovers.

I wish—in fine—that joy and mirth,
And every good ideal,
May come erewhile throughout the earth,
To be the glorious real—
Till God shall every creature bless
With his supremest blessing,
And hope be lost in happiness,
And wishing be possessing.

[From the Weekly Constitution.]

The Rise and Progress of our Country.

TO WHOM ARE WE INDEBTED FOR ITS GREATNESS.

Under Providence, the people of this country are indebted to the Democratic party for its present exalted position among the nations of the earth, and for the peace, liberty, and protection, in person and property, which they enjoy at home and abroad. Considering the geographical position, population, and resources of the confederacy at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and looking at them by comparison with their present development, the mind of every reader of past or contemporaneous history must be convinced that the progress and growth of the United States has, in its extent, since it became a nation, surpassed that of any other. This delicious comparison establishes the unmistakable fact that the institutions of the government of this great Republic were founded in wisdom, and that they have been adhered to and successfully carried out by the party and the men who have almost uninterruptedly had the control and management of its affairs from the adoption of the Constitution to the present day. And what party and what men have exercised that control and direction? The answer cannot be controverted. The Democratic party, its measures, and its men have placed the Republic in the proud and prosperous position it now occupies. To what party and to whom are we indebted for the acquisition of Louisiana, Florida, Texas, New Mexico, and California? Can any one be found having the hardihood to deny to the Democracy the credit of these invaluable extensions of the area of freedom? What single step in advancement of the general welfare of the country has been made that has not originated with, and been executed by, the energy and perseverance of that great party, ever true to the fundamental principles of our matchless Constitution? The Democratic party is emphatically the party of progress. Its course is steadily upward and onward. It never recedes from a position attained or gained in the march of liberal ideas and the expansion of the rights of man as proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence. The man who has no affiliation with our democratic institutions may talk glibly in favor of the despotic government of Europe; and some superficial minds may be dazzled by the pomp and glittering surroundings with which Emperors and Kings are encircled, but the great mass of the American people are deeply imbued with feelings of unchangeable attachment to our country, its liberties, and its laws. It is to this large body of our citizens we address ourselves when asking their attention to a retrospect of the political history of the past and present. It will show them that with a slight interregnum the control of the Federal Government has been in the hands of the Democratic party; and to that party it is under obligation for the maturation of all measures of foreign and domestic policy which have resulted in the promotion and safety of the Union and the peace and happiness of its citizens.

In no instance has the opposition to the Democratic party succeeded in gaining a second consecutive triumph in a national campaign; and, indeed, the same remark would apply to their successes in some of the States—Pennsylvania, for instance. There the opposition never have been able to retain power over one gubernatorial term after they obtained it; and in all cases the second year of their administration found a large democratic majority in the legislative branch of the government against them. Other instances, both of State and municipal governments, might be cited to show that none other than an administration of public affairs based upon sound democratic principles can succeed for any length of time in this country. The people are too intelligent to be permanently deluded from their true faith and sound political doctrines by the arts and wiles of tricksters upon the stage of public life, and they are sufficiently brave and self-reliant when the occasion requires it to arise in their strength and cast off the treasonable incubus which, in some localities, the dark spirit of "know-nothingism" settled upon them. The grand experiment of the capability of man for self-government, so far at least as this country is concerned, has been effectually demonstrated. Under the prestige and guidance of democratic administrations it has successfully passed all the trials to which nationalities are subject. Foreign wars and intestine dissensions have been met, the former triumphantly terminated, and the latter healed or quelled. No speck now darkens the bright future of the political national horizon, except the conflicting schemes of the fragments of parties heretofore arrayed against the ascendancy of democracy, and who are endeavoring to combine their incongruous forces to accomplish its defeat in the approaching presidential canvass; and what it may be asked, are the grounds upon which they come before the people for their suffrages? They present in reality but two—The "Republicans" desire the abolition of slavery; in other words, to destroy the compromises of the Constitution, and thereby break up and dissolve the Union, which would be the inevitable result of the consummation of their fanatical policy. The "know-nothings" desire the deprivation of the rights of citizenship to foreigners which is guaranteed to them by our institutions and by wisdom and sound policy, as the experience of the past has proved. These two factions, when combined, as their recent legislation in Massachusetts shows, also desire the elevation of the social and political status of the negro over that of the white man who may have been born in the Old World and chooses to make his home in and link his fortunes with those of the people of the United States.

If there are any other measure than those we have mentioned entertained by the "opposition," we have been unable to discover them either in the speeches of their leaders or in the columns of their newspapers. With such issues to be passed upon by the enlightened judgment of the voters, the friends of the Constitution and Union need feel no apprehension in the perpetuity of democratic principles in the coming contest.

[From the Correspondence of the N. Y. Herald]

Interesting from Venezuela.

Capture of Lagunayra by the Government, after a battle of twelve hours.

PUERTO CABELLO, Sept. 6, 1859.

It is with great pleasure that I transmit to you the news of the latest events in this country, so favorable to the cause of liberty and civilization.

I also send the latest newspapers, which will furnish details of the capture of Lagunayra by the government troops, after twelve hours hard fighting. The capture of Maracay, and subsequent defence of the same by the government troops against its enemies; the capture of two Dutch vessels with armaments of war for the revolutionists; and arrest of the British Consul for implication in the revolution.

The troops from this city, together with the marines, landed at Maento 400 strong, and assailed Lagunayra from the east, while the fleet, composed of nine sailing vessels and one steamer, mounting thirty guns, bombarded the port in every direction. 2,600 men from Caracas made a simultaneous attack at various points to the west of the port. The bravery of our soldiers was remarkable, and merited the praise even of foreign vessels in port, among them a Spanish man-of-war.

The Zouave plan of charge was adopted by our troops on this occasion, and after one discharge they made a terrific assault, a la bayonette, not, however, without being repulsed several times; but, undiscouraged, renewed the attack with final success. Five hundred men were placed hors de combat, four hundred prisoners were taken, besides ammunition, &c. Aguado, the chief, with about one hundred men, managed to escape during the night, but was subsequently captured and immediately put to death.

We lost one of our vessels which ventured too near; and was driven ashore, notwithstanding every effort to save her.

At Maracay, 150 men of our troops, commanded by Menendez, captured that city after a severe struggle.

The city of Baul, defended by two hundred men, under the brave F. L. Vasquez, was attacked on the 20th ult. by the revolutionists, 600 strong, under C. Perez and Felix Puerto, who were repulsed with a loss of 150 men, and on the 28th a new attack met with a similar fate.

The troops from Caracas that made the assault upon Lagunayra were commanded by the brave Colonels, U. V. De las Casas and J. M. Rubin; those of Puerto Cabello by Luis Ustariz. Among the killed on this occasion we find young men of the first families of Caracas, and whose loss will be generally deplored in the country. Nicholas Rebolledo, J. De J. Gonzales, Gregorio Avendaño and Elias Mocato, are among them.

Thus we have to rejoice over a victory that will undoubtedly lay the formation of a durable and long period of peace in this country, once more under a civilized and enlightened administration, composed of the first and ablest men of the country, whose names embellish with their deeds every page of its history.

Army Intelligence.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 19.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJ. GEN.'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, AUGUST 16, 1859.

The following orders received from the War Department, are published for the government of all concerned:

I. The attitude of a tribe or band of Indians in the Military Department where it abides, or which it most frequently, will determine the relations in which it shall be held in other departments. If hostile there, it will be treated accordingly wherever found; and no peace will be concluded with such hostile Indians, except by authorities of the Military Department to which they belong. The troops of one Department may, in a pursuit, carry their operations against the hostile Indians belonging to it into the limits of a neighboring Department.

They may also pursue into the latter Indians belonging to it, which are known just to have committed depredations within the boundaries of the former; but, in this case, if the band or tribe be friendly, the pursuit will be confined strictly to the object of arresting or punishing the particular offenders themselves, and other members will not be molested. If the band is to be held collectively responsible for the acts of some of its members, it must be first through the authority of the Military Department to which it belongs.

II. The third paragraph of "General Orders," No. 14, of June 23d, 1859, is corrected, to read as follows:

Enlisted men serving with troops, will not be allowed commutation of rations otherwise than as provided in paragraph 1,093, Regulations. Paragraph 7, of "General Orders," No. 11, will be interpreted accordingly.

III. Enlisted men who lose, or dispose of the Colt's revolver pistols entrusted to their care, will hereafter be charged forty dollars in each case; that being the amount of pecuniary damage sustained by the United States, as estimated by the Ordnance Department.

IV. Paragraph 459, General Regulations, is modified to read as follows:

Officers on detached duty will report monthly to the commanders of their posts, of their regiments or corps, and to the Adjutant General. Such reports will give the officer's station, the nature of his duty, and the authority placing him thereon.

V. The attention of officers of the army is directed to the reports required by paragraphs 171 and 180 General Regulations, to be made when absent with leave.

By order of the Secretary of War.
E. D. TOWNSEND, Asst. Adj. Gen.

In the Massachusetts Democratic State Convention, George B. Loring (Douglas candidate) was elected permanent president, receiving 900 votes out of 1,300.

It will be seen that the following resolution, adopted, distinctly and decidedly approves the doctrine of popular sovereignty.

"Resolved, That we find no necessity for any addition or change in the great doctrine of popular sovereignty as declared by the Massachusetts Democratic resolves in 1848, that we are opposed to the exercise of any jurisdiction by Congress over the matter of slavery in the territories, but are in favor of leaving to the people who inhabit them the right to establish and regulate their own domestic institutions under the general principles of our Constitution."

Benjamin F. Butler of Lowell, was nominated for Governor, and S. C. Bemis, of Springfield, for Lieut. Governor. The four delegates at large to the National Convention are Caleb Cushing, Isaac Davis, Oliver Stevens and James S. Whitney. The convention endorsed the Administration.

Hon. B. F. Hallet, in his address to the Convention, spoke like a patriot. He said:

We must go into that convention, and carrying our honest preferences with us, avow them frankly; but if we cannot secure the man of our choice, we must then agree upon a fair compromise, and secure the man who will be the choice of the Union. And I tell you we shall elect that man. [Applause.] And I say further, that if Stephen A. Douglas should be that candidate, he will sweep the country in triumph. On the other hand, (and I think I may pledge Mr. Douglas to this position, honorable as he is, loving as he does the Democratic party.) I say to you, that if the result of that convention shall be the nomination of any other man than Stephen A. Douglas, he will be at the head of the champions who will support that nomination; and in the election of that nominee, the party may owe more to his individual and powerful influence than to any other man in the Union. Therefore, I say that such a Democrat is not the man we want to throw overboard, or want to be in conflict with, while, at the same time, he is not a man we would force to act against his own wishes, his own convictions. I once heard that distinguished statesman say, when he was advocating a measure which it was thought was endangering the Democratic party:—"Great God! do I want to destroy the Democratic party? Where would be my heritage, if it is not there? I should be like the prodigal who spent his heritage. If I have anything or can expect anything, it is from the Democratic party; and am I to weaken that party, so that neither I nor any other man can ever receive its successful support?"

Therefore, we stand on the great principle of non-interference and fidelity to the Constitution and laws of the Union, and on these issues we shall be brought directly in conflict with this Republican party, that undertakes to maintain its sectional, geographical policy, and that declares, as its fundamental principle, that the two sections of the country—slavery and anti-slavery—cannot live together in union, although they know they have lived so and prospered gloriously over seventy years under the Constitution our fathers adopted, and therefore we repel that attempt at open war upon the integrity of the nation; and while we claim all the Northern rights, yielding nothing unjust to the South, putting into the national platform no plank in reference to the re-opening of the African Slave-trade, and no slave code for the territories, we take our stand upon the doctrine of non-intervention, constitutional popular sovereignty, and the triumph of the people. [Loud applause.]

The canvass now progressing in Iowa has assumed very much the form of the Ohio canvass. Gen. Dodge, the Democratic candidate for governor, is straight out for popular sovereignty. In a speech made the other day in Dubuque, Gen. Dodge emphatically declared for popular sovereignty, and avowed his attachment to, and admiration of, Senator Douglas.

Wisconsin is in the same line; and so is Minnesota. The Democratic candidates for governor in both these States stand square and fair on the popular sovereignty platform.

Good news also comes to us from Indiana. In all probability, says the Chicago Times, Hendricks will be nominated at the Indiana State Democratic convention, to which delegates are now being elected; but whether he is, or the choice falls to Dunham, it is certain that he is making his canvass as a friend of popular sovereignty.

WALKING ON WATER.—On Saturday afternoon Mr. Hicock performed his promised feat of walking on water, in presence of about a score of witnesses. The River Don, near the Don Station, was the scene of this unrivaled exploit. A little after three o'clock three or four members of the press, with Mr. Goodenough, proceeded to the appointed spot, where Mr. Hicock was waiting, having come in a boat through the Bay. He was accompanied by another person in the boat. As the few spectators who had been invited to witness this preliminary trial approached the river, they saw Mr. Hicock strolling away upon the water, his companion resting quietly in the boat at a distance. He walked a distance of two or three hundred yards with complete success, when the spectators, of whom the number had been increased by the knowledge of what was going on obtaining circulation at the station, being satisfied with the success of the operation, desired him to desist. He walks on water-shoes, as the Indians do on snow-shoes, and did not sink in more than six or seven inches. The watershoes which he used are the first ever made; and as the idea of walking on water did not strike him till a fortnight ago, he had but little time to practice. He showed no difficulty, however, in keeping his equilibrium, sometimes with a wand, and sometimes with nothing in his hand. He sat astride the boat occasionally, his water-shoes hanging over the sides. This fact is clearly established—walking on the water is possible. The art is in its infancy, and who shall say to what perfection it may be brought?—Toronto Globe.

FROM NEW MEXICO AND THE PLAINS.—The Santa Fe Mail arrived yesterday. It brings intelligence of trouble with the Kiowa Indians at Peacock's trading post (Allison's Rancho) on the Arkansas. It appears that the Indians had been troublesome for some days, during which time Maj. Donelson, with a detachment of troops arrived, and in the effort to quiet the Indians one was killed, another being detained as a prisoner. The men in charge of the fort were about to leave. They think they could have reconciled the Indians had not the killing taken place.

The mail also brings the account of a duel to take place between Hon. M. A. Otero, delegate to Congress from New Mexico, and Judge Watts. Sam. J. Jones (Sheriff) formerly of this County, was the second of Otero, and Frank Green was the second of Judge Watts. The fight was to take place in Arizona. The overland mail has brought the results of the meeting, three shots being exchanged, when the parties were withdrawn from the field, the difficulty remaining unsettled. They fought with navy revolvers at fifteen paces. No one injured. —Journal of Commerce, Kansas City, Mo.

SENTENCE OF THORNTON.—Jos. W. Thornton was taken before Judge Clever yesterday morning, and by him sentenced to be executed on Friday, the 11th day of November next. He made no reply in response to the usual question, propounded before sentence was passed. —St. Louis Herald.

Terrible Explosion on the Great Eastern.

On the afternoon of the 9th, when the Great Eastern was off Hastings, a feed pipe casing in the forward tunnel, which had been introduced on the ground of economy in heat and to keep the heat of the funnels from the cabin, exploded with terrific force, blowing the funnel into the air and tearing to pieces the grand saloon and lower deck cabins, through which the funnel passed, and otherwise doing great damage to the internal fittings.

Great consternation prevailed on board, but prompt efforts were made to get at the unfortunate men in the engineering department, who were either buried in the rubbish or prostrated by the steam.

Three firemen were found in a dying state, and soon expired, while eight others were injured, two of whom subsequently died.

One fireman was lost overboard, having either fallen into the water or jumped into it to escape scalding.

The injured men were generally progressing favorably, although two or three of them were in a precarious condition.

The numerous guests on board had only quitted the grand saloon, through which the funnel passed, and in which they had been dining a few minutes before the explosion took place. But for this, the consequences would have been most serious.

The explosion is stated to have probably been one of the most terrific which a vessel has ever survived, and which none in the world could have withstood save a structure of such marvellous strength as the Great Eastern. She not only resisted it—her frame sustaining no injury whatever—but it made so little difference in the movements of the vessel that the engines were never once stopped till she reached Portland.

It is asserted that great objections had been made to the casing around the funnels, but the directors persisted in adopting the plan notwithstanding it had been tried and abandoned in the Collins and other steamers.

The Coroner's inquest was commenced at Weymouth on the 12th, and the evidence clearly showed the cause of the explosion to be—

Firstly, the supply of the boilers through the water jacket of the funnel was stopped because of a failure in the auxiliary pumping power.

Secondly, a stand pipe, which acts as a safety valve, had a tap in it when the casing was hydraulically tested, and that tap was turned, apparently intentionally, so that the pipe was useless.

The inquest was adjourned till the 17th. Prior to the accident the performance of the vessel was most satisfactory, and she was almost without motion while large vessels in her vicinity were pitching and tossing in a stormy sea.

A survey of the vessel had been held, and estimates sent in to forthwith to repair the damage at a cost of not more than £5,000, the injury being far less considerable than was at first supposed.

Little if any delay would take place in the departure of the ship on her first voyage, but a rumor prevailed that she would not proceed to Holyhead, but sail direct from Portland.

The accident caused a slight decline in the shares of the company, but did not influence general confidence in the ship. —N. Y. Herald.

Dr. Robert M. Graham, says the N. York Weekly Day Book, who killed Col. Loring at the St Nicholas hotel, in 1854, and who was tried, convicted, imprisoned at Sing Sing, and pardoned by Gov. Clark, was shot in an affray at New Orleans on the 19th, by Eanest Toledune. Dr. Graham died from the effects of his wounds.

Our readers will recollect the killing of Dr. Beddo, by Daniel Hutchinson, in Brunswick not long since; the committal of Hutchinson to the Fayette jail; his subsequent indictment by the Grand Jury, and his recriminal to await a trial. It seems Hutchinson was engaged to be married to Miss Maggie McHome, a young lady whom many of our citizens will recollect as having once been an assistant teacher in our Female Seminary, and that it was stated he went to Brunswick, just previous to the killing, to clear up some matters which it is not necessary to mention, to the end that he might marry and re-settle himself in that place. The difficulty which led to the killing of Dr. Beddo, grew out of these matters, and he went to jail, as before stated. Last Thursday evening, Miss McHome arrived here on the steamer "Perry," and immediately proceeded to Fayette. On Sunday morning, at the residence of Sheriff McCrary, Mr. Hutchinson and Miss McHome were united in marriage by Rev. W. T. Lucky, and she left for Brunswick the same evening.

It was a singular marriage, and whatever persons may think or say of it, all will admire the true devotion of the woman to the man of her choice. But few women would have taken the step under the circumstances, and fewer men would have followed the woman of their choice to the prison, and united their destinies with her, had she been similarly situated. —Glasgow Times.

A Hoosier expresses his determination to visit his "duke" in the following emphatic style:

My love she is my heart's desire,
Her name it is Miss Betsy;
I'll go and see her this very night,
If God Almighty will let me.

THE VALLEY TAN.

STEPHEN DeWOLFE, Editor.

Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1859.

THE VALLEY TAN.

The first volume of the Valley Tan will expire with our next issue. With the commencement of the new volume the price of the paper will be reduced to six dollars per annum, to subscribers paying in advance, instead of eight dollars, the price heretofore charged. We trust to receive with this reduction in the terms of our paper a large addition to our list of subscribers; and we can earnestly upon our friends at Camp Floyd, and also in this city, who feel an interest in the continuation of an independent and "gentle" paper in this Territory, to renew at once their subscription; and obtain for us as many new subscribers as possible. Until other arrangements can be made, Mr. J. Harper, Post Master at Camp Floyd, will confer a favor by receiving subscriptions and forwarding the names of all new subscribers at Camp Floyd. No pains will be spared to make the Valley Tan a readable sheet, and a faithful chronicler of all interesting and important events transpiring in Utah. All communications for the paper should be addressed to the Editor, in this city.

The News by the Late Mail.

The news received by the last Eastern mail is interesting, and in some respects important. The foreign item of greatest interest and importance is probably the attack made by the Chinese upon the English and French fleet in ascending the Peiho, while conveying the ambassadors of the latter nation to Peking to ratify the treaty of Kien-tsin, entered into with the Chinese some time since. The perfidy of this attack on the part of the Chinese, and the destruction to life and property which resulted, will no doubt lead to a renewal of hostilities with the Chinese; by the French and English, in which case we may soon expect to hear that the celestial have again been compelled to sue for peace, and to enter into new treaty stipulations, which they will without doubt again violate, as soon as interests prompt, or the force which compelled submission, is withdrawn. We have thought that this quality of our celestial neighbors eminently fitted them to become members of the Mormon fraternity, and we humbly suggest to the leaders of "this people" to send a few missionaries to China for the purpose of converting that benighted race over to the doctrines of the "Latter Day Saints," or if this cannot be effected, owing to the stubbornness with which the celestials cling to traditions, perhaps the followers of Confucius and Joseph Smith might affect a compromise, and unite the mysteries of the endowment, with the worship of the Grand Lama, in which case we may expect to hear of the fulfillment of modern prophecy concerning the conversion of the world to the new faith. We give elsewhere an account of the attack made by the Chinese upon the fleet referred to, with the losses which resulted. A portion of the English Press, without probably the slightest foundation for the charge, have accused the United States commissioner to China, the Hon. Mr. Ward, of some complicity in the treachery of the Chinese. This charge is so doubtful prompted by the rivalry and envy felt at the greater success and better reception which Mr. Ward has received from the Chinese. It is generally believed that the Russian ambassador encouraged the Chinese to attack the English fleet, if Russian soldiers did not actually man the Chinese batteries.

The steamship Great Eastern, during her trial trip met with an accident in the bursting of a feed-pipe tunnel connected with the boiler. The explosion killed six of the hands employed on the vessel, and wounded several others; besides producing great damage to looking glasses and fine furniture in one of her magnificent saloons. The passengers were fortunately or providentially all out of the cabin in which the chief damage occurred, with the exception of a little girl—a daughter of the captain—and she was uninjured. If we may credit the newspapers in regard to the explosion, it was several hours after it took place, before it became known to all the guests and passengers on board.

It was expected that the damage caused by the explosion would be repaired in two weeks time, and that this floating monster would depart on her first trip for our shores. It was not a determined point at what American port she would enter. Some obstruction to the entrance of the harbor of N. York, it was feared, would prevent her from making that city the point of entry. Portland, Me., and Norfolk, Va., have been both spoken of as the points at which she might come to land if it was found impracticable to enter the harbor of New York, which is her natural and appropriate destination.

In the United States the event of most public interest that has transpired since the last mail was received, is the departure of Gen. Scott to the Pacific coast, to adjust, if possible, the difficulty growing out of the occupation of the San Juan Island by the U. States troops under Gen. Harney. Gen. Scott left New York on the 24th of September, on the Star of the West, for the Isthmus, and will proceed immediately on to the scene of our late disturbances, when it is hoped that his prudence and firmness will quickly lead to the restoration of former amicable feelings between our Government and that of Great Britain, until this new boundary dispute can be definitely settled by treaty arrangement. We copy elsewhere in our paper an article from the N. Y. Herald, vindicating our claim to the island in dispute. We also present an article copied from the London Post, the government organ of Great Britain, vindicating the British claim to the island. Which is right and which is wrong, it is difficult, under the conflicting and contradictory claims, to decide.

The political press, and politicians of the country are extensively engaged in hatching platforms and candidates for the next presidency. The list of men who have been in different sections named for that office, is quite too lengthy even to name, much less to canvass their fitness for the station. Among them all, none seem to excite so much enthusiasm in the masses, wherever he goes, as Judge Douglas. His popularity appears on the increase rather than on the wane since his publication in Harper's Magazine. His recent passage through Ohio, and the enthusiastic reception with which he was everywhere received, is a certain index of the estimation which the public place upon his principles, and upon his long and arduous public services in their support. And these demonstrations foreshadow, without a doubt, the enthusiasm with which the masses will enter into his support in case he is nominated by his party for the presidency.

The Execution of Thomas H. Ferguson.

Thomas H. Ferguson, convicted of the murder of Alexander Carpenter, during the late term of the District Court in this city, and who was sentenced by the court to pay with his life the violation of the law which he had committed, was, in conformity with the sentence passed upon him, executed on Friday last, about one o'clock, near the wall, on the north side of this city.

The escort, consisting of a portion of the "Nauvoo Legion," that had been furnished by request as a guard, left the county jail in the city, with the prisoner in charge, about 11 o'clock, A. M. A large crowd of men and boys followed the escort and the wagon containing the condemned man, to the place of execution; but no irregularities, either of word or deed, so far as we have heard took place. We could not help thinking however, on seeing the throng that followed the sad procession, that greater consideration for the unfortunate man who was about to suffer, would have been evinced by taking some other direction to the gallows than the one pursued by those conducting him, even if they desired to witness his execution. On reaching the gallows, the hand-cuffs were removed from his wrists, after which, with his own hands he unscrewed the shackles from his ankles, and then ascended the gallows with apparently a firm and steady step. On reaching the top he engaged for sometime in conversation with one of the gentlemen who defended him during his trial, after which he proceeded to address the throng of persons assembled on all sides of the gallows. His remarks possessed little of interest, and nothing worth recording. He said but little about the crime that he had committed, except that he was stupefied with liquor when the deed was done. He complained some of the unfairness of his trial, alleging that witnesses necessary to his defence were absent, and that the Judge would not postpone the trial till they could be obtained. Afterwards his remarks assumed a desultory and irregular form, and appeared to be made more for the purpose of postponing the fatal moment than for any interest he felt in making them. He seemed to anticipate, until almost the last moment, that a reprieve would be granted to him, or that he would meet with a rescue from some source. After talking for more than half an hour, he requested prayer. Some difficulty and delay was experienced in finding any one willing or suitable to officiate in this ceremony. At length one of the guard came forward and offered prayer, and shortly after the cap was placed over the face of the doomed man—the rope which held the trap was cut, and Thomas H. Ferguson, with a fall of several feet, was launched into eternity with scarcely a struggle. He was no doubt a guilty man, and suffered justly; but as he has expiated his crime with his life, let a mantle of charity, as far as can be, cover the one dark deed of his life, and let us hope that the same sacrifice may plead in his behalf in the ears of that God who tempers justice with mercy. The execution of Ferguson, we have been informed, is the first that has ever taken place in this Territory by a regular judicial sentence. Of the many murders that have taken place here, the perpetrators of them have in all instances escaped, or no notice whatever has been taken of their crime, the general belief being, that they were authorized or commanded by those who wield a despotic power over the lives and actions of the deluded and fanatical people that dwell in this Territory. And though we do not participate in the misguided sympathy of some of our citizens, who would have shielded Ferguson, had it been in their power, from the consequences of his crime, because he was a "gentile," we yet cannot help thinking that his fate would have been different if he had been a professed Mormon.

We are aware that Gibson and Ivie were both Mormons, and that they were both sentenced to death for the crime of murder here, but in their cases the victims were also Mormons. The murderers of McNeill, of Drown and Arnold, of Sargeant Pike, and of Vincent, all of whom were gentiles, or apostates from the "church," are still at large and unpunished. The time and circumstances under which some of these men were murdered, proves beyond a doubt the fact, that, if the men who murdered them were not actually aided in making their escape, little or no effort was made by the public authorities here to arrest them and bring them to punishment.

The Franking Privilege.

The following remarks which we clip from one of our exchanges concerning the use and abuse of the "Franking privilege," appeared originally in the Newark Daily Advertiser.

The subject is one that we have intended advertising to, in connection with the perversion made of the right by the late delegate to Congress from this Territory. Some time during the past summer, two large wagon loads of "Patent Office Reports" and other "Public Documents" were received at the Post Office in this city, which had been franked here during the late session of Congress by the delegate from this Territory. A large pile of these have been till recently, stored in the anti-room of the Post Office, and we presume that they have been removed only for the sake of the room that they occupied. These books are of but little use to any body; and we do not suppose that one man in fifty of those to whom they are sent, here or elsewhere, ever look within them to see what they contain, while the printing of them costs the government an immense sum, and their transportation across the plains costs probably ten fold more. The small class of persons who compose the reading public, seldom feel any interest in examining dry statistics, while the great mass of persons of which every community is composed, take no interest whatever in examining dry details and reports, which can be of interest and use, only to those who are either engaged directly in legislation, or who compile from these dull sources, facts that may be of interest to others. We are not the advocates of penuriousness on the part of our government, but we believe in their using all proper liberality in laying before the public at large, facts, of interest or utility. And the newspaper press, and the published debates of Congress which is provided for by law, are much surer channels to the public mind than the musty tomes that are now distributed with so much expense throughout the country. We hope that the subject will engage the attention of Congress at its forthcoming session.

The enormous abuse of the franking privilege, which ought to be wholly abolished, has consequences which have not been attended to that we are aware of in the recent discussions. The facility of thus sending any and everything by mail, begets another expensive abuse, which is the printing of books and prodigious quantities of matter, that are practically of no public advantage. The legitimate use of the privilege is indeed liable to the same objection, though not in the same degree for which and other reasons we would have it abolished.

This printing of books and documents, as managed in Congress, is stimulated to excess, not because the public want the documents, for they don't, and if they did, would not get them in this way, as now managed, but simply to give a profitable bargain to the public printer, who is expected to divide some of his profits with useful outsiders, and to yield other miscellaneous service to the members of the party in place. Thus, tens of thousands are annually spent for publishing books, which Congress has no business to order to be published, and which members have no business to appropriate to themselves at every term, to the amount of some hundreds of dollars. The whole proceeding is nothing better than putting their hands into the public Treasury, and distributing among themselves a large amount of public plunder, and has been thus regarded by honorable members. Where is the warrant for it? Were it not that three or four hundred Congressmen are equally concerned in the indecent transaction, it can hardly be supposed, that a single individual among them could hold up his head, when detected in appropriating the public property to his private use without compensation. But complicity with hundreds makes them bold.

Is not the salary of three thousand dollars a year, and mileage, a sufficient reward for the services of Representatives and Senators in Congress? If not, then they are at liberty to stay at home, which they can do at any time, and earn as much more as they can; much less we should have said, for many of them probably have never been so well paid, in all their lives before, not reckoning the rich perquisites, which are reported to be enjoyed by many.

Their place, if thus vacated, will be instantly asked for in the proportion of a dozen candidates for every vacant chair. While applicants for office equally well qualified are so numerous and importunate, surely there is no great reason for increasing the wages. Let us wait till Congressmen shall organize a strike.

Horace Greeley, we have been informed, during his recent sojourn here on his way to California, spent an entire week at a private boarding-house in this city, by the invitation of the proprietor. On leaving, he charged his benevolent host $2 in advance for one year's subscription for the "Weekly Tribune." The price of board here is $12 50 per week, but Mr. Greeley received his gratuitously. Mr. Greeley, we believe, is the author of a treatise on "Political Economy," and if we may judge from the management of his private affairs, it is a subject that he has thoroughly mastered.

Judge Douglas on Woman's Rights.

There is a great deal of good humor and innocent sarcasm and rally in the following letter from Judge Douglas to Mrs. Lucy Stone, the indefatigable champion in the cause of "Woman's Rights." The "Little Giant" has been sometimes accused of treachery to the principles of his party; but he certainly sticks to them in the present case:

WASHINGTON, July 14, 1859.

"Mrs. Lucy Stone—Dear Madam: Your kind letter of the 8th inst., wishing me to be present at a convention of the ladies of the Northwest, to be convened at Chicago on the 12th of September next, to devise measures for the promotion of the happiness and protection of the interests and rights of the female sex, has just been laid before me. You are right, dear Madam, when you say that I take a deep interest in all that concerns the ladies of our great and glorious country. And I need not now, after so many years of faithful labor in the cause of popular sovereignty, assure you that you have, in your endeavors to obtain the liberty of governing yourselves in your own way, subject only to the constitution of the United States, the full confidence of my undivided sympathy. I regret, dear madam, that business of great importance will prevent me from being present at your convention.

I have the honor to remain, &c., S. A. DOUGLAS."

The Special Washington Correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of Sept. 16, says:

Gen. Scott left here this afternoon for N. York, and will sail in the steamer of the 20th for the Pacific.

The present delicate and complicated state of affairs at San Juan, growing out of Gen. Harney's movements, requires great care and caution on the part of our government to prevent a collision.

The President, in conferring with General Scott in regard to the matter, suggested the propriety of sending some one there who was less impetuous and more prudent than Gen. Harney. Gen. Scott at once informed the President that he would go, and that as soon as his instructions were prepared he would be ready to start.

The instructions were partially prepared and considered in Cabinet council to-day. They will probably be completed to-morrow, and forwarded immediately to New York.

The administration received some additional advices from Gen. Harney, brought by the Star of the West. There had been no material change, and matters remained in statu quo.

It is supposed that Lieut. General Scott will reach Victoria by the 16th of October, where he will have an interview with Governor Douglas and other British authorities upon the subject, not of the boundary dispute, with which neither he nor they have anything to do, but of the more pressing and critical question of national comity, which has been raised by the precipitate action of Gen. Harney.

It is to be regarded as certain that Lord Palmerston, viewing the action of Gen. Harney as an indignity to the British government, will promptly send orders for the disengagement of our troops from the island of San Juan, at all hazards. Unless the question of comity be settled by Gen. Scott in the manner above referred to, a collision will probably occur, and "American blood" will be shed on American soil, whereupon this country will be involved in a serious difficulty with Great Britain. The orders in reference to the islands in dispute, which were issued during the late administration, were binding on Gen. Harney, inasmuch as they had not been revoked or modified. —Wash. States.

ENGLAND.

The Occupation of San Juan by United States Troops.

[From the London Post, (Government organ), Sept. 6.] We confess that we cannot view without some apprehension and distrust the possible occurrence of another boundary dispute between this country and the United States of America. By the last mail we learn that Gen. Harney has taken possession of the island of San Juan, or Bellevue, as the British call it, which lies in Puget Sound, and is claimed by both nations. The island is important, as it commands the entrance to Fraser river. We do not know whether Mr. Buchanan, whose term of office is about to expire, is anxious to initiate, or rather we should say, to surpass, the high-handed policy which Mr. Polk pursued in 1845 towards this country. At that time the vast regions which extend from the back of the United States proper and Canada to the shores of the Pacific were comparatively of little political or commercial importance.

The discovery of gold had not then attracted the enterprise and cupidity of Europe and of America to that part of the world, all that was known of the territory was to be collected from the accounts of voyagers who had visited the coast, and from the statements of the employees of the Hudson's Bay and Northwestern Companies, who, in the pursuit of peltries, had traversed this hazy hunting ground. The treaty by which England recognized the independence of the U. States did not mark out the boundaries of the two countries west of the Rocky Mountains. The subject, however, did not escape the attention of the British and American governments. In the years 1818, 1822, and 1826, Lord Castlereagh and Mr. Canning endeavored to decide the claims of England and the United States to the territory which bears the name of Oregon.

After some discussion a temporary arrangement was first made in 1818, and subsequently indefinitely continued, by which the subjects of the two countries were to have a kind of joint occupation in the territory. Three years after, the "Ashburton capitulation," by which England, without any consideration, surrendered to the United States a valuable district, and which now forms a portion of the State of Maine. Mr. President Polk was pleased to assert that "the title of the United States to the whole territory of Oregon was clear and unquestionable." Lord Aberdeen, then Secretary of State, forgetting that the award of the King of the Netherlands on the subject of the Maine boundary had been contemptuously ignored by the Cabinet at Washington, offered to refer the Oregon dispute to arbitration. This offer was refused, angry and menacing language was held in America towards England, and war was mentioned in the British Parliament as a not improbable alternative. Lord Aberdeen, however, gave way.

The mouths of the Columbia were ceded to the United States, and a line following the parallel drawn from the Lake of the Woods to the coast near Fucus Straits was determined upon as the future boundary of the dominions of the two countries. This line has never been marked, but at the present time a detachment of royal engineers is engaged in surveying the country and fixing the boundary. The only persons who derived benefit from the Oregon Convention were the shareholders of the Hudson's Bay Company, who were quite willing to receive a million of dollars from the United States for the surrender of British territory, the value of which as a hunting ground they had long before exhausted.

The discovery of gold in California and British Columbia has, however, given a new interest to the entire northwestern portions of North America; and, if some ten or fifteen years ago, the Cabinet at Washington was determined to enforce its extreme rights over territories then comparatively valueless, no one can imagine that the occupation of an island which commands the entrance to the East river, and therefore the gold regions of British Columbia, is not an indication of that constant policy of aggression that dates from the enunciation of the celebrated Monroe doctrine. The Americans have asserted that the line, if extended beyond the continent, would include not only this island, but the mouth of Fraser river.

If the assumption as to the mouth of Fraser river be correct, and it is one which cannot be determined until the astronomical line has been actually marked, free access by means of a riverain convention must be accorded to the subjects of the country. But the right of England to an island which lies off the coast must depend upon discovery and occupation. If the title of England to the island of San Juan or Bellevue, has to be determined, the convention of the Escorial, the ancient claims of Spain, and the present rights of England will have to be considered. The boundary of the United States must of necessity have a termination on the Pacific coast. The whole territory of New Albion, or New Caledonia, now called British Columbia, was first added to the British Crown by Drake; formal possession of the same territory was next taken by Cooke and Vancouver, and against the Americans have this only to adduce the visit of Capt. Gray, who merely commanded a merchant vessel which in no sense represented the nationality of the flag under which he sailed.

Knowing the sensitive jealousy of the American people, we are afraid that English diplomacy may be incompetent to deal with that national aggressive spirit which has ever marked the policy of the United States. The occupation of an island, the sovereignty of which is still sab justes, and which must form the subject of negotiation, is an exercise of which the British Government cannot tamely submit. We trust that the matter will engage the early attention of the Foreign Office, and that no concessions will be made which are inconsistent with the dignity of the country or with the security of those gold regions which will we believe, be the means of extending British liberty, Brit institutions, and British commerce on the northeast coast of the continent of North America.

The Northern Boundary Dispute with England.

We received by telegraph last night later news from the island of San Juan relative to the movements of the American and British troops there; and by the arrival of the Arabia at Halifax, from England, we learn of the effect produced in that country by the news of Gen. Harney's occupation of the island in question.

The news from the island of San Juan indicates that there will be no collision between the forces of the two governments; for, although Governor Douglass seemed determined to provoke an encounter with the Americans, the British Admiral on that station has proved a man of cooler temperament, having refused to obey the orders of the Governor, and determined to await orders from the Home Government before taking any decided action. Meanwhile Gen. Harney had notified Gov. Douglass that his object in taking possession of the island was solely to protect the Americans there from the insults of the British authorities of Vancouver Island and of the Hudson Bay Company—the head of the last named being none other than Governor Douglass himself. The discreet decision of the British Admiral will prevent hostilities, and the arrival on the ground of Gen. Scott will secure peace until the two governments can come to an understanding.

The news from England is that the organ of Lord Palmerston, the London Post, had taken the view which we had reason to expect it would assume. It asserts, with Palmerstonian indignation, that the British government cannot tamely submit to the occupation of the island by the Americans, and that they will see that justice is done to British subjects. This is simply carrying out the established policy of the British government to make extensive claims in cases of dispute, in order to secure even a small share in the end.

But the matter is one for diplomacy, and can be settled easily between the two governments, if England is sincere in her protestations of a desire for peace with the United States, and will consent to be guided by common sense and equity. We have already surrendered a large portion of territory on our Northwestern boundary for the sake of peace. Our government will not give up this island of San Juan, which is clearly ours, and should by all means remain in our possession.—N. Y. Herald.

The London correspondent of the N. York Tribune thus refers to the attack made by the Chinese upon the English fleet on the Peiho, while conveying the ambassadors of France and England to Peking:

Let me first state the facts as reported by the last Overland Mail. The Hon. Mr. Bruce, accompanied by M. de Bourboulon, the French Plenipotentiary, set out with a British expedition destined to ascend the Peiho, and to accompany the two ambassadors on their message to Peking. The expedition, under the orders of Admiral Hope, consisted of seven steamships, ten gun-boats, two troop and storeships, and several hundred marines and royal engineers. The Chinese, on their part, had objected to the mission taking that particular route. Admiral Hope, consequently, found the entrance of the Peiho barred by booms and stakes, and having stayed for nine days, from the 17th till the 25th of June, at the mouth of that river, attempted its forcible passage, the Plenipotentiaries having joined the squadron on the 20th of June. On his arrival off the Peiho river, Admiral Hope had made sure of the Taku forts, razed during the last war, having been rebuilt—a fact which he said in passing, he ought to have known before, since it had been officially announced in the Peking Gazette.

On the 25th of June, while the British attempted to force the Peiho passage, the Taku batteries, supported by a Mongol force of apparently 20,000 men, were unmasked, and opened a destructive fire on the British vessels. An engagement on land and water took place, resulting in the utter discomfiture of the aggressors. The expedition had to withdraw, after the loss of three English vessels of war, the Cormorant, the Lee, and the Plover, and with a loss of 464 killed and wounded on the part of the British, while of the 60 Frenchmen present 14 were killed or wounded. Five English officers were killed and 23 wounded. The Admiral himself escaping unhurt. After this defeat, Mr. Bruce and M. de Bourboulon returned to Shanghai, while the British squadron was to station off Chinke, Ningpo.

A GRAVE WITHOUT A MONUMENT.—The sea is the largest of cemeteries, and all its slumberers sleep without a monument. And all other graveyards, in all lands, showing some symbols of distinction between the great and the small, the rich and poor; and in that great ocean cemetery the king and the clown, the prince and the peasant, are alike undistinguished. The same wave rolls over all; the same requiem by the minstrelsy of the ocean, is sung to their honor. Over their remains the same storms beat and the same sun shines; and there unmarked, the weak and the powerful, the plume and the unadorned, will sleep until awakened by the same trump, the sea will give up its dead. No marble rises to point out where their ashes are gathered. Yet that cemetery hath ornaments of which no other can boast. On no other are the heavenly orbs reflected in such splendor. Over no other is heard such noble melody.

All you that want a mate,
And to marriage do incline,
If you have slid through 58,
Now don't through 59.

The Great Eastern.

"Communiaw," writing to the Boston Post, under date of London, August 19th, gives the following description of the great steamship:

The Great Eastern steamship is now an architectural, moving, living, sailing, dashing, magnificent, splendid reality. Had she existed:

"When brave Achilles fought the Trojans,"

she would have been immortalized in Homer's verse, and Greek historians would have recorded an Eighth Wonder of the World.—The Hercules, or rather the Vulcan of the "mighty marvel," would have been Mr. John Scott Russell. In what way can a man describe the Great Eastern? You can't begin at one end of her; she is so large you cannot find the ends after getting on board, without a walk that reminds you of a stroll over a large field. The upper deck is all one level plain, 692 feet in length and 83 feet broad in the centre, containing altogether about one acre. She is in ten water-tight compartments, and the cabins for passengers are like five immense hotels, each 80 feet by 60. The decks being 14 feet apart, a good portion of each cabin is separated by a centre floor, making two tiers or stories of rooms for sleeping cabins, each nearly 7 feet high. The ship has accommodation for 800 first class passengers, 1500 second class, and 2500 third class, or 4800, in all. Used as a military transport ship she will carry 10,000 soldiers. The crew will number at least 400. It will be almost impossible for the Great Eastern to fill and founder in consequence of a collision, running on a rock, or springing a leak. You might fire a ten-inch solid shot through her at the water line, causing two compartments to fill with water, and at the same moment stave in her bow by striking a rock, and only three out of ten compartments filling, she could not sink.

Straight across the ship, from the outer portion of the paddle boxes is 120 feet. The paddle boxes are 56 feet in diameter, and the paddles or floats 13 feet long. In the making the ship consumed 60,000 superficial feet of wrought iron plates, and 2,000,000 wrought iron rivets, all driven and clenched while hot. The plates below the water line are 14 inch thick, and above the water 4 inch. Aside from the ten water tight compartments, the entire ship up to three feet above the water line is built double; a ship in a ship, the outer skin being two feet ten inches from the inner. She might be stove in from the outside and not affect a single compartment of the ship unless the harm extended to the inner skin. Her boats for the accommodation of passengers in time of danger, and in embarking and disembarking, are twenty in number, besides two screw steamers, suspended off her paddle boxes, each 100 ft. long and about 70 tons burden,—as large as the sea-going vessel that took me to Iceland in 1852! If the great ship should founder at sea, in a voyage round the world, the two steamers would be large enough to take 500 of the crew and passengers on their way rejoicing, ready to brave any weather and sea where any ship could live—the balance of the 5200 could settle a group of islands in the Pacific and raise up a nation that in a hundred years could back and dispute the sovereignty of the mother country.

So much for her accommodations. She has six masts, two square rigged, like a line-of-battle-ship, and the remainder schooner rigged, carrying in all 6500 square yards of canvas. The mizen mast is wood; the others hollow iron tubes. Mr. Brunel calculates a speed of 16 to 20 knots an hour, a rapidity of running that would send her round the world in sixty days without being obliged to stop for coal, stores, food, or water! She has ten anchors, which, with 800 fathoms of chain cable, weigh 153 tons. She has both screw and paddle, the screw being worked by two and the paddles by four engines, with a total actual power equal to 12,000 horses. The screw is 24 feet in diameter, with four fans, and the shaft 150 feet long, made of wrought iron, and weighing 60 tons.

The ship was designed by F. K. Brunel, and built by John Scott Russell, Esq. The screw engines are the largest ever manufactured for marine purposes, and made by Messrs. James Watt & Co., Sobo Works, Birmingham. The shaft of the screw was made by Messrs. Mare & Co., of Blackwell. The paddle engines were made by Mr. Scott Russell, the builder of the ship. They are direct acting, with oscillating cylinders, each 18 feet long, and 6 feet 2 inches in diameter. The stroke is 14 feet. The cylinders are cast iron, each one weighing 28 tons, or 92,720 pounds. These engines stand 50 feet high, and are made on the disconnecting principle, so that they can be used jointly or separately, and both or either of the paddle wheels can be put in independent motion. The vessel will draw 30 feet of water when laden, and 20 feet only when light. There are ten boilers placed longitudinally along the centre of the ship, each boiler having ten furnaces, or 100 furnaces in all. Each boiler weighs 45 tons, and they can be used entirely independent of each other. There are in all five funnels, each funnel acting for two boilers. There are several detached auxiliary engines on board, of about ten horse power each, for pumping, raising and lowering the boats, coaling, taking out and putting on board cargo and luggage, and furling the sails.

The Great Eastern will not probably play as important a part in the future commerce of the world as Noah's Ark did in the fortunes of mankind and the national history of the world; still, it will not be strange if it create a considerable of a revolution. Only find her work to do and she will unquestionably have a cheaper motive power than any steamer ever built. I am sorry she draws so much water that there is no immediate prospect of this Leviathan ship going to Boston. She cost almost a round million sterling, or five million dollars. I once heard of two London beggars separating in their youth, and one went to America, improved his fortunes, and in five or six years came back, met his old companion—still a beggar—and told him he was worth a thousand pounds. "A thousand pounds!" said the other. "Is there so much money in the world?" Now, I believe, though I am a beggar, compared to the wealth locked up in the Great Eastern—that I can appreciate the fact that there is money enough in the world, and enough to be had, to build this enormous steamship, but when I go down the vast pit that leads to the engine rooms, I confess that I am overawed, and cannot appreciate the almost omnipotent power of man that can make this vast bulk a moving mass, a living thing as it were, with self-creating engines within itself, sufficient to carry it round the globe, without once stopping her wheels. But there it is, lying at anchor in the Thames, as quiescent as a sleeping infant. But once put water into the boilers, coal into the furnaces, and touch fire to the coal, and one wave of the hand of the chief engineer, and she starts from her moorings with a power that would upset St. Paul's Cathedral.

The letter published in the Herald of the 7th of August last, verifying the facts of history in the instance of the memorable orders of General Taylor to Captain Bragg at the Battle of Buena Vista, is correct in every particular, as those who were acquainted with that brave but rough and unaffected old soldier will testify. The fact is there is too strong a tendency on the part of writers generally to present distinguished men, not as they really are, but as they would have them. The instance referred to is a proof of this, and we might enumerate many others about Washington and other great men, in which the facts of history are sadly mangled and distorted in the effort to show that they had none of those little imperfections which prove that they were men and not angels, as their biographers would have us believe.

Now, as I have a little respect for historical accuracy in such matters, I will take the liberty of correcting another mistake which has been made in regard to Old Zack, and by which he is made the author of a despatch he never wrote. I relate the circumstance as it was told by a person who was present, and language which was really used. Before the battle of Buena Vista, when Taylor's gallant little army was surrounded by a force five or six times its number, and its utter annihilation appeared certain—at least to those who knew nothing of the material of which it was made up—General Santa Anna sent one of his aids to summon the old veteran to surrender, and to represent to him the folly of entering upon a conflict that must end in the utter defeat of the Americans. The summons to surrender was reported by Colonel Bliss, who, when he had translated it to Old Zack, asked what reply he should make.

"Tell him," said the General, in his usual prompt and emphatic manner; "tell him to go to hell."

Colonel Bliss asked him if he should send that reply.

"Let me see. No!" replied the old man, "say I see him d—d first!"

Colonel Bliss, who was thoroughly posted up in the etiquette of the camp, thereupon wrote the despatch which has been credited to his commander, and which was to the effect that the summons had been duly received and that General Taylor declined acceding thereto.

AN EDITOR'S OPINION.—The Nashville News thus comments upon the case of Henry Shaw, the St. Louis millionaire, and the defendant in the $100,000 breach of promise case:

During the first investigation Mr. Shaw tried to destroy Miss Carzstang's character—to rob her of all she has in the world; but he failed. Now it is said he has been recently in New York, where the young lady was raised, dragging a net weighted down with his million of dollars, for proof to destroy her good name. The next jury ought to give verdict for at least $200,000—the additional hundred for an attack upon her character. If there is really any stain whatever on the lady's name, a man of Mr. Shaw's means for knowing the world was an outrageous simoleon to propose to her—perhaps a knave; and he ought at least to pay one hundred thousand dollars to be released by the fool-killer, and one hundred thousand more for making her character his business. If her reputation is all over speckled with stains, they could have done him no injury if he had let her alone. A man with one million of dollars, and three grains of common sense, can easily find some nice lady to have him, who is like Caesar's wife, unless he is as ugly as sin, and as dirty as the devil; and if so, he ought to pay two hundred thousand dollars for speaking to any woman who is only quasi-decent.

MISSOURI.—Missouri is destined to be one of the first States in the Union. She is also rich—immensely so—in her mineral wealth. Producing almost every variety of plants known to the vegetable world, possessing a soil that cannot be surpassed in fertility, enjoying every variety of climate, but happily the greater part being of that genial and healthy medium between tropic suns and polar snows, and traversed throughout the length and breadth of its interior by navigable rivers of immense length and magnitude, her crops seldom fail—and at present we have never had more bounteous ones. Emigration is rapidly making Missouri what she is ordained to be, the great State west of the Mississippi.—Evansville Enquirer.

None but a journalist can comprehend fully the truth of the following, from the New York Home Journal. "It is one of the hardships of our profession, that its working wheels—brains and hearts—are not allowed to flag for sickness, or stop for calamity or sorrow. The Judge may adjourn his court, the school and the workshop may close shutters, the mourner may veil features and turn friend and stranger from the door—but the journalist must forget before to-morrow the sorrows of to-day—must write gaily and freshly, as a news-songer, on the trifles of the hour, whatever burden has been laid on that same hour by Providence, for his heart and brain as man. It sometimes tries and mocks—as the world that reads what is thus written would never dream of."

A CHAPTER ON WOMAN.—Woman, in all history, is the mortal enemy of polygamy. She desires the love of one person only. She is ambitious to reign at home, to be mistress of the house, of the table, of the fireside—to be supreme in all her little world. The great, the fundamental secret, is, that every woman feels that she is a powerful center of love, of attraction, about which all ought to gravitate. She wishes to surround man with an insatiable longing, an eternal curiosity. She has a confused notion that he has an infinity of discoveries to make concerning herself, that she can always reward the love that will preserve in his researches, and astonish it with a thousand unexpected glimpses of grace and of passion. This perseverance, this ardent curiosity, which seeks to discover infinity in a single being, implies a fireside pure, exclusive and monogamous. A very remarkable thing in the ancient revelations we have of the female heart, is, that love is seen there alone, and not the thought of generation. In love, she sees to love, her lover, her husband. It is the man that is anxious about the perpetuation of the race. A young woman austere, virtuous, (Madame de Gasparin) has not feared to touch this delicate point, to reveal this secret of woman's heart; "The object of marriage," she says, "is marriage." Conjugal love is marked by more denial, more virtue, than maternal love; because the infant is the mother still; the mother is loving herself in loving it.—From "L'Amour of M. Michels."

FINDING DROWNED PERSONS BY QUICKSILVER.—A correspondent of the Troy Times gives the following narrative of an occurrence at Shrewsbury Lake, Vt., as coming under his own observation:

The lake is now noted on account of the death of a young man, a conductor on the Rutland and Burlington Railroad, who was drowned in it a short time ago. At the time he, with several others, were playing, rocking the boat, making it "dip water" when unluckily, they were all swamped, and this young man, the best swimmer in the lot was drowned. After a long and almost hopeless search after the body—a very novel idea was suggested, which after trial, proved successful in leading to the discovery of his whereabouts. About three ounces of quicksilver was put into a loaf of brown bread, well baked, and thrown out into the lake. The loaf was discovered to move directly against the wind; soon it stopped, whirled around several times and sunk. They immediately rowed to the place and threw out the grapplers—the first time they hooked, his face, the second time the hook fastened to his boot, and he was hauled into the boat. Where he was found the water was 70 feet deep. In his pockets were a large silver watch and a considerable quantity of silver money—which caused the attraction of the quicksilver, and led to the discovery of his watery grave. The accident, place, and singular circumstances connected with the sad affair render it remarkable.

THE CLAY SARCOPHAGUS AND MONUMENT.—We see it is stated that a marble sarcophagus, for the remains of Henry Clay has just been completed in Philadelphia. It is designed for the monument now erecting in this city. It is cut from a solid block of marble of the shape of a coffin, and the interior is of sufficient size to admit the leaden case containing the remains of the departed statesman. The outside of the sarcophagus is beautifully carved with appropriate emblems.

While upon the subject we may remark that the work on the monument is still progressing, and if those who are in arrears with their subscriptions will but come forward at once and discharge their respective obligations it will be rapidly pushed to completion. The work now being executed is for the completion of the shaft preparatory to the reception of the statue, and it is executed in the very highest style of the art. The progress of this work may, to those who know nothing of the difficulties which have had to be encountered, appear to have been slow, but all things considered, the friends of the great statesman have cause to congratulate themselves upon the progress of the work, and of the beautiful appearance it will present when completed.—[Lex. (Ky.) Obs. and Reporter.]

NOVEL WAY OF PAYING DEBTS.

The Quarterly Review states that there was once a life Insurance Company in London which altogether omitted the suicide clause; and that a man, after opening a policy with it, invited the directors to dinner with a numerous party. When the cloth was removed, he rose and said: "Gentlemen, it is fit you should be acquainted with the company. These honest men are tradesmen to whom I was in debt, without any means of payment but by your assistance; and now I am your humble servant." He pulled out a pistol and shot himself. If the omission of the clause attracted many customers of this sort, no wonder it has been restored or retained.

A New York letter writer gives the following:

A good joke is told of Beacher and Park Benjamin, though it is probably not true: On one of their lecturing expeditions, they were riding in the same railway car. Getting into conversation about preaching, Beacher was so courteous as to ask Benjamin to come over to Brooklyn some Sabbath morning and hear him.

"I do not know where your meeting house is," said Benjamin; "how shall I find it?"

"Oh!" replied Beacher, "all you have to do is to come over on one of the ferries, and follow the crowd."

"I would come," continued Benjamin, "but for one thing."

"Ah! what is that?" asked Beacher. "Because," said Benjamin, with a merry look out of his eyes, "I make it an inviolable rule never to go to any place of amusement on Sunday."

"Pray, madam, what do you charge for recovering an umbrella?" said Michael O'Flaherty, from Tipperary, the other day, walking into an umbrella shop.

"Let me see it," was the reply.

"Ah, faith, and that's just what I want to do; for I've lost one, and I see you offer to recover them at a very small charge, so I was just thinking I could get you to recover mine."

An Irishman, who had lain sick a long time, was met one day by the parish priest: "Well Patrick, I am glad you have recovered—but were you not afraid to meet your God?" "Och, no, your reverence, it was the other chap I was afraid of," replied Pat.

Ferocity is sometimes assumed, as well as gentleness. There are as many sheep in wolves clothing as there are wolves in sheep's.

By the use of eye-glasses you may see as much as is to be seen; by the use of another kind of glasses you may see twice as much.

Life's pleasure, if not abused will be new every morning and fresh every evening.

The reason why whales frequent the Arctic sea, is probably because they supply the "northern lights" with oil.

What a poor world this would be without women and newspapers.—How would the news get round?

Mrs. Partington, asks, very indignantly, if the bills before Parliament are not counterfeit, why should there be such difficulty in passing them?

The imitable Parson Brownlow is again extant, though in rather a damaged condition. He is now at the Virginia Springs for the benefit of his voice, which he has almost entirely lost; but he says he intends to raise it against Lofocoinism as long as he can, and when he can no longer speak, he intends to make mouths at the rascally concern!

He that does not know those things which are of use and necessity for him to know is but an ignorant man, whatever he may know besides.

PROCLAMATION.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, UTAH,
G. S. L. City, October 28, 1860.

THE Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah will hold its annual session at the Social Hall, in Great Salt Lake City, from and after ten o'clock of the second Monday in December, 1860, which is in accordance with a resolution of the Assembly at its last session, subsequently approved by me.

A. CUMMINGS,
Governor of Utah Territory.

FURNISHED ROOM TO RENT.

SITUATED ON SECOND EAST TEMPLE STREET, opposite the residence of DR. ANDERSON. For further particulars call immediately at the house where the room is to be had.

W. E. ROCKWELL.

The Farmers' Song.

We envy not the princely man,
In city or in town,
Who wonders whether pumpkin vines
Run up the hill or down;
We care not for his marble halls,
Nor yet his heaps of gold,
We would not own his sordid heart
For all his wealth thrice told.

We are the favored ones of earth,
We breathe pure air each morn,
We grow—we reap the golden grain—
We gather in the corn;
We toil—we live on what we earn,
And more than this we do;
We hear of starving millions round,
And gladly feed them, too.

The lawyer lives on princely fees,
Yet drags a weary life,
He never knows a peaceful hour—
His atmosphere is strife.
The merchant thumbs his yard stick o'er,
Grows haggard at his toll,
He's not the man God made him for—
Why don't he till the soil?

The doctor plods through storm and cold,
Plods at his patient's will,
When dead and gone he plods again
To get his lengthy bill;
The printer (bless his noble soul),
He grasps the mighty earth,
And stamps it on our welcome sheet
To cheer the farmer's hearth.

We sing the honor of the plough,
And honor of the press—
Two noble instruments of toil,
With each a power to bless;
The bone, the nerve of this fast age,
The wealth of human kind—
One tills the ever generous earth,
The other tills the mind.

THE CONJURER AND THE YANKEE.
Anderson, the wizzard, met with a Yankee who stole a march on him one day after the following manner; enter Yankee:

"I say! are you Professor Anderson?"

"I am sir, at your service."

"Wa'al, they say you're a tarnation smart man, I am something at a trick, to kinder cute, deu you know?"

"Ah, indeed, what tricks are you up to?" asked the professor, amused at the simplicity of the fellow.

"Wa'al, I can take a cent and change it into a ten dollar gold piece."

"Oh, that's a mere slight of hand trick. I can do that too."

"No you can't. I'd like to see you try."

"Well, hold' out your hand with a cent in it."

Yankee stretches out his paw with a cent lying on it.

"This is your cent is it, sure."

"It's nothing else."

"Hold on to it tight. Presto! change! Now open your hand."

Yankee opened his hand, and there was a gold eagle shining on his palm.

"Wa'al you did it. I declare, much obliged to you," said Jonathan, turning to go out.

"Say," said the professor, "you may leave my ten dollars."

"Yours? want it my cent, and didn't you change it into this yaller thing, eh? Good bye!" and as he left the room he was heard to say, "I guess there ain't anything green about this child."

GETTING TO HEAVEN BY WAY OF NEW ORLEANS.—The Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Dispatch gives the following:

We have a Methodist preacher here who is a jolly wag. A few days since, a young man who had long been attached to his church, and who was about to leave for New Orleans, came to bid his pastor farewell.

"And so you are going to that degenerate place, New Orleans, are you?"

"Yes sir; but I don't expect to be influenced by any extraneous pressure of any kind," responded the young man, with considerable earnestness.

"Well, I am glad to see you so confident. I hope the Lord will guide you. But do you know the temptations which exist there?"

"No, not particularly."

"Well, I do; you'll find wanton women in the guise of Paris, tempting the very elect; and rare wines and ardent drinks; and you'll find gay company, and night bawling and gambling, and dissipation, and running after the lusts of the old man Adam."

"Still, sir, I hope to combat these successfully."

"I hope you will, my dear christian brother," was the reply. "I hope you will. And let me give you this much for your consolation in case you should fall from grace. The tempter is worse in the sin, and the greater the temptation, the more merit there is in resisting it. The man who goes to heaven by way of New Orleans, is sure to have twice as high a place in eternal glory as he who reaches Paradise through the quiet portals of Connecticut or Pennsylvania."

IF AND ITS PROGENY.—If every man were honest, we need not lock our doors.

If everybody would mind just his own business, there would be more business done.

If we would talk less of other people, other people would talk less of us.

If printers always got their just dues, they might live like their neighbors.

If there were fewer novels in the world, there would be fewer numbskulls.

If you charge your servants with lying they will soon become liars, if they are not so already.

If students would read less and think more, there would be a larger number of really great men in our community.

If young ladies now-a-days did not become women at thirteen, men would have better wives.

If men would quit retailing damnation in the shape of alcoholic drinks, our country would be more happy and prosperous, and more people would get to Heaven.

If you want to get rich, work hard and spend but little.

If you want to render your husband unhappy, blame him for everything he does, right or wrong; scold him for doing this or that before you know whether he did it.

If every man would subscribe for several newspapers, he and his family would live happy and longer—provided, he paid the printer.

This article might be extended to a great length, but we don't like to "pile on the agony" too thick.

How to Live Long.

More people die annually from a want of sufficient brain-work than from an excess of it. Good health of body and mind depends on each having its full share of exercise and work, and it would seem from history that we can better afford the body to be in a state of lassitude than allow the intellectual powers to lie dormant. There may be a physical cause for this, from the fact that much thought induces a temperate life; but the exceptions to such a rule would be found so enormous as to show that it was not the only secret. We are rather inclined to think that the most general rule and the one capable of the broadest application, by which to attain to that great desideratum, "a green old age," is to give the mind full play—to expand the powers of thought by reading and observation; and to banish the fear of death, resulting from an exhausted 'knowledge-box.' We have shown to what ages the old philosophers lived, and many modern ones have been equally long-lived. Galileo and Roger Bacon both lived to 78, Buffon died at 81, Goethe and West were 82, Franklin and Herschel lived to 84, and Newton and Voltaire did not finish their labors until 85. The astronomer Halley was 86, at his decease, and Sir Hans Soane was 93. Michel Angelo and Titian, the great masters of art, lived to 96. These, surely are instances enough to stimulate the individual who wishes to live long, not to cultivate the intellectual faculties and imagination, while he is attending to the physical aids of exercise, cleanliness and temperance. We all think too much of the body and neglect the higher and diviner part within us; we clean the temple and adorn its pillars, but we forget that the dweller therein also requires attention and care.

NEW GOODS.

WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by Dyer, Bro. & Co.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale by Dyer, Bro. & Co.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE to sell or exchange for Country Produce.

Ho! for America!!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!

COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—(for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175. Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage. For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City.

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, in Bond & Jackson are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spices, alum, copperas, saltpetre, in addition, linings, powder, lead, shod caps, vinegar, vanilla, rope, ginger, mustard, oars, sauce of every kind, brandy, fruit, flavoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stems, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar or lemon blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, but one high and another low.

We also have a lot of Am's celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market.

Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.

We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,

Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco, and those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer at such prices as will extensively draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints
Bleached do Blue Demins
" shirtings " drills
Brown do White & cold bl'kets
Hickory stripes Canton flannels
Dried linsey woolsey Woolen do
Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables
Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos
Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn
Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread
" napkins Curtain damasks
" table cloths Satinet & cassimeres
Crash, toweling and Cottonades and pant
doylies stuffs

Ginghams and lawns Carpets and oil cloths
White linen bosom shirts Apron checks
Colored calico do Heavy duck (all
Grey flannel do widths)
Red do do Blue & Hick' check
Blue do do &c., &c., &c.

Our Fancy Goods Salesroom contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of

Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c.

such as Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered sets
silk " collars & sleeves
Plain all wool delaines " window curtains
Fancy do " edgings and in-
Alexander's kid gloves " sertions
Bay state long shawls " linen handkerfs
Stella and merino do Plain linen cambric
Delaines in dress pat- Hem stitched " "

White cambric muslin " cravats and ties
Jackonets " suspenders
Swiss " Dress Trimmings
Mull & Namassoks

Plaid Jackonet muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Buck gloves and gauntlets
Lace mitts and gloves
Dress lawns and bargees
Plain colored silk Ribbons
Bonnet do
Velvet do
Combs brushes and cutlery
Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.

OUR STOCK OF HOSIERY

is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures, styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.,
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, Cal., and 220 Broadway, New York.

Agents for the Garment Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods.

George Cronyn & Co.

HAVING purchased the well-selected stock of U. S. Kidney & Co., consisting of DRY GOODS.

GROCERIES, HARDWARE, &c.,

beg leave to say they have now opened the goods at

George Cronyn's Old Stand,

near Bishop Hunter's, and offer them at retail. They assure the public they have put prices at a low price. You are invited to call and examine.

The stock consists in part of

STAPLE DRY GOODS,

Groceries, Hardware,

Oil, Turpentine, Alcohol,

Window Glass, Hay and Manure Forks,

Shovels, Spades, Scythes and Snaths,

Cotton Yarn, Dye-Staffs, &c.

Terms cash, or ready pay. Produce of local kinds received.

NOTICE.

WE having taken the house formerly occupied by Gilbert, Gerrish & Dyer, at Camp Floyd, it will in future be well supplied with a good assortment of goods, and one of the Partners will be here all the time. Our friends will please call and see us.

NOTICE.

THE Copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned at CAMP FLOYD, is hereby dissolved by mutual consent.

Dyer, Bro. & Co., at Camp Floyd are authorized to settle their business.

R. H. DYER.

GILBERT & GERRISH.

To the Traveling Public.

STAGE, LIVERY AND EXPRESS NOTICE.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this City and Camp Floyd, that he has now in successful operation, a Daily Stage, running from Salt Lake City to Camp Floyd, and from Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City, leaving each point punctually at 8 a.m., and arriving at 2 p.m. He has now four changes of horses on the road, also good and commodious Coaches, and careful drivers, therefore he feels warranted in saying that he can carry passengers through in six hours.

LIVERY NOTICE.

He will be ready to receive horses on Friday May 10th, by the day, week, or month, at his new Stable, in Salt Lake City, on the most reasonable terms.

Horses and Carriages to let at all hours, night or day.

ESPECIAL NOTICE.

He will run an Express, in connection with his stage line between Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City. No letters will be received or carried, by him, except the postage is prepaid, on each letter 25 cents.

All passenger's baggage, weighing over 40 pounds will be charged at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

All over 100 pounds will be taken at the rate of 5 cents per pound.

The undersigned will not be responsible for any Trunk, Package, Parcel, or any other species of property whatever, except receipted for by his agents at each end of the route.

A Liberal share of public patronage is earnestly solicited.

Office in Salt Lake City, next door to the Post Office.

LAST TRAIN, AND BEST GOODS!

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS

WISH to call attention to their large assortment of Merchandise, now offered for sale at the Store house recently occupied by C. H. BASSETT.

The people of this City and the public generally are assured that OUR Stock of Goods CAN NOT be surpassed in this market, either for QUALITY or CHEAPNESS.

We have the Best Variety and the LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF FINE

DRESS GOODS

ever opened in this City.

SPLENDID DRESS SILKS,

CASHMERES,

MERINOS,

ALPACAS,

DELAINES,

LAWNS,

SINGHAMS,

CHAMBRAYS,

JACONETT AND SWISS MUSLINS,

CRIO LINE, CHALIS, RIBBONS, VELVETS,

AND ALL SORTS OF TRIMMINGS.

SHAWLS, CLOAKS, MANTILLAS, PARASOLS,

and every variety of LADIES' GOODS.

CLOTHS, SATINETTS, CASSIMERES, TWEEDS, CORDUOYS, BOOTS AND SHOES,

HATS AND CAPS, AND READY-MADE CLOTHING.

GROCERIES AND DYE STUFFS.

A full list of Yankee notions. Don't forget Good and Cheap.

ROGERS, SHROPSHIRE & ROSS.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

GOODS AT COST!

THE undersigned beg leave to inform the Public that they will be in receipt of Fifty one wagon loads of Goods on or about the 17th inst., comprising an extensive assortment of

Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Groceries, Hats & Caps,

Clothing, &c.,

which, together with their well-selected Stock now on hand, they will sell, at their store in this city, by the piece or package, at COST and TWENTY CENTS freight.

The attention of Country Dealers and those desirous of purchasing their family supplies is called to the inducements thus held out, as we are determined to sell on the terms set forth above.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN DRY GOODS, GROCERIES & LIQUORS, OUTFITTING GOODS GENERALLY,

AT

G. S. L. City, Camp Floyd, Fort bridge, Fairfield, and Millersville.

The attention of the public is invited to their stock on hand, and to arrive.

100 WAGONS

JUST ARRIVED FROM THE STATES

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED ONE LARGE STOCK OF Dry Goods,

Liquors,

Hats & Caps,

Boots & Shoes,

Clothing,

Hardware,

Outfitting Goods,

Harness,

Saddles,

Bridles,

Which we will exchange for FLOUR and GRAIN, in fact

All kinds of Country Produce.

Our stock has been selected with great care, and is well adapted to the wants of the section.

We would call the attention of Country Merchants and large dealers generally to the above, as we will offer them such inducements as will enable them to make satisfactory purchases.

ALSO,

75 light Chicago WAGONS; 250 large AMERICAN MOLERS; 250 fine AMERICAN HORSE CATTLE; one SUGAR ALBION; one fine STALION. For sale by

C. A. PERRY & CO.

[35-11]

Hockaday & Burr,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL MERCHANTS,

Have opened in their NEW STORE ROOM ON MAIN STREET,

A large Assortment of

MERCHANDIZE,

Specially selected for this market.

Liberal discounts made to Country merchants.

DRUGS! CHEMICALS! PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1880.

ALEX. LEITCH,

MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PURE RE-AGENTS, and PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS,

of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS,

selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with all the latest improvements. He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,

including every variety, English and French, to his assortment of

PERFUMERIES,

ELEGANT EXTRACTS, POMADES AND SOAPS.

THE VALLEY TIAN.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1859.

NUMBER 52.

Speech of Senator Douglas at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 9.
Fellow-Citizens of Cincinnati: There seems to be a fatality accompanying my attempts to address you on the great political topics of the day. Four years ago when I came here for the purpose of addressing you, I was attacked with a disease of the throat which deprived me of the opportunity of being heard, and confined me to my room for many months. While on my way here yesterday I had a recurrence of the same attack, which rendered it impossible for me to comply with any engagement to address you last night, and I fear that I will not be able to address you this evening in a way satisfactory to you or myself; but I trust, if you will indulge me for a few moments until I shall get fairly into the subject, that my voice will return so that I shall be able to be heard, even to the extremities of this great crowd. I desire to say, in the first place, that it is no part of my present purpose to discuss any question appertaining to the internal polity or domestic affairs of the State of Ohio. So far as the topics now pending before the country affect your internal affairs, I choose to leave them to those who are directly interested in them; but there are certain great principles of universal application, affecting the people of the entire country, in which we are all interested, and which can be advocated in Cincinnati as well as in Louisville, in the free States as well as in the slaveholding States. So long as we live under a Constitution which is paramount, and the law of the entire republic, any political creed is radically wrong which cannot be proclaimed in the same form wherever the American flag waves or the Constitution rules. (Cheers.) You will permit me to remark also, that the Democratic party is the only political organization in this country which can preserve the peace, the harmony, and the fraternity of this glorious Union. (Renewed cheers.) There ever has been, there ever will be two political parties in this country. The one is founded on the great fundamental principle of self-government which underlies all our institutions, and the other the antagonism of the Democratic party. The history of the Democratic party is the history of this Republic. The record of the democratic achievements contains a list of all those glorious measures which have characterized the unparalleled growth and development of this republic. The opposition party to the Democracy at some periods of our history is known by one name, and at another by another, but still its cardinal features are opposed to the democratic organization and principles. In the Northern States at this time, the opposition party is known as the Republican party; in the Southern States it does not assume that name, but sympathizes with the Republicans in all their implacable hostilities to the Democratic party. The great question which separates the Democratic party from the opposition party at the present time, involve the slavery question—the opposition contending that the slavery question is a federal question, to be determined and controlled by federal authority. On the other hand, the Democratic party holds that the slavery question is a local question—a state question, depending on local authority, and to be determined by the people interested in it. In several states and territories of this Union, according to the platform of the Republican party, adopted in Philadelphia, in 1856, it is affirmed that Congress has the power, and it is its duty to prohibit slavery in all the territories of the United States, and they assert the sovereign power of Congress over the territories for their government.—This doctrine of sovereign power of the General Government over the territories or colonies is not new, nor is it advanced by the Republicans of the present day for the first time. The same doctrine was asserted by the King and Parliament of Great Britain over the American colonies before the Revolution. You will recollect the great Webster said, and many others have repeated the remark, that the American Revolution was fought against a preamble, and that preamble was to an act of Parliament which declared that the British Parliament had the power and right to bind the American colonies in all cases whatever. To that preamble the colonies replied, denying the right of Parliament to interfere with their local and domestic concerns. When the American colonies assembled at Philadelphia in 1774, for the first time, they proceeded to assert a bill of rights for the colonies. In that bill of rights they acknowledged and conceded to Parliament the right to pass laws regulating commerce and touching those matters which were imperial and not colonial. But, on the other hand, they asserted that these colonies possessed the sole and exclusive power of legislation in their respective provincial legislatures, and in all cases of taxation and internal polity. Thus you will find that the Tories of the Revolution asserted the very doctrine at that day which is contended for by the Republicans of this day, that Congress, as Parliament, has sovereign power over the colonies or territories for their government. Our fathers, of the Revolution, resisted that claim of Parliamentary sovereignty over the colonies with blood and with their lives during the Revolutionary War, and the Democratic party of this day is prepared to resist by all constitutional means this claim of the Republican party to exercise sovereign power over the colonies or territories of the United States. If any person will take the trouble to trace the history of this question, he will find that the Democratic party of to-day stands precisely where the Whigs of the Revolution stood, and the opponents of the Democracy advocate the same principles that were contended for by the British Parliament and Tories of the Revolution. I do not use these terms in any offensive sense. I do not impeach the patriotism or impugn the motives of those who advocate this doctrine—the right of Congress to bind the territories in all cases whatever. I simply assert that their claim of sovereignty over the territories, is the precise claim against which all the battles of the Revolution were fought, when that claim was urged by the British Parliament over the American Colonies.—The Republicans declare in their platform that, in the exercise of this sovereign power over the territories, it is the duty of Congress to prohibit slavery wherever it may be found in all the territories of the United States. The Southern opposition party on the other hand, assert the sovereign power of Congress over the slavery question, and demand that it shall be exercised for the protection and maintenance of slavery in all the territories of the United States. Thus you find that the Southern opposition party and the Northern Republican party advocate the same principle—that of Congressional intervention on the subject of slavery—and differ only as to the application of that principle. The Northern interventionists demand that the power of the Federal Government should be exercised to destroy and prohibit slavery everywhere in the territories. On the other hand, the Democratic party stand firmly by the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery anywhere, and popular sovereignty in the states and territories alike. (Tremendous cheers.) The position of the Democracy on this subject was never more clearly defined than in the letter of Mr. Buchanan accepting the Cincinnati nomination in 1856. (Continued Cheering.) In that letter of acceptance, as you will find it represented on that banner over your heads, (pointing to a large banner across the street,) Mr. Buchanan declared that the principles of the Nebraska bill were as ancient as free government itself, and asserted that the people of a territory, like those of a state, should decide for themselves whether slavery should or should not exist within their limits. I stand here to-night defending that great principle of popular sovereignty and self-government, in the precise language of James Buchanan, in his letter of acceptance. (Applause.) The Democratic party are upon the principles of the Cincinnati platform.—Let us stand by that platform as it reads, as it was expounded in the canvass of 1856, and explained by Mr. Buchanan in his letter of acceptance. The Cincinnati platform is as good a platform as any Democrat has a right to demand. Let us stand firmly upon it as it exists, without the addition of a single plank or the removal of a single pillar. (Applause.) Standing upon this platform the Democratic party assert that the people of a territory, like those of a state, have a right to decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits. The enemies of the Democratic party, North and South, deny the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. The Southern interventionists demand intervention by Congress for the maintenance of slavery; the interventionists of the North demand interference by Congress for the destruction and prohibition of slavery; the Democracy everywhere deny the right of Congress to interfere, one way or the other, for or against slavery, but assert that the people themselves shall decide whether they will or will not have slavery within their limits. These are the different positions of the several parties, and our intention is not merely to dwell upon idle, speculative or theoretical questions. They are practical issues, presented to the people of this day for settlement. Already has New Mexico, on the one hand, and Kansas on the other, presented a case for Congressional intervention. You will recollect that several years after the passage of the act organizing the Territory of New Mexico, the legislature refused to pass a slave code for the protection of slave property, in the territories, but during last year the territorial legislature of New Mexico passed a slave code protecting and maintaining slavery in that territory as a domestic institution, and punishing all offenses against slave property. The Republican party stands pledged by their platform to repeal the slave code which the people of New Mexico have adopted, and abolish slavery where the people have declared they want it. On the other hand, the people of Kansas Territory, through their first legislature, passed a law protecting and maintaining slavery in that territory, but on the 9th of February, 1858, the territorial legislature of Kansas repealed their slave code, abolished all the remedies for the protection of slave property, and withdrew from the courts any jurisdiction over the subject. By this unfriendly legislation on the part of Kansas, slavery is to-day excluded from that territory. Now, the Southern opposition to the Democratic party tell us that Congress must interfere and maintain the wishes of the people and in defiance of the local law; while the Northern opposition, called the Republican party, demand that Congress shall deprive the people of New Mexico of slavery, and abolish self-government, against the wishes of the people and in violation of local law. To both of these doctrines the Democratic party maintain a stern, inflexible and irresistible opposition. (Cheers.)

We assert that if the people of New Mexico want slavery they have a right to it.—(Cheers.) We assert that if they want a slave code they have a right to pass it. We assert that they, having passed such a code, through their legislature, it must and shall stand the law of the land until they repeal it themselves. And in reference to Kansas, the Democratic party also assert that if the people of Kansas do not want slavery it shall not be forced on them. We assert that if the people of Kansas do not want a slave code, Congress shall never compel them to have it. That if the people of Kansas prefer free institutions to slave institutions, they have a right to them, and the Southern opposition, or the Northern opposition, or any other opposition, shall not overrule the wish of the people. (Applause.) Now, if the opposition to the Democratic party, either North or South, are sincere in their professions, they are compelled at the next session of Congress to bring forward a law to carry out the doctrine in the Territories. If Mr. Seward be an honest man, he must bring in a bill to abolish slavery and repeal the slave code of New Mexico. If the Southern Opposition members, elected in Kentucky or other Southern States be honest men when they assert that it is the duty of Congress to protect slavery in the Territories against the wishes of the people, then they are bound to make laws to protect and maintain slavery in Kansas in opposition to the wishes of the people.—Hence I say the question of intervention or of non-intervention of Congress with the domestic concerns of the Territories can be no longer postponed. That issue must be met. Either the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty must be acquiesced in, and carried out in good faith, or else Congress must interfere for or against slavery in opposition to the wishes of the people in each locality. Now, let me ask how you can ever have peace on the slavery question as long as Congress is allowed to interfere with it? Any man who advocates Congressional intervention is an enemy to the peace and harmony of the States of this Union. There can be no peace on the slavery question; there can be no truce in sectional strife; there can be no fraternity between the Northern and Southern States, so long as Congress is permitted to interfere with the local and domestic institutions of any of the Territories of this Union. That question was decided distinctly in 1850, when the Compromise Measures were passed. You all recollect that during that struggle there was a Southern party demanding congressional intervention to maintain slavery in opposition to the wishes of the people, and, on the other hand, there was an ultra Northern anti-slavery party, demanding congressional intervention to abolish and prohibit slavery regardless of the wish of the people or the local law. These two ultra parties—these two interventionists—the one Southern and the other Northern—disturbed the harmony of the country and imperiled the existence of the Union. In that great struggle, the immortal Clay, who had finished his mission on earth and retired to the shades of Ashland to prepare for a better and happier world, in his retirement heard the rumbling of harsh discordant notes of sectional strife and sectional controversy, and came forth from his retirement to resume his seat in the Senate—the great theatre of his mighty deeds—to see if by his experience, his wisdom, and by the renown of his famous name, could do something to calm the troubled waters and restore peace and fraternity to a divided and distracted country. (Cries of Glorious! Hear! Hear!) From the moment Henry Clay made his appearance in the Senate, all party strife was hushed, all partisan controversy ceased; the voice of discord was no longer heard, and Clay was recognized and proclaimed leader of all Union men North and South, Whigs and Democrats. For a period of six months we assembled in caucus every day, with Clay in the chair, Cass upon his right, Webster on his left hand, and the Whigs and Democrats ranged on either side, promiscuously supporting and sustaining Clay in his efforts to devise a plan to restore peace and harmony to a distracted country. (Cheers.) You all know the result of these deliberations. The Compromise Measures of 1850 were adopted, peace restored, and the country again re-united. Now let me ask you upon what principle does the Compromise rest? Examine the bills, search the records, and you will find that the great principle which underlies these measures is the right of the people of each state and each Territory while a Territory to decide the slavery question for themselves. (Three cheers.) Mr. Seward, Gov. Chase, Mr. Sumner and the leaders of the Republican party united with Southern fire-eaters in resisting the Compromise Measures of 1850 because they asserted the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. We passed those measures over their heads, we Union men, Whigs and Democrats, Clay, Webster and Cass, supported and sustained by younger men of the two parties, passed the compromise measures, and adopted the principle of non-intervention and popular sovereignty over the heads of the Northern Abolitionists and the Southern Disunionists. I stand here to-night to vindicate and maintain that same principle of non-intervention and popular sovereignty against Northern Abolitionists and Southern interventionists. (Three cheers for Douglas.) I care not where the interventionist lives, by what name he calls himself or on which side he intervenes, he is an enemy to Democratic principles if he is intervening at all against the peace of the country. This great principle must be met and must be decided in the Presidential election of 1860. (Cries of "You are our choice.") Mr. Seward, who is the most eminent authoritative expounder of the Republican principles according to the modern designation, tells us that there is an irrepressible conflict between freedom and slavery—free labor and slave labor—which must continue to rage until the States shall become all free or become all slave. When he uttered that sentiment, he ought to have felt bound by a sense of justice and courtesy, to have acknowledged that he borrowed the sentiment from an eminent leader of his own party. (Laughter.) Three years previous to Seward's Rochester speech, Mr. Lincoln, of Illinois, in making a speech accepting the nomination of the Republican party of his State, had announced the same principle in more explicit and emphatic language. He told the people of Illinois that agitation would not cease until the crisis should be met and passed—that a house divided against itself could not stand—that the Union separated into free and slave States could not endure permanently, and the contest must go on until the States should become all free or all slave—all one thing or all the other. Did you ever hear of a Republican that dissented from this position? Does not the Republican party, throughout the land, acquiesce in and endorse the doctrine of Seward in his Rochester speech or similar sentiments of Gov. Chase in Ohio? The doctrine of the leader of the Republican party is that the States must become all free or all slave—that they can't endure part free and part slave—that the contest must continue and increase in fury until one class of States have been annihilated by the complete triumph of the other. Such is the real purpose of the Republican party. Now, when do you expect to have peace on the slavery question? When do you expect to have harmony between Cincinnati and Covington—between Ohio and Kentucky—if you agitate till the States become all free or all slave? (A voice.—When they change their politics.) A Republican in the crowd says he expects that harmony when freedom triumphs. There you find the endorsement of the position of Seward and Lincoln—that the States must be all free in order to have harmony. Let us examine for a moment this doctrine of uniformity contended for by the Republicans on the slavery question. Is that doctrine consistent with the genius and principles of our Federal Constitution? I assert that the framers of the Constitution neither contemplated nor desired uniformity in respect to the local and domestic institutions of the sovereign states. They knew that in a country broad as this, with such a variety of climate, of soil and of interest, there must be necessarily a corresponding variety in the local laws and domestic institutions adapted to the interests of each locality. They knew the laws and institutions which were well adapted to the granite hills of New Hampshire, were unsuited to the tobacco planters of Virginia. They knew the laws and institutions which were adapted to the wheat fields and corn fields of Ohio, were not well adapted to the plantations of Louisiana. They knew that the laws and institutions which would suit the prairies of Illinois, were unsuited to the gulches and placers of the gold mines of California. Knowing these facts, they framed a system of government composed of independent states, each with a legislature of its own, with the sovereign power to make all laws, all institutions affecting their national policy to suit themselves, without the intervention of Congress or any other power on earth. But let us suppose for a moment this new doctrine of uniformity in domestic institutions had prevailed when the Constitution was formed, what could have been the result? Bear in mind that the Union was composed of thirteen states, twelve of which were slaveholding states and one only was free. Suppose Seward or Lincoln had been a member of the convention which framed the Constitution, and had risen and fixed his eye upon the immortal Washington, who presided over that august body, had said, a house divided against itself cannot stand. This union composed of free and slave states I cannot endure. There is an irrepressible conflict between freedom and slavery, free and slave states, which must endure until slavery be abolished everywhere, or established everywhere throughout the Republic. Suppose he had succeeded in impressing this new modern republican doctrine on that Convention that framed the Constitution, do you think slavery would have been abolished in all the states? Do you think the one free state would have outvoted the twelve slaveholding states in that Convention, and abolished slavery everywhere, or would the twelve slave states have outvoted the one free state, and finally established slavery over every inch of the American Republic, by irreparable constitutional provision? Thus you see if this modern doctrine of uniformity on the slavery question prevailed when the government was founded, we would have been an united slaveholding nation, with slavery fastened on the people of Ohio, to-day, beyond the power of resistance. At that day the friends of freedom and the enemies of slavery, only asked that Congress should not interfere; that the federal government should not use its power either for or against, but each state be free to decide for itself. The Convention acted upon the principle asserted in the moral triumphs of the day, that error could be tolerated long and freedom of opinion be preserved to combat it. They were willing to leave each state as they found it, free or slave, with the right to continue slavery as long as they chose, and abolish it whenever they pleased. Our system of government was established on that principle; the principle which they inherited from the colonies, which they had achieved by their blood in the Revolution. The principle was not new to the framers of the Constitution. They knew the first serious point of dispute between the American colonies and the British government had arisen on the slavery question. They knew that the American colonies, before the Revolution, always claimed the right to decide the slavery question to suit themselves, as a local and domestic institution, affecting their internal polity.—They knew the government had denied that right to the colonies, and in lieu of that right re-asserted the doctrine that Parliament possessed sovereign power over the colonies and could bind them in all cases whatsoever, including the slavery question, the same as the modern Republican party, and interventionists North and South claim that Congress possesses sovereign power over the territories; hence, may intervene in violation of the wishes of the people and sanctity of local law, to overrule local legislation and control the domestic institutions. Our fathers, before the Revolution, claimed that it was the birthright of Englishmen, the inalienable right which formed into communities to decide all local questions to suit themselves, and the battles of the Revolution were fought in defense of that principle. Now, let me ask of you, if it was the birthright of all Englishmen before the Revolution to decide these local questions to suit themselves, did it not become the birthright of all Americans after the Revolution, in virtue of it, to settle all such questions to suit themselves? In other words, are not the people of American territories, being American citizens, our brethren and kindred, entitled to as many rights of self-government as British subjects were before the Revolution? The Democratic party only claim for the territories those identical rights our fathers claimed and maintained at the point of the bayonet for the American colonies. You must bear in mind our fathers were not contending for the rights of the sovereign states. They were struggling for the rights of colonies, of provinces, of territories.—Their exclusive right to govern themselves in respect to their local and internal polity, and because Great Britain would not permit them to exercise their right, they then struck for independence rather than give up the inestimable privilege of self-government. I stand to-night as I have stood ten years, vindicating the great inestimable right of local self-government in all political communities, states as well as territories. It is the mission of the Democratic party to maintain this inestimable right. It was once the joint duty of the Whig and Democratic parties, according to their respective pledges, to maintain that principle independent of party creeds. In 1850 that doctrine was incorporated into the territorial policy by the joint action of two great parties. At that day it was unfair and unjust to claim the doctrine as peculiarly Democratic or peculiarly Whig, to the exclusion of the other party, for it was their joint work and common property.—Both parties, accordingly, in 1852, when the Whigs assembled in national convention at Baltimore, and nominated Scott as a candidate for the presidency, they incorporated into their platform a resolution declaring their purpose, and pledged the Whig party, for all time to come, to adhere to the principles of the Compromise measures of 1850 as the rule of action in the organization of territories and their admission as states. When the Democratic party assembled in national convention at the same place, one month afterward, and nominated Pierce, we asserted the same principles, and gave the same pledge. Thus the two great parties, Whig and Democrat, in 1852, stood pledged to stick to the doctrines of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. When at a subsequent term Seward, Gov. Chase, Mr. Sumner and others concluded to strangle the old Whig party, and abolishize its Northern forces, they found it necessary to abolish the party, to dissolve its organization and change its name, before they could repudiate the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. They appealed to all the old Whigs of the country to remain steadfast in their hostility to the Democratic organization, while they tied cords around their hands and feet, blind-folded them, and led them into the Abolition camp for father Giddings to christen them in the Abolition faith. Even to this day, whenever there is an Old Line Whig who stood by his faith and by his integrity, and refused to join the Abolitionists, or be enrolled in the Republican ranks he is called a deserter! Deserter from what? Did he ever belong to a sectional party? But yet every old Whig who stands to-day where Clay stood in 1850, and at the time of his death, asserting the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty, and acting with those who stand firm by that doctrine, is abused by the Republican party as a turncoat and traitor! To all men who make that charge against old Whigs, I will remind them of the last speech of Henry Clay before the Legislature of Kentucky, in which he told them that if the day ever came, as he apprehended it must soon, when the Whig party would be reduced to a miserable abolition faction, that he would join the Democracy and uphold the Constitution. Clay to the last stood

THE VALLEY TAN.

STEPHEN DeWOLFE, Editor.

Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1859.

The Speech of Senator Douglas, and the Doctrine of Popular Sovereignty in the Territories.

We present this week the speech of Senator Douglas, delivered at Cincinnati, on the 9th of September, on the much vexed question of "Popular Sovereignty" in the Territories, or the right of the people in the Territories to decide for themselves the nature of the institutions by which they will be governed, and under which they must live. The question is by no means a new one, yet we offer no apology for presenting Senator Douglas' speech upon it—the character of the speaker as one of the foremost statesmen of our country, and as the renowned champion and consistent advocate of the doctrine embodied in his speech—his prominence before the country at present as the probable candidate of his party in the next Presidential race, and above all the liberal, impartial and conservative doctrines which he holds, and maintains with such force of argument—these, with other considerations of a like nature entitle the views of Judge Douglas to attentive inquiry and consideration from all who would become accurately familiar with the question which promises to form the leading issue in the next Presidential contest.

The speech which we publish may be regarded as a recapitulation or summary of the elaborate article on the same subject from the pen of Senator Douglas which recently appeared in Harper's Magazine. The views contained in the published article are here presented in smaller compass and in a more popular form, though of necessity with less systematic arrangement, and less precision of argument. Judge Douglas has the merit and misfortune enjoyed by all men entertaining liberal and conservative views who rise to the rank of leaders in the midst of extreme and contending party factions. The liberality of his views makes him an object of attack and hatred to both extremes which he opposes. And the violence of the hatred between is exactly proportioned to the evenness with which he steers clear of the ultra doctrines and opinions advocated by the opposing factions. Thus, for maintaining doctrines like those advocated in the present speech he has been held up in both sections of the Union as a demagogue and traitor, who sought by cunning and deceit to gain office and power for the mere purpose of betraying each section and faction into the hands of their enemies of the opposite extreme.

At the South he has been stigmatized as worse than an abolitionist; at the North as more dangerous and inimical to freedom—as freedom is understood by the ultra parties of the North—than the most violent of Southern fire-eaters. In both sections his opinions have been distorted and misrepresented, his motives blackened, and his principles violently assailed. For sustaining the Kansas Nebraska bill he was refused the privilege of addressing the people in the city in which he dwells, and for honestly endeavoring to carry out the principles of that bill an imbecile and corrupt administration which came into power on its merits, have done all in their power to break him down in the state which he so nobly represents. Daniel Webster experienced the same treatment from the people of Boston for his national and patriotic course in sustaining the Compromise measures of 1850, that Judge Douglas received from the inhabitants of Chicago for sustaining principles exactly identical in 1854. Yet Daniel Webster lived to speak in Faneuil Hall, and to see the principles of the Compromise measures of 1850 sustained by the general voice of the nation; and Judge Douglas has lived to speak in Chicago, and we believe will live to see the principles of popular sovereignty in the Territories triumph throughout the land.

But we did not publish this speech or commence these remarks for the purpose of engaging on either side in the discussion of the question whether the people of the Territories should have the right of prohibiting or establishing slavery. The question of slavery is an abstract one as far as Utah is concerned. It is true that the institution is sanctioned and practiced here by law, but laws do not always have the force of creating what they approve, and the inevitable law of "climate, soil and production" is more powerful here than the force of statutes in regard to slavery.

There is another question however, in Utah which is involved in this question of "Popular Sovereignty" which appears to be entirely overlooked or ignored in the discussion of this principle, and that question is "Polygamy." Have the people of a territory the right, under the Constitution and laws of the country to establish an institution and custom which is at variance with the enlightened sense of almost the entire body of the nation? which, as they believe, is subversive of good morals and individual rights at home, and at the same time degrading both at home and abroad? These are not idle or speculative inquiries; but however much they may be evaded and passed over at present, the time is certainly approaching when they will require a practical solution in respect to the establishment and actual existence of polygamy in Utah. It certainly would have been wiser, as well as more politic, in our government, to have met this question long since, when it was in its incipency, and at the threshold of its introduction, and not to have waited till it acquired its present firm hold, and incorporation into the customs of the people in any part of our country.

But as successive administrations have either deferred or dodged the issue on this question, the institution has grown and flourished here, until it has attained a magnitude that will not much longer admit of neglect, or postponement, either in the government or people of the United States, unless they would have it thoroughly engrafted upon the soil and customs of the country.

The leaders of the Mormons, and those among the body of the sects, who are capable of thought on the subject, rely upon the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty for immunity and safety, in the practice and perpetuation of this disgusting and degrading vice. Entrenched behind this popular doctrine, they hope to resist alike the power of the federal government to suppress the "peculiar institution of Utah; and the general sense of the nation which would at once banish it, with all who practice it from the land. It becomes therefore, a matter of first magnitude and consequence to ascertain whether the doctrine of popular or local sovereignty confers upon a people of a territory, the right thus to set at defiance the enlightened and general sense of the great body of the people in all sections of the country, upon a question which must not only reflect disgrace and dishonor upon the entire nation abroad, but which in its consequences must form the fertile source of trouble and discord at home. It is very evident that the introduction and establishment of polygamy in the territory cannot be sustained or defended on the same ground that the introduction and establishment of slavery is, admitting even for the sake of argument that slavery is an evil; for slavery existed in every state in the Union but one, at the time of the formation and adoption of the constitution. It was at the time an existing and very nearly universal institution throughout the country. The constitution was framed recognizing its existence, and protecting the rights which grew up under it; if a wrong, therefore, slavery was a mutual and general wrong, which the states forming the Union agreed to license and uphold in each other as long as each separate state entering into the federal government saw fit to continue it. Not so with polygamy. It did not then exist in any part of our country, and the framers of the constitution probably as little thought that it would ever become a custom of the country, as they did that cannibalism would. They consequently made no provision for what did not exist, and what they could not anticipate would ever exist in the country. Slavery is perpetuated and extended by virtue of the original contract entered into between the states composing the Union. Polygamy exists without authority, and is practised in violation of the moral sentiments of the entire nation with the exception of a few thousand people in this valley. Institutions so widely different in their origin, and in the sanctions by which they are upheld and sustained, cannot be defended or reasoned upon from the same or even from premises, analogous to each other; hence, the logic of the Republicans in combining these different institutions and terming them the "twin relics of barbarism," which should be prohibited by law in the territories, as it is based upon premises false and dissimilar, so the conclusion arrived at, is deceptive and erroneous. But we offer to our readers an apology for combining together even for the sake of argument, these widely different institutions. The authority on which they rest, cannot be more wide apart, than the results which they produce. The highest moral and social elevation is compatible with the existence of slavery. It would be very easy to prove that polygamy, by subverting the individual rights of one portion of the community to the passions and will of the other, is necessarily destructive of morals, and of every thing like social elevation and refinement, in any community or state tolerating or practicing it. Polygamy cannot then rest upon the same foundations with slavery in either the states or territories of the country; one being an institution existing and recognized at the time the constitution was established, the other is an anomaly and an excrescence that has sprung up since, and exists only in a single locality. Nor can it be said that the people of this, or any other territory in the country acquire the right of establishing a custom like this, by simply immigrating to a territory. It is a right that exists nowhere in the country. Polygamy is prohibited by the laws of every state in the Union—in all it is published as a crime. Now, the settler or immigrant to a territory can take with him no greater liberty or rights than he enjoyed in the state from which he came. If he acquires in any way greater rights it must be by virtue of some authority foreign to himself, and above his own appetites and passions. The citizens of no state in this Union can go into another state and practice polygamy without being punished for it; then by what right can he enter a territory which is the public domain and property of all these states, and there practice what is prohibited in each one of them? If he can, then can murder and every crime in the calendar, become legalized and fastened upon the institutions of the country, by the mere settlement and occupation of any remote portion of the public domain by a body of persons destitute of moral principle and seeking the license of unbridled liberty. The barbarity of the Arab, the brutality of the Hindoo, as well as the lust of the Turk, can all be forced upon us, and all done as polygamy has been in Utah, under the pretence of religious liberty and the rights of conscience. In that case, the institutions of our country will present the motley appearance of the spirits invoked by the witches in Macbeth, there will be

"Red spirits and white,
Blue spirits and grey."

All the reasoning by which the establishment of polygamy here is attempted to be maintained on the principle of local or territorial sovereignty is false. The people of a territory we believe, have the same right of defining and deciding what local regulations they will live under that the states have, provided they adopt such as assimilate to those of all other parts of the nation; but they have not the right of legalizing customs which the entire nation condemns as immoral, and criminal, and which is punished by this, and every civilized nation on earth with penal enactments. We understand by "popular sovereignty," something different from unbridled license, and if we are in error, we for one advocate no such dogma. And we hope the exponents of the creed will at an early period in the next Congress, lay down its metes and bounds, if it has any, so that the nation at large may not be deceived as to its true significance and import; particularly, as it relates to existing institutions in this territory. It is a subject about which some mystification has been used heretofore; it has been a good deal overlaid and smothered with words, let it now be accurately defined. The people here as well as the nation at large, have a right to know its limits—what it secures and what it does not.

OUR TRIP.

We started from a point just six feet north from the door of our office on Friday last in a west direction, for the purpose of gathering items, greeting friends, buying some meat for our dog—also to find anything that may have been lost. After walking about 100 feet, we discovered that the ditch in East Temple street was being cleaned out through the energy of the, gentle merchants who reside upon that street. A short distance from that place we discovered the carcass of a dead cat, said cat had a hole through her head, evidently caused by a shot from a pistol in the hands of some unknown person; but it is our opinion that this cat fell a victim to his lusty passions, and deserved all he got. We met many friends who gladly rushed out from their stores, shook us by the hand and invited us to drink, which we did in every instance. We proceeded in this manner, and in the same conveyance as far as the Post-office which is situated near the California stage office, between the Blacksmith shop and the corner; got several letters, the contents of which is private except one from our Aunt, which recommends us to wear red flannel and gum shoes. We returned over the same road, and had the good fortune to fall in with our friend Jacob Squartz, whose jolly red face reminds us of our Lang Syne friend, St. Nicholas as he appeared in the picture books. We took several drinks with him—bought the meat for our dog, which he refused to eat, because it was Friday—returned home after an absence of one hour and thirty-three minutes, in the same delightful fix we started, only a little more so, and feel to bless God that we dwell in the Valleys of the Mountains, where such things can be done, without the fear of losing life, liberty and conscience.

Camp Floyd, and its places for Amusement.

We have received from Camp Floyd with in the past week two communications, one from "Observer" and the other from "Citizen," written chiefly in regard to the public exhibitions and performances of the "Musical," "Dramatic" and "Circus" Companies at Camp Floyd. As those two correspondents differ entirely in opinion in regard to the merits of the exhibitions of these different associations, we are forced to omit both communications until the critics can arrive at something like unanimity of opinion in regard to them, as we are unable, ourselves, to judge which is right and which is wrong; and the public would be in no way, enlightened by the contradictory opinions contained in these communications. We advise all who visit the Camp however, to attend the performances of these different associations, and judge for themselves concerning the merit of their exhibitions.

In connection we may remark, that we have understood that a newly organized Dramatic Company in this city would, in a short time, commence giving exhibitions for the entertainment of the public. We hope that there is truth in this report. The evenings here to at least a portion of the public, are extremely dull and monotonous; especially so, since the frequent murders that have taken place in the streets of our city have rendered it unsafe for any one to venture out after dark. And some amusement by which one or two evenings of the week can be occupied and the general dullness broken will be hailed with delight by a large number of persons.

Let us with the inauguration of a new Company, have some new pieces also brought forward for the entertainment and enlightenment of the public, who will attend the performances when they commence. We have been told that there is talent in Utah of a high order, and certainly there is no want of tragic or dramatic interest in many of the events that have taken place within the borders of this Territory. All that the writer will have to do, will be to combine and relate actual occurrences in order to form tragedies more appalling and horrid than any contained in Macbeth, Hamlet or Othello. The Mountain Meadow massacre, the murder of the Parrishes, and young Jones and his mother, with many more of similar atrocity, all furnish the material and ground work for tragedies of most "thrilling and exciting" interest; and undoubtedly persons can be found here capable of managing the facts connected with those different events, so as to form a lively and interesting spectacle when brought forward on the stage. If any one undertakes the task of composing any performance based on these events, let us have the prime movers and instigators of the tragedies introduced among the "Dramatis Personae," as well as the tools or agents by which their plans were carried out.

The eastern mail arrived yesterday morning, and has been opened just as our paper is ready to go to press. We consequently have had little opportunity to look through our files of exchanges. We see by a telegraphic despatch from Washington, to the New York Herald of the date of Oct. 10th, that the contract for the transportation of army supplies to Utah, has been awarded to Irwin & White, of Jackson County, Mo. at one dollar and thirty-four cents per one hundred lbs for 100 miles. We subjoin the despatch.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DESPATCH.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10, 1859.
Advices were received this morning from the frigate Wabash, dated Genoa, September 18. Her officers and crew were in excellent health. She expected to leave there in a few days, and would be at Spezia on the second of November, where she will meet the Macedonian. She will soon return to the United States.

Contracts for transportation of army supplies were awarded as follows:—To Irwin & White, on route No. 1, from the Missouri river to Utah Territory and to the forts on the route thither, and to Moore & Boice, on route No. 2, from Fort Leavenworth to New Mexico, and also on route No. 3, from the principal depot in New Mexico to the several forts in that military department.

The Placerville (Cal.) Observer, of October 12th, says:—

By a telegraphic dispatch we learn that the Salt Lake stage arrived at Genoa yesterday. Among the passengers is Hon. Chas. E. Sinclair, Judge of the Supreme Court of Utah. He is on his way to the Atlantic States. Major Dodge will also leave upon the same steamer. He goes to Washington upon important business connected with his Indian Agency. Mrs. Shepard, Mrs. Wright and others, survivors of the Indian massacre, will go to the States in charge of Maj. D.

RATAER STRANGE.—The San Francisco Morning Call is puzzled; it says:—"It is a curious fact that while the marriages in this city in 1857 exceeded those of 1858, the births in 1858 were more than in 1857. We have been trying to 'sum it up,' but can't make out where the 'discrepancy' lies."

forth embodying Union principles, Union measures and conservative views, which would keep united as bands of brothers all the States of the Union, and make the Republic perpetual. The Whig party was pre-eminently a conservative party. Since that Whig party has been dissolved, and the sectional men that belonged to it, have gone over to the opposition, and become interventionists, either in the North or the South—there was nothing left for the conservative Whig to do except to join the Democracy, and by our joint effort if possible, maintain the peace of the country and perpetuity of the Union, I assert to you again, peace and fraternity cannot be maintained between the different sections of the Union except on the great principle of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. Hence let us unite as one man, in favor of these doctrines. In regard to former disputes and animosities growing out of them, let their dead bury their dead, and remember those disputes only for the purpose of profiting by them and avoiding the evils which produced them. While I would make any sacrifice personal to myself to preserve unity and harmony of the Democratic party in its time honored principles, never would I yield one iota, one jot or one tittle of those principles to gain the Presidency. (Applause.)

The Democratic party has a higher duty, a nobler province and a more preferable aim than merely to carry an election and get possession of our Government. The Constitution of the United States has declared that instrument, and all laws passed in pursuance of it, are the supreme law of the land, anything in the constitution and laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding, and all Judges are bound thereby; and whenever the people of Ohio, or any portion of them, elect a Judge to the Supreme Court of this State, before he can enter upon the discharge of the functions of his office, he is required to place his hand upon the Holy Evangelists and appeal to the Ever Living God for the sincerity of his vow, that he will support and maintain the Constitution of the United States, anything in the Constitution and laws of the State of Ohio to the contrary notwithstanding. Yet I have heard of a political party who desire a man for Judge who would stand pledged to violate the very oath which he was compelled to take as the condition to taking office, before he should be qualified to decide upon your rights.

Let me say that obedience to the law, obedience to the constituted authorities within the sphere of their local and constitutional duties, is the first and highest duty of an American citizen. If the law be an unwise one or unjust, submit to it until the next election, when it is your duty to elect men who will repeal it. If a law be repugnant to the Constitution of your country it is null and void, and that Constitution has created a Supreme Court as the proper and only tribunal to ascertain that fact, and every citizen is bound by their decision. The Democratic party, therefore, stand by the Constitution as our fathers made it, by the laws as they are enacted in the statute books, by the decisions of the Courts till they are reversed, and by the constituted authorities against mob law. Now, my friends, what safety or security is there for a citizen who is not willing to abide by the law and constituted authorities?

The only alternative is mob-law and violence. You have had a specimen of that upon the Fugitive Slave Law. A political party has arisen which declares that their consciences will not permit them to obey and execute any law which they disapprove of. Did you ever find a law breaker who approved the law that imposed a penalty on him? Whenever you allow a man to interpose his conscience against the law, the law is subverted and all constitutional authority is destroyed. Then, in conclusion, I appeal to you as American citizens, as lovers of liberty and members of the only National Party which can preserve the Union, stand by the Constitution, the law and the constituted authorities.

My friends, I owe an apology to you for inflicting upon you so long a speech under circumstances that render it impossible for me to do justice to myself or to the subject or to you. The patience and marked respect with which you have listened to me increases my obligation. Never has a public man had so many opportunities to feel grateful to an enlightened people as I have since I left Washington, on my road home to Illinois. Where ever I have been I have been received with open arms, and apparently warm congratulations. I have not vanity enough, nor will I do you the injustice to suppose that all these testimonials are intended as personal compliments to myself. I have reason to know and feel proud in that knowledge, and I thank God that it is so, that you intend these demonstrations as a mark and emphatic approval and endorsement of your devotion to that great principle which declares, in the language of Buchanan, that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits.

A SISTER OF ROBERT FULTON.—The Indianapolis Journal says:—"The Almshouse of Monroe county, in this State, had for one of its inmates, a number of years, a sister of Robert Fulton, the originator of the steamboat. She was living several years ago, but we cannot say whether or not she is alive at present. It thus frequently happens that the greatest benefactors of the human race, with their immediate friends, have suffered for the want of pecuniary means. Fulton, himself we believe, died a poor man. His sister, in Monroe county, was some years his senior."

A mother teaching her child to pray, is at once an object the most sublime and tender the imagination can well conceive of.—Elevated above earthly things, she seems like one of those guardian angels, the companion of our earthly pilgrimage, through whose ministrations we are inclined to do good or turn from evil.

The following publication: We do in matters of the and "plaintive" reckless notions!

There's A void And like In right There's A brand From e I've be

Why d f, who I, who And cu O, wou Or blea Id gull With m

If I ve Right r From r The pri But shi To do: No, I The dri

Cursed Cursed Cursed Cursed Cursed Cursed And h

Camp F Oct. 31

Mr. E go by of mo over reglar a new reg

If you soldier on guard agent, w git a t which le ing wax ny's que siderati tion) the main ve you will

In re price of compar about it money— candles them ea each on of coin regular ky at th blackin

I alle scarce I frog, busy ta rise. I exp dragoot mounte when y course, a case gaint enlist sw pr Orleans country ing offi downe rules w tions & the sold we sold the wa I shou opinion the 10th laundry thingy departu tractori

The I self rep back pi ard, w ed to th I don

The I self rep back pi ard, w ed to th I don

The I self rep back pi ard, w ed to th I don

The following lines have been sent us for publication from Camp Floyd.

We do not profess to be much of a critic in matters poetical, but think that the muse of the author in the present case is very "plaintive and sad," with quite a dash of recklessness also in his yearnings and passions:

[For the Valley Tan.]
Random Thoughts.

There's an aching void in my soul,
A void earth can never fill,
And like the needle to the pole,
In right or wrong 'tis with me still.
There's a deep brand upon my brow,
A brand misfortune planted there,
From early youth and even till now
I've been the victim of deep despair.

Why do I live? why was I born?
I, whom all must pity or hate,
I, who am by wild passions torn,
And cursed by unrelenting fate.
O, would to God, I could be wise,
O'f blessed with wealth an hundred fold,
I'd gull the world, and fools surprise,
With magic deeds of potent gold.

If I were rich, if I were wise,
Right well I swear I'd act my part,
From rivals all I'd bear the prize,
The prize of beauty in the mart.
But since I'm poor, I dare not strive,
To do the deeds my heart would teach,
No, I shall never more revive
The dream of joys beyond my reach.

Cursed be the fate which finds me here,
Cursed be the hour I first drew breath;
Cursed be each feeling once so dear,
Cursed be this life, 'tis worse than death;
Cursed be each deceitful wile and art,
Cursed be he who smiles to deceive;
Cursed be beauty, it broke my heart,
And nothing save this curse did leave.

O. S. B.

Camp Floyd, U. T.,
Oct. 31, 1859.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Nov. 2nd, 1859.

MR. EDITOR—Your paper was handed to me by one of our mess, whose turn it was to go over into Frogtown this morning after our regular supply of whisky, which, owing to the new regulations, cannot be sold in camp.

If you should ever get patriotic and turn soldier, I will tell you how to fool them as is on guard, provided they are disposed to be violent, which don't often happen. You must get a tin coffee pot, and stop up the holes with wax, which can be got from the company's quartermaster's clerk, for a small consideration, which it is not worth while to mention; then fill up the spout with milk and the main vessel with whisky, and the chances are you will get her through without any trouble.

In regard to your inquiries about the low price of States' candles out side the camp, as compared to other articles, I think it comes about in this way: When the boys gets out of money—which they often do—they buy candles from the Sellers, who kindly sells them candles at the very low price of 25 cts each one, and takes them back again in place of coin at 10 cents each, at the branch of the regular establishment in Frogtown for whisky at the rate of $6 00 per quart, and shoe blacking pro ratio.

I allers noticed that when articles gets scarce in camp, they goes up amazin' fast in frog,—also that the privates is allers very busy takin' things over there anticipatin' a rise.

I expect you forgot that I belong to the dragons; or may be you didn't know that mounted men never talk out side of the post, when you spoke to me about the probable course to be pursued by the administration case Brigham Young should declare war against the United States. Well, sir, when enlisted, some ten years ago, owing to the low price of wages on the Cairo and New Orleans rail road, I took an oath to serve my country in such a manner as the commanding officer should direct me; likewise to put down rebellion, and in all cases to obey the rules what is laid down in the army regulations for the discipline and government of the soldiers; and one of them rules is that we soldiers shall speak of the President and the war office in disrespectful terms, which I should have to do if I tell you the private opinion of my kernel. Also what my friend in the 10th told me he heard his captain tell the laundry woman of that regiment; also some things in connection with the commissary department, which ain't for nobody but contractors, and their particular friends, to know.

The bugler of our company who got his self reported on the sick list, and won all the back pay from the doctor and hospital steward, with a Mexican puzzle, has been reduced to the ranks and the money refunded.

I don't think the artillery men will have to haul their heavy pieces over the mountains this winter; the only chance they had to see them guns on runners was in 1857. If they is ever wanted the other side of the mountains they will be sent in by the mail. In regard to the government mules that has been lost I cannot say positively; but I have been on the road a good deal this summer, and from the amount of mules which I have seen with the frying-pan brand which you know kivers up the U. S., should say not more than 2000. About them pistols I must confess you have got me down; for all the Mormons in the Territory has got one beside them that has gone out of the country. The question is, where did they come from? I have lost but nine since I have been in the country, and had a few stolen, and I know I am a careful man and a good soldier.

THE BOLD DRAGON.

Departure of Gen. Scott.

Yesterday afternoon the mail steamer Star of the West sailed for Aspinwall, having on board Gen. Winfield Scott, who, obedient to the call of the Government, at a few days' notice, has undertaken a voyage of over 6,000 miles in the service of his country. We have already stated that this distinguished officer goes out to the Island of San Juan, to look after the interests of the United States in that distant region, and to act as mediator in the strife which hot-headed Gen. Harney has probably engendered between the Government of Great Britain and our own, for the possession of that territory. It appears that the British Government have also dispatched on a similar mission no less a personage than the Commander-in-Chief of the British Army, his Royal Highness, the Duke of Cambridge, to the same destination. The departure of Gen. Scott, yesterday, was made the occasion of a spontaneous, popular ovation, decidedly flattering in its numerical extent and hearty enthusiasm. Long before the sailing hour arrived, the streets, wharves, and water-craft in the neighborhood of the Warren-Street Pier were crowded full of people, anxious to catch a glimpse of the venerable chieftain. Among those who came to do him honor were the Scott Life Guard, under command of Capt. J. H. Hawes, composed of his old companions in arms on the fields of Mexico. When the carriage containing the General arrived, he was most warmly greeted by the assembled multitude, who sent up cheers, peal after peal, while the guns of the Life Guard thundered a salute at the end of the pier.

Upon alighting the General was received by Capt. Harrison, of the Star of the West, Major-General Wool, and other officers of the army, who escorted him on board, and conducted him to the hurricane deck, where he had a fine opportunity of seeing and being seen. He looked remarkably hale, for one so far advanced in life. He was accompanied by Assistant Adjutant-General Thomas, Lieut-Col. G. W. Lay, and Assistant Surgeon Charles H. Crane. The appearance of the General and his staff upon the upper deck was the signal for renewed cheering, to which he responded by courteously bowing to the multitudes around him, evidently much gratified by such unexpected testimonials of popular affection. At precisely two o'clock the steamer cast off and sailed, followed by ten thousand cheers; the thunder of the Life Guard artillery, the guns of the Empire City, and other sea craft along the wharves, the screams of steam whistles, ringing of bells and other noisy demonstrations. At Governor's Island, from the revenue cutter Harriet Lane, Fort Hamilton, and all the way to the sea, the old hero was subjected to a royal succession of salutations. Cap. Harrison very kindly gave him his own commodious state-room; which he has fitted with a wide bed, and the U. S. Mail Steamship Company omitted nothing which could minister to his comfort or convenience. Upon his arrival at San Francisco, he is to be forwarded to San Juan by special steamer, unless the regular one for carrying mails is ready to depart. He is also empowered to control the movements of mail steamers after reaching his point of destination, and is believed to have been intrusted with large discretionary powers. [N. Y. Tribune.]

ARRESTED.—The survivor in the Terry-Broderick duel has been arrested for a violation of the law, and held to bail in the sum of $10,000. A duel was fought a few days since in Calaveras, in which one of the parties fell, but we have seen no statement that the survivor had been arrested for the deed. It is a solemn duty which members of a civilized community owe to themselves to see that in all cases where the law against dueling has been violated the parties are prosecuted as the law directs. It is no justification to plead that the code is tolerated, and that if men so choose to peril their lives they do no wrong to the public. The example deliberately set, of violating a known law, is of itself most pernicious. The law only permits a man to kill in self defense; it does not recognize his right to take the life of his neighbor because he gives that neighbor a chance to kill him at the same time. Enforce the law, and dueling would be banished from the State in six months. To sustain the law, every man who fights a duel should be prosecuted. [Sacramento Union.]

A PUFF FOR THE FROG.—"A frog," says Professor Pump, "is an amphibious animal as what lickers on cold water, and consequently invented the teetotal society. He always walks with a jump he does; and when he sits down has to stand up. Being a lover of native melodies, he gives free concerts every night, he does himself. He pervides music for the million, which has been so called because it usually is heard in a millpond.—He is a warmint what ain't so bad when broiled on a griddle. No, sir-ree!"

[From the Boston Transcript.] Vicissitudes of Families in Great Britain.

This subject is discussed by Sir Bernard Burke, in a recently published work. He states that lineal descendants of the House of Lancaster are still to be found pursuing the humble occupations of butchers and toll-gatherers; and Plantagenets have become cobblers and sextons. Nor have the dark shadows which passed over these royal houses of England left undimmed the families of the aristocracy. In Herefordshire, a county peculiarly rich in ancient families, there are, it is said, but two or three country gentlemen who can show a male descent from the proprietors recorded in the "Visitation." In the north, too, commerce has uprooted most of the old proprietors of the soil. "It has often been remarked," says Sir Bernard Burke, "that the more distant a country is from London the more lasting are its old families." Nor are these mutations of fortune only known on the south of the Tweed. Scotland, according to Sir B. Burke, has had her full share of family vicissitudes; while in Ireland, he tells us, there is scarcely a family or a seat that has not shared deeply in these feverish changes and calamities. Few descendants of the royal blood of Ireland are to be met with in the Irish peerage. The real representatives of the Milesian races are to be found in the Austrian, French or Spanish service, among the middle classes or the peasantry of Ireland.

The following facts illustrate the decay of families once flourishing in opulence:

The last descendant but one of the Umbravilles—the famous stock of "Robert with the beard," the lord of Tours and Vieux—died not many years ago, keeper of St. Nicholas workhouse at Newcastle.

The last baronet of the Hungerfords died in 1711, at the age of 115, a pauper subsisting upon the scanty charity of a few friends. He had inherited a property of at least £30,000 per annum, an enormous rental at the time when he lived; and long before his death he had sold the whole of the twenty-eight manors of which he had once been lord and master.

The last of the Conyers—a race which did not yield in eminence to any other in England—died in a workhouse. The Yorkshire Rokebys were finally represented by a carpenter, who died during the last century. The heir of the ancient family of Castleton died in 110 at Lynn as a breeches maker. Lady Roche, of the second or third generation from the gallant Lord Roche, who withstood so stoutly in his own castle the forces of Cromwell, was seen begging in the streets of Cork; and many more instances might be quoted from this interesting volume which might sadly "point a moral or adorn a tale." The following account of the family of Eugene, the Empress of the French is furnished by Mr. Burke, and it certainly well illustrates his theme, namely, "The Vicissitudes of Families."

"If the Kirkpatricks, from whom the Empress Eugene is descended, are of the family of Cleburn, it remains yet to be ascertained, when and how they diverged from the ancient tree. Thomas Kirkpatrick had a small property, called Knock, in Dumfriesshire. His second son, Robert, married Henrietta Gillespie, and was father of William Kirkpatrick, of Conneath, in Dumfriesshire, who married Mary Wilson, by whom he had several children. One of his sons settled as a merchant at Malaga, and married the daughter of a foreign consul there, by whom he had three daughters. The eldest, who was very beautiful, attracted the notice of the youngest son of the great family of Montijo, grandees of Spain, of the first class. The daughter of the Scottish merchant was considered a mesalliance for a young man of so distinguished a family, and her inferior birth was stated as a reason for consent being refused.

An application was made hereupon by the friends of the family, to the late ingenious Mr. Charles Kirkpatrick Sharp, a gentleman who, from his wit and fondness for virtu, was called by Sir Walter Scott, the Horace Walpole of Edinburgh. Mr. Sharp undertook, with considerable zest, the task of supplying his fair country woman with a long and flourishing genealogical tree, in which the dagger dripping the heart's blood of the red Comyns made a conspicuous figure. The pedigree was beautifully drawn up and sent to Spain. When it was submitted to King Ferdinand VII, he indulged in a joke on the occasion. Looking at the document, where the origin of the Kirkpatricks seemed lost in the mists of Ancient Caledonia, His Majesty said: "Oh, by all means, let the young Montijo marry the daughter of Fingal." The husband of Miss Kirkpatrick eventually succeeded to the titles and estates of this family, and left two daughters, of whom the elder espoused the Duke of Berwick and Alva, representative of the Marshal Duc de Berwick, natural son of King James II., and the younger, long celebrated for her beauty and grace as Countess de Theba, is now Eugene, Empress of the French. Until within the last two years, a Miss Kirkpatrick, grand aunt of the Empress, inhabited a very small house in the third-rate Scottish country town of Dumfries; and her Imperial Majesty has several first cousins of the name of Kirkpatrick, sons of her mother's sister, who married her cousin, holding respectable mercantile situations. One of them was, not long ago, settled in trade at Havre."

Powers' Statue of Webster.

Upon Saturday, the 17th inst., the celebrated statue of the patriot-statesman, Daniel Webster was inaugurated in the city of Boston, with ceremonies appropriate to the occasion. The splendid civic and military display which was to have taken place, was dispensed with on account of a storm prevailing at the time. The presentation and reception speeches by Prof. Felton and his Honor the Mayor of the city, as also a speech by Governor Banks, were delivered at the Music Hall, and these were followed by the Hon. Edward Everett in one of those classical and eloquent orations for which he is probably more noted than any living American orator. The statue is of bronze and stands upon a granite pedestal hewn from the quarries of the great expounder's native State. It is said to be a master piece of art "modeled from life at the meridian of his days and his fame."

Regretting our inability to give the entire address of Mr. Everett, we cannot forego the pleasure of copying, for the still greater pleasure of our readers, his grand peroration.

"He sleeps by the multitudinous ocean, which he himself so much resembled, in its mighty movement and its mighty repose; but his monumental form shall henceforward stand sentry at the portals of the capitol; the right hand pointing to that symbol of the Union on which the left reposes, and his imperial gaze directed, with the hopes of the country, to the boundless West. In a few short years we, whose eyes have rested on his majestic person, whose ears have drunk in the music of his clarion voice, shall have gone to our rest; but our children, for ages to come, as they dwell with awe-struck gaze upon the monumental bronze, shall say, O that we could have seen, O that we could have heard the great original!"

Two hundred and twenty-nine years ago, this day, our beloved city received from the General Court of the Colony the highly honored name of Boston. On the long roll of those whom she has welcomed to her nurturing bosom is there a name which shines with a brighter lustre than his? Seventy-two years ago, this day, the constitution of the United States was tendered to the acceptance of the people by George Washington. Who of all the gifted and patriotic of the land, that have adorned the interval, has done more to unfold its principles, assert its purity, and to promote its duration?

Here, then, under the cope of Heaven; here, on this lovely eminence; here, beneath the walls of the capitol of old Massachusetts; here, within the sight of those fair New England villages; here, in the near vicinity of the graves of those who planted the germs of all this palmy growth; here, within the sound of sacred bells, we raise this monument, with loving hearts, to the statesman, to the patriot, to the fellow citizen, the neighbor, the friend. Long may it guard the approach to these halls of council, long may it look out upon a prosperous country; and, if days of trial and disaster should come, and the arm of flesh should fail, doubt not that the monumental form would descend from its pedestal, to stand in the front rank of the peril, and the bronze lips repeat the cry of the living voice—"Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable!"—Weekly St. Joe West.

THE LATE REPORTED CHALLENGE.—The San Francisco Call gives the following as the facts in this case:

Ex Governor McDougal heard that immediately subsequent to the news of the shooting of Mr. Broderick arriving here, Senator Gwin was much elated, and expressed a regret that Terry had "picked" his man, because, said he, "I consider him my meal." When the ex-Governor heard of this heartless exclamation, he immediately placed himself in the position of Broderick's defender, and sent a note to Gwin, stating that he was prepared to stand by and up for everything said by the late D. C. Broderick; on the stump, especially that portion in which his (McD.) name was connected with the recent canvass. A friend was dispatched with the missive, but he failed to find Gwin, who had gone to the country. He demanded the time of his return, and was told that the Doctor would be back in San Francisco merely in time for a passage on the mail steamer for New York. Upon being apprised of this fact the ex-Governor had no recourse but to withdraw his tartel. These, we are assured, are the facts in this much talked of matter.

FERNANDO WOOD.—The Ultima Herald, furnishes Pen Portraits of some of the Democratic celebrities at the Syracuse convention.—OF FERNANDO WOOD, it says:

FERNANDO WOOD is the Mephistopheles of politicians. He is the mildest "mannered man" that ever packed a caucus, or got up a row. He is what boarding misses would call a "love of a man." His form is slender but faultlessly proportioned, his tread elastic to airy, and his carriage graceful to the last degree. His forehead is broad without being massive, and his features regular, yet strongly marked. The general expression of his face is that of eternal placidity. He might set for the portrait of "Oily Gammon," in "Ten Thousand a Year;" and were it not for that pitiless eye and those closely compressed lips, you might mistake him for a Moral Reformer or a Home Missionary Society Agent. The face of Louis Napoleon is not more sphynx-like in its expression. Without the apparent dullness of the latter, it has all its inscrutability. We watched it narrowly during the terrible row at Syracuse, and except that it was a shade paler, you could not have known that a human passion had ever stirred it. He has, in an eminent degree, the elements of a successful modern politician. He is cool, intrepid, shrewd, unscrupulous; a man who, if his character were equal to his brains, would stand head and shoulders above his Democratic rivals in the State.

STOP THAT PEEFING.—Take our advice, and never watch your neighbors. It is a vulgar practice at best. Moreover, it is a very unsatisfactory one.

Listeners, they say, never hear any good of themselves. In the same way, peeping folks never see much to gratify their self-complacency; and this occasions feelings which do not tend to render life at all more agreeable. But, worse than this, in arrogating to yourself the right to watch others, you tacitly admit their right to watch you. And however correct you may be in your department, however unimpeachable in your course, there are always points of moment which you prefer to keep to yourself. There are always circumstances which, when fully understood, are honorable; but which when grasped, as a watcher must grasp it, in disconnected parts, are susceptible of a sinister interpretation. And your neighbors may not be of as charitable nature as you! Abandon the habit, therefore, of prying into the affairs of others, and you will afford them no pretext of prying into your own.—N. Y. Mercury.

THE BEAUTY OF A BLUSH.—Goethe was in company with a mother and her daughter, when the latter being reproved for some fault, blushed and burst into tears. He said: "How beautiful your reproach has made your daughter." The crimson hue and those silvery tears become her better than any ornament of gold or pearls. These may be hung upon the neck of a woman, but those are never seen disconnected with moral purity. A full blown rose, besprinkled with the purest dew, is not so beautiful as this child blushing beneath her parent's displeasure and shedding tears of sorrow for her fault. A blush is the sign, which nature hangs out to show where chastity and honor dwells."

SELLING A CHANCE FOR HEAVEN.—In the Amherst Express appears the following novel advertisement:

"FOR SALE.—A pew in the meeting house of the first parish in Amherst. The man that owns the pew owns the right of a space just as long as the pew is, from the bottom of the meeting-house to the top of roof; and he can go as much higher as he can get. If a man will buy my pew and sit in it on Sundays, and repent and be a good man, he will go to heaven if God lets him go. Let a man start from the right place, let him go right, keep right, do right, and he will go to heaven at last, and my pew is as good a place to start from as any pew in the meeting house."

Twenty or twenty-five years ago old Phleg, up in Madison county, was telling his friend Jones, consarnin' of a fight. Phleg has a very little education but Jones was a man of right smart reading. So Phleg went on tellin'; and says he, "they fit and fit!"

"And," says Jones, with a knowing look, "did they keep a fittin'?"

Old Phleg drew himself up and looked as sour as buttermilk into Jones' face, says he:

"You're cursed precise about language; foul! then, blast you!"

A NEW EXPOSITION.—Parson B—the pastor of a Hard Shell church in Middle Georgia, on one occasion selected for his text the following verse from Second Corinthians: "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one." The exposition of the text was as follows:

"My brethren and sisters, from the reading up the text we find that Paul suffered a heap in the flesh. He was beat and bruised and striped a great many times by the wicked Jews; for the text says 'five times received I forty stripes save one,' and that time nobody knows how many stripes they did give him, for my text doesn't say anything about that; but my brethren and sisters, judgin' from the wicked natur uv the Jews, I think they beat him nigh unto death!"

PROCLAMATION.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, UTAH,
G. R. L. City, October 29, 1859.

THE Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah will hold its annual session at the Social Hall, in Great Salt Lake City, from and after ten o'clock on the second Monday in December, 1859, which is in accordance with a resolution of the Assembly at its last session, subsequently approved by me.

A. CUMMINGS,
Governor of Utah Territory.

FURNISHED ROOM TO RENT.

SITUATED ON SECOND EAST TEMPLE STREET, opposite the residence of Dr. ANDERSON. For further particulars call immediately at the house where the room is to be had.

W. R. NOCKINGS.

I Would Not.

I would not kiss the sweetest lip.
Unless it kissed me too;
As well from the young rose-bud lip,
The morning's clear, cold dew.

Nor clasp a hand, though soft and warm
Unless it pressed me too;
I'd rather love the perfect form
Carved out of Parian stone.

I will not worship eyes, though bright
And beautiful they be;
Unless they bend their living light
On me—and only me!

I would not love a form that Heaven
Itself had stamped divine;
If I but dreamed that love was given
To other hearts than mine!

Sorrow connects the soul with the invisible and the everlasting; and therefore all things prophesy it before it comes to us. The babe weeps at the wail of music, though he is a stranger to grief, and joyful young hearts are saddened by the solemn brightness of the moon.

"Are you near sighted?" said an impertinent fellow to a lady who did not choose to recognize him. "Yes, at this distance I can hardly tell whether you are a pig or a puppy."

"How is it," said a gentleman to Sheridan, "that your family has not O attached to it?—Your family is Irish, and no doubt illustrious." "No family has a better right to O than our family," said Sheridan; "for we owe everybody."

That was a horrible affair—the murder of Dean, and the sealing up of his remains in a tin box!

What Dean? asked half a dozen voices at once.

Why, Ser-dean, of course, was the reply.

No levity.

ON THE FREE LIST.—Sunday, in a Western village, when the plate was being passed in church, a gentleman said to the collector—"Go on: I'm a dead-head—I've got a pass!"—N. Y. Clipper.

This reminds us of a similar affair that came off in this city. Three "sporting men" entered a meeting house and remained there until the plate was handed around, when one of the party placed a dollar in it.

"I'll see that and go a dollar better," said the second, at the same time handing his contribution, a two dollar bill. "I pass," exclaimed the third.—Cincinnati Commercial.

A pedagogue had two pupils. Dick and Tom. To one he was very partial, and to the other very severe. One morning it happened that both were late, and were called to account for it. "You must have heard the bell, boys—why did you not come?" "Please, Sir," said his favorite, "I was dreamin' that I was going to Margate, and I thought the school bell was the steamboat bell that I was goin' in." "Very well, Sir," (glad of any pretext to excuse his favorite) "and now, Sir," (turning to the other,) "what have you to say?"—"Please, Sir," said the puzzled boy, "I was waiting to see Tom off."

In the Court of Special Sessions, recently a man was arraigned for stealing a demijohn containing three gallons of whiskey.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the clerk.

"Wa'al, you can call it what you likes; I tuck the whiskey, and drank it too. I never wait to be asked when the article is around."

Matrimonial history is a narrative of many words; but the story of love may be told in a few letters.

AGES OF OUR PUBLIC MEN.—President Buchanan will be 68 years old on the 13th of November next; Vice-President Breckinridge will be 39 years of age on the 16th of January next; Lewis Cass is nearly 77 years old; Stephen A. Douglas was 46 years of age on the 23d of April last; Simon Cameron is in his 60th year; Jefferson Davis is 54 years old; Caleb Cushing is in his 60th year; Howell Cobb will be 44 years old on the 7th of September next; William H. Seward is in his 58th year; Franklin Pierce is 54 years old; Robert Field Stockton is nearly 60 years of age; John Charles Fremont was 46 years old on the 7th of January last; John Bell is 62 years old; John J. Crittenden will be 73 years old in September next; Alexander H. Stephens was 47 years old in February last; James L. Orr was 37 years old on the 12th of May last; Jesse D. Bright is in his 47th year; Augustus C. Dodge is about 47 years old; James Shields is 49 years old; Isaac Toucey is 61 years old; Henry A. Wise is in his 53 year; Robert M. T. Hunter is nearly 50 years of age; Robert Toombs was 49 years old on the 2d of July last; Edward Everett was 64 years old in April last; John M. Read is over 60 years of age; Daniel S. Dickinson will be 59 years old on the 11th of September next; Horatio Seymour is about 50 years of age; John E. Wool is about 65 years of age; John Slidell is in his 66th year; Nathaniel P. Banks was 43 years old last January.

The Foreign Diplomatic Corps.

"Occasional" writes from Washington as follows:

Washington, as you are aware, is the residence of most of the members of the foreign diplomatic corps. They live here quietly, and most of them greatly at their ease. The present British minister, Lord Lyons, occupies the recent residence of Lord Napier, on H, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. He is a quiet, unpretending gentleman, a thorough Englishman in his habits and manners, and is about forty-two years of age. His salary is $22,500 per annum. Lord Lyons has been attached to the embassy at Athens, next secretary of legation, and late Minister to Florence. He has a secretary of legation and two attaches. Count de Sartiges, the French Minister, resides on Georgetown Heights. He is greatly esteemed here, although somewhat eccentric, standing high in the favor of his Imperial master, Napoleon the Third, and wielding considerable influence in society at this point. There are two secretaries of legation, an attache, and a chancelier connected with this mission. Count de Sartiges is now on a visit to his native country. The Russian minister, Mr. Edwards de Stoeckel, resides on G, corner of Twenty-first street. Mr. Waldemar de Bodisco, his Secretary of Legation, is the nephew of the last well known Mr. Bodisco, who occupied the position of Russian minister for many years at this point, having married an accomplished lady, a native of Georgetown, who is now at St. Petersburg with her children, near the court of the Emperor Alexander. Mr. Theodore Marinus Roest Van Limburg minister resident of the Netherlands, married to the accomplished Miss Cass some two years ago, lives on F street, corner of 10th. The Spanish minister, Senor Don Gabriel Garcia Tassara, one of the most popular of all the foreign legations, occupies a handsome building on I, between 15th and 16th sts. Baron Fr. Von Gerolt is still the Prussian minister, though I believe he is now absent, leaving Baron Von Grabow in charge of the business of the legation. Austria still continues to retain Chevalier Hulseman, famous in the recollection of the country on account of his celebrated contest with Daniel Webster. Mexico is represented by Senor Mata; Belgium by H. de Bosch Spencer; Denmark by W. de Raasloff; Sweden by Byron Wenderstedt; Sardinia by the Chevalier Bertinatti, and the Two Sicilies by Commander A. Ferrer. There are others unnecessary to mention, altogether making up quite a society of itself. In the order of things it frequently happens that marriages take place between these personages and America ladies.

NEW GOODS.
WE would respectfully announce to the citizens of Salt Lake City and Valley that we are now receiving and opening, next door north of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, and at Camp Floyd, our large stock of Merchandise, which has been selected with great care, expressly for this market, and which we are determined to sell as low as any house in the city.

We would say to the Ladies that we have a large stock of Dress Goods, suitable to their wants and which we would be pleased to have them call and examine.
40-41 DYE, BRO. & CO.

100 COOK STOVES for sale by
40-41 DYE, BRO. & CO.

5000 LBS. SHEET IRON for sale
by 40-41 DYE, BRO. & CO.

WE have 150 yoke of CATTLE
to sell or exchange for Country Produce.
40-41 DYE, BRO. & CO.

Ho! for America!

WEEKLY PASSENGER LINE!
Fare Reduced!

IMPROVED ACCOMMODATIONS!
COACHES leave Salt Lake City for the States every Friday morning—for St. Joseph, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kansas.

Passengers taken at the reduced price of $175.
Meals furnished at the different stations at REASONABLE RATES.

No responsibility assumed for baggage.
For passage, apply to Miller, Russell & Co., Salt Lake City.
40-41

H. Stephens was 47 years old in Febru-

New Grocery Store Opened.

One Door North of Nixon's.

TO the citizens of Utah.—Call and see at the new grocery store, one door above Nixon's Store, if Thomas Dickson are not selling every thing in the Grocery line cheaper than the cheapest. We have now opened and ready for sale, wholesale or retail, one of the best selected stock of staple Groceries ever brought to this market, consisting in part of the following articles:—Sugar, coffee, tea, rice, dried apples, soap, candles, molasses, starch, pepper, spices, alum, copperas, saltpetre, madders, indigo, powder, lead, shot, caps, vinegar, vanilla, ginger, mustard, oases, sauces of every kind, brandy, fruits, davoring extracts, matches of every kind, nuts of all kinds, borax, resin, cotton and hemp twine, pipes, and stems, smoking and chewing tobacco, nutmegs and cloves, pickles, sugar of len on, blacking and brushes, preserves of every kind, and many other things too tedious to mention.

We will sell all of the above articles at as low figures as any house in Salt Lake City, and every thing alike, not only high and another low.
We also have a lot of Ames' celebrated sugar cured Hams, put up expressly for this market.
Come with the cash and see our goods, and we know you will purchase.
We also wish to purchase a few hundred good oxen.
40-41 HORD & DICKSON.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO.
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c.,
Corner of Front and Sacramento streets,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

